Mr. Hall was born at Cheat Neck on Cheat River September 29, 1872, son of Squire and Hannah (Sidwell) Hall. Squire Hall, who was born in the same vicinity in 1843 and died at the age of thirty-one, was a son of James Hall, who came from Woodbridge, Fayette County and also died in middle age, though his wife, Elizabeth Trissler, lived to the advanced age of eighty-four. Squire Hall was a farmer and timber worker. In 1870, at Warm Hollow, he married Hannah Sidwell, daughter of Hugh and Elizabeth (Porter) Sidwell and granddaughter of Hugh and Mary Sidwell, both natives of England, but they were married after they settled in West Virginia and lived on a farm at Warm Hollow. Hugh Sidwell, Sr., was a cabinet maker and also performed the duties of a pioneer undertaker, making the coffins when needed in the community. On the old Sidwell farm stood the historic place known as Fort Sidwell on West Run, at or near Easton. Hugh Sidwell, Sr., owned several hundred acres of land in the vicinity of Easton. Hugh Sidwell, Jr., died at the age of sixty-eight and his wife at forty-four. Mrs. Squire Hall had only one child by her first marriage, George C.

Harry G. Shaffer

he afterward married Reece Swindler, and they lived on Cheat River, where he died at the age of sixty-two, there being no children by the second marriage.

George C. Hall grew up in the home of his mother, acquired a common school education, and at the age of twenty-five married Sarah King, daughter of Henry and Minerva (Boughner) King. She was an infant when her father died, and before she was ten she was completely orphaned by the death of her father, and after that lived in the family of James Hare until her marriage.

Mr. Hall did his farming on Cheat River until eight years ago, when he moved to his present farm on the joint Marion Road. He conducts a dairy and keeps it up to profitable production. The poultry feature includes a large flock of brown Leghorns, kept for egg production, and his flocks have been prize winners in a number of poultry shows.

Active factors and partners in this family industry are the unmarried children. Altogether the children number seven: Gertrude, Mrs. Leo Outlip, of Fayette County, Pennsylvania; Ethel, wife of Joseph Rancijak, a coal miner; Essie, wife of James Rancijak, also a coal miner; while the younger children are Claude, Gladys, Georgia and Mildred. The son Claude in 1920 gained the first honors for quantity corn production, growing 142 bushels on a measured acre. Gladys and Georgia are conspicuous in the Boys and Girls Clubs in this agricultural community and the special interest of Gladys on the home farm is the rearing of Berkshire swine, while Georgia is handling a flock of White Leghorn chickens.

Mr. Hall has always taken a good citizen's interest in his community. He served four years as road superintendent. Usually in local affairs he votes for the best man and is a democrat normally. His farm is underlaid with coal, and those resources are now being developed. He takes an occasional vacation for hunting or fishing, is a past master of Clear View Grange No. 430, and he and his family are members of the Eden Methodist Protestant church.

HON. WARREN B. KITTLE was admitted to the bar in 1894. In the general practice of the law his reputation readily spread beyond the borders of his home county of Barbour, resulting eventually in his elevation to the bench. He is now in his second term as circuit judge. His district is the nineteenth, comprising Barbour and Taylor counties. The abilities manifested in his personal career seem in part the fruit of several generations of worthy and useful forefathers. The Kittles settled on the southwest Virginia border about a hundred and forty years ago. The founder of the family there was Abraham Kittle, Sr., who was born in New Jersey in 1731, and settled in Randolph County, in what is now West Virginia, prior to 1781. He died there September 6, 1816, and left a large number of descendants. One of his grandsons was Rev. Cyrus Kittle, who was distinguished as a soldier, a minister of the Gospel, and one of the strong men of his time. Rev. Cyrus Kittle was the grandfather of Judge Warren B. Kittle.

Cyrus Kittle was a graduate of Bethany College. During the Civil war he was a staunch Union man, and on account of his activities in behalf of the Union a reward of five thousand dollars was offered by Imboden of Virginia for his scalp. He served as colonel of the Tenth Virginia Regiment, was a member of the Legislature of 1863, and after the war he bought a large farm in Barbour County and operated a mill at Philippi, first known as Corder's Mill, then Kittle's Mill. This old mill is now one with other ancient things that time has eliminated. Colonel Kittle was a leading Methodist, and the last ten years of his life were spent in preaching the Gospel. He died April 26, 1885, at the age of sixty-six. He married Gerza Stalnaker, daughter of John White Stalnaker, whose mother was a daughter of John Chenoweth, a Revolutionary soldier whose body lies in Randolph County, on Chenoweth's creek, about five miles above Elkins.

George Monroe Kittle, father of Judge Kittle, was for many years a contractor and builder in Barbour County, but for over two decades has owned and edited the Philippi Republican, and at the age of seventy-four is still active in that paper. He was born in Randolph County, and was educated in the common schools and under the direction of his scholarly father. He married Charity Ellen Poling, and they had the following children: Warren B.; George Bruce, who is a foreign representative of the Lima Locomotive Works; Luther Ford M., in the tax commissioner's office at Charleston; Lucy Rebecca, wife of Lewis W. Wilson, of Philippi; Miss Annie M., of Philippi; and Frank G., now associated with the Philippi Republican, is a graduate with the degrees A.B. and LL.B. from Ohio State University, served as a first lieutenant in the World war, and did his duty in a home training camp as a trainer of troops and gun instructor.

Warren B. Kittle was born at Belington, Barbour County, December 23, 1872, but since early infancy his home has been at Philippi. He attended the public schools there, and took both the literary and law courses at the University of West Virginia, graduating LL.B. on June 13, 1894. He was admitted to the Bar on the twenty-fifth of the same month, and was associated with his first trial case before the close of the same month. As a young lawyer he was associated with A. G. Dayton and J. Hop Woods in the defense of F. M. Russell, tried for the poisoning of Amanda Welch. The trial lasted for ten days, and the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty. In subsequent years Mr. Kittle's law practice took on a wide and varied range, involving some of the important litigations tried in local courts. In the fall of 1904 he was elected prosecuting attorney of Barbour County, and held that office until 1909. Among other outstanding features of his term was the prosecution of the murderer of Nebo, the Carlisle Indian, resulting in a life sentence for the murderer. Another celebrated case was where he got a conviction and penitentiary sentence in prosecuting a Pennsylvanian who stole a jeweler's sample trunk, the case attracting wide attention in both states. Another important case was the impeachment of a member of the County Court for bribery.

For about two years after leaving the office of prosecuting attorney, Judge Kittle resumed his private practice. Upon the creation of a new circuit, comprising Barbour and Randolph counties, he was appointed by Governor Glascock on May 24, 1911, the first circuit judge, and in November, 1912, was elected for the regular term of circuit judge. This first election was in the nature of a personal triumph, since in that year the democrats were generally victorious over the state, and he was chosen in a normally democratic circuit by a majority of 1167. At the close of his first eight year term the circuit by act of the Legislature of 1919 was changed to comprise Barbour and Taylor counties, and in 1920 he was elected judge of this circuit by a majority of 2,121.

The legal profession in general knows Judge Kittle as the author of two law books with a wide circulation. The first is a small volume of 150 pages, published in 1914, entitled "The Law or Rule Days in Virginia and West Virginia." The second volume, one of more general circulation which has contributed to Judge Kittle's reputation as a lawyer, is entitled "The Modern Law of Assumption," a volume of 879 pages and now entering its second edition.

In politics Judge Kittle has always been aligned with the republican party, casting his first vote for William McKinley. He has been a delegate to several state conventions. He is a past grand of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

On June 30, 1897, at Philippi, he married Miss Zona Wilson, daughter of W. S. and Virginia (Baker) Wilson. They are the parents of three children, Virginia, Nellie and George M., Jr.

HON. HARRY G. SHAFFER. The associates of Hon. Harry G. Shaffer, state senator from Boone County, twice mayor of Madison, and one of the most distinguished men of this part of West Virginia, unhesitatingly place him among the coming practitioners of the West Virginia bar, for he is perfectly at home in every department, whether civil or criminal, common law or chancery, real estate or corporation law. Because of this he has earned a firm place among the lawyers of the state. He is one of the ideal gentlemen of public life, a man of remarkable strength of character and unassuming courtesy.

Senator Shaffer was born at Tunnelton, Preston County, January 22, 1885, son of Gus J. and Florence J. (Thomas) Shaffer. His parents were also born in Preston County, where his father is still living, his mother being now deceased. Senator Shaffer is properly proud of his family on both sides of the house. His maternal grandfather, Elisha Thomas, was twice sheriff of Preston County, and was the leading man of his locality for a number of years. The Thomas family is of Scotch-Irish descent.

The Shaffer family, of German origin, first settled in America prior to the Revolution, in Lebanon County, Pennsylvania, at a point later known as Shaffertown. Adam Shaffer removed from this settlement to Washington County, Maryland, where he married Catherine Wotring, and they immediately joined the German settlement in Preston County, near Brookside. To them were born eight sons and four daughters, one of the sons, Daniel, being the grandfather of Senator Shaffer.

Daniel Shaffer, born in 1805, married Elizabeth Izenhart, born in 1810. They had five sons and three daughters. Their home was also in Preston County. The sons were George Francis, Martin Luther, Jesse W., Gustavus Josephus and Arthur McKinley. The daughters were Susan, who married Thomas Humbertson, of Frostburg, Maryland; Mary, who married George Lantz, of Preston County; and Priscilla, who married James H. Wilson, also of Preston County.

Gus J. Shaffer, the father of Senator Shaffer, has lived in Preston County the greater portion of his life, at different times at Fellowsville, Rowlesburg, Newburg, Austin, Carmel, Tunnelton and Kingwood. Gus J. Shaffer has been a merchant and a public man, for a number of years served as a director in Kingwood's oldest bank, and his home is in Kingwood. He has been an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. A member of the family at Carmel now has possession of the bullet moulds used by Catherine Wotring when but a small girl to mould bullets for the American Army. She was so engaged in 1777, the day the battle of Brandywine was fought, while her mother and older sisters worked in the fields in the absence of the father, who was in the army.

Growing up in his native county, Senator Shaffer attended its common schools, and later the Kingswood school conducted by Prof. Rufus Holden at Kingwood, West Virginia. Following that he had one year in an academic course and two years in law, graduating from the latter course in 1908. In 1909 he came to Madison, where he has since been engaged in the general practice of his profession. From the beginning of his connection with Boone County Senator Shaffer has taken a very active part in public affairs, and in 1918 and 1919 was selected mayor of Madison. During his life in Boone County he made such a record for service that in 1920 he was elected to the Upper House of the West Virginia Legislature from his district, and as a member of that body has given convincing proof of his disinterested desire to serve his constituents.

In 1916 Senator Shaffer married at Madison Miss Brookie Turley, a daughter of W. H. and Hester (McClure) Turley, both natives of West Virginia. Mr. Turley is engaged in merchandising upon an extensive scale at Madison. Senator and Mrs. Shaffer have three children, namely: Catherine Hester, Florence Jane and Margaret Eleanor. The Baptist Church holds the membership of Mrs. Shaffer. Senator Shaffer is a thirty-second degree Mason and Shriner, and also belongs to the Knights of Pythias. Politically he is a republican, and is one of the leaders of his party in his district. Professionally he belongs to the Boone County Bar Association and West Virginia State Bar Association. He is a member of Sigma Chi college fraternity, Delta Chi Law fraternity and The Mountain, the latter a college society of West Virginia made up of the leaders of all the other college fraternities.

In the nature of things, a man endowed with so bright and rich a personality as Senator Shaffer would be a leader in politics, and in him Boone County acknowledges an exemplar of the highest kind of republicanism—the leadership of honor, of loyalty to the integrity of the community, the state and nation, and of sturdy American manhood. He leads the people because they have confidence in him. They have tried him and know him to be safe, fearless and ever alert and zealous for their interests.

WHIRLEY B. GEARY. The name of this Charleston citizen readily suggests success in commercial affairs. Mr. Geary has been connected with retail merchandising the greater part of his active life. He is president of the Diamond Shoe & Garment Company, the title of one of the finest stores in the capital city.

The business was first established as the Diamond Shoe Store by Mr. Geary and L. T. Mathews, with a capital of $10,000, Mr. Geary being president and Mr. Mathews, vice president of the company. In 1914 they incorporated under the new name of the Diamond Shoe & Garment Company and added ladies' ready-to-wear garments. The first year's sales of footwear exclusively ran to nearly $10,000, and there has been a gradual increase in the trade ever since. In 1919 the firm moved to its present store, a three story building 75 by 120 feet, all of which space is used in the business, and two other floors besides, which in the aggregate comprises an acre and a half of floor space. The business represents an investment, including real estate, of $500,000. The sales, all retail, for 1921 aggregated $775,000. It is a business that caters to the city trade; and in its particular field, dry goods, ready-to-wear garments and shoes, the store is practically organized on the detachment plan, since women's garments, men's furnishings and other stock are classified each under an individual manager. There are about seventy-five employees, and the pay roll runs to about $8,000 a month.

W. B. Geary is a native of Roane County, West Virginia, and is unmarried. He began clerking in stores as a lad, and he came to Charleston in 1907. For a time he worked in the Charleston Hardware Store. A number of years ago he bought 170 feet of frontage on Capitol Street from the Shrewsbury estate. This property was improved with a building, but that building has been entirely remodeled to suit the needs of the present store. Mr. Geary sold all the frontage except the seventy-five feet occupied by the store at a handsome profit. The display front of this store surpasses that of any other retail establishment in Charleston, and the interior is a model of good arrangement. The store is equipped throughout with Grand Rapids fixtures.

Mr. Geary has also done considerable other business in real estate, and has built several residences. He is a member of the New Kanawha Country Club.

WILLIAM DOUGLAS BALDWIN has gained a place of prominence and influence in connection with the representative industrial and commercial activities of the capital city of West Virginia, where he is vice president of the Baldwin Supply Company, dealers in mine, mill and automobile supplies.

Mr. Baldwin was born in the City of Baltimore, Maryland, November 21, 1878, and is a son of the late E. F. Baldwin, who was an architect of distinctive ability and who was long a member of the firm of Baldwin & Pennington, leading architects in the City of Baltimore. After having profited by the advantages of the public schools of his native city William D. Baldwin entered the University of Niagara, near Niagara Falls, New York, and in this institution he continued his studies until 1898. In that year he entered the employ of the Thomas C. Basshor Company at Baltimore, and in this connection he gained his initial experience in the mill-supply business. The plant of this company was destroyed in the great fire that brought disaster to many other of the leading business concerns of Baltimore, d soon afterward Mr. Baldwin engaged independently the mill-supply business, as a member of the firm of Baldwin, Burgess & Company. In 1905 the business of this firm was removed from Baltimore to Elkins, West Virginia, and in the same year articles of incorporation were secured, under the title of the Baldwin-Chandee Supply Company. The company was incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000, nearly all paid in, and after the removal to Elkins the business rapidly expanded in scope, in the handling of supplies for flour and sawmills. Later was added a department devoted to hardware and mine supplies, and finally, to meet a definite demand, automobile supplies and accessories likewise became an important department of the enterprise. The Elkins headquarters are still maintained by the company, but in 1918 the main headquarters were established in the City of Charleston, operations now being based on paid-in capital of about $200,000. The annual sales of the company have now attained to an average aggregate of $50,000, and the enterprise proves a valuable contribution to the commercial precedence not only of Charleston but also of Elkins. At Charleston the company utilizes 52,000 square feet of floor space, and the Elkins plant has a floor area of 36,000 square feet. In the handling of the widely extended jobbing trade the company retains a corps of thirty-eight house employees, and has eight traveling salesmen. Charles S. Robb, president of the company, formerly served as private secretary to Senator Henry G. Davis, representative of West Virginia in the United States Senate, and after he became general manager of the West Virginia Coal & Coke Company, which has large and valuable tracts of coal and timber land in West Virginia. Mr. Robb now maintains his home and business headquarters in the City of Washington, D. C. W. N. Fitzwater and Lee McCallister, stockholders in the corporation, have active charge of the business at Elkins. The corporate title of the Baldwin Supply Company was adopted in 1905, and Mr. Baldwin has had the general supervision of the company's business at Charleston from the time the enterprise acquired headquarters in the capital city. He is one of the vital, loyal and aggressive business men of the city and state, and is identified with representative social organizations at Charleston, including the Edgewood Country Club and the Lions Club. He is also a valued member of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce.

November 7, 1904, recorded the marriage of Mr. Baldwin and Miss Eleanor Lawrence, of Baltimore, and they have four children, three sons and one daughter.

WILLIAM REYNOLDS THACHER. An educator with a mission and with high ideals and ideas as to the sort of service the schools and their teachers ought to render to the truth of a modern community is the superintendent of schools at Davis. Mr. Thacher's personal education is the product of some of the best schools and universities in the land, but more important than his formal scholarship are the energy and resourcefulness he brings to bear in handling all the problems connected with teaching and school administration.

Mr. Thacher was born at Williamsburg, Greenbrier County, West Virginia, October 3, 1885. His father was a prominent physician, Dr. Charles A. Thacher. He was born at Poughkeepsie, New York, was one of the early graduates of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and served as a Federal surgeon in the Civil war, fighting with General Meade's troops at Gettysburg. He practiced for a long period of years in Greenbrier County, West Virginia, and died at his home in Williamsburg in 1933, at the age of eighty-four. He was honored with the office of state senator from Greenbrier County in 1867, representing the Ninth Senatorial District. He was a Republican and a Methodist. Doctor Thacher was three times married. His first wife was a Miss Wilson, and the surviving children of that union are Mrs. Luch W. Upham, of St. Petersburg, Florida; Mrs. Mattie Hovey, of the same city, whose husband was at one time member of the faculty of the old college at St. Albans, West Virginia; and Mrs. Mary McClintic, of Ohio. W. R. Thacher, of Davis, is the only child of his father's third marriage.

His mother, still living at St. Petersburg, Florida, bore the maiden name of Sarah C. Lovern. She was born in Floyd County, Virginia, and her father, William Lovern, was a Union soldier in the Civil war.

William R. Thacher lived on his father's farm near Williamsburg, and attended the village schools there and did his preparatory work in Morgantown. This was followed by the regular university course and he graduated A. B. in 1911. He was a member of the Columbia Literary Society at Morgantown.

Before completing his university course Mr. Thacher began teaching in the schools of his native town in 1909. After graduation he was principal of the Belington High School one year, was teacher of science in the Moundsville High School a year and for two years had charge of the department of history in the high school at Benwood. After these four years as a teacher he entered the University of Chicago, where he pursued postgraduate work, receiving the Master of Arts degree in 1916. He then taught history in Marshall College at Huntington, but resigned to take another year of postgraduate study in history and social science at the University of Chicago, where he had a library fellowship. Supplementing his work at the University of Chicago, he did considerable research work in the history of West Virginia, and one of the theses he presented as a test of his scholarship was on the Pierpont Government of Virginia, treating the provisional government of the western counties before the organization of the new State of West Virginia.

On leaving Chicago Mr. Thacher became principal of the high school at Paxton, Illinois, but a year later returned to West Virginia and has since been superintendent of schools at Davis. Since coming here he has done much to modernize and stimulate interest in the general school work, and has introduced such subjects as vocational guidance, sanitation, chemistry, botany, and has emphasized project work rather than the formal teaching from textbooks. Another popular feature he has introduced has been a lyceum project. The teaching force of the Davis public schools are twenty in number, including one colored teacher.

In the work of teachers meetings and educational associations Mr. Thacher has always taken an active part, and is a member of the First Teachers Association organized by a county in the state, that of Tucker County. He has also participated in some of the programs of the West Virginia State Teachers Association, and is a member of the National Educational Association.

During a portion of the World war and while at Paxton, Illinois, Mr. Thacher organized the boys working reserve and he also organized and drilled a company of high school boys, some of whom later were called into the regular service and found the preliminary training valuable to them. He was connected with and did much to inspire an interest in Virginia Red Cross work.

Mr. Thacher as a student of history and political science has studied political questions of the present day, and has acted independently in politics. He is a member of the Methodist Church and interested in the Sunday School.

At Morgantown, June 24, 1913, he and Miss Mary Gray Knapp were married by Dr. Charles K. Jenness, now a prominent pastor of the City of Boston. Miss Knapp was born and reared in Greenbrier County, and is a graduate of the Fairmont Normal School, did work in West Virginia University and the University of Chicago, and for several years was a teacher. Her last work was done in the Davis High School. Mr. and Mrs. Thacher have one son, William Reynolds, Jr., born in Paxton, Illinois, November 5, 1917.

JOHN RAESE. The town of Davis in Tucker County has been a center of lumber and timber, mining and tanning industries for nearly forty years. No one business man or citizen perhaps has had a closer connection with and participation in the varied life and affairs of the community than John Raese, the veteran merchant who has sold goods there longer than any of his present contemporaries. The record of his own activities and the witness he bears to that of others comprises an important chapter in the history of the locality.

Mr. Raese was born at Frostburg, Allegany County, Maryland, April 14, 1857. His father, also named John Raese, was born in Hesse Cassel, Germany, and came to the United States in 1851, settling at Frostburg, Maryland. During the greater part of his active life, he followed his trade as a carpenter, and was a very skilled and competent workman. However, for many years he lived on a farm. His last days were spent at Davis, in the home of his son John, but he died at Romney, West Virginia, with his daughter, Mrs. Louis Beckman, in May, 1903, when almost eighty-two years of age. He married in Germany, Ann Elizabeth Knease, and she died at the age of fifty-one. Their children were: Mary, who married Louis Beckman, of Romney, West Virginia; Louis, of Davis; John; Mrs. Sophia King, who died at Paw Paw, West Virginia; Kate, Mrs. Thomas Durst, of Hampshire County; and Lizzie, wife of L. D. Fowler, of Gorman, West Virginia.

Mr. John Raese for the first twelve years of his life lived in the town of Frostburg, and then for eleven years lived in the country with his parents. He learned farming as his vocation, though he followed it very little after leaving home. He had only the advantages of the country schools. On leaving Maryland he went to Pennsylvania, and being without capital he sought an opportunity to earn a living by manual labor. For a time he worked in a saw-mill near Myersdale, then became a team driver in the woods for the company, and subsequently bought the team and began in a small way as a contractor in the logging district of Pennsylvania. Afterward he did similar work in Maryland, and this experience eventually brought him to West Virginia and to Tucker County.

In 1885 he arrived at Davis, when the townsite was covered with logs and stumps and standing timber. He helped to clean off and log and stump the site. Mr. Raese has some interesting memories of the pioneers whom he found active in the community at that time. One of them was Col. Bob Eastham, one of General Mosby's men. Gus Finely was agent of the railroad. F. S. Lanstreet when a young man was working at the station. Doctor J. W. Johnson was just beginning his career as a physician. Mr. W. E. Welmer accompanied Mr. Raese to Davis, and is one of the men who witnessed the pioneer efforts of the citizenship and is still among those who do things for Davis and Tucker County. There were also a few miners in the locality, a little mine having been opened just below Davis. A lumber mill was built soon after Mr. Raese came by a Mr. J. L. Romberger. For two or three years this mill confined its cut to wild cherry timber. The woods was then full of deer, and plenty of bear and other game abounded. Colonel Eastham spent some of his time entertaining people from the city, furnishing them with wild meat and fine trout taken from the waters of the valley.

While Mr. Raese came here with teams and some other equipment for continuing his business as a contractor, and his first work was logging off the site for the tannery. He also did the town hauling, handled coal and feed, and moved people in and out of the locality. This was his regular work for about five years. In that way he accumulated a capital that started him in business as a merchant. His first store was on the same street where he is located today, but diagonally across from his business house. In his pioneer venture he was associated with C. W. Sutton, and their combined investment was hardly more than $2,000. A year later Mr. Raese bought out his partner and became sole owner. He improved his present store site in 1890, a year the first newspaper, the Davis City Times, was published, edited by J. P. Minear. On this site Mr. Raese has now been carrying on business successfully for over thirty years.

In addition to merchandising and for limited periods he has been a farmer, has bought and sold properties and has developed local real estate, was one of the first stockholders in the Peoples Bank of Davis and is still on its Board of Directors, and has twice been a member of the Town Council and one term was mayor. He was reared a democrat, but has always voted as a republican. Both he and his wife are active members of the Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Raese being a charter member. He has served as an elder for many years.

At Cumberland, Maryland, December 8, 1886, Mr. Raese married Miss Minnie LaRue, a native of Allegany County, Maryland, and daughter of Henry and Rebecca (Chrisner) LaRue. Her father was born on the National Pike near Frostburg, of French ancestry. For many years he was a watchman with the Baltimore and Ohio Railway, and he served as a Union soldier until the close of the war. For a dozen years or more he has been a resident of Davis and is now past eighty. Mrs. Raese was born in September, 1865, the oldest child of her parents, the others being James H., John and Albert, of Davis, and Mrs. L. D. Thomas, of Elkins. Mrs. Raese acquired her early education in Hampshire County.

Mr. and Mrs. Raese have been married over thirty-five years, and they became the parents and reared a family of six sons and five daughters, and they also have eleven grandchildren at this writing. Their oldest child is Cleon W., associated with his father in merchandising. He graduated from Davis and Elkins College. He had established himself in business at Davis before the World war, but had to sell it when he entered the army. He was on duty at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, and later was commissioned second lieutenant of Light Artillery and was on duty at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Kentucky, until discharged in November, 1918. The second child of the family is Lela, wife of C. M. Shannon, of Mount Jackson, Virginia. The second son, Curtis, also connected with his father's business, is an ex-service man, entering the Medical Department and serving chiefly in the Base Hospital at Camp Sevier at Greenville, South Carolina. From there he was sent to the Yale Armory Laboratory School at New Haven, Connecticut, and finally to the Army Museum at Washington, where he was discharged in August, 1920. The other children of the family are: Mary, who married Edgar Bane, of Harmony, Pennsylvania; Roba, in her father's store; Virginia, wife of Harry Parsons, of Fayette City, Pennsylvania; Elizabeth, Robert, Walter, Richard and Firman.

CHARLES L. ESTEP retired from the bench of the Circuit Court for the Seventh Judicial District of West Virginia, January 1, 1921, and has since been engaged in the practice of law at Logan, judicial center of the county of the same name. He is one of the able and representative members of the bar of his native state and is eminently entitled to recognition in this history. He is one of the leading lawyers of this part of the state, and is a scion of sterling old Southern families, both of English lineage, his paternal ancestors having been early settlers in Kentucky and his maternal ancestors having established themselves in Virginia at an early period in the history of that fine old commonwealth.

Judge Estep was born at Hewett, Boone County, West Virginia, April 9, 1884, and in the same county were born his parents, Lewis and Louisa (Stollings) Estep, who now live in the state of Kentucky, whence they moved in 1905. Both are members of the Church of Christ, and the father is actively identified with farm and lumbering enterprise. Judge Estep supplemented the discipline which he received in the schools of his native county by faithful private study of higher branches, and for six years he was a successful teacher in the rural schools of Boone County. In the meanwhile he applied himself earnestly to the study of law, and thereafter he passed about two years in the law department of the University of West Virginia. He passed a specially successful examination and was admitted to the bar in 1908, in which same year he had the distinction of being elected prosecuting attorney of his native county. After retaining this office one term of four years he was made the democratic candidate for representative of the Eighth District (Boone, Logan and Kanawha counties) in the State Senate, his defeat having been compassed by a fusion of the progressive and republican parties in support of his opponent in the election of 1912. Thereafter Judge Estep was established in the suc-ful practice of law in Boone County until the autumn of 1878, when he was elected to the bench of the Circuit Court of the Seventh Judicial Circuit, comprising Boone, Wayne and Logan counties. He made an excellent record in this important judicial office, and upon the expiration of term he established himself in the practice of his profession at Logan in January, 1921. He controls a large and important practice in Logan and Boone counties, and much of his professional service is in connection with cases brought before the Federal Courts. The Judge continues a leader in the councils of the democratic party in this part of the State, he has received the thirty-second degree in the Scottish Rite of the Masonic fraternity, besides being a member of the Mystic Shrine, and he is a member also of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Knights of Pythias. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Baptist Church.

Chas. L. Stephens.

At Madison, Boone County, in 1910, Judge Estep wedded Miss Lettie Miller, daughter of Mandeville and Alice (Miller) Miller, of that county, where the father is a representative farmer. Judge and Mrs. Estep have three children: Hazel, Loraine and Charles L., Jr.

GEORGE B. THOMPSON. Postmaster of Davis, Tucker County, George B. Thompson only recently took up the duties of this office, and for nearly thirty years previously has been a leading figure in the lumber industry of which this was the center.

Mr. Thompson came to this region in 1893. He was born in Coos County, New Hampshire, at Berlin, August 27, 1870. He represents an old New England Colonial family.

This branch of the Thompsons came from England in 1684, settling at Halifax, Massachusetts. The later descendants moved to Maine. Samuel S. Thompson, of this branch of the family, served as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He left Maine after the war and moved to New Hampshire, finishing his life at Berlin. He was the great-grandfather of the Davis postmaster. The grandfather was Benjamin Thompson, lumberman and farmer, who spent his life in the vicinity of Berlin. He married Mary Wheeler, of English ancestry, and they had a family of seven sons and one daughter, the only one now living being John Thompson, at Long Beach, California. Hiram Thompson, father of George B., was born at Berlin, New Hampshire, and died at the early age of twenty-six. He married Aramantia Howard, daughter of George Ward. Two children were born to their union, Mary, of A. N. Wetherbee, of Lyndon, Vermont, and George Thompson. The mother of these children subsequently became the wife of R. W. Wetherbee and is now living at Lyndon, Vermont.

George B. Thompson remained in his native town in New Hampshire until he was thirteen, when he accompanied his widowed mother to Lyndonville, Vermont. He attended the Lyndon Institute, a college preparatory school, and subsequently completed a course in stenography at a commercial school at Boston. Soon after came the opportunity to identify himself with the lumber industry of Tucker County, West Virginia.

This opportunity grew out of the fact that he was the nephew of A. Thompson, one of the pioneers in the timber business of this section. A. Thompson was founder of the Blackwater Lumber Company in 1888, and was the builder of the first large mill on the West Virginia Central and Norfolk Railways for the manufacture of spruce and hemlock lumber. This mill at Davis was conducted by Mr. Thompson under the name of the Blackwater Lumber Company for twenty years. In February, 1907, all the interests of the company and those of A. Thompson in the timber and lumber interests of this section were sold to the Blackwater Lumber Company. George B. Thompson had followed his uncle's enterprise in 1893, beginning as tally clerk and time-keeper, and subsequently was promoted to secretary and treasurer. With the transfer of the interests was retained as general manager of the Babcock Lumber Company until 1918.

For several years after leaving the lumber industry Mr. Thompson engaged in farming at Davis. Then, in January, 1922, he was appointed postmaster, succeeding W. E. Patterson. His assistant in the office is Miss Eva Wilhelm, who has the unusual distinction of having been elected a city recorder. Mr. Thompson has always been more or less interested in politics, and the only break in his allegiance as a republican came in 1912, when he followed Colonel Roosevelt's leadership in the progressive party. He was appointed postmaster at Davis by President Harding. He has been a member of the Common Council and the School Board, and in 1914 was elected to the House of Delegates. During the session of 1915 he served under Speaker Johnson, and was a member of the committees on taxation and finance, mines and mining, roads, redistricting of the state, forestry and fish and game. Due to his long practical connection with the lumber industry he had a technical and general interest in forestry legislation, and the forestry service of the preservation of the timber resources of the state have become a sort of hobby with him. He secured the passage of a bill making the game and fish commissioner ex-officio forestry commissioner to look after and prevent the destruction of forests by fire. As a member of the Finance Committee of the House he was in a position to aid the educational matters of the state through generous appropriations for their maintenance.

When Mr. Thompson first came to Davis he found a village in a wilderness of woods, a lumber camp with mills and great business activity, though the town had no streets, water system, sewers and few other improvements to make it a desirable place in which to live. In the thirty years he has lived here he has seen a billion feet of lumber shipped from this point, and has witnessed the destruction of more than a hundred thousand acres of timber nearby.

In May, 1901, at Cumberland, Maryland, Mr. Thompson married Miss Elsie J. Pryor, daughter of Henry L. Pryor, of Perry County, Pennsylvania. Her father was a Union soldier in the Civil war and five of his descendants were represented in the World war. Mrs. Thompson was born at Blaine, Pennsylvania, and is one of a family of seven daughters and four sons, all still living. The five children of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are Avilda, Benjamin F., Albert J., Ruth E. and Paul E. The three youngest are students in the Davis schools. Benjamin is attending West Virginia University, and Avilda is assistant to her father in the Davis Post Office.

WILFORD E. WEIMER is one of the men who have been identified as active citizens and business men with the growth and prosperity of Davis in Tucker County from almost the beginning of its existence as a center of trade and population. While a busy man for upwards of forty years in the material affairs of the place, and still active therein, his name is especially well known in the politics and civic relations of the town and county.

Mr. Weimer was born in Allegany County, Maryland, February 11, 1864. His father, Perry Weimer, was a native of Somerset County, Pennsylvania, and he moved from there to Maryland and lived at or near Frostburg in that state until his death in 1912, at the age of seventy-six. In early life he was a tanner, and from 1870 until his death was engaged in the lumber business. He was a democrat, actively interested in several campaigns, and served as justice of the peace. He was a Lutheran by religious training, but for many years was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Perry Weimer married Catherine Zebaugh, whose father was a Swiss cheese maker, and on coming to this country settled near Grantsville, Maryland, and while erecting a cheese factory was accidentally killed. Mrs. Perry Weimer is now living at Cumberland, Maryland, at the age of eighty-four. Her children were: Wilford Edgar; Charles H., who died at Elkins, West Virginia, leaving a family; Mrs. Anna Morris, of Elkins; Harvey T., of Morgantown; Ira J., deceased; Cora L., wife of George Payne, of Cumberland; Maggie M., wife of Lee Shaw, of Cumberland; and Catherine M., wife of Drape Wilcox, of Cumberland.

Wilford E. Weimer was born at Frostburg, but was reared on a farm near that town in Maryland. He acquired a country school education during short winter terms, and found plenty of work to do on his father's small farm. At the age of sixteen he went into the woods and the saw milling industry, acquiring his first experience in that line in Somerset County, Pennsylvania. His father being connected with the same employment, he readily acquired a knowledge and expert skill in saw-milling and the lumber business, and from a common laborer was given responsibilities so that in the end he had a knowledge of nearly everything connected with logging and lumbering. On November 26, 1885, Mr. Weimer located at Davis in Tucker County, and after a time he became a clerk in a store at Davis, spending about two years with the firm of Ash & Lashley, and another year with J. N. Oliver, and for eleven years was in the service of the Thompson-Wilson Company. On leaving that firm he returned to the timber business as a contractor, taking contracts for furnishing pulp wood, for logging and peeling tanbark. He also had facilities for heavy drying, and gradually got into business as a local dealer in coal, wood and ice, and still continues in that line. Since 1916 he had also been in the automobile and garage business. For a time he was local agent for the Ford car, and he now represents the Buick car and is sole owner of the Mountain City Garage.

When Mr. Weimer came to Davis there were only fifteen buildings on the present townsite, including the railroad building. The first year he and his party were here they lived in camp cars. The whole region was a cut-over tract, with hemlock and spruce stumps and logs covering the ground and forming an almost impassable barrier. Mr. Weimer helped organize and incorporate the town, was a member of the council two years and at different times for nine years was mayor. When he entered the council the village had a debt of $3,500. When he left the office of mayor the tax levy for city purposes was 25 cents on the hundred dollars instead of a dollar on the hundred, and the city treasury had a surplus of $2,300. That is a record of municipal administration that few towns can equal, and Mr. Weimer may take a justifiable pride in the accomplishment. Besides this fact of economical handling of the city resources the town had received much sewer construction and a new bridge across Beaver Creek, and other improvements had been made and paid for.

Mr. Weimer has also been in county office, and while road development and improvement was getting started he had charge of the county roads for five years. When he began this work there was not a highway adopted for use of the automobile or automobile traffic. He built a number of dirt roads through the county, and continued his work until he became a member of the County Court. He was elected county commissioner in the fall of 1918 as the successor of Hayes Ashelman, and is now one of the seven members of the court. During the four years he has been in office nine miles of concrete road have been completed and other contracts have been let under the State and Federal aid arrangement. The streets on two sides of the Court House have been paved by the county, and a Court House clock installed.

Mr. Weimer began voting as a democrat, casting his first presidential ballot for Mr. Cleveland. He has always retained a high estimate of the statesmanship of Mr. Cleveland, and with him he classes such men as Roosevelt, Hiram Johnson and John J. Cornwell of West Virginia. For a number of years, however, he has been a republican, has attended a number of conventions in the state, and has supported the aspirations of the republican governors from the time of Governor Dawson. He was committeeman from Tucker County in the Second Congressional Committee for a time. Mr. Weimer is a past grand of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, and has represented both orders as a delegate in the Grand Lodge.

At Piedmont, West Virginia, in June, 1890, Mr. Weimer married Maggie Eggleston, daughter of John and Margaret (Jenkins) Eggleston, both natives of Scotland. Mrs. Weimer was born in Allegany County, Maryland, in 1874. The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Weimer are Margie and Maud, the latter still in school at Davis. Margie is wife of Ralph Penrod, of Jeannette, Pennsylvania.

DANIEL J. MORAN. Serving in his second term as postmaster of Thomas, Daniel J. Moran is one of the old citizens of this important mining and industrial community. He is a miner by occupation, and for years has been a man of influence among his fellow workers and a valued factor in every movement for the welfare and prosperity of the town.

He has been a resident of West Virginia since 1886 and is a native of Maryland. He was born at Lonaconing that state April 18, 1866, and comes of an Irish family, the best traditions. His father, Daniel J. Moran, Sr., was born in County Galway, Ireland, son of Daniel J. Moran born at Ardrahan in County Galway. The grandfather spent his active life as a steward of an estate under Christopher St. George French. His two sons were Thomas and Daniel J. Moran, by the terms of English law, inheriting all his father's property, and he brought his brother, Daniel J., to the United States and they located at Lonaconing, Maryland. Daniel J. Moran, Sr., was a Confederate soldier in the Ninth Louisiana Tigers. He was buried at Cumberland, Maryland. Before his death he made the request that on St. Patrick's Day the Irish flag should be planted upon his grave, while on Memorial Day he wanted the flag of the Confederacy planted there. This request has been scrupulously carried out every year by his son, Daniel J. Moran was also a coal miner, and died at Cumberland May 16, 1900, at the age of about eighty-five. He married Mary Morrissey at Cumberland. She was born in Meville, Galway, Ireland, daughter of Patrick Morrissey. She came to the United States with her brother Martin about 1840, four years after her husband became an American. They were married in the Catholic Church, and both are buried in St. Patrick's Cemetery. She died in 1909, when about eighty years of age. Their children were six sons and three daughters, and the only survivors are three sons and three daughters. The three sons are: John, who was a coal miner at Lonaconing through his active life and is now living at Wilkinsburg, Pennsylvania; Daniel James, Thomas; and Michael, shipping clerk at McKays Shafting Works in Cumberland.

Daniel J. Moran secured his education in the public schools at Lonaconing, and was in the advanced class when he left to take up his vocation as a miner. He began working in the mines at the age of fourteen, and until he was married contributed a large part of his wages to the fund for the common support of the family. When he came to West Virginia in 1886 he located at Elk Garden, was employed in the mine there, and in 1894 removed to Thomas. He has done all the work connected with mine operation and never had any idle time nor was absent from duty until he was made postmaster of the town. He was appointed postmaster after a spirited party contest on March 2, 1915, succeeding Abe L. Helmick, now state senator from the district. He was reappointed for his second term August 5, 1919.

Mr. Moran cast his first ballot in Elk Garden and his first presidential vote went to Mr. Cleveland in 1888. He has been a staunch democrat through all the years, and was a member of the Election Board at Thomas until made postmaster. He was elected to the City Council, and was the only man in that election chosen on the democratic ticket. While he was in the council he made the suggestion that the number of saloons should be doubled in Thomas, a matter that increased the city revenue without increasing the distribution of beverages.

At Thomas, May 29, 1893, Mr. Moran and Annie Moran were the first couple married in St. Thomas Catholic Church. Mrs. Moran was born at Terra Alta, Preston County, daughter of John and Bridget (Clark) Moran. Her father was a native of Westport, County Mayo, Ireland, and that was also the native locality of her mother. However, they did not become acquainted until they came to this country, and they were married at Terra Alta. John Moran was a walker and watchman with the Baltimore ce and Ohio Railroad, and he is buried at Rodamers in Weston County. His widow died in Thomas many years ago and is buried at Pittsburgh. Mrs. Moran has two surviving brothers, Dominick A., of Akron, Ohio, and John, Pittsburgh. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Moran the oldest is Mary, wife of Frank Baker, at Cumberland, Maryland. The son Michael served with the Sixty-eighth Infantry Corps at Dallas, Texas, until the signing of the armistice. Nellie, the third child, lives at Detroit, Michigan, and the youngest children are: Epa, a high school student, Reta and Daniel J.

Robert J. Duhaime

JOSEPH L. MILLER, M. D. The dean of the medical profession at Thomas in Tucker County is Dr. Joseph L. Miller, who has general supervision of the medical and surgical practice for the Davis Coal & Coke Company in this region. He has some active connections with local business as well, and his career also serves to introduce us to the very old and prominent families of the state. Doctor Miller was born in Beach Hill in the Big Kanawha Valley in Mason County, October 10, 1875. In the same locality was born his father, Henderson Miller. His grandfather, John Miller, came from Woodstock, Virginia, to settle in this section of the Big Kanawha Valley. Here he built the first brick house in 1810. This house stood what is known as the old Judge Moore farm. John later subsequently presented that farm to his son, and he moved on another one of his Kanawha Valley farms. This son, where he and his wife, Sallie, lived, is now the property of William H. Vaught of Point Pleasant. Their families lie in the old family graveyard on the farm. John later owned twenty or more slaves. His first wife was the daughter of William Cleudinin, an early and prominent member of Mason County, who served as a member of the Virginia Assembly. His second wife was Sallie Henderson. Her father was Col. John Henderson, a distinguished character in the pioneer period of Mason County. He was a member of the first County Court, in 1804, served as sheriff from 1804 to 1809, was a member of the Virginia Legislature from 1809 to 1824, and was colonel of the 106th Virginia Regiment in the War of 1812. He and his brother Samuel Henderson inherited 2,000 acres of land at the mouth of the Big Kanawha River from his father, Lieut. John Henderson, who had acquired it by grant from the State of Virginia and had settled there in 1795. The old Henderson brick house in which Col. John Henderson lived is still standing, just across from Point Pleasant, and its construction dates from 1811. John Henderson was a brother-in-law of Gen. Andrew Jackson, who was in command of the Virginia troops at the Battle of Point Pleasant on October 19, 1774.

John Miller by his first marriage had six sons and one daughter, and by his second wife had the same number of children, but in reverse sex, there being six daughters and one son. The son of his first marriage, Charles Cleudinin Miller, lived in Mason County, and for fifty years was president of the old Merchants Bank.

Henderson Miller, father of Doctor Miller, and only son of John and Sallie (Henderson) Miller, spent seventy years of his life on the farm where he was born. He was a graduate of Marshall College in 1847, was a slave holder and planter, little disposed to politics beyond voting as a Democrat, and was a liberal and prominent member of the Southern Methodist Church, donating the site and more than half the funds required to build a church at Beech Hill. Henderson Miller, who died February 19, 1898, at the age of seventy, married Pinetta Lyon, daughter of Eph Lyon, at Woodford County, Kentucky. She died March 19, 1920, at the age of sixty-nine, and both are buried in the Beech Hill Cemetery. Their children are: Dr. Eph Lyon, of Thomas; and Stephen Kishling, one of the prominent business men in the Ohio Valley, a resident of Louisville and vice president of the Kentucky Wagon Works and Dixie Motor Company, where the old Hickory wagon has been made for a half century.

Dr. Joseph L. Miller grew up in Mason County in the environment of his distinguished forefathers, and he first attended country schools, continued his education in Morris-

Harvey College at Barboursville, spent two years in the University of Nashville, and graduated in medicine from the University College of Medicine at Richmond in 1900. The last six months he was in college he was an interne in the Sheltering Arms Hospital of Richmond. Soon after finishing his course in medicine Doctor Miller moved to Thomas as first assistant to Dr. O. H. Hoffman, then chief surgeon for the Davis Coal & Coke Company. When Doctor Hoffman, in 1917, removed to Baltimore he was succeeded by Doctor Miller, who now has medical charge of the seven plants of the company in this region and is also local surgeon for the Western Maryland Railroad Company. He has been in active practice here for over twenty years. He has twice served as president of the Barbour-Randolph-Tucker Tri-County Medical Society, has been vice president of the West Virginia State Medical Association and is a Fellow of the American Medical Association and a member of the Southern Medical Association.

Doctor Miller, in 1914, established a drug store at Thomas, and still owns that business. He is president of the local Board of Health, has been a member of the City Council, and was the only democrat elected to the local school board for many years, overcoming the republican majority to attain that office. He is a past officer of every chair in Thomas Lodge No. 123, F. and A. M., and belongs to the Scottish Rite Consistory at Wheeling. He is a Presbyterian and Mrs. Miller has taken a very active part in the church, especially in connection with the choir. She has a finished musical education, and is a member of the Thomas branch of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

On June 3, 1902, at Ashland, Kentucky, Doctor Miller married Miss Pamela Hampton, a native of that locality and daughter of John W. Hampton, a successful lawyer, and granddaughter of Judge William C. Ireland, who was on the Kentucky bench for a score of years and served as a member of the Kentucky Senate before and during the Civil war. Judge Ireland's daughter Louisa married John W. Hampton in 1872, and Mrs. Miller is the youngest of their three children. Her surviving brother, William Ireland Hampton, is a lawyer and cattle man at Fort Worth, Texas. Mrs. Miller is a graduate in music from the Morris-Harvey College and also from Randolph-Macon Women's College at Lynchburg, Virginia.

Doctor and Mrs. Miller have three children, Henderson Hampton, now a student at Yale University, class of 1925. Ireland Fielding is a student of architecture in the University of Pennsylvania. John Hampton, the youngest, is attending Mercersburg Academy at Mercersburg, Pennsylvania.

ROBERT J. DUNHAM. A resident of Philippi since 1881, and still active, Robert J. Dunham is one of the veterans in the commercial life of Barbour County. Destiny did not present him with wealth, though with sound gifts of health, vigor and ambition, and it has been his lot to make good use of such talents for his own advancement and in some degree for the welfare of the community.

He was born near Grafton in Taylor County, October 31, 1857. His grandfather, Jacob Dunham, was a native of New Jersey, and was an early settler in Taylor County, where he spent his active life and where he is buried. He married a Miss Foster, and among their children were: Robert F., Daniel, Enoch, William, Nancy (who married John Henderson), Mrs. Alexander Henderson, and Mrs. Bailey Latham.

Robert F. Dunham, father of the old business man of Philippi, was born March 9, 1817, in Taylor County, soon after his parents settled there. He was reared in a modest home with little schooling, and amid the religious influences of the home was early converted and became active in the work of the Baptist Church. He began the work of the ministry when about thirty years of age. He was a farmer six days of the week and served the pulpit on Sunday, and remained in the ministry for a half century. During the war between the states his sympathy was with the South, though he rendered no active service.

Rev. Mr. Dunham finished his course at Belington, where he died June 7, 1907, aged ninety years and three months. He married Harriet Carder, a native of Taylor County, Virginia, now West Virginia, and daughter of Isaac Carder, who married a Miss Bennett. Her parents were also natives of Taylor County. Mrs. Dunham died about 1892. Of their eight children the following grew up: Edith, who died in Taylor County, wife of Reuben H. Hall; John C., who spent his last years at Belington, where he died; Isaac B., a resident of Belington; Jacob A., who was a teacher and farmer and died at Belington; Martha, of Belington, wife of W. Scott Davis; Robert J.; and Elizabeth, wife of John C. Wright, of Belington.

Robert J. Dunham was fourteen years of age when his parents left his native community near Valley Falls and moved to Belington in Barbour County. There he grew to manhood, finished his education in public and select schools, and earned his first money as a teacher. He began teaching at the age of twenty, in the Meadowville School of Barbour County, and taught five winter terms, while in the summer he either attended school or worked on the farm.

Following that period of his life devoted to teaching he entered the mercantile business, conducting a store for one year at Meadland, Taylor County, and then for four years was a merchant at Mansfield near Philippi. He gave up store keeping on his own account to become a traveling representative for Witz, Biedler and Company of Baltimore, a dry goods and notion house. During the eleven years he represented this firm he covered West Virginia territory near his own home. Over the same territory and selling the same line of goods he represented John E. Hurst and Company for ten years.

As a traveling salesman he had his home in Philippi, and when he left the road he settled permanently in that city and has since given more or less active attention to his business interests. He owns considerable real estate and other property, is one of the original stockholders and since its organization has been a director of the Citizens National Bank, and he still does some speculative dealing in real estate.

Mr. Dunham had no aspirations for political office and has done his duty merely as a voter in the democratic party. He cast his first presidential vote for General Hancock in 1880. He is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church.

At Philippi March 31, 1881, he married Miss Etta Lee Thompson, who was born at Philippi in October, 1861, daughter of William C. and Lucretia J. (Marteny) Thompson. Her mother was a daughter of William Marteny. William C. Thompson was born near Morgantown and was a child when brought to Philippi by his parents. His father, Henry Thompson, owned the property where Mr. Dunham now lives. Henry Thompson was a cabinet maker and also a preacher in the Primitive Baptist Church. William C. Thompson and wife both died in 1915 and are buried at Philippi. Mrs. Dunham, the only child of her parents to grow up, was educated in the public schools, had a brief experience as a teacher, and she died in July, 1917, at the age of fifty-six. She was reared in the older schools Baptist faith. Mr. and Mrs. Dunham had no children of their own. However, they reared a boy named Harry Scott Mann, who was born at Montclair, New Jersey, and is now in that city in the automobile business. He is married and has two children named, Harry S., Jr., and Frederick William Mann.

EUGENE COFFMAN is founder of one of the largest chain-store organizations in West Virginia, conducted by the Coffman-Fisher Company, of which he is president. The corporation is operating ten stores in the eastern part of the state. They are in a measure the outgrowth of an individual business conducted by Mr. Coffman and his young associates at Davis, his home town, and where he has been a prominent figure for nearly three decades.

Mr. Coffman was born in Shenandoah County, Virginia, June 5, 1867. His father, Henry H. Coffman, was born in the same county in 1843, spent his boyhood on the farm, was a southerner in sentiment, but impaired eyesight caused his rejection when he applied for service in the Confederate Army. Soon after the war he began merchandising at Conieville, Virginia, and subsequently so goods at Mount Jackson in that state, and for a number of years at Belington, West Virginia, where he is now living retired. His old store at Belington became a part of the Coffman-Fisher chain of stores. Henry H. Coffman married Miss Rebecca Frances Hottle, who was born in Shenandoah County in 1843. Their children are: Eugene of Davis; Clara C., wife of A. Dietrich, of Minerva, Ohio; Reverend Luther, a Lutheran minister of Girardsville, Pennsylvania; Anna, of Grafton, widow of A. A. Doan; George H., of Elkins; Mabel, wife of P. H. Cornelius, Masontown, West Virginia; Walter E., manager of the Coffman-Fisher store at Keyser; Lula and Nellie, residents of Belington.

Eugene Coffman grew up at Mount Jackson in Shenandoah County, and with a common school education learned merchandising under his father. Leaving there in 1889, a young man of twenty-two he came over the mountains to Moorefield, West Virginia, and for eleven months did a thriving business as a local merchant. He then joined his father as a partner, but in 1893 the panic came on and their enterprise was threatened with ruin. At the juncture Eugene Coffman left Mount Jackson with $75.00 in cash, and this money he used to pay his way to Bayard and give him living expense for a time and also pay the freight on a shipment of goods from New York. For this pioneer stock of goods he utilized his credit with Charl Broadway Rouse in New York City, who permitted him to have $1,000 worth of racket goods. In a few months the panic struck Bayard also, and in order to save himself he had to seek another location. This time he came to Davis, bringing the remnant of his little stock of goods and opening up for business in a room 16 by 24 feet. Since coming to Davis Mr. Coffman has had a strenuous career, and at different times has been confronted with practically every obstacle, problems and adversity in the life of a merchant. A detailed story would be an interesting factor in commercial experience. However, out of this period of adversity he in time achieved success, and attributes a large part of that to the loyalty of the young men who have been associated with him. The big business of which he is today the head represents also the flower and fruitage of the moderate investments of the $75.00 which he brought with him to the state. Mr. Coffman from the first was keen to observe a quality in character of the young men who came to him for employment, and in time several of these became associated with him and constituted the corporation of the Coffman-Fisher Company, organized January 1, 1912, with a capital of $100,000. Those associated with him at the beginning and who have contributed materially to the success of the enterprise were Thomas Fisher, H. Cornelius, Charles H. Coffman and George W. Coffman, and since then others who have put money into the business and also contributed to its success have been O. C. Rohrbaugh, Lyle Wilson and Walter Dietrich. There have been other stockholders, but the mentioned have been chiefly responsible for the growth and expansion from one store to nearly a dozen.

About 1910, a year or two before the organization of the corporation, Mr. Coffman and Mr. Fisher as partners opened the first group of branches, with stores at Tunnelton, Belington, Thomas, Blaine and Masontown. Since then new branches have been opened at Piedmont, Keys and Bayard, and also at Albright, so that the company now has ten stores, representing an investment of approximately $200,000, and in 1921 the capital stock of the company was increased to $250,000. Eugene Coffman is president of the company, George W. Coffman, vice president, Charles H. Coffman, secretary and treasurer, and Thomas Fisher general manager.

Mr. Coffman has also been a director of the National Bank of Davis since 1907. He has never sought political office, though he served one unexpired term as a member of the County Court. He cast his first presidential vote for Harrison in 1888, and is a republican in principal.

At Davis, February 25, 1895, he married Miss Alice Williams, a native of Preston County and daughter of Robert Williams, who married Miss Brewer. Her father, who was a farmer at Lile Point in Monongalia County and later at Tunnelton, died in 1917, at the age of sixty-six. Mrs. Coffman was educated in the public schools, learned dressmaking at Kingwood, and was living at Davis when she met Mr. Coffman. Her brother, John J., lost his life in a tractor accident near Morgantown in 1920, and her sister, Annie, died unmarried at Tunnelton. She has two half brothers, Arthur and Gilbert Williams, the former of Reedsville and the latter of Tunnelton. Mr. Coffman has no fraternal affiliations and is a member of the Lutheran Church.

CHARLES E. CARRIGAN was born at Sherrard, Marshall county, West Virginia, April 9 (Easter Sunday), 1871, and was a son of John and Amanda Ellen Carrigan. On his father's side the grandparents were Irish, and on the other's side the grandparents were Scotch-Irish.

Mr. Carrigan attended the public school at McConnell's one-room school house, and entered West Virginia University, from which he was graduated in the classical course in 1895. Later he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1902. He taught school in Benwood, West Virginia, from September, 1895, to June, 1904, began the practice of law at Moundsville, West Virginia, in August, 1904, and has been so engaged continuously until this time. Mr. Carrigan was elected a member of State Senate of West Virginia in 1902, for a term of four years, was elected prosecuting attorney of Marshall County, West Virginia, in 1908, for a term of four years, and in 1910 was the nominee of the republican party for Congress from the First District of West Virginia, but suffered defeat at the general election in November of that year. In 1920 he was again a candidate for the nomination for Congress on the same district, but was defeated by the small margin of fifty-six votes. During the World war he was chairman of Local Draft Board for Marshall County, and with his associates made next to the highest records in the entire State of West Virginia.

Mr. Carrigan is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and belongs to Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, Odd Fellows, Elks, and Masonic fraternity. In the latter organization he has been active for the past twenty years, being a past grand master of West Virginia, has attained the thirty-second degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, and at this time is grand captain general of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of West Virginia. Occasionally when so requested he indulges in making addresses on fraternal, educational, political and religious subjects. In 1907 Mr. Carrigan married Harriett Rebecca Davis, and to them one son, John Edgar Carrigan, was born. He is now eleven years of age.

MARTIN M. RICE was one of the venerable residents of Upshur County at the time of his death, January 18, 1922. He had attained the age of eighty-nine, and for a number of years had been retired from the activities which formerly engaged him in the Rock Cave community of Upshur county, where he was a farmer, merchant, and in every sense a leader in community affairs.

Mr. Rice was born in Highland County, Virginia, January 21, 1833. His father, Jotham Rice, was a native of Connecticut, where he was reared and educated. He became a Yankee peddler, and in the course of his experiences he sold goods in Highland County, Virginia, where he met and married Elizabeth Moyers, a native of that county. Some years after their marriage they brought their family to Lewis County, West Virginia, but sold their farm there and moved to the vicinity of Canaan in Upshur county, where Jotham Rice bought a tract of timbered land and cleared a farm. After the death of his wife he left that farm and lived with his son Martin. He was an active member of the Methodist Church and a democrat in politics. His six children were: Sarah A., who became the wife of Henry Friend; Martin M.; Samuel and Lewis;

Margaret, who became the wife of Henry Chase; and James.

Of these children Martin M. Rice was the last survivor. He spent his early life on a farm, attended subscription schools, and after leaving home he became a farmer in Upshur County. For many years he was in business at Rock Cave as a merchant and postmaster, but some years ago retired from business, though at the time of his death he owned 200 acres of land at Rock Cave and also 200 acres in the Cannan community of Upshur County.

On April 18, 1867, Mr. Rice married Samaria E. Reger, a native of Upshur County. She became the mother of six children, and she and these children are also deceased. On July 12, 1899, Mr. Rice married Anna Belle Reger, a second cousin of his former wife. She was born in Lewis County, February 1, 1866. Mr. and Mrs. Rice had a son, Martin V., born October 30, 1904, now a student in the public schools. Mr. Rice was a democrat in politics.

JAMES B. WILT is one of the well known men in the pulp industry of West Virginia. He is superintendent of the Parsons Pulp & Lumber Company, and has been connected with that plant nearly two decades. His name is one that carries great weight both in business and civic circles in Tucker County.

He was born at Texas in Tucker County, June 18, 1881. His grandfather, Peter Wilt, was a native of Maryland and of German ancestry. He founded the family in Barbour County, West Virginia. During the Civil war he became a private soldier, served three years as a volunteer, and in one of the battles in which he took part was wounded in the leg, a wound that necessitated his retirement from the service at the end of three years. He married Catherine Wilson, and they reared nine children: John H., Mary, Wilson, George, Abbey, Sarah, Thomas, Vienna and Enzina.

John H. Wilt, father of James B. Wilt, was born in Barbour County, and spent his active life in that and in Tucker County. He was also a volunteer soldier at the time of the Civil war, going out with the Second Virginia Infantry, Company K. He was in the three days fighting at Gettysburg, the seven days fighting in the wilderness, and in many other battles. He was three times wounded, twice by bullets and once by a piece of shell. These wounds permanently injured him and did much to shorten his life. He was a color-bearer of his regiment. John H. Wilt, who died on his farm in Tucker County in 1910, at the age of sixty-seven, had led an active career on his modest farm for many years. He was a school commissioner in his district, road supervisor, a democrat in politics and a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. In Barbour County he married Miss Nancy Phillips, daughter of Elijah Phillips, of one of the old families of that county. Mrs. John Wilt died in 1883, at the age of thirty-five. Her children were George W., Albert, Alice, Amanda, Mary Catherine, Peter and James Bowman.

James Bowman Wilt spent his boyhood on the home farm, and at the age of seventeen had only the equivalent of a rural school education. After some further preparation he became a rural school teacher at the age of nineteen, and for two winters taught school. He attended a summer normal school, and for a brief period was a coal miner at Arden and at Meriden.

It was on June 5, 1903, that Mr. Wilt entered what has proved to be his continuous service of nearly twenty years with the Parsons Pulp & Lumber Company. Several years before he had acquired some experience in the pulp business with the West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company at Davis. In the Parsons plant he began as a common laborer in the machine room, was promoted to machine tender, then to foreman of the department, and in 1911 was made sulphite mill superintendent and since 1918 has had the responsibilities of general superintendent of the entire plant.

The Parsons Pulp & Lumber Company was established at Parsons in 1900, and the industry was ready for business in 1901. The product is bleached sulphite pulp, which is converted into bond and book paper. Most of the pulp is worked up in this country, though at one time some of the product was exported. The company has 140 men on the pay roll, and besides the mill at Parsons the company operates a sawmill at Horton, West Virginia, and two sawmills in North Carolina. The mill at Horton supplies the pulp wood for the Parsons plant. The main office of the corporation is in the Finance Building at Philadelphia.

Mr. Wilt has made a deep study of the technical work involved in pulp and paper manufacture. He took special courses in these subjects with the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, and in 1917 began a course in business administration with the La Salle Extension University of Chicago, completing it in 1922. He and some other business men of Parsons organized in 1920 the Parsons Excelsior and Wood Products Company for the manufacture of mattress excelsior, lumber and other wood products. Mr. Wilt is secretary and treasurer of this company, the president being R. V. Willson.

Mr. Wilt is a member of the River City Club, an organization whose purpose is to advance the general welfare and business prosperity of Parsons. He is a past master of Pythagoras Lodge No. 128, A. F. and A. M., is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and in politics is a democrat, though frequently casting an independent vote regardless of party line. In the Missionary Baptist Church he is a deacon, and is treasurer of the fund of the local church in the hundred million dollar movement of the Baptist denomination for missions. He was one of the contributors to the Broadhus College fund. At the time of the World war he was a member of the Savings Stamp Committee, and he was registered and waived all exemption. He belonged to the technical association of the pulp and paper industry and also to the American Pulp and Paper Mill Superintendents' Association, both of which organizations offered their services as a body to the Government during the war.

In Tucker County, November 30, 1902, Mr. Wilt married Miss Ella May Parsons, of Randolph County, daughter of Joshua and Lois (Schoonover) Parsons, well to do farming people of Tucker County. Mrs. Wilt was born February 6, 1881, and was next to the youngest in a large family of children, the others being Page; Burl; Maud, wife of Gilbert Ayres; Birdie, wife of Edward Coherly; Jared G., of Parsons, who married Frances Phillips; and Nancy, wife of W. C. Smith, of Belington.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilt have a son and daughter. The son, Wilson J., now eighteen years of age, graduated from the Parsons High School in 1921, and is pursuing the mechanical engineering course in West Virginia University. The daughter, Thelma Lois, born in 1909, is in the eighth grade of the Parsons schools.

J. W. MYERS, M. D. The work and service that constitute the principal distinction of Doctor Myers comprise over a quarter of a century of devotion to the routine of a general medical practice, a leadership in community affairs where business enterprise and capital are essential for the accomplishment of beneficial results, and since his removal to Philippi he has also been a successful manufacturer of medicines and home remedies.

Doctor Myers was born near St. George in Tucker County, December 6, 1872. His grandfather, Josiah Myers, was a native of Pennsylvania and of Pennsylvania Dutch stock. As a young man he removed to West Virginia, settling in Barbour County, was a farmer, and when the Civil war came on he joined the Confederate Army and died in the service. Three of his sons were in the conflict, and all of them wore the Confederate gray uniform.

Michael Myers, father of Doctor Myers, was born in Barbour County but spent most of his life in Tucker County, going there before the outbreak of the Civil war. He was a practical and industrious farmer, did his part in sharing public duty, was a member of the Board of Education and for several years president of the County Court. He joined the Sixty-second Virginia Infantry in the Confederate Army, and served three years as a private soldier under General Early and General Lee. He was never wounded, though a participant in some of the great battles of the war. In one battle he was captured and was a prisoner in Camp Chase, Ohio, when the war ended.

Michael Myers, who died in 1910, at the age of eighty married Amelia Auvil, daughter of John Auvil, who was a farmer and miller near St. George. Mrs. Michael Myers is now seventy-six years of age and lives at the home of her son. There were only two children, the daughter being Mrs. Charles Phillips, who died near St. George.

J. W. Myers grew up in the community where he was born, attended the country schools there, was one of a small family, and the resources of his parents were ample to provide a good living and a margin for education. While he did not attend a college, he supplemented his early advantages by serious study and in this way was well qualified to begin his preparation for a medical career. Just after passing his majority he began reading medicine with Doctor Calvert of St. George. From his office he entered the Physio-Medical College of Indianapolis, Indiana, where he graduated in March, 1895. In May of that year Doctor Myers began practice at Nestorville in Barbour County, and performed the arduous duties of a country physician, riding and driving about the country a work that has been well described as a twenty-four hour a day and 365 days a year occupation. After attending to these exhausting duties Doctor Myers found time to help in several community affairs. He was the leading spirit that gave his community one of the best telephone systems in a country district of West Virginia. This was the Citizens United Telephone Company, of which he was manager. The system extended over a large portion of Barbour, Taylor, Preston, Tucker and Randolph counties embracing 1,000 miles of wire, 1,000 subscribers, and nine switchboard exchanges.

Since 1910 Doctor Myers has been a resident of Philippi. Some years ago foreseeing a shortage of doctors, especially in the country districts, a condition that has recently been the subject of a report and discussion at medical conventions, Doctor Myers took steps to supplement the work of the physicians by compounding home remedies, which have been placed on the market and now include about twenty-four preparations of different kinds. These remedies are now on sale in more than 500 drug and general stores throughout a large part of West Virginia and point in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland and old Virginia. The laboratory for the compounding of these remedies is one of the industries of Philippi, and in 1914 a company was incorporated for the manufacture and sale.

Doctor Myers has had little time or disposition to participate in politics. He was reared in a farmer's home was the first physician the family has produced in several generations, at least, and his vocation has been one to absorb all his energies.

In Barbour County October 20, 1898, Doctor Myers married Miss Lennie C. Johnson, daughter of Joseph L. and Ella (Crim) Johnson, her mother being a sister of the late merchant prince of Philippi, Joseph Crim. Mr. Myers, who was one of a family of three sons and three daughters, was educated in country districts and summa normal schools, and for two years was a teacher at Hamilton and Parsons in Tucker County. Doctor and Mrs. Myers have a family of five children: Karl J., junior medical student in the University of Maryland; Hu C., who is taking his pre-medical work in the University of West Virginia; Edna and Elmer, twins, students in the Philippi High School; and Junior Myers, who is in the grammar school.

Doctor Myers is a member of the Kiwanis Club of Philippi, is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Maccabees, is one of the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is a democrat in national politics.

CYRUS OSCAR STRIEBY. Learned, resourceful and highly trained, with an honorable record and varied experience back of him, Cyrus Oscar Strieby, of Elkins, is easily one of the leading attorneys practicing at the bar of Randolph county, and one of the most prominent citizens of the community in which he has resided for so many years. He was born on a farm near Williamsport, Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, March 13, 1866, a son of Henry J. and Rachel (Ridge) Strieby, grandson of Jonas Strieby, and great-grandson of Jacob Strieby. The Strieby family is of German origin, but is one of the oldest in Pennsylvania, where Henry J. Strieby was also born. Rachel Ridge was born in Tioga County, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Nathan Ridge, also a native of Pennsylvania, but of Scotch lineage.

J. B. Myers M.D.

Henry J. Strieby was born in 1835, and was reared in Lycoming County, Pennsylvania, but left his native state for West Virginia in 1880, to settle in Hampshire County, where he continued to reside upon a farm until his demise, which occurred in 1903, when he was sixty-nine years old. His wife died at the age of sixty-three years. They had six children, as follows: Sadie A., who married Robert J. L. Swisher, and they are residents of Cumberland, Maryland; Cyrus Oscar, whose name heads this review; Emma A., who married John F. Portmess, and they reside in Hampshire County; Joseph C., who is a prominent stock-raiser and fruit-grower of Hampshire County; Harry E., who is a merchant of Romney, West Virginia, owns a fruit farm in Hampshire County; and Clara M., who married Mack Saville, of Hampshire County. In politics Henry Strieby was a democrat. Although reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, after he came to West Virginia he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to which denomination his wife also belonged.

Cyrus Oscar Strieby was fourteen years old when his parents brought him to Hampshire County, and he was reared on a farm. While living in Pennsylvania he enjoyed exceptional educational opportunities that after he came to Hampshire County, at the extremely youthful age of sixteen, he was able to secure and teach successfully in country school, and with the money thus earned continued his own education, teaching in all four years previous to entering college. He took his classical course in Susquehanna University at Selinsgrove, Pennsylvania, and completed it in 1889. This institution subsequently conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts. Leaving the university Mr. Strieby was engaged in teaching one year, to earn money to meet debts incurred while at college, and then began the study of law at Saint George, Tucker County, West Virginia, under the preceptorship of W. B. Maxwell, now of Elkins. On December 18, 1890, Mr. Strieby received license to practice law, and in the succeeding January he became associated with Mr. Maxwell in the practice of his profession at Saint George. His association continued for three years and was then dissolved. Mr. Strieby going to Davis, West Virginia, where he was alone in his law practice. In December, 1911, he came to Elkins, and has remained here ever since, building up a large and lucrative connection. Very prominent in the local democratic party, he was elected mayor of Elkins in 1917, and served as such until 1919. He was incumbent of the office during the period of the war, and in that capacity rendered a much-appreciated service. In the year 1904 he was the democratic nominee for judge in his circuit, which was strongly republican, and though not elected received a large complimentary vote. He is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, having turned to the faith of his forebears. Fraternally he maintains membership with the Masons and Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On April 16, 1896, Mr. Strieby married Addie Adams, daughter of John J. and Angeline (Ewin) Adams, of Saint George, and they are the parents of two daughters, Eleanor and Ruth. Miss Eleanor is a graduate of Goucher College, Baltimore, Maryland, and for the past two years has been a teacher in the Elkins High School. Miss Ruth is a student of physical education at Cambridge, Massachusetts.

As a lawyer Mr. Strieby is capable, discerning and trustworthy, a convincing pleader, and a man with talents which make for success. He is upright and straightforward in all the transactions of life, is generous to the needy, and kindly disposed to all. It is to the lives and activities of such men as he that the younger generation must turn for its inspiration. It is to the accomplishments and character of such men that civilization must give credit for its being and advancement.

SARAH ALICE BARNES is prominent in educational leadership in Preston County, a resident of Bruceton Mills, and also a very practical minded young woman who has proved the wholesome qualities of her spirit and energy in her family duties and as a real farmer.

She was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, and was reared at Bruceton Mills by foster parents. She is a daughter of Jacob P. and Sarah Ann (Guthrie) Barnes. Her father is still living at Brandonville, has been a farmer and merchant, and in early years was a teacher. J. P. Barnes and wife had the following children: Mrs. George E. Wolfe, of Terra Alta, Mrs. W. H. Thornton, James Q. and William Harrison, all of Duquesne, Pennsylvania; John J., of Morgantown; and Sarah Alice. Sarah Alice Barnes was an infant when her mother died, and she then came into the home and under the care of that goodly and godly couple, Emanuel and Mary Beeghly, of Bruceton.

The Beeghlys came to West Virginia from Pennsylvania. The immigrant ancestor of Emanuel Beeghly was a member of a German family whose ship was robbed by pirates en route to America and all were killed except the youngest son, Joshua Michael Beeghly. This son settled at Berlin, Pennsylvania. His son Joseph was the father of Michael Beeghly, who settled at Cove, Maryland, and was the father of Emanuel Beeghly. Emanuel Beeghly was born at Berlin, Pennsylvania, and was six months old when his father, Michael, moved to Maryland. He grew up there and married, and six years later moved to West Virginia, in 1860, locating on the old Boger farm, about four miles from Brandonville. Emanuel Beeghly always retained farming interests, but in 1866 he bought the mill property at Bruceton and continued to operate the water mill there until 1904. He was one of the strong business men of the community. He built the dam over the Big Sandy at the mill site in 1879. He was a member of the Council at Bruceton and active in school matters. Emanuel Beeghly married Mary Boger, granddaughter of the pioneer, John Boger. This John Boger was author of the pamphlet printed in German on "the second coming of Christ," a treatise that fell into the hands of "Pastor" Russell and formed the foundation for the Millennial Dawnists Church. Rev. Mr. Boger had worked out calculations as to when Christ would come again, and these calculations were taken by Russell and furnished the principal material for his sensational propaganda. Rev. John Boger is buried on the Boger farm at Brandonville. Mrs. Beeghly's mother was Elizabeth Meyers, of Meyersdale, Pennsylvania. Emanuel Beeghly died August 11, 1912, and his wife, on November 13, 1920. They were strict church people of the old order of German Baptists or Dunkards. They had no children of their own, but from first to last they reared some twenty orphans under their roof. Among these children in the Beeghly home were Amanda Bromhall, who became the wife of David Beeghly and left seven children, one of whom, Adaline, grew up in the same home. A. O. Beeghly, who is an electrician, a wide traveler in his profession, is now a resident of Preston County. Henry Swallow, Amy Bromhall, Malinda Maust, Francis Maust, Milton Solomon, Ella Teets and Emma Jane Teets are all grateful for the hospitality and confidence placed in them by the Beeghlys.

Sarah Alice Barnes learned her letters at the home of the Beeghlys. She graduated from the Bruceton schools and then became a teacher and also carried on a farm enterprise. Subsequently she entered West Virginia University and did four years work, though still lacking a few items required for graduation. After leaving university she resumed teaching in the fall of 1921. During the World war she planned her farming operations more intensively for the production of food to help win the war, but about that time Mrs. Beeghly needed her attention during her last illness, and she dutifully cared for this saintly old woman in her final days.

Miss Barnes was one of the Red Cross workers and contributed in every possible way to war causes. While at university she was a member of the Columbia Literary Society, the Beowulf Club and University Girls Club. She lent her means liberally to the Inter-World church movement, also to the Y. M. C. A. She is a member of the Church of the Brethren. In politics she was active in the woman's suffrage cause, and in 1920 voted for Warren G. Harding, as the Barnesases and the Beeghlys were republicans.

JAMES W. DUNCAN fought as a Union soldier in the Civil war until disabled by wounds, was with a West Virginia regiment, and since the war has enjoyed prosperity and a substantial place in the affairs of Lewis County. He is now retired from the business of farming and lives with his son on Sugar Camp Fork on Skin Creek, fourteen miles southeast of Weston.

Mr. Duncan was born in Albemarle County, Virginia, June 30, 1845, son of Jacob and Martha S. (Key) Duncan. His father was a native of Buckingham County and his mother of Fluvanna County, Virginia. After their marriage they lived for a time in Buckingham County and then in Albemarle, and later started west with the intention of settling in Ohio. Instead they remained in Upshur County, West Virginia, where Jacob Duncan was a resident until about a year before his death, when he came to Lewis County. His wife was a member of the Baptist Church. He was a whig and later a republican. Of their twelve children ten reached mature years and five are still living, named Henry, James W., Sarah, wife of J. B. Simons, Lucy J., wife of John Polts, and Martha S., wife of Sanford McNamara.

James W. Duncan was a youth when he came to West Virginia and was about seventeen when on June 1, 1862, he enlisted in Company B of the Tenth West Virginia Infantry as a private. He had two years of arduous service until disabled by an explosion of a chest of ammunition, July 18, 1864. He was wounded in five places on the head and breast, and remained a patient in the hospital from that time until June 5, 1865, when he was honorably discharged on a surgeon's certificate.

After the war he returned to Upshur County, and on October 18, 1869, married Christina Peterson and soon afterward they located in Lewis County. His first wife died October 6, 1872, the mother of two children: William E. and Orlando G. Duncan. On March 2, 1874, Mr. Duncan married Mrs. Marsh, a widow, whose maiden name was Nottingham. By this marriage there are seven children: Bertie, wife of Floyd Ferrell; Cammie J., wife of Lloyd Hefner; Oscar H., of Braxton County; Nicholas T.; James E.; Goldie, wife of Ira Jones; and Arlie O., of Clarksburg. The mother of these children died March 25, 1900. She was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, while Mr. Duncan belongs to the Methodist Episcopal denomination. He is affiliated with the Grand Army Post, is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is a republican. For six years he was a member of the Lewis County Court. When in his prime as a farmer Mr. Duncan owned a place of 312 acres, and this farm is now under the direction of his son Nicholas T. Duncan.

ED G. DAVISSON is one of the leaders in finance and business affairs in West Virginia, is president of the National Exchange Bank of Weston, and in former years was a wholesale merchant. The power he wields in business is supplemented by an intelligent and public-spirited attitude toward all the best interests of his home community and state.

Mr. Davisson was born at Jacksonville, Lewis County, West Virginia, November 19, 1867, son of Capt. George I. and Elizabeth (Morrow) Davisson. His father was born at Clarksburg, August 30, 1842. The Davissons have for several generations been prominent in official and business affairs of the state. His grandfather, Granville G. Davisson, was clerk of the Harrison County Circuit Court from 1836 to 1850. Capt. George I. Davisson was reared in Clarksburg to the age of sixteen, then removed to Weston where he continued his education in a private school. At the beginning of the Civil war he enlisted in the Confederate army, in the Twenty-sixth Virginia Cavalry, and served until captured. The last eighteen months of the war he was a prisoner at Camp Chase, Ohio. After the war he became a merchant and farmer, and owned about 600 acres of land in Lewis County. He represented the county two terms in the Legislature, and was one of the influential democrats of the state. He and his wife were members of the Episcopal Church. They had eight children, four of whom are living: Ed G.; Leah, wife of R. B. Phillips, of Clarksburg; Flora, who is married and living in California; Mary, wife of F. H. Clater, of Pittsburgh.

Ed G. Davisson grew up on a farm, attended the country schools and as a boy began learning business as clerk in his father's store. This was a general store, and he learned all the details of country merchandising. At the age of twenty-one he engaged in the hardware business, as a member of the firm Williams & Davisson, at Weston, and subsequently removed to Clarksburg, where he was active in the wholesale hardware business until he sold his interests in 1902.

Mr. Davisson became cashier of the National Exchange Bank of Weston in 1895, and has rounded out more than a quarter of a century of faithful service to that institution, now one of the strongest banks in the state. From cashier he was promoted to vice president, and since 1904 has been president. The officers of the bank are E. G. Davisson, president; R. H. Harrison, vice president; J. W. Ross, cashier; J. B. Mitchell, assistant cashier; while the directors are E. G. Davisson, R. H. Harrison, J. W. Ross, George A. Hatzel, John Riley, Ira S. Hardman, Walter A. Edwards. The bank still keeps its capital at $60,000, but it has an earned surplus of $140,000, undivided profits of $80,000, while its total resources aggregate $2,000,000.

Mr. Davisson is also president of the public utilities at Weston supplying water, light and ice. He owns thirteen acres of farming land in Lewis County. He has been a vestryman of the Episcopal Church since 1894 and is a democrat in politics. In Masonry he is a past master of Weston Lodge No. 10, A. F. and A. M., a member of Bigelow Chapter No. 4, R. A. M., St. Johns Commandery No. 8, K. T., and Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Wheeling. He served two years as district grand master of the Grand Lodge.

Mr. Davisson married Miss Anna Harrison, daughter of M. W. Harrison and member of one of the prominent families of the state. They have eight children: Emma, wife of T. J. Blair, Jr.; Elizabeth, wife of Ira S. Hardman; George I., who graduated from the Shenandoah Academy and from the law department of the University of Virginia; Edwin, Jr., a graduate of the Weston High School and now in the West Virginia University; Dianna, a graduate of Weston High School; Fannie, also a high school graduate; Mary W., attending high school; and John G., in grammar school.

JULES A. VIGUESNEY, president of the Citizens National Bank at Belington, Barbour County, is one of the influential men who have played a prominent part in the development and upbuilding of this vital little city, and his influence has extended also far outside the boundaries of this, his native county, where he stands as a scion of one of the sterling pioneer families of this section of the state. He was born on a farm near Junior, this county, April 7, 1869, and is a son of Charles E. and Mary A. (Row) Viquesney, the former of whom was born in a suburb of the City of Paris, France, and the latter of whom was born at Newmarket, Virginia, a daughter of Benjamin Row, who came to the present Barbour County, West Virginia, prior to the Civil war and who operated a grist mill near Junior, in which neighborhood he passed the remainder of his life. Charles E. Viquesney was a boy when he accompanied his parents to the United States, and the family home was established in the vicinity of the present City of Belington, Barbour County, his father, Charles E., Sr., having here come a farmer, though he and his wife eventually returned to France and passed the remainder of their lives on their native land. Charles E., Jr., was reared to adulthood on the pioneer farm, and here he maintained his home until the close of his long and useful life. His brother, Jules A., removed to Indiana, where he died. He had also the brother Alfred. G. A., the next younger brother, settled at Little Rock, Arkansas, but made many trips back and forth to France, in which country he now resides, at the age of eighty-four years (1922). Eugene, youngest of the brothers, returned to France with his parents.

J. G. Vigneron

In the Civil war period Charles E. Viquesney, Jr., is conducting a blacksmith shop in the present Belington neighborhood, and he was also identified with farm enterprise in this county for many years. During the last ten years of his life he was a traveling salesman for a monument establishment of Fred A. Lang & Company, Clarksburg, and in this connection he became well known throughout the state. He was a staunch Union man in the Civil war period and was a republican in politics. He died in 1896, at the age of seventy-two years, and his widow passed away in May, 1919, at the venerable age of eighty-four years. They became the parents of ten children: Virginia (Mrs. Shomo), of Junior, Barbour County; Benjamin E., a truck gardener at Elkins, Randolph County; Sarah R., wife of Dr. U. S. Simon, a chiropractic physician at Johnstown, Pennsylvania; Polly, wife of George Hayes, of Junior; Lewis N., a resident of Junior and serving as deputy sheriff of Barbour County; Julia F., wife of Edward W. Lee, of Junior; Laura B., wife of William A. Simon, residing near Junior; Jules August, the immediate subject of this review; Lillie Reed, who died at Junior, she having been the wife of Charles Wilson, Jr.; and Charles E. Viquesney, who was second in order of birth and died at the age of eighteen years.

Jules A. Viquesney gained his early education in the public schools of Barbour County and later took a business course in the Methodist Episcopal Seminary at Buckhannon. He made a record not only as a successful teacher in the rural schools but also as a specially skilled teacher of penmanship. For a period of about five years he was telegraph operator and assistant station agent for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and after leaving this service he became engaged in the real estate business, besides serving as justice of the peace. He read law with Blackburn Ware, his present law partner, and also spent a term in the law department of the State University. He was admitted to the bar in 1905, and has since been associated with his former preceptor, Mr. Ware, in the practice of his profession at Belington, though his law office is now principally in an advisory capacity, as a full-fledged counselor. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Benjamin Harrison, and has since continued leader in the local councils of the republican party in Barbour County. He has served as a member of the publican county and congressional committees and has attended practically every state convention of his party in West Virginia from the time of his majority to the present. Governor Dawson appointed him a member of the Board of Directors of the State Hospital for the insane at Spencer, and later appointed him forest, game and fish warden of the state, an office of which, by appointment under the administrations of Governors Glasscock and Hatfield, he continued the incumbent nearly ten years. Within this period he organized the Allegany and Cheat Mountain clubs, and instituted the lookout stations and patrols for the protection of West Virginia forests from damage by fire.

Mr. Viquesney was prominently identified with the founding of the now vital little city of Belington, and he is elected the second mayor of the place, he having thereafter been elected to this office six times, though his terms are not consecutive, and his seventh term as mayor having resulted from his election in March, 1922, so that he is the present incumbent of this office. He was one of the organizers and is president of the Citizens National Bank of Belington, is associated with many corporations contributing to the industrial and commercial advancement of Belington and other points in this section of the state, and for many years he has been actively identified with the timber and lumber industry. He is a director of the Tygart Valley Orchard Company, representing one of the largest commercial orchard enterprises in the state, and at Junior he is the owner of a fine individual orchard. On his farm in that locality he specializes in the raising of potatoes, and in 1915 he sent forth the first earload of potatoes ever shipped from Barbour County. He has since shipped in a single year as many as eleven earloads, representing the product on his own farm and those of neighbors.

Mr. Viquesney is a charter member of the Belington Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, and is affiliated also with the Woodmen of the World, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Loyal Order of Moose and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, besides which he is a leading member of the Business Men's Club of Belington.

In December, 1892, occurred the marriage of Mr. Viquesney and Miss Dora J. Yeager, daughter of William and Martha (Arbogast) Yeager, of Barbour County. Mr. Yeager is now a resident of Belington and is eighty-eight years of age in 1922, and his wife is now in her eighty-fourth year. Mr. and Mrs. Viquesney have two children: Herman V., of Belington, married Miss Hazel, a daughter of M. L. Haller, and the one child of this union is a daughter, Joan Yvonne. Herman V. Viquesney volunteered in the Signal Corps of the United States Army when the nation became involved in the World war, and was in charge of Government telephones and other equipment at Tours, France, at the time when the armistice brought the war to a close and enabled him to leave the land of his paternal ancestors and return to that of his birth. Miss Winnie Marie Viquesney, the younger of the two children, was graduated in the Belington High School and in 1920-21 was a successful and popular teacher in the public schools of this city, where she is now serving as stenographer in her father's office.

HAROLD S. MATHEWS is president of the Tribune Printing Company of Charleston, the largest printing, binding and lithographing establishment in the state. It is a successful business, and he and several of his brothers have engaged their activities therein during the life and since the death of their father.

His father was J. M. Mathews, a native of Philadelphia, and for many years active in the oil industry of Pennsylvania. He came to Charleston in 1897, being influenced to do so largely through his acquaintance with former Governor Dawson of this state. A few years later he became interested in some of the printing and publishing concerns of the city. One of these was The Mail-Tribune, jobbers and publishers, owned by A. B. White, and former Governor Dawson. The management of the old Tribune Company had been under a receiver for some time, and in 1903 the property was acquired by J. M. Mathews and associates, and at that time the Tribune Printing Company was incorporated. The newspaper was sold, but they retained the name Tribune for the new company, which throughout has been a printing plant rather than an auxiliary of newspaper publication. The company was incorporated with a capital of $50,000, with J. M. Mathews, president; S. C. Butler, secretary; and M. A. Kendall, treasurer. J. M. Mathews was the directing spirit of this enterprise through its initial stages, and saw it prosperously established before his death, which occurred in 1910. He was succeeded as president by his son H. S. Mathews. In 1914 H. S. Mathews and his two brothers, M. R. and R. L. Mathews, bought Mr. Kendall's interest, and in 1916 they bought the interest of Mr. Butler, thus becoming sole owners, and incorporated for $100,000. In 1918 R. L. Mathews sold his stock to H. S. and M. R. Mathews, who are now actively associated as managers and owners of the business.

The company does a general line of printing and editing work, has binding, lithographing and other mechanical departments, employs from 100 to 140 people, and the business is conducted in a four-story building 50 by 110 feet, which was built by James M. Mathews in 1907 at a cost of $60,000.

H. S. Mathews came to Charleston from Philadelphia in 1899. In 1900 he went into the coal fields, but in 1907 returned to Charleston, and on his father's death succeeded to the presidency of the company. He has served as treasurer of the County Republican Committee, as a member of the City Council, and is a Rotarian and a past exalted ruler of the Elks Lodge. He is a member of St. John's Episcopal Church. Mr. Mathews married Irene Taylor, of Parkersburg, and they have two children, Harold S. and Elizabeth I.

ARTIMUS W. COX. Under the corporate title of the A. W. Cox Department Store is conducted one of the most important general mercantile enterprises in the City of Charleston. Mr. Cox having been the founder of the business, of which he is the executive head and chief stockholder, all other stockholders being active employees in connection with the establishment. Mr. Cox, the president and general manager of the company, has made a splendid record that places him well to the front in the ranks of the progressive and influential business men of the capital city of West Virginia.

The A. W. Cox Department Store was incorporated in 1914, with a capital stock of $20,000, and assumed ownership and control of the department store formerly conducted by George Ort. The business has shown a record of splendid expansion, and operations are now based on a capital stock of $140,000, while the corps of employees averages fifty persons. The sales for the first year aggregated $82,000, and the record for 1921 was total sales amounting to more than $600,000, the jobbing department of the enterprise being held as an independent feature, and its accounts being entirely separate from that of the general retail business. The company owns its substantial and modern building, a five-story and basement structure that is 36 by 120 feet in dimensions. The entire building is occupied by the company, which likewise maintains a large separate warehouse for the reception and storage of surplus stocks. The substantial financial success that has attended this well ordered business is indicated significantly in the fact it has paid large dividends to the stockholders.

A. W. Cox was born and reared in Roane County, West Virginia, and has found in his native state ample opportunity for the achievement of large and worthy success in connection with normal business enterprise. In 1908 he came to Kanawha County and established a general store at Clendenin, where he built up a prosperous business and where he continued operations until 1914, when he removed to Charleston and became the executive head of the now large and important department store which bears his name. He has had no time or desire for political activity or public office, but is essentially loyal and progressive as a citizen, ever ready to lend support to measures and enterprises tending to benefit the community in which he lives. He is a member of the Odd Fellows, the Masons, the Chamber of Commerce, the Lions Club, and of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He married Miss Narcie Payne, of Roane County, and they have three children: Sybil, Wilbur and Mildred.

WILLIAM CASPER SHANKLIN. The record of W. C. Shanklin as a railroad man covers a period of nearly thirty years. His service began with the Chesapeake & Ohio, and he finally returned to this company, and for the last three years he has been its agent and representative at South Charleston.

Mr. Shanklin was born in Greenbrier County, West Virginia, August 25, 1874, son of John H. and Amanda (Morgan) Shanklin, the former a native of Monroe County and the latter of Greenbrier. John Shanklin was a farmer, and was accidentally killed in middle life. W. C. Shanklin therefore came to manhood without the care and direction of a father, and early learned to depend upon himself. It was in 1894, when he was twenty years of age, that he began railroadng, as a telegraph operator at Talcott, West Virginia, for the Chesapeake & Ohio. He remained in the service of this company five years. After that he was with several other companies, and for three years he was Nebraska as a station agent of the Chicago, Burlington Quincy. Out of twenty-nine years of railroad duty, nineteen years had been devoted to station work.

Mr. Shanklin resumed service with the Chesapeake & Ohio about seven years ago, and on August 21, 1919, was a pointed agent at South Charleston. This growing and prosperous industrial city is now one of the prominent sources of traffic for the Chesapeake & Ohio. Eight men are required to handle the business of the station in addition to Mr. Shanklin. The freight receipts here for 1920 ran over $1,000,000, and the business for 1921 was nearly as much.

Mr. Shanklin is a member of the Order of Railway Telegraphers and belongs to several other organizations. He is a thirty-second degree Mason and Shriner. He is now serving as a member of the City Council of South Charleston. At Ironton, Ohio, he married Miss Bessie Frazier. They have six children, Lester, Mildred, Edith, Frances Aileen and Madeline. The son Lester is an employee of the Chesapeake & Ohio.

FRANK E. SHANNON, is the present prosecuting attorney of Wyoming County, West Virginia, having been elected to the republican ticket in 1920 to serve a term of four years. He is a son of Albert Shannon and Sallie (Justice) Shannon. His father is still living, his mother having died when he was but one year old.

His family was one of the first settlers of the county, having come to this county from Tazewell, Virginia, long before the Civil war. He and all of his people are republicans and Methodists.

JAMES W. THORNHILL is owner and active proprietor of the J. W. Thornhill planing-mill at Belington, a industry not excelled in mechanical efficiency and management in this section of West Virginia. The various processes of lumber manufacture from the trees in the forest to the finished product are intimate by almost life-long experience to Mr. Thornhill, and he is the type of business man who thoroughly loves the material with which he works.

His father was Frank Thornhill, who was born in Ohio, Virginia, was a Southerner in sentiment and sympathy on the issues of the Civil war, and at one time was made prisoner and put in Camp Chase, Ohio. He spent his active life as a farmer, and died at Belington in Barbour County in 1873, at the age of fifty-two. He was a strong democrat, and both he and his wife were loyal and active members of the Presbyterian Church. His wife was Elizabeth Jane Willis, who came from Rappahannock County, Virginia, daughter of Francis Willis. She was born January 1, 1829, and died at Sutton, West Virginia, March 10, 1899, aged sixty-eight. Frank Thornhill was born September 2, 1821, and died November 19, 1873. They began life without special education, were good workers, had high ideals, and reared a family of useful children. The children were: Mary, who married the late Albert Rohrbough of Belington; Martha Ann, who died at Philippi, wife of S. H. Morrall; Elizabeth Jane, wife of Monroe Phillips of Belington; and James William.

James William Thornhill was born July 31, 1866, in Barker District, Barbour County. When he was a child his parents moved to Belington, where he had the privilege of attending a few brief terms of the common schools. He worked in the fields on the home farm, and as a youth of eighteen found employment in handling lumber in a lumber yard at wages of 10 cents an hour. From common labor he was promoted to inspector, at $35 a month and for seventeen years he was in the service of the well known lumber and timber firm of Pardee and Curtin at Sutton, West Virginia.

Mr. Thornhill left this firm in 1907 and returned to Belington and took the contract for filling the lumber products of the Belington Planing Mill Company. When this firm became financially involved he bought the plant, in 1912. The plant was then of very small dimensions, em employing perhaps ten men. Mr. Thornhill at once injected new energy and new possibilities into the business. The plant at the beginning of 1922 has three times the machinery it had when Mr. Thornhill took charge, and its drying kilns have a capacity of 100,000 feet. The planing mill specializes in the manufacture of interior trim and finish from West Virginia wood, including poplar, chestnut, oak and basswood. Much of the output finds market as far away as Cleveland, Ohio and New York City. The basswood nearly all goes East, while the oak is marketed in the West, showing that Western people have a higher appreciation and demand for superior wood finish than Eastern people. The business is both wholesale and retail. The principal retail business is done at Zanesville, Ohio, under the name of the F. L. Israel Lumber Company. The plant at Belington is capable of furnishing all the lumber products and finishing required in the building of an entire house. Fourteen acres of ground situated along the Weaver branch of the Western Maryland Railroad furnishes space for the plant and yard.

J. A. Thomhill.

Mr. Thornhill plans for 1922 a new mill, with a capacity third larger than the present one, and with greatly improved facilities, including four new heavy finishing machines and with power available for its operation.

A year after Mr. Thornhill became owner of the old plant an enemy set fire to the lumber yard and everything out the mill was destroyed. The loss entailed was greater than the resources that remained, but with the insurance and the credit he had established he restocked his plant and pushed the business even harder than before. Gradually his energy found fruit in the extending stacks of lumber and the great quantities of finished material in their warehouses and shipped out by the car loads. The buzz and hum of the planers and saws has been sweet music to the loyal men who make up the force of from thirty to forty-five who handle the extensive business of the plant. One of the important departments is that in which the tools are made and dressed and adjusted to do lumber rimming and finishing. In charge of this department is Mr. Mikes, tool maker and dresser, foreman of the mechanical department and an expert in the art of conditioning tools. The planing department is almost dustless, since the machines are all equipped with blower pipes, which suck all dirt and shavings into the boiler-room, where his by-product is utilized at great saving for fuel. A water plant equal to a fire emergency is installed, and an electric system of wiring carries light to any part of the plant and yard. In the new plant the equipments will be such as to supersede the cruder processes of handling product now in use, and these facilities will represent the climax of achievement in ten years under the practical eye of Mr. Thornhill, the owner and manager.

The Belington community regards Mr. Thornhill as one of its permanent citizens, and he in turn has made use of his growing prosperity for the benefit of the little city. In 1917 he finished his own home, a spacious and generous residence, the planning and arrangement being the result of the joint co-operation of himself and Mrs. Thornhill. All the finish and much of the other material entering into this home came from his planing mill.

Mr. Thornhill was reared in a democratic family and as voted that ticket beginning with Grover Cleveland. He has always been loyal to the Presbyterian Church of his father, and for a number of years he was an elder in the church of Sutton, while he lived there. Outside of these interests his life has been in his business and in his home, and he has not been attracted into fraternal organizations.

On April 11, 1889, Mr. Thornhill married Miss Cora L. Dunham, daughter of John C. Dunham and granddaughter of Rev. R. F. Dunham, a Baptist minister. She is a niece of R. J. Dunham, of Phillips.

Mrs. Thornhill, who died May 17, 1905, was the mother of three children. The oldest, Mary Leoline, born January 3, 1890, is the wife of W. E. Coffman of Keyser, West Virginia, and her three children are William Eugene, Robert Thornhill and Mary Frances. The only son of Mr. Thornhill by this union is W. Frank Thornhill, who was born September 10, 1892, and is now superintendent of the Thornhill Planing Mill at Belington. He married Flora Griffin, daughter of Rev. Mr. Griffin, and they have two children, Josephine Ann and Catherine Lee. Evelyn Ruth Thornhill, the youngest of the three children, was born December 31, 1898, and is the wife of H. Sherwood Shinn, of Belington, who is now finishing his education in West Virginia University at Morgantown.

November 29, 1911, Mr. Thornhill married Miss Grace Margaret Boyd. She was born in Harrison County, August 21, 1891, daughter of Robert Calvin and Jocasta (Goodwin) Boyd, being the fourth among their five children. The others are: Bessie May, wife of J. R. McHenry, of Centralia, West Virginia, Benjamin Thomas, of Weston; Robert Coy, of Denver, Colorado; and George Dewey, of Buckhannon. Mrs. Thornhill had a public school education and was married at the age of twenty at Oakland, Maryland. Mr. and Mrs. Thornhill have two children, Margaret Lee, born May 11, 1913, and James William, Jr., born May 29, 1916.

During the World war the Thornhill home played its part in the burden of financing the war and its auxiliary efforts, taking large amounts of bonds and contributing to the Red Cross, and doing some of the practical work, such as knitting for the soldiers at the front.

THOMAS S. RICHARDSON, joint agent for the freight offices of the Baltimore & Ohio, the Kanawha & Michigan and the Kanawha & West Virginia railroads at Charleston, is an old-timer in the transportation business, and has been in railroad work at Charleston for over twenty years. He is one of the city's best liked men, and his personal popularity has brought a great deal of business to the companies he represents.

He began railroad work at Charleston in 1900 as night bill clerk under O. E. Payne, then agent for the Kanawha & Michigan. Two years later he was promoted to bill clerk, then to cashier, then to chief clerk and in 1910 was made agent. He is now in general charge of a large office and warehouse force, comprising thirty-five office clerks and a similar number in the warehouses. This force handles on the average forty cars of outbound freight daily, besides thirty-five inbound merchandise cars and a similar number distributed among the local industries. In 1900 twenty men were sufficient to handle all the business of the office, and there were about forty in 1910, when Mr. Richardson became agent. In May, 1918, all the warehouse and office buildings were destroyed by fire, and the new ones were constructed with all the modern facilities for perfect dispatch of business, so that few cities anywhere have superior buildings of the kind.

Mr. Richardson was born in Scotland, April 17, 1868, and is a man who has been the architect of his own destiny. When he was about twelve years of age he was taken to the mountain region of Pennsylvania, and he earned his living in the mines for several years. About the time he became of age he entered the office of a coal and iron company at Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania, where he remained two years. Then coming to West Virginia, he was in the New River coal field as outside foreman in the opening of mines and in the operation of coke ovens, and left there to come to Charleston to get better educational advantages. He left a job worth $150 a month to start at railroading at $45.

Mr. Richardson is a Knight Templar Mason and Shriner. He married at Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania, Miss Jean Scott. Of their four children only one is now living, Thomas A. Richardson, who is assistant chief clerk in his father's office. One son, Arthur, was a time-keeper with the Kanawha & Michigan, and died at Phoenix, Arizona, at the age of twenty-six. Another son was drowned in the Kanawha River when only five years of age.

COYLE & RICHARDSON. A good example of "the survival of the fittest" is the honored establishment of Coyle & Richardson, the oldest department store in the southern part of the state and a business whose growth has been typical of its home city of Charleston, a town of wide reputation for good taste in dress, to the demands of whose exclusive set this concern has largely catered.

Starting in a modest way in 1884, in a small building on the river front, a high standard of business ethics was laid down as a sure foundation for sound, enduring growth, and during the successive changes brought about by increasing need of space the firm has been a pioneer in the development of Charleston's retail business section as well as in the leadership of movements for shorter hours and the improvement of working conditions. From a one-story, twenty foot frontage, the store has grown to a six-story and basement fire-proof building 50 by 115 feet, the larger part of which it occupies, doing a business of well over half a million dollars a year. The concern has under contemplation for 1923 a new building that will double its present facilities.

George F. Coyle was born in Berkeley County, West Virginia, and J. Lynn Richardson, in Frederick County, Maryland. They became associated through clerkships in Staunton, Virginia, later forming a partnership in a small store in Winchester, Virginia, which they sold in 1880, renewing their firm name in Charleston four years later. The business was incorporated in 1913 with a capital stock of $80,000, which was increased in 1921 to $225,000. Mr. Richardson died May 11, 1915. He was for many years a vestryman in St. John's Episcopal Church, a republican in politics, and one of the original stockholders in the Kanawha National Bank, as was Mr. Coyle. He was a polished gentleman of the old business school that characterized the commercial world of the '80s, yet kept ever abreast of the progress of the times.

Mr. Coyle, the present head of the business, is an elder in the First Presbyterian Church, an officer in the Rotary Club of Charleston, and takes a prominent part in the charitable and civic affairs of the community. He married in 1884, and has two children, a married daughter and a son, George Lacy Coyle, who is actively associated with his father in the management of the business.

ADAM ROBERT SHEPHERD. Members of the Shepherd family have played a prominent part in the affairs of Kanawha County for many years. The father of the present generation was instrumental in providing Charleston with its first public school, and also maintained a school of the highest class for the special training of young men. In lines of business the name has been hardly less conspicuous. In public service A. R. Shepherd has an unusual record in the Legislature, in the fiscal management of county affairs, and he is now county assessor.

A. R. Shepherd was born at Charleston, April 7, 1868. His father, John Shepherd, was born in Prince Edward County, Virginia, and finished his education in Hampden Sidney College. He came to Charleston to establish a high class private school, and that school trained the sons of many of the leading families of that day. As a member of the Board of Education he built the first school in Charleston, the old Union School Building. After that he taught a private school. About 1878 John Shepherd established a nursery eight miles out, in Union District. Ten years later he bought land in what is now South Charleston, and continued the nursery business there until 1905. After that he lived retired until his death in 1911, at the age of seventy-eight. He lived to see a considerable part of his old farm improved by buildings, marking the progress in the development of the important industrial suburb of South Charleston. His sons succeeded to his nursery business, and continued it until the growth of South Charleston made it necessary for them to abandon the land for that purpose. John Shepherd married Louise Aultz. Her father, Adam Aultz, came when a young man from Rockbridge County, Virginia, and acquired some 1,100 acres of land nine miles out of Charleston. He was a slave owner, conducted farming operations on an extensive scale, and was one of the most influential men in that section of the state. He died in 1868, at the age of seventy-eight. Louise Aultz was born on the farm in Kanawha County, and spent all her life there. She died in 1909, at the age of sixty-eight. Her five children are still living: Dr. C. W., of Spring Hill Kanawha County; L. Ella, who was a teacher for twenty five years in Kanawha County, and now lives on part of the old homestead; A. R. Shepherd; John King, living on part of the old home in South Charleston; and Mattie, wife of J. L. Paullay, of Raleigh County, West Virginia.

A. R. Shepherd had a common school education, and for ten years, beginning at the age of twenty-one, he was associated with his father and brothers on the farm and in the nursery business. For sixteen years he conducted the Spring Hill General Mercantile establishment at Spring Hill in Kanawha County. He was made postmaster of the village in 1896, under McKinley's administration. Mr. Shepherd sold out his business at Spring Hill in 1915. For the following four years he was chief inspector under the State Public Service Commission. In 1920 he was republican candidate for assessor, was elected and took over the office on January 1, 1921.

He is now administering the assessor's office for the largest county in the state, and the business of the office requires ten assistants. Kanawha County has 40,000 separate parcels of real estate property and 36,000 personal property entries. The county is the largest in total valuation in the state, the total being $200,000,000 more than any other county. The great concentration of wealth in Kanawha County is due not only to the City of Charleston but also to the oil, gas, coal and other mineral resources here. The business of the assessor's office is greatly increased by the necessity of inspection of every piece of property so as to avoid inequalities in placing the assessments. Mr. Shepherd recently read a paper on this subject before the State Board of Assessors, and his view resulted in a new rule being made governing the assessment of coal and oil lands.

His experience in the handling of public office began in 1907, when he was a member of the State Legislature and when the true valuation law was adopted. He served six years as county commissioner. Three years of this term he was president of the board. When he went into office the county had a floating debt of $235,000, and the county paper was worth only 80 cents on the dollar. While he was on the board the indebtedness was paid and a balance of about $100,000 was left in the treasury, and at the same time the tax rate was lower than ever before. Those in position to judge, and in fact all property owners in Kanawha County, recognize the fact that Mr. Shepherd in public office handles the business as he would a business of his own. He has been a prominent republican, a delegate to a number of conventions and was chairman of the senatorial committee and a member of the county committee. He has always been opposed to the liquor traffic, and while county commissioner refused to grant saloon licenses.

Mr. Shepherd married Elizabeth Ellett, of Richmond Virginia. Her brother-in-law, B. N. Burruss, was the business partner of Mr. Shepherd at Spring Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd have one son, Ellett N., who graduated from the Charleston High School in 1922. Mr. Shepherd is a Mason.

GEORGE W. JENKINS, JR. Among the school men of West Virginia perhaps none have heavier responsibilities than George W. Jenkins, county superintendent of the largest county in the state—Kanawha, with upwards of 800 teachers under his supervision. He is now in his second term having been first elected to the office in 1914, so that all the extraordinary burdens and problems arising from and incident to the war period were added to the regular routine.

Superintendent Jenkins has been in school work nearly all his life since boyhood. He is a native of Kanawha County, born on a farm six miles west of Charleston, at Guthrie, on May 25, 1887, son of George W. and Martha (Lynn) Jenkins. His father was born in the same house in 1848, only a short time after his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jenkins, came to this locality from old Virginia. Thomas Jenkins settled in the woods, cleared away the timber to get a space for cultivating crops, and for a number of years operated a cooper shop on his farm. He died at the age of eighty-five. He was a leader in the local

A. J. Mullins

Methodist Episcopal Church. George W. Jenkins, Sr., is still living at the old homestead where he was born, and to it most of his active labors were devoted. He has been prominent in local affairs, serving as justice of the peace, for twenty years as Overseer of the poor for Union District, and he has acted as local crier in the United States District Court, being first appointed to that office by the late Judge Benjamin Keeler, and after his death was reappointed by Judge McClintie. He is a republican in politics. George W. Jenkins, Sr., was only thirteen years of age when the Civil war broke out, but subsequently he enlisted in Company A of the Seventh Virginia Cavalry, and was the "baby" of his regiment and in service until the close of the war. His wife, Martha Lynn, was a neighbor girl, born on Sugar Creek, and she died about three years ago. There were nine children born to George W., Sr., and Martha Jenkins: Stacia, Mrs. Phil Stalnaker, of Charleston; Walter, a farmer; Ora, Mrs. George Hendrick, of Charleston; Mollie and Mattie, twins, the former the wife of Jo Eith, and the latter Mrs. Bascom Young; Eli, a farmer at Guthrie; Minnie, wife of Howard Casdorff; George W., Jr.; and Bessie, wife of Oscar Thaxton, of Charleston.

George W. Jenkins, Jr., was educated in the country schools, in the Charleston High School, and had a commercial course. He taught ten years in the rural and graded schools of Kanawha County and for a time was principal of the Sugar Creek School. In 1914 he received the republican nomination for county superintendent of schools, was elected, and in 1918 re-elected. Mr. Jenkins is managing editor of the West Virginia School Journal and Educator, the state school paper.

He married Miss Elsa Riley, of Ripley, Jackson County. She was educated in Marshall College at Huntington and West Virginia University, and was formerly a teacher in Kanawha County. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins have three children: Frances Lynn, Ernestine and Helen Irene. Mr. Jenkins is a member of the Knights of Pythias and Mrs. Jenkins is a Pythian Sister, and both are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ANDREW J. MULLINS. The first settlers of a new county or city, independent of any intrinsic qualities which they possess, are objects of peculiar interest in succeeding generations. Men delight to read their names and treasure in memory the slightest incident connected with their persons and their settlement. Each consecutive step in the settlement of the country, as adventurers pushed out from the populous centers into the rapidly receding wilderness has brought to notice enterprising men who have connected their names indissolubly with rising states and embryo cities. In this connection mention is made of Andrew J. Mullins, the "father" of the town of Mullens, which was named in his honor, but which missed giving him that honor when those who drew up the charter of the city misspelled his name.

Mr. Mullins was born February 21, 1857 in Tazewell County, Virginia, and is a son of William and Rachael (Cannady) Mullins. William Mullins was born on Shelby Creek in Pike County, and was engaged in agricultural pursuits until the outbreak of the war between the states, at which time he enlisted in the Thirty-ninth Regiment, Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, in the Union Army, and met a soldier's death during the last year of the war. His widow survived him for nearly thirty years, dying in 1894, at Keystone, McDowell County, this state. All of their four sons and four daughters are still living, four in West Virginia: William Harrison, living on Twelve Pole Creek in Wayne County, who was named for his grandfather; Winnie, the widow of John T. Belcher, of Keystone; Lucinda, is the widow of Philip Lambert, of Iaeger, McDowell County; and Andrew J., of this notice.

Andrew J. Mullins went to school in McDowell and Logan counties, just across Tug River from his Kentucky home and hunting bears was not only a pastime with him but a business for a number of years. From Kentucky he moved to McDowell County, in the present neighborhood of Roderfield, and in 1890, to Keystone, where he served as deputy sheriff for three years or until moving to his present home. Keystone at that time had the reputation of being a very "tough" locality. Mr. Mullins assisted to clear the brush in the woods for a preliminary survey for the Norfolk & Western Railroad, and while thus engaged became convinced that coal was to be found at the present site of Mullens. Accordingly he moved to this locality in February, 1896, settling in the woods, where he had two log pens built out of small logs and these covered with split boards, puncheon doors being installed. This was his home for eight years, or until the arrival of a sawmill made it possible for him to build a plank house. Later he built his present home, one of the finest in the neighborhood. The nearest place on the railroad at the time of his arrival was Keystone, on the Norfolk & Western, thirty miles from Mullens, but he was sure that the railroad would be built through. He opened the first store at Mullens, located on the present site of the new Stanton Building, and for three years conducted a general merchandise establishment, buying produce, etc., and hauling his goods over rough mountain roads from Keystone.

Mr. Mullins was in business during the years 1904, 1905 and 1906. He was justice of the peace when the railroad was being built, and in this connection it may be said that he has seen all of the railroad track laid in this locality. After the lapse of several years he was again justice of the peace, and also served as Mullens' first mayor. He was then sent for four years to the State Legislature, and served with much ability, being, among others, on the committees of agriculture, prohibition and emigration, and on his return was again elected mayor. He has assisted in the organization of three banks, and is vice president and a director of the Bank of Wyoming, of Mullens and a director of the Wyoming County Bank of Pineville. He was also connected with the Citizens Bank of Pineville, which was wrecked by a dishonest official. Of recent years Mr. Mullins has been engaged in building houses on his land and selling them to newcomers. He has likewise been interested in coal development from the time when, with Peter Minor, he saw the first coal mine opened at Elkhorn. In politics he is a staunch republican, and his religious connection is with the Primitive Baptist Church, of which he has been a member for forty years, and for the past ten years an ordained minister. He has recently built a church, which he has donated to the Mullens congregation. Mr. Mullins has always been greatly fond of hunting, and has killed wild turkeys within sight of the present City of Mullens. During his younger days he was exceptionally strong and active, and numerous stories are told of his prowess as a hunter and woodsman. On one occasion, while on a hunting trip, he killed one bear and wounded another, and when the latter attacked him he was forced to fight and kill it with a club. On another day, discovering a bear in a hole in a cliff, he took a hasty shot but succeeded only in shooting the animal's nose off, after which he was forced to engage in a desperate contest with bruin, whom he finally dispatched with a knife.

At the age of twenty-one years Mr. Mullins was united in marriage with Miss Harriet Trent, of McDowell County, daughter of Fred Trent, and of the children born to this union seven are still living: V. B., who is engaged in agricultural operations near Pineville, Wyoming County; W. F., who is engaged in extensive contracting and building transactions at and near Mullens; Susie, the wife of Floyd Workman, a Cabin Creek farmer in Wyoming County; H. F., who is engaged in mercantile pursuits at Mullens; Mary, the wife of John W. Phillips, on a farm near Pineville; Nora, the wife of H. E. Lilly, who owns a restaurant at Mullens; and Eliza, the wife of D. S. Nichols, store manager for the Trace Fork Coal Company.

PHELPS & HOLLORAN are a firm of Charleston brick contractors, representing technical skill and experience, thorough business capacity, and a service of prompt and reliable fulfillment. This firm has handled some very large and important contracts in and around Charleston.

The best statement of the quality of their work is reference to some of the completed contracts themselves. At Charleston they built the Schwamb Memorial Church, the Soloff Hotel, the Tennessee Avenue Garage, the nine apartment building of Simon Cohen, the Union Mission Nursery Building, the Knights of Pythias Hall and the Security Bank Building, to mention only a few among a larger number. They were also contractors for the Alderson Baptist Academy at Alderson, West Virginia, one of the finest and most modern educational plants in the state. They built the Clendenin High School at Clendenin.

Jess W. Holloran, of this firm, was born in Appomattox County, Virginia, but when he was a year old his parents removed to Lynchburg, that state, where he was reared and educated. In that city he learned the trade of brick mason, and he knows the trade and business from the standpoint of practical experience in every detail. He worked as a journeyman at Lynchburg and in other cities, and subsequently became a brick contractor. In 1913 he removed his home to Charleston, West Virginia, where he formed his partnership with S. H. Phelps, under the name Phelps & Holloran. Mr. Holloran is secretary of the Mason Contractors Association of Charleston.

S. H. Phelps is a native of Lynchburg, Virginia. As a youth he learned the brick mason's trade under Mr. Holloran, his present partner. They have been more or less closely associated ever since. Mr. Phelps, however, moved to Charleston in 1912, and his work has attracted considerable attention, so as to give an extensive business to the firm as soon as Phelps & Holloran constituted their partnership in 1918. They have since had a prominent part in the great growth and expansion of Charleston.

EDWIN MINER KEATLEY, of Charleston, has been a West Virginian thirty years, and his versatile activities and broad interests give his career a most unusual permanence among citizens who are entitled to state-wide recognition. Mr. Keatley for many years was a mining engineer, associated with some of the early developments in the West Virginia coal fields, has been both a State and Federal official, is now speaker of the House of Delegates in the West Virginia Legislature, and is also president of the American Constitutional Association of West Virginia.

Mr. Keatley was born in Barton, Tioga County, New York, May 12, 1868, son of Rev. William and Elizabeth (Swallow) Keatley. Rev. William Keatley was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, son of an Episcopalian minister, while his mother was a Gordon of Scotland, of close kin to Chinese Gordon. William Keatley came to the United States at the age of twenty-two, in 1851, studied for the ministry in the Wyoming Seminary at Kingston, Pennsylvania, and practically his entire career as a minister was devoted to service in the Wyoming Conference at Pennsylvania. In that section he married Elizabeth Swallow, member of an historic family of the Wyoming Valley. The Swallow family settled in Wyoming Valley from Connecticut, and the grandfather of Elizabeth Swallow entered the Revolutionary army from that section. The maternal grandfather of Elizabeth Swallow was John Cooper, a famous Indian fighter, who participated in the Wyoming Valley massacre. A cousin of Elizabeth Swallow was Rev. Silas Swallow, of the Wyoming Valley, who was twice a candidate of the prohibition party for President.

Edwin M. Keatley was educated in the public schools of Pennsylvania, in the Wyoming Seminary at Kingston, and gained a thorough technical training for his profession of mining engineering, which he followed for nineteen years. For two years he was topographer in the employ of the State Geological Survey of Pennsylvania, and left that work to go with the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Company of New York as a mining engineer. It was the Morgan interests that sent him to West Virginia in 1891, as chief engineer to look after the coal lands belonging to what is known as the Beaver Coal Company, a subsidiary of the Morgan interests in Raleigh County. That was the beginning of Mr. Keatley's thirty years' residence in West Virginia. His subsequent connection was with the John Cooper & Company coal mining interests, owning mines on the Norfolk & Western Railway. He served as engineer for this company about five years, with headquarters at Bramwell in Mercer County.

In the meantime Mr. Keatley had been turning his versatile talents to the study of law, and in 1897 he went to the State University at Morgantown and took the examination for admission to the bar and was licensed to practice. In the same year he removed to Charleston, having been appointed assistant attorney general of the state under Attorney General Edgar P. Rucker. He continued in this work during Mr. Rucker's administration, and then engaged in private practice at Charleston. When the United States Circuit and District courts for the Southern District of West Virginia were established in Charleston Judge Goff, at the solicitation of the Kanawha County bar, appointed Mr. Keatley clerk of the Circuit Court for the new district, and a year later Judge Keller appointed him clerk of the United States District Court. He was clerk of both courts until the Circuit Court was abolished, and continued to serve as clerk of the United States District Court from July 1, 1901, to July 1, 1918, when, after seventeen years in the office, he resigned to give his attention to his business affairs.

Mr. Keatley is president and a large stockholder of the Virginian Electric & Machine Works, one of Charleston's leading industrial establishments. This business is manufacturing and jobbing in electrical and other machinery for mines and mining industries.

In a very noteworthy degree Mr. Keatley's career has been one of public service, a service identified with the broader interests of both state and nation. During the World war, in fact throughout the two years of America's participation, he gave his time and abilities unstinted and gratis to the Government as chief clerk of the Southern District Draft Board, which included twenty-seven counties in West Virginia. He had a staff of fourteen clerks, and through his office were handled the registration, classification and examination of 90 000 men.

For several years Mr. Keatley has been a leader in the Charleston Chamber of Commerce, which he served one term as president, two terms as a member of the board of directors, and is now national councillor representing this body in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at Washington.

Mr. Keatley is a member of the State Capitol Commission of West Virginia. This is the commission to which has been entrusted the selection of a site and the construction of a new state capitol to replace the one burned in January, 1921. Through the efforts of the commission West Virginia is assured for the first time in its history as a state of a really dignified and impressive capitol building. The designer of the new capitol is Cass Gilbert of New York, who designed the Woolworth Building and many other famous structures.

Reference has been made to the fact that Mr. Keatley is the present speaker of the House of Delegates in the State Legislature. He was elected a member of the Legislature in 1920, on the republican ticket, to represent Kanawha County. In the first session of that body he received the unusual honor of being made speaker, a distinction seldom conferred upon any but old-time members, and in itself a distinctive if not unique honor to the character of Mr. Keatley as a public man.

Among his many sided activities it would be appropriate for Mr. Keatley to regard his most beneficent work as that in connection with the American Constitutional Association of West Virginia, of which he is president. This organization is due principally to his efforts and began its program in 1920. It purposes to teach good citizenship according to the principles and ideals of the American Republic, and to counteract radicalism and all other forces that are inimical to justice and good order. Its work is being done primarily through the public school system of the state, and the instruction fostered by the American Constitutional Association is directed by one of the bureaus of the State Board of Education. Various publications are issued, and one of the objects of the association is to have a regular school text book on citizenship and Americanization. The association now has between 800 and 900 members throughout the state, representing the very best citizenship, and there is a pressing need for such work in West

A. C. Coats

Virginia, where entire districts are made up of industrial population.

Mr. Keatley has served as a vestryman of St. John's Episcopal Church at Charleston. He is chairman of the State Council of the National Association of Credit Men, a Knight Templar and Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner, member of the Edgewood Country Club of Charleston and a director of the Rotary Club.

His first wife was Alethia McCreery, daughter of John McCreery, of Beckley, West Virginia. She was the mother of his four older children: Mrs. S. S. Rutherford, Detroit, Michigan; Capt. Edwin E. Keatley, of the United States Army, now stationed with the Sixty-fifth Infantry at San Juan, Porto Rico; John W., who served eight months in the Marine Corps, is a student in the University of Michigan, and a prominent athlete; and Miss Meta Keatley.

For his present wife Mr. Keatley married Lenore Gosling, daughter of Rev. B. F. Gosling, a clergyman of the Southern Methodist Church. To this marriage were born three children, Richard Hagan, Gordon William and Elizabeth Swallow Keatley.

QUIN MORTON, who is a former president of the Kanawha Coal Operators Association, has been in the coal industry in West Virginia a quarter of a century, and his activities there and in the past give him a position among the most extensive coal operators of the state.

Mr. Morton was born at Charlotte Court House, Virginia, in 1857, son of D. H. and Joanna (Cabell) Morton, natives of the Old Dominion. His maternal grandfather, Breckenridge Cabell, was a member of the very historic Virginia family of that name. During the Civil war the Morton family was in the direct path of devastation, and at the end of the war little remained but the bare land. Under such circumstances Quin Morton, who in normal times would have had the environment and advantages of a son of well-to-do Virginia parents, had to go to work early in life, and he came to know something of hard times, with few opportunities for earning money. Though his school advantages were limited, he passed the necessary examination for a first grade certificate and began teaching between the ages of eighteen and nineteen. Two years prior to that time he had come a resident of West Virginia, in Greenbrier County. At the age of twenty-two he married, then entered the mercantile business at Ronceverte, traveled on the road a few years, and was cashier of the Bank of Ronceverte.

His first connection with the coal industry came in 1896, as bookkeeper for the Turkey Knob Coal Company, operating in the New River District in Payette County. His industry and ability brought new and increased responsibilities with this company, and in 1903 he became an individual operator through organizing the Morton Coal Company on Paint Creek in Kanawha County. After operating it for several years he sold the property in 1906, and then became general manager for the Imperial Colliery Company at Marlinton in Kanawha County. In 1911 Mr. Morton organized the Christian Colliery Company at Mahan in Payette County, serving as its general manager, and was also general manager of the Imperial Colliery Company at the same time. He organized in 1914 the Imperial Coal Sales Company, and performed the duties of general manager of this corporation as well. He acquired in 1915 interests in the Coal Valley Mining Company, becoming president of the company. About that time he severed his connection with the Christian Colliery Company and the Imperial Colliery Company, though retaining an interest in the Imperial Coal Sales Company.

Mr. Morton in 1916 bought an interest in the Peytonia Mining Company, and was its president until he sold out in 1920. In the fall of 1916 Mr. Morton, in association with W. S. Wood, organized the Wood Coal Company, of which Mr. Wood is president and Mr. Morton, a director. At the same time they organized the Hopkins Fork Coal Company, still operating, and of which Mr. Morton was the first president, and is still a director. These partners in 1918 organized the American Eagle Colliery Company, of which Mr. Morton is a director. In 1919 they organized the Leevale Coal Company, of which Mr. Wood is president and Mr. Morton, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Morton in January, 1920, severed his connection with the Imperial Coal Sales Company and organized the Wood-Morton Fuel Company, of which he is president. He is also a director of the Stonecastle Coal Company and the Imperial Smokeless Coal Company at Quinwood, West Virginia.

Mr. Morton several times was honored with election as president of the Kanawha Coal Operators Association. Up to 1916 he kept his home at the mines, giving his personal supervision to the practical side of the industry. In that year he removed with his family to Charleston. He has been a director of the National Coal Association since its organization, is a member of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce and is a Knight Templar Mason and Shriner. Mr. Morton married Miss Fannie Hurthall, of Philadelphia. They have five surviving children and eighteen grandchildren. These children are Helen, Mrs. O. A. Wilson; D. H. Morton; Joanna, wife of H. A. Hereford; F. H. Morton; Fannie M.; wife of Ward Boldin.

LEIGH H. HARRISON is a Charleston business man, has been in the state for twenty years, and throughout this time has sold great quantities of mining machinery to the mining companies and corporations operating in all the coal district. Mr. Harrison is manager of the Goodman Manufacturing Company.

He was born at Paw Paw, Van Buren County, Michigan, in 1868, son of T. R. and Rhoda (Emory) Harrison, his father a native of New Haven, Connecticut, and his mother of Vermont. T. R. Harrison was a man of great brilliance, and made a notable record as a scholar, educator and journalist. He graduated from Yale before reaching his eighteenth year. After leaving Yale he went to Michigan and was principal of the Battle Creek schools, where many of the pupils were as old as he was. Later for about a decade he was publisher of an anti-slavery paper at Paw Paw, one of the oldest journals in the state today.

Leigh H. Harrison was well educated in the public schools and higher institutions, attending the State Agricultural College at Lansing, Michigan. On leaving that state he removed to Chicago, and in 1890 entered the machinery business, eventually becoming associated with the Goodman Manufacturing Company of Chicago, manufacturers of machinery for mining and other industrial uses. Mr. Harrison was salesman for this firm, and in 1900 was transferred to Charleston as headquarters, with management of sales for his company in West Virginia territory. He not only looks after the sales but also the installation of coal mining machinery. In 1902 Charleston was constituted a regular branch office of the company, with Mr. Harrison as manager, and this pleasant and profitable connection has been continued now for twenty years. His business brings him into close touch with the great coal mining industry of the state, and he has many intimate friends among the prominent coal operators.

Mr. Harrison is a member of the Rotary Club, the Chamber of Commerce, and the First Presbyterian Church of Charleston. He married Miss Josephine Evans, of Columbus, Ohio.

HON. C. C. COALTER has given nearly a quarter of his lifetime to the public service of his state in the State Senate. However, this has been his only political office, and in his home community of Hinton he is best known as a successful miller and business man.

He has been a member of the State Senate since 1912, and is now in his third term. The Seventh District, which he represents, comprises the counties of Mercer, Monroe, Raleigh and Summers, two of these being the heaviest coal producing counties in the United States. He is the only republican ever elected three consecutive terms to the Senate, and as a result he is now the oldest member in continuous service in the Senate, though in point of years he is one of the youngest members. Senator Coalter is not an orator, and his work in the Senate has been distinguished rather by the business judgment he has brought to bear in the committee rooms. He has served on many of the important committees, including the committee on railroads, of which he was chairman in 1917-19, and has also been a member of the important committees of mines and mining, finance, banks and corporations.

C. C. Coalter was born on a farm in Monroe County, five miles south of Alderson, on Wolf Creek, September 25, 1879, son of John A. and Emma (Foster) Coalter. His parents now live retired at Muskogee, Oklahoma, his father at the age of sixty-six and his mother at sixty-five. John A. Coalter is a millwright by trade, and he built and operated flour mills in many localities in West Virginia and also in Texas. In West Virginia he owned and operated the Wolf Creek Roller Mills, the Nickells Mills and the Greenbrier Roller Mills. In 1908 he moved from Monroe County to Wilburton, Oklahoma, and later went to Roswell, New Mexico, where he was in the wholesale grocery business. From there he moved to Muskogee, and has been a very successful business man. He is a Mason, a republican and a Baptist. The mother of Senator Coalter is a sister of the late George B. Foster, a distinguished biblical scholar, author and professor in the University of Chicago. Senator Coalter is the oldest of three children. His sister Georgia is the wife of William Given, of Wolf Creek and his sister Elizabeth is the wife of Owen Leach, of Roswell, New Mexico.

Carl C. Coalter attended free schools in Monroe County, his education being meager. He was a farm boy and learned to do every kind of farm work. At the age of sixteen he went into the Nickells Mills of his father and he was soon put in charge of the night shift in a fifty barrel mill. At the age of eighteen he came to Hinton, and for several years had charge of the Hinton Milling Company's plant. This mill was burned, but was rebuilt in 1912. He is general manager and treasurer of the Hinton Milling Company, and since 1906 has also had charge of the Standard Oil Company's business at Hinton, and is president of the Hinton Water, Light and Supply Company.

In 1906 Mr. Coalter married Cora Graham. She is a member of the Baptist Church. Senator Coalter is a past exalted ruler of the Elks and a past commander of the Knights of Pythias.

ELMER WAITMAN COOK, vice president and cashier of the First National Bank in the industrial Village of Jaeger, McDowell County, was born at Oceana, Wyoming County, West Virginia, March 24, 1896, and is a son of Robert Lee and Mary (Conley) Cook, both likewise natives of Wyoming County and now residents of Williamson, Mingo County. Robert L. Cook became editor and publisher of the Wyoming Herald at Oceana, which later became the Independent-Herald, and subsequently he was identified with newspaper enterprise at Pineville. He is now connected with the Mingo County Republican at Williamson. His father, Capt. James A. Cook, was an officer of the Confederate service in the Civil war, and was eighty years of age at the time of his death. The family early settled in Wyoming County, and the family name was one of prominence in the civic and material development and progress of that county.

Elmer W. Cook, the eldest in a family of seven children, of whom two sons and four daughters are living, gained his early education in the public schools at Oceana and Pineville, his discipline including the curriculum of the high school. At the age of seventeen years he became bookkeeper in the First National Bank of Pineville. He later held a position in the First National Bank of Martinsville, Virginia, and next became assistant cashier of the Clark National Bank at Northfork, McDowell County, West Virginia. After leaving this bank he held the position of bookkeeper for the Traders Coal Company at War Eagle, Mingo County, and in 1919 he became one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Jaeger, of which he has since been vice president and cashier—one of the youngest bank executives in West Virginia and one who has made a splendid record. He is a steward of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in his home village, and his wife is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

In 1917 Mr. Cook wedded Miss Nathalie Morris, daughter of N. R. Morris, of Martinsville, Virginia, and the two children of this union are Nathalie Elizabeth and Sallie.

JAMES M. CLARK. As may be readily understood, the profession of mining engineer is one of major importance in connection with the industrial activities of West Virginia, and here one of the leading representatives of the profession is James M. Clark, senior member of Clark Krebs, Inc., civil and mining engineers, with headquarters in the City of Charleston.

Mr. Clark was born on a farm near Westfield, Union County, New Jersey, April 6, 1866, and is a son of the late James L. and Hannah Clark. He received his early education in the schools of his native state, and in April, 1888 the month in which he attained his legal majority, he came to West Virginia and entered the employ of his cousin Robert G. Goodrich, a leading mining engineer at that time residing in Fayette County. It was in this connection that Mr. Clark received his technical and practical experience in mining engineering. In 1890 he and his cousin entered into professional partnership, under the firm name of Goodrich & Clark, with headquarters at Elkhorn, McDowell County. Two years later Mr. Clark retired from the firm and engaged independently in practice as a general mining engineer, with headquarters at Kanawha Falls. On the 1st of January, 1900, he formed a partnership with Charles E. Krebs, and in November, 1908, the firm established its office headquarters in the City of Charleston, the firm being now incorporated and its business being of broad scope and importance. In 1915 Mr. Clark was appointed city engineer of Charleston, and within his term of service in this office nearly $1,000,000 worth of street paving was done and the city levee wall on Kanawha Street was constructed.

Mr. Clark is a scion of a family that was founded in America in the early Colonial days and that gave patriots to the war of the Revolution. He is affiliated with the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution as charter member of the West Fields Chapter of the New Jersey Society. He is a charter member of the Kiwan Club at Charleston, and here is a deacon in the First Presbyterian Church.

On the 18th of September, 1895, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Clark and Miss Pattie Farley, of Kanawha Falls, and she passed to the life eternal in November, 1921 her surviving children being four in number: James M. Jr., is in 1922 a student in the University of Cincinnati; Ohio; Lawrence Willis and Frances Alden graduated from the Charleston High School as members of the class of 1921 and Nancy Margaret is a member of the class of 1923 in the high school.

HAROLD P. TOMPKINS. The family represented by the prominent coal and gas operator and land owner near Charleston has been one of historical distinction in the Kanawha Valley for three generations. The old Tompkins home at Cedar Grove in Kanawha County, where Harold P. Tompkins and his father were both born, has been occupied by the family since 1844, and during the Civil war was used as a base hospital.

The pioneer of the family and a prominent character of his day in West Virginia was William Tompkins, the first to develop the salt resources of the Kanawha Valley. His story gives him credit as being the first man in the world to utilize natural gas for industrial or other purposes. He had started in the salt industry at Burning Springs in 1832. Burning Springs it will be recalled was the scene of the first commercial oil development in the state. While there he noted gas escaping from the ground, and conceived the idea of using this gas for heating the kettles in his salt works. In carrying out this idea he invented the present system of drilling gas and oil wells by devising a drill with a jar surface. He ran the gas under his kettles with wooden pipes.

In 1844 William Tompkins removed to Cedar Grove, where he continued his salt making operations. He was a man of great force of character and indomitable energy. As a boy he was bound out to a farmer, but with a broader ambition for his future he ran away at the age of sixteen and came to Kanawha County. He became an extensive land owner, accumulating 27,000 acres of land in the Steele Survey, this being purchased at $2 an acre. William Tompkins married a sister of Jesse Grant, father of Gen. U. S. Grant. General Grant while a student at West Point spent his vacations at the Tompkins estate. Another prominent member of the family was Col. C. C. Tompkins, great uncle of Harold P. Tompkins. Colonel Tompkins was the first commander of Confederate troops in the Kanawha Valley, being succeeded in that command by Governor Wise of Virginia.

Siegel Horstman

Harold P. Tompkins was born at Cedar Grove in 1888, oldest son of H. Preston and Addie L. (Elswick) Tompkins, both of Scotch-Irish descent. His mother is still living at Cedar Grove. H. Preston Tompkins, who died in 1907, was a life-long resident of Kanawha County and a very substantial business man.

Harold P. Tompkins graduated from Marshall College in Huntington in 1908, and then spent two years in the University of West Virginia at Morgantown. Leaving school in 1910, he entered the coal and gas business, and has been one of the leading coal and gas operators and developers of these natural resources in the Kanawha Valley, with headquarters in the Charleston National Bank Building. His mining and land interests are near Cedar Grove and vicinity. Mr. Tompkins built both towns of Cedar Grove and Glasgow, secured the location of various industries there, and his influence with capital and business men and his personal enterprise have had much to do with the development of that rich section.

Mr. Tompkins, a progressive republican in politics, is one of the very active members of the Charleston Kiwanis Club, belongs to the Chamber of Commerce, and to the various coal and gas associations, is a Mason and a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South. On November 14, 1913, he married Miss Mary Midkiff, a native of Charleston. Their three children are Harold Preston, Jr., William Grant and Betty Lee.

Mr. Tompkins is a brother of Mrs. Rachel Tompkins Settle, of Pineville, Kentucky, and of Roger W., Grant C. and Helen A. Tompkins, all of whom live in the old home place at Cedar Grove.

W. BRANCH YOUNG, M. D., is giving effective professional service as physician and surgeon for the Crozer Coal & Coke Company, the Turkey Gap Coal & Coke Company, and the Upland Coal & Coke Company, with headquarters at Elkhorn, McDowell County, where he has also a substantial general practice aside from these connections.

Doctor Young was born at Union, Monroe County, West Virginia, April 16, 1882, and is a son of W. Preston Young and Rebecca Jane (Early) Young, both natives of Virginia, in which state the respective families were founded many generations ago, the Young family being of German and English ancestry and the Early family of Scotch and Irish genealogy. W. Preston Young became one of the substantial and representative farmers of Monroe County, West Virginia, was influential in public affairs of local order, and was serving as county assessor at the time of his death, in 1888. He was a gallant young soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war, in which he served as first lieutenant of Company A, Sixtieth Virginia Infantry. At the battle of Cold Harbor he received a severe wound in one of his hips, and he thereafter passed four months in a hospital.

After attending the public schools at Union, Monroe County, Doctor Young continued his studies in Alleghany Institute at Clifton Forge, where he took a two years' academic course. In 1911 he graduated from the Maryland Medical College in the City of Baltimore, and after thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he was associated with Doctor Clark in the practice of his profession at Algoma, McDowell County, about six months. Since the spring of 1912 he has been engaged in practice at Elkhorn, where he is official physician and surgeon, also for the three coal and coke companies above mentioned, besides which he is local surgeon for the Norfolk & Western Railroad. He maintains well equipped offices, operating room and dispensary, and has gained high repute as a skilled surgeon. In 1916 he took an effective course in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School. He is an active member of the American Medical Association, the West Virginia State Medical Society, the McDowell County Medical Society, and the Phi Chi medical college fraternity. He is affiliated also with the Masonic fraternity.

At Sweet Springs, Monroe County, in 1911, Doctor Young wedded Miss Mabel Beckner, daughter of F. L. and Amanda (Baker) Beckner, her father being a prosperous agriculturist and stock-grower in that county. Doctor and Mrs. Young have two children: Elizabeth and William B.

Doctor Young is a liberal and progressive citizen and takes lively interest in all things touching the welfare of his community, but he has had no desire for public office of any kind.

SIEGEL WORKMAN, United States marshal for the Southern Judicial District, is not only a very capable official, but one of the most efficient men and good citizens of Boone County. For years he has been one of the leading republicans of this part of the state, and his wife is also effectively interested in public matters. He was born in Boone County, December 10, 1880, a son of John L. and Harriet L. (White) Workman, natives of Giles County, Virginia, and West Virginia, respectively. The Workman family was established in Virginia at a very early day, its members having taken part in the development of the country through its various phases. John L. Workman was a farmer, and when the war broke out between the North and the South, he entered the Union Army and served until peace was declared. After his honorable discharge he settled in Boone County, West Virginia, and resumed his farming. He was an ardent republican, and zealous in behalf of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was long a member.

Reared in Boone County, Siegel Workman attended its public schools, and, entering Marshall College, took a general course for one term, and then the commercial course. Returning to Boone County, he went into the timber and lumber business with Wm. Osborn as his partner, and this connection was maintained from 1902 to 1908, when it was dissolved, and Mr. Workman became assistant cashier of the Madison National Bank, and held this position until April 1, 1922, when he was appointed to his present important office, to succeed his old partner, Mr. Osborn. Mr. Workman was a member of the Republican State Central Committee, serving from 1912 until 1920, and chairman of the Republican Central Committee of Boone County. Mrs. Workman is a member of the Associate State Central Committee of Women, and was the only woman in Charleston in the fall of 1920 who was willing to go into Logan County and work for the success of the republican ticket.

In 1917 Mr. Workman married Miss Eva Echols, a daughter of Louis F. and Viola (Long) Echols, of Madison. Mr. Echols is county assessor of Boone County, and one of the leading farmers of this part of the state. For many years he was a dominating figure in the lumber business in his part of the state, and is a man of great influence in the republican party. Mr. and Mrs. Workman have one son, Siegel, Junior, born August 6, 1918. Mr. Workman is a thirty-second degree Scottish-rite Mason, and belongs to the Mystic Shrine. The local lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks also holds his membership. In everything he has undertaken he has displayed commendable energy and unquestioned ability, and is one of the rising young men of Boone County, whose name is going to be associated with much higher honors than those already bestowed upon him. Boone is his home county, and he is very proud of it, and anxious to insure its welfare in every particular. Both he and his wife are ardent in their interest in politics, and she is one of the members of her sex who is justifying in marked degree the passage of the Nineteenth Amendment. They are deservedly popular with all classes, and have friends of moment all over the state.

SALATHIEL LEE O'NEAL. School teacher, farmer and horticulturist, lumberman, civil and mining engineer, inventor—only the exceptional man deserves recognition for definite accomplishments in such a broad range of activities. Nevertheless these occupations, carried on jointly or successively, have been the medium through which Mr. O'Neal of Philippi has expressed his talents in service to himself and the world.

An English genealogist writes: "The O'Neill family and name, according to all standard antiquaries, descended from King Heremon (seventh son of Milesius, the first of the Milesian race who conquered and settled Ireland). Niall The Great (his direct lineal descendant), Monarch of Ireland A. D. 388, subdued the Picts and ancient Kings of his name (O'Neill).

"The O'Neill" has always stood for a fighting and representative titled line, the last of whom, George Owen O'Neill, 'The O'Neill', County of Tyrone, was formerly a Peer of Portugal and an officer of the Royal household of the late King of Portugal."

For the most part the O'Neals have been rural and agricultural people, and Mr. O'Neal himself has never for any great length of time been entirely divorced from agricultural enterprise. The founder of the family in America was his great-grandfather, a native of Ireland, who went from that country to England, where he married a Miss Anglin, and shortly afterward they came to America and established their home about two miles west of Philippi, on what is now the Clarksburg Pike. In this country locality, then little improved above pioneer conditions, they spent the rest of their days. Among their children were three sons, John, David and Joseph. John, was the grandfather, and his career is noted in the following paragraph:

Joseph was a farmer living near his brother John, on part of his father's land. He had three children, Daniel, Ellen and Edith. Edith became the wife of William Shaw, and their son, David Shaw, became a distinguished educator, advocating in advance of his prime denominational schools, and was at the head of the State Reform School and later president of the Norris-Harvey College at Barboursville. He served in the Legislature of the state for five terms, was a democrat and a member of the Southern Methodist Church. Joseph O'Neal, the youngest of the three brothers mentioned, lived about a mile and a half west of Philippi, on the Clarksburg Pike, where he was a farmer, but is perhaps best remembered in the locality for his skill with the violin, and was one of the old-time fiddlers of that section of the state.

John O'Neal became a farmer on Elk Creek. He was one of the very successful men of his time, and left a large amount of real property when he died. He was a democrat, but could not be persuaded to take office, and was a member of the Methodist Church. Like his father, he married a Miss Anglin, and they were the parents of ten children. The record of the children is as follows: Samuel, mentioned below; Thomas, a farmer who before the Civil war went to Kansas and established himself at old Grass-hopper Falls near Kansas City, where he lived out his life; George went to Kansas with his brother Thomas, and was also a farmer there; Joel, who followed farming in Barbour County; Lemuel, who was a farmer and successful in accumulating property in Barbour County, where he died; David, who spent his life in the rural community of his ancestors; Abigail, who married George Alexander, of Buckhannon, where she died; Prudence, who married John Zinn, and they spent their lives just south of Philippi; Rebecca, who married Absalom Roberts, a farmer in Barbour and Ritchie counties; Mary, who is now ninety-four years of age, the wife of Abram Wells and living near Tannersville, West Virginia. None of the sons entered the military struggle between the states, though all were opposed to slavery. All but one of them were democrats and all were Methodists.

Samuel O'Neal, representing the third generation of the family in West Virginia, grew up in a home where school advantages were primitive. He became good in reading, writing and arithmetic, had a good voice, and was very popular in the singing schools of his day. The business of his life was farming. He was a very active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, serving as class reader, and was a member of the Patrons of Husbandry. Samuel O'Neal married Mary Crites. His father, it is believed, was killed while away from home for the purpose of paying for some land that he had purchased. He was robbed of his money and buried not more than twenty miles from his home without the family knowing. Samuel O'Neal died January 3, 1899, and his wife died on the 28th of the same month. Of their nine children they reared seven: Joab, a farmer and carpenter contractor at Buckhannon, where he died; John, who was a farmer, died at Lebanon, Missouri, March 24, 1912; Rahame, who married Elam Anglin and lives in Barbour County; Martha, wife of David Hall, a farmer and a man in Barbour County; Prudence, who lives in Tucker County, widow of A. B. Green, who is a farmer of that county; Ollie, a resident of St. Louis, Missouri, the wife of Calvin Corder, who represented another pioneer family of Barbour County, and was a carpenter and contractor in St. Louis, where he died; and Salathiel Lee.

Salathiel Lee O'Neal was born three miles south of Philippi, May 24, 1864. He grew up in the place of his birth, and he had better educational opportunities than were presented to his father. He attended country schools at Philippi, and Hillsdale College in Michigan, and for six years he taught in country districts of Barbour County. He then began the manufacture and sale of lumber, but continued farming in connection with the operation of his mill. While in School Mr. O'Neal studied surveying, and has done a great deal of work in civil engineering. He was elected county engineer of Barbour County in 1896, and after reelection served another term of four years. For twenty years he has carried on an extensive practice as a consulting and mining engineer, being engaged by various corporations to make geological sketches and reports on properties in West Virginia and other states. He was general superintendent and consulting engineer of several coal companies, and was superintendent of the Berryburg Mine for years and receiver for the Philippi Collieries Company.

Probably his reputation would be secure from his work as an inventor alone. He invented the caterpillar tread, which he originally called "a ship propeller." This idea came to him thirty-eight years ago, and the same idea is now exhibited in the caterpillar tread used on all war tanks and tractors. And a wireless, Electrical Steering device, by which, torpedoes and ships can be steered or guided by a person a long distance from the same. Other products of his genius are a telemeter or range finder for computing distances between objects; a civil engineers transit; and O'Neal's platting, drafting and self-computing device. This last invention was patented March 6, 1895, and provides a rapid and accurate method of platting land surveys and drawings of any kind. The self-computing feature computes the area of a tract of land at the same time the map or plat is being made, enabling the user to do his work quickly and in one-tenth the time required by the old method. He copyrighted O'Neal's Handbook on Surveying and Architecture, December 4, 1895. Mr. O'Neal invented a rapid-firing gun just before the World war, and it passed such favorable inspection as to attract the attention of the English, although he was offered a large sum of money for the invention, he declined out of conscientious scruples against being instrumental in any improved device that would make the destruction of human life more easy.

From the general practice of farming Mr. O'Neal for number of years has been putting his thought, energy and experiment into horticulture. In 1911 he started an orchard and now has fifty acres planted. The orchard lies so that all exposures are found. The business has been profitable, though up to the present time peaches have constituted the chief profitable crop, since other fruit is just coming in bearing. He carries on his experiments constantly, and the fruit of his experience may possibly be more valuable to the horticulture of West Virginia than the actual output of his efforts. On his place is a tree with a remarkable history. When this tree was 112 years old Mr. O'Neal performed some "tree surgery" by filling a cavity in the trunk with thirty-two bushels of crushed stone, twenty-two bushels of sand and eleven bushels of cement. It is b evered this is the largest filling ever given a fruit tree in the United States or world. The tree has been known to bear 100 bushels of apples in one season, and the year it was 20 years old it bore eighty-five bushels of measured apples. Mr. O'Neal named it the "Century Mammoth Sweet." He identified with the state's effort to improve horticulture and fruit growing, and for two years was president of the arm Barbour of Barbour County.

J. H. Lumsden

In Barbour County, July 24, 1901, Mr. O'Neal married Lucy Knapp, who was born at Philippi, February 5, 1883, as educated in schools of her native city and for two years as a teacher in a country district. Her parents were John and Sallie A. (Smith) Knapp. Her father, a native of Barbour County, spent the greater part of his life as a farmer. He was a son of Henry Knapp, who came to the United States from Germany and lived on a farm a few miles from Philippi, where he carried on his trade as chair-maker. John B. Knapp died in November, 1920, at the age of eighty-seven, and is survived by his widow. Of their children seven grew to mature years: Jacob H.; Nancy, wife of John Weaver; Miss Lettie; John Letcher; Charles L.; Mrs. O'Neal; and Hugh Smith Knapp.

Mr. O'Neal and wife have some children who have already shown the quality of their inheritance and training. Their eldest child is Harry Lee, who spent two years in the United States Navy, first as a fireman and then as pharmacist's mate in the Hospital Corps, was on duty on the Pacific Coast and received his honorable discharge December 29, 1921. The second child, Camden Cleon, is a graduate of the Philippi High School, and attended the Naval Training School at Hampton Roads, now a student in Roanoke College. The third child, Frederick Earl, is a student in Philippi High School. John Samuel, died in infancy. The two youngest children are Aubrey Wayne and James Morris.

Mr. O'Neal in politics is a democrat. While he was county engineer he made a district map of Barbour County which has been accepted as authority. The O'Neals are church people. Mr. O'Neal was brought up a Methodist, but any of the orthodox churches satisfy him. He has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows for a third of a century, and his wife's father was member of that order for almost fifty years.

FRED E. SUMMERS. One of the newest and most distinctive of the department stores of Charleston is the F. E. Summers, a business that in two years' time has put itself among the most successful in the state.

This business was incorporated in July, 1920, with a capital of $100,000. It is a new business throughout. It now represents an investment of about $100,000, and the store occupies a four-story building and basement 120x36 feet, and since the first of the year the volume of sales have doubled. There are about twenty-five employees. Mr. Summers promoted the business, coming to Charleston after a long experience as a merchant in the coal district. He is resident and general manager, while his active associate is W. F. Hall, who is office manager, treasurer and vice president of the company.

Mr. Summers was born at Lockwood in Nicholas County, December 29, 1885, and after a common school education began at the age of fourteen to operate a railroad commissary in a railroad construction plant. He has been in merchandising all his life. He was with the Loup Creek Colliery Company at Page, four years, with the McCall Coal and Coke Company at Kilsyth, four years, with the Pemberton Coal & Coke Company at Affinity, as manager and buyer for two stores, four years, and then with the New River and Pocahontas Coal Company as manager of two stores which did an annual business of over $600,000. This was the experience he brought with him to Charleston in 1920. Personal attention to details, carefully selected stock sold on a small margin of profit, and a complete organization for courtesy and good service have made it one of the most popular stores in the capital.

Mr. Summers married Miss Emma Sampson, of Russellville, West Virginia, and they have two sons. Mr. Summers is a Knight Templar, Mason and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine, and is a member of the Central Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

LEE L. BENNETT. In the thriving little industrial city of Belington, Barbour County, a substantial concern that is contributing distinctly to the commercial prestige of the city is that of the Belington Handle Manufacturing Company, of which Mr. Bennett is the president. His birth occurred in Valley District, this county, March 28, 1879. He is a scion of one of the old and well known families of Barbour County, his father, Worth Bennett, was born near Mount Hebron Church, and his remains rest in the little churchyard there. He was a farmer and stone-mason, and was but thirty-seven years of age at the time of his death. He married Jimena C. Zirkle, and of the children of this union four are living: Malinda May, wife of Lee Kesling, of Upshur County; Lee L., of this review; Worth Gordon, of Hall, Barbour County; and Jacob Ezra, of Richwood, Nicholas County. The mother became the wife of Jacob Campbell, and their one child is Ruth V., wife of Walter Fallen, of Binghamton, Marion County. After the death of her second husband Mrs. Campbell became the wife of Cassius Skidmore, and they reside on a farm near Hall, Barbour County.

Levi Bennett, grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was a native of one of the more eastern counties of Virginia and he became one of the pioneer farmers of Barbour County, where he died at an advanced age, his remains being interred in the cemetery of Mount Hebron Church. The maiden name of his wife was Malinda Campbell, and they reared a fine family of twelve children: James, Baxter, Worth, Aaron, Preston, Charles, Henson, Mrs. Hannah Layman, Mrs. Minerva Stevens, Mrs. Jane Martina, Miss Louisa and Mrs. Estella Burner.

When Lee L. Bennett was a lad of twelve years the family removed to a farm near Buckhannon, Upshur County, where he grew to manhood, his educational advantages having been those of the local schools. He was twelve years old when his father died, and he then began to aid in the care and support of his young widowed mother by obtaining work in a planing mill, his compensation at the start having been 50 cents a day. He gained practical experience in this connection and that which followed while he was employed in a chair factory at Buckhannon. After the factory was destroyed by fire he entered the employ of owners of the Loudin Planing Mill, and in this connection he virtually served a regular apprenticeship. Later he was employed as planer feeder in a mill at Heaters, Braxton County, where he remained two years. He then became a planer feeder in the mill of A. G. Giffin at Buckhannon, and in this connection he made the interior spouting for the present flour mill at Weston. While thus engaged at Buckhannon Mr. Bennett married and established his first independent home. Later he passed two years as foreman for the Pardee & Curtin Lumber Company at Sutton, Braxton County, and thereafter he took charge of the Pettit Mill at Heaters, in which village his first child was born. After a year at Heaters he engaged in independent business at Buckhannon, where he became associated with J. L. Henry and Ora E. Travis in the purchase of a well established planing mill. A year later Mr. Bennett sold his interest in this enterprise and removed to Belington, Barbour County, where he organized the Belington Planing Mill Company, the stock of the corporation having been held almost entirely by himself and E. T. Pritchard. Mr. Bennett became president of the company and general manager of the plant, while Mr. Pritchard, a skilled carpenter, assumed supervision of the building contract work assumed by the company. After three years Mr. Bennett sold his interest and engaged in the saw-mill industry, with mills in several localities in Barbour and Randolph counties, where he manufactured hardwood lumber for local use and also for shipment to accessible market points. In February, 1909, Mr. Bennett organized the Belington Handle Manufacturing Company, which was incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000, and his associates in which were E. A. Barte, E. S. Dawson, A. Lazarus and W. S. Shurtleff. He has since acquired the interests of all of these original stockholders except Mr. Dawson, who is vice president of the company, Mannah E. Stalnaker being now secretary of the corporation. The enterprise was established for the purpose primarily of manufacturing handles for coal and clay picks, but the business has since been expanded to include the production of a comprehensive line of tool handles, besides which the planing mill operated by the company is an important part of the enterprise, material being obtained from sawmill plants in the surrounding districts. The company has developed an appreciable export trade, and it is interesting to record that some of the handles manufactured at this plant were utilized by the English Government in the trench activities at the front in the late World war. The company has recently acquired the Serimegeour Brothers' franchise for light and power at Belington, and is now supplying the city with these utilities, a gas engine and dynamo having been installed at the plant, which is one of ninety-horse power.

Mr. Bennett and Mr. Dawson are associated also in the operation of a profitable ginseng garden on Laurel Mountain, the product being shipped to New York City. Mr. Bennett is identified also with farm enterprise and with the supplying of limestone for road-building. He has supplied crushed stone for the wearing course of about thirteen miles of hard-surface road in Barbour and Randolph counties. He has served three terms as mayor of Belington. He is a republican in politics, and is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

July 8, 1897, recorded the marriage of Mr. Bennett and Quetty Kesling, a daughter of Gideon and Matilda (Westfall) Kesling, of Upshur County. Mrs. Bennett passed to eternal rest in October, 1901, and is survived by one daughter, Geneva, who is the wife of Dorman C. Booth and whose three children are Leon, Gertrude and Thelma. In October, 1903, Mr. Bennett wedded Miss Gertrude Hoff, who was born and reared in Barbour County and who is a daughter of Orlando P. and Martha (Hall) Hoff. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett have three children: Paul, Oletha and Stewart. The family home is an attractive and most modern bungalow that was erected by Mr. Bennett, who has erected other buildings at Belington, including that of the Graham business house and also the Holbert & Bennett garage.

WILLIAM B. CUTRIGHT is not only one of the able and representative members of the bar of Upshur County, where he is established in the practice of his profession at Buckhannon, the judicial center of the county, but he is also a scion of one of the old, honored and influential families of this section of the state. Mr. Cutright was born on his father's farm in this county, May 3, 1869, and is a son of Granville S. and Elizabeth H. (Hinkle) Cutright; a grandson of Elmore and Sarah (Wolfe) Cutright; a great-grandson of Jacob and Elizabeth (Westfall) Cutright, the former of whom was a son of John and Rebecca (Truby) Cutright. John Cutright came to what is now Upshur County, West Virginia, in 1769, and the family name has been prominently and worthily identified with civic and material development and progress in this county during the long intervening period. Mrs. Elizabeth H. Cutright, mother of him whose name introduces this review, was a daughter of Abraham and Mary Ann (Anderson) Hinkle, the former a son of Jonas and Mary (Cooper) Hinkle and a grandson of Leonard Hinkle, who came from Germantown, Pennsylvania, to what is now West Virginia and lived in turn in Hardy and Pendleton counties.

William B. Cutright so thoroughly utilized the advantages of the public schools of his native county that as a youth he proved himself eligible for pedagogic honors and became a successful and popular teacher in the public schools, his service in which thus continued from 1884 to 1889, in which latter year he was elected county superintendent of schools of his native county. After giving an effective administration for the term of his election he attended the normal and classical-preparatory school at Buckhannon, in which he completed both a commercial and a normal course, and in 1891 he received from the West Virginia Conference Seminary, now the West Virginia Wesleyan College, the degree of Bachelor of Pedagogy. He thereafter did post-graduate work in this institution through the remainder of the year 1891, and then entered the University of West Virginia from which he received in 1895 the degree of Bachelor of Arts. For two years thereafter he was a member of the faculty of the preparatory department of the university, and he then entered Columbia University, New York City, which institution he had received a Fellowship in economics and history. He pursued his studies along the lines for one year and then entered the law school of Columbian University of Washington, D. C., in which he completed his course and received his degree of Bachelor of Laws. He was soon afterward admitted to the West Virginia bar, but prior to this he was elected representative of Upshur County in the Lower House of the West Virginia Legislature, in which he served two years, with characteristic loyalty and efficiency. Thereafter he served one year as president of the State Normal School at West Liberty. He resigned this position in June, 1899, and then engaged in the practice of law at Buckhannon, where he also became editor of the Buckhannon Delta, with which he thus continued his connection five years. He has been continuously identified with stock-farming enterprise in his native county and is one of the vitally loyal citizens who are doing all in their power to further the civic and material prosperity and advancement of Upshur County. Mr. Cutright has had the consideration to give from the exactions of his representative law business and his other interests the time to prepare the history of Upshur County that appears in this publication, and to no other person in the county could this assignment have been more consistently made. He is a stalwart in the ranks of the republican party, and he and his wife are zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in their home city.

On December 25, 1888, in Washington, D. C., Mr. Cutright wedded Miss Carrie C. Carper, no children being born of this union. On the 27th of July, 1919, was solemnized his marriage with Miss Mary L. Wilson, daughter of Gideon H. and Lydia (Curry) Wilson. Mrs. Cutright was a successful and popular teacher in the public schools for twenty-three years prior to her marriage, and was graduated in what is now the West Virginia Wesleyan College.

C. FLOYD CALE, a business man and progressive citizen of Bruceton Mills, represents one of the very oldest families established in this section of West Virginia.

The tradition is that Christopher Kahl was one of the Hessian soldiers employed by the British Government to suppress the Colonists' struggle for independence. He deserted from the British army, a fact creditable to his Americanism, and about 1777, while the War of the Revolution was still in progress, he came over the mountains into Western Virginia and settled in Pleasant District, then in Monongalia County of old Virginia. He lived out his life there as a farmer, and his old home is now the property of Orval Walls. His grave is on the old farm near Hudson. Among his sons and daughters John and Jacob Cale, as the family soon learned to spell the name, were soldiers in the War of 1812. These soldiers were uncles of Jacob Cale, the grandfather of Floyd Cale. Jacob Cale was born in Pleasant District, spent his life as a farmer there and died about the beginning of the Civil war and is buried in the Cunningham Cemetery. He married Sarah Everly. Their children were: Henry E., who followed in the footsteps of his father as a farmer, once served as deputy sheriff, was a member of the militia during the Civil war and is buried at Sugar Valley; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Ebon Graham, of near Hudson in Preston County; Jesse, who was a teamster in the Civil war, was a farmer in civil life, and is buried at Pisgah in Preston County; William A., who became a youthful soldier of the Union and after the war became an operator in the oil fields of West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio and is buried at Parkersburg; John G., still a farmer in Pleasant District; Lewis Freeland, mentioned below; Mollie, who is the wife of William Cunningham, a minister of the United Brethren Church now at Clarksburg; Bina, who was married to Frederick Copeman and died near Bruceton; and Miles Thompson, of Terra Alta.

Lewis Freeland Cale was born in Pleasant District of

J. Ralph Jones

ston County, December 2, 1849, was reared on a farm, aired a district school education, and after reaching school he took up the profession of photographer, and one of the itinerant members of that profession, doing work over West Virginia and portions of Pennsylvania Maryland. He died October 22, 1899. Lewis F. Cale died in Preston County, August 13, 1874. Sabina Ellen son, who was born in this county April 16, 1858, and June 22, 1886. Her children were: Henry Semans died at the age of six; Charles Floyd; Mary Milcent, lives with her brother Floyd. Lewis F. Cale's second wife was Amanda Lenhart, a sister of James Lenhart of wood. The two children of that marriage are Norman ood, of Pittsburgh, and Alma, wife of Howard Kuhns Pittsburgh.

Floyd Cale was born March 10, 1877, in Pleasant Dis-, and spent much of his early life with his father travel- about the country. He attended various schools in ssylvania, West Virginia and Maryland, and not in- nently he was in three or four different schools during same winter. He gives much credit in his educational ing to two of his old teachers for special academic k, D. T. Scott (deceased), and the late S. T. Wiley, d historian and educator, who was Mr. Cale's personal d. As a boy he learned the house painting trade, and owed that for seven years in the Uniontown and Morgan- District. He left there and went to Pittsburgh, and a year was with the Harbison-Walker Fire Brick com- y, in the position of timekeeper and paymaster. He ough the mountain region for the benefit of his th, and about that time he taught two terms of school Fayette County, Pennsylvania. After leaving school t Mr. Cale returned to Pleasant and Grant District, and five years was field agent for the Hydro-Electric Com- y. Since then he has followed other business lines, and considerable portion of each year he is a salesman for cal instruments. He is also a director of the Bruceton k. Mr. Cale has never married, and he and his sister been together for a dozen years and enjoy the com- s of a good home standing on the heights above Bruce- commanding a broad view of the surrounding country. r. Cale is a republican in politics, first voting for Major inley. In 1912 he joined the Roosevelt element in the repressive movement, and when that party was dissolved he rned to his old political moorings. He was a clerk in the e Senate under President McDermott of that body, but as never campaigned for an office. However, he is now ident of the School Board at Bruceton, but his presence at office is accounted for by the fact that some of his ds wrote in his name on the ballot. He is interested inational matters, and was a staunch supporter of the ment for the location of the high school at Bruceton, h is now in the third year of its existence. Mr. Cale a full harmony with the essentials of christianity, and gh he is not a church member his sister is a member of Methodist Church. Mr. Cale is a past chancellor of eton Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and represented the e in two sessions of the Grand Lodge, one at Parkers- and one at Bluefield. He was one of the charter mem- of Bruceton Lodge.

MOSES K. COLERIDER. While the greater part of his busi- activity has been centered on his farm near French k, Moses K. Colerider is one of Upshur County's well n citizens, due to his public service in the county and to his profession as a veterinary surgeon.

He was born in Upshur County, April 25, 1866, son of am L. and Sebra (Kinkade) Colerider. William L. ider was a native of Upshur County, and his first wife Cassie A. McWhorter. By this union there were four ren: Elnora, widow of Stewart Hyre; Amy, widow of . Hossaflook; John M., of California; and Henry, de- ed. William L. Colerider was a Union soldier in the war, and was wounded in battle and subsequently drew pension from the Government. He was a republican in ies. His second wife, Sebra Kinkade, was born in ngalia County, West Virginia, where she was reared educated. She was the mother of eight children:

Rebecca, widow of R. K. Waldow; W. A., of French Creek; Moses K.; Clark, of Buckhannon; Guy, deceased; Mollie, wife of William Kiddy, of Sago, Upshur County; Belle, wife of James Smalldridge, of Adrian; and Frank L., of Adrian.

Moses K. Colerider had the farm as his early environment, attended the common schools, and when he left home at the age of twenty he found employment for about a year in the National Tube Works. Then for another year he and his brother W. A. were partners in a teaming business at French Creek. After that Mr. Colerider returned to the occupation he had learned as a youth, and bought some of the land included in his present farm of 125 acres. He has followed sound and intelligent methods of agriculture, and is one of the prosperous men in his community. He early took up the study of veterinary surgery, and by correspondence courses owns two diplomas and has a large practice all over the countryside. Mr. Colerider is also a stockholder in the Citizens National Bank of Belington in Barbour County.

On April 10, 1890, he married Lillie J. Hamner, who was born in Old Virginia, July 31, 1866, and was a child when her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hamner, came to West Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Colerider have two children: Myrna, born January 31, 1891, wife of Dana Hileman, of Rock Cave; and Camella, born September 16, 1894, wife of O. G. McCue, of Abbott, West Virginia. Mr. Colerider is a Methodist, while Mrs. Colerider is a Presbyterian. He is a member of Lodge No. 375, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Encampment, and Mrs. Colerider is a member of Rebekah Lodge No. 216 and Aetia Chapter No. 7 of the Eastern Star. Mr. Colerider has served as deputy assessor of Upshur County, is now a member of the Board of Equalization, and is one of the staunch republicans of this section of the state.

ALBERT GALLETT JENKINS. Of the men called to the service of the state government at Charleston by Governor Morgan in the spring of 1921, one is A. G. Jenkins, state pardon attorney. Prior to that time he had made a successful record as a lawyer in his home county of Barbour.

He was born at Philippi in Barbour County, November 27, 1874, son of Henry Middleton Jenkins, of the same county, and grandson of Jonathan Lewis and Nauda Jenkins, who came from Loudoun County, Virginia. Henry M. Jenkins, who died in 1916, was for many years a member of his local school board in Barbour County and also justice of the peace.

A. G. Jenkins finished his normal school education at Fairmont, and for nine years gave his time to teaching school in Barbour County. He was elected and served four years as county superintendent of schools. Among other educational advantages he pursued a business course at Parkersburg in 1890. In 1907 he graduated from the law school of West Virginia University, and has been a member of the Barbour County bar for fifteen years. He was elected on the republican ticket, and served four years as prosecuting attorney. Governor Morgan made him pardon attorney in March, 1921.

Mr. Jenkins has been active in republican campaigns in his home county. He is an out-door man, and spends his vacations usually along streams and in the forests and mountain sections of the state. He is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, Junior Order United American Mechanics and Woodmen of the World.

Mr. Jenkins married Miss Hazel Elizabeth Miller, of Barbour County. They have a daughter, Pauline, now in high school at Charleston.

J. RALPH JONES, president of the Bridgeport Bank and one of the principals in the Bridgeport Lamp Chimney Company, has exemplified in his business career the initiative ability and vital progressiveness that make for definite success, and he is one of the leading business men of the fine little City of Bridgeport, Harrison County.

Mr. Jones was born in Lewis County, West Virginia, on the 20th of November, 1876, and is a son of Samuel C. and Catherine (Peterson) Jones, both of whom likewise were born in this state, where the respective families were founded prior to the creation of the new commonwealth of West Virginia from the mother state of Virginia. The father gave his entire active career to productive farm industry, and he and his wife now reside near Weston, judicial center of Lewis County, where he is living virtually retired. Their children are eight in number, three sons and five daughters.

That J. Ralph Jones profited well from the early educational advantages that were his is evidenced by the success which attended his efforts when he initiated his independent career by becoming a teacher in a rural school in his native county, his service in the pedagogic profession having continued four years. For fifteen years thereafter he was a successful traveling salesman for a leading wholesale saddlery and harness house in the City of Louisville, Kentucky, and in 1908 he established his residence at Bridgeport, where he became one of the organizers of the Bridgeport Lamp Chimney Company, a partnership concern in which his associates are John and William F. Duncan. This company now represents one of the important industrial enterprises of this section of West Virginia, and when the plant is running at full capacity a corps of 175 employees is demanded. The company manufactures virtually all types of lamp chimneys of the best grade, and the trade has been extended not only into all parts of the United States but also into South America and Cuba. Mr. Jones has important interests also in farm enterprise and natural-gas production, besides which he is president of the Bridgeport Bank, which was organized in 1904 and which bases its operations on a capital stock of $25,000, its surplus fund being now $50,000. This is one of the solid and well ordered financial institutions of Harrison County. Mr. Jones is affiliated with both the York and Scottish Rite bodies of the Masonic fraternity, as is he also of the adjunct organization, the Mystic Shrine, and he holds membership also in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the United Commercial Travelers. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

October 19, 1901, recorded the marriage of Mr. Jones and Miss Mintie C. Horner, of Lewis County, her parents, John and Lucy (Hammer) Horner, being deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have five children: J. Horner, Samuel C., W. Lyle, J. Ralph, Jr., and Pauline.

MORRIS JEFFERSON GARRISON. Without disparaging man whom destiny makes prominent in state and national affairs, the highest credit belongs to those who help mold and improve the standards of living and the welfare of their home community. Such men do the duties that lie nearest them, and are satisfied with the achievement of that most difficult thing, winning the esteem of people who have known them intimately all the days of their lives.

Such an enviable character was the late Morris Jefferson Garrison of Wadestown, Monongalia County. He was a merchant, a high minded citizen who worked steadily in behalf of things that only remotely concerned his own prosperity, and he enjoyed the love and fellowship of both his family and a wide circle of friends and admirers.

He was born near Jolleytown in Greene County, Pennsylvania, August 24, 1843, and died at Wadestown, February 18, 1916, after completing a life of nearly seventy-three years. He was a son of Abner and Hannah (Morris) Garrison and a grandson of George Garrison, and represented an old American ancestry. Abner Garrison was a successful farmer in Greene County, Pennsylvania, where he died April 29, 1859, at the age of fifty-five. He was an ardent Methodist, and built up an estate comprising thirteen hundred acres of land. His wife, Hannah Morris, was a daughter of Levi Morris.

Morris J. Garrison was reared on his father's farm in Pennsylvania, and in 1868 he opened a general store at Wadestown, thirty miles west of Morgantown. During the many successive years he was in business there he accumulated a handsome property, including some seven hundred acres of valuable land. This is farming and grazing land, and is also underlaid with coal, all of which is still retained by his family. Mr. Garrison was a thorough business man, as a merchant kept the stock needed by patrons, studied their wants, and had the genial nature which made dealing at his store a pleasure. His business was continued three years after his death by his daughter and after the stock was sold they continued to own the building. Mr. Garrison also did a large business as stock dealer, kept many sheep, and was a leader in every movement for the advancement of the prosperity and welfare of the district in general. He was one of the men who brought the good roads movement to a practical basis and secured the construction of one of the most important pieces of highway in this section of Monongalia County. He was an enthusiastic Methodist, and for fifty years his home was an open house for the ministers of that church.

In 1868, the year he began merchandising at Wadestown, Mr. Garrison married Adelaide Virginia Jolley, daughter of William Jolley, of Jolleytown, Pennsylvania. He died February 11, 1891. They were the parents of six children. The son Frank died in childhood. Harry operates the home farm, married Blake Maples and has two children, Robert and Adelaide. The daughter Maurine now living at the old home, is the widow of Dr. W. Cole, who was a successful medical practitioner and died when in the prime of his powers, in 1904. Mrs. Cole has a daughter, Virginia Garrison Cole, now in the first year of her studies at West Virginia University. Blanche, the wife of W. E. Campbell, a merchant at Oglesby, Oklahoma. Nellie is the wife of R. E. Boggess, a farmer at Ochelata, Oklahoma.

The eldest daughter, Miss Kate Garrison, was closely associated with her father in the store and possesses the personal qualities that made her father such a companionable citizen. She was formerly a teacher. Having had special elocutionary training, she is now a public entertainer, being a reader of no little fame. Miss Garrison is a worker in church and Sunday school, and has done much to advance the social and intellectual standards of her community, which, despite its isolation, is regarded far and wide as a most desirable place of residence.

ALFRED L. SETTLE is the freight agent with general supervision over all the complex system entailed in the handling of freight traffic for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad in Charleston city and industrial district. He has been in service of this railroad corporation for thirty years, and the past six has had the responsibilities of the freight department at Charleston. In volume of freight traffic Charleston ranks as one of the capital centers along the Chesapeake & Ohio system, in the same class with Newport News, Richmond, Huntington, Cincinnati and Chicago.

On October 23, 1894, Mr. Settle entered the service of the Chesapeake & Ohio as assistant agent at Sewell, West Virginia. He was there two years, and following that was agent and operator at various stations, including four years at Deepwater, West Virginia, six years at Springhill, a six years as agent at Cattlesburg, Kentucky. Then, in 1916, he came to Charleston as freight agent. The great development of Charleston as an industrial city has taken place since then, and the business of the freight department of the Chesapeake & Ohio has correspondingly expanded and increased. In 1918 the new outbound warehouse, 20,672 feet, was built. All the team tracks and the street leading to this warehouse are paved. The interchange traffic facilities were also greatly increased in 1918, the being five interchange tracks at Bridge Junction, with capacity of sixty cars. In 1917 there was created a substation in Kanawha City, also under the supervision of Mr. Settle as freight agent at Charleston, this sub-station being primarily for the convenience of the Libby-Owens Glass Company and the Owen Bottle Company, which industries have ten sidings, with a capacity of from twenty-five to thirty cars, and in an emergency seventy-five cars can be handled in a day. The general freight office at Charleston was erected in 1907, and by additions made in 1912 is now 48 by 548 feet. The tracks at the main station can accommodate ninety-five cars, and there is also room for seventy-five cars on the inbound and outbound landings. Few cities have equal facilities for handling freight. The gross volume of business done by the Chesapeake & Ohio in the Charleston district has increased from $1,500,000 in 1916 to $3,500,000 in 1921. In 1916 there were thirty-five office and thirty-five warehouse employees, and in 1922 there were fifty-one office and forty-eight warehouse workers. There is a yard office at Elk, where freight is collected and distributed over the several industrial cities surrounding Charleston. For that work thirty-five men are employed, twenty-five of them being yard men and trainmen.

A. L. Fritze

Mr. Settle is a native of Fayette County, West Virginia, and has been in railroad work since he was fourteen years of age. He married Lucy Matthews, of Springhill, where they reside. Their five children are: Hallie May, wife of E. J. Will; A. L., Jr., an employee of the Chesapeake & Ohio freight office; E. M., now in Arkansas; T. M., in school; and W. A. Settle, the baby of the family. Mr. Settle is a member of the Knights of Pythias and D. O. K. K. fraternities.

T. J. SAYRE has been a member of the Jackson County bar twenty years, practicing at Ripley, and is largely a business lawyer and business man, though he has given due share of his attention to public affairs and civic movements in his community.

Theodore Joseph Sayre was born near Angerona in Jackson County, February 14, 1875. Practically all the Sayre families in the United States are descended from one of four brothers who came from England in the army commanded by General Braddock at the beginning of the French and Indian wars about 1754. The grandfather of the Ripley lawyer was Elijah Sayre, who was born in that portion of Mason County that is now Jackson County in 1817, and spent all his life in that locality, a farmer by occupation. He died at the advanced age of eighty-two. His wife, Mary Jane Hunt, was born in what is now Jackson County in 1824, and is still living at Ripley, well in the shadow of her hundredth year. Her children were seven in number: Wesley; Sarah Ann, wife of Allen Shinn, a farmer at Angerona; John O., a farmer at Evans in Jackson County; Jasper, a farmer at Cow Run, Jackson County; Daniel, a farmer at Danstown, Jackson County; Elijah, a farmer at Evans; and Belle, who died in Jackson County, wife of James Barnett, a farmer now living in Putnam County.

Wesley Sayre was born at Angerona in 1844, and spent all his life in that one community, where he died in 1907. Besides owning and operating a farm he was postmaster of Angerona during Cleveland's two terms. Wesley Sayre married Annie Wink, who was born at Pomeroy, Mason County, in 1853, and is living at Ripley. The children of their marriage were: Adam W., a farmer at Angerona; F. J.; Miss Marie, a teacher in the Ripley High School; Marguerite, wife of Charles C. Cunningham, a farmer at Evans in Jackson County; Belle, wife of Raymond Viendorfer, agent for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Girard, Ohio; David, a traveling salesman living at Angerona; Clara, wife of Russell Baker, a farmer at Angerona; Freda, wife of Gay Casto, a dentist at Beckley in Raleigh County, West Virginia; and Leo, who died at the age of five years.

T. J. Sayre acquired a public school education in Jackson County, graduated in 1899 from Marshall College at Huntington, where he was a member of the Erosophian Literary Society, and from there entered the Southwestern Baptist University at Jackson, Tennessee, where he took his law degree in 1901. Mr. Sayre at once returned to Ripley and began the practice of law, and has had a generous share of the work in both the civil and criminal branches of his profession. His offices are on Court Street, and he also has his home on the same street. He is a director of the Citizens State Bank of Ripley, is a stockholder in the First National Bank of Ripley, and owns considerable real estate in town and a large body of farming land in Jackson County.

Mr. Sayre served one term as mayor of Ripley. He is a democrat and a steward in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. During the war he was food administrator for Jackson County, made speeches in behalf of the various campaigns, and put the demands of the Government ahead of all his professional engagements.

In 1904, at Ripley, he married Miss Lida E. Hyre, daughter of John A. and Dora (Board) Hyre, residents of Ripley, where her father is a retired farmer. Mr. Sayre lost his wife by death March 7, 1920.

EVERETT McDOWELL HARMAN was born September 22, 1880, at Ennis, West Virginia, and is a son of Frank P. and Eugenia A. (Edwards) Harman, natives of Floyd County, Virginia, and a member of an old and honored family of the Old Dominion. His father, one of the pioneer West Virginia coal operators, still possesses large and valuable coal interests, and among other interests is president of the Lynn Coal and Coke Company of Matewan, West Virginia, the Turkey Gap Coal Company of Dotts, this state, and the Premier Pocahontas Colliery Company. During the greater part of the time he makes his home at Washington, D. C. and was at one time president of the Commercial National Bank of the national capital, but resigned several years ago. He came into the Pocahontas District at the time of its discovery, in 1886, and, in fact with Bowen and Cooper shares the credit for having discovered this field. He himself opened up all the properties of which he is president, and turned over to his son for opening the holdings in the Pigeon Creek District.

The education of Everett McDowell Harman was acquired in the public school at Salem, Virginia, the high school at Lynchburg, that state, and the Virginia Polytechnic, a semi-military institution, where he pursued a two-year course in civil engineering, but did not graduate. On leaving school he went to New Mexico, where he spent about one year on a ranch owned by his father, and then returned and went to work for the Freeburn Coal and Coke Company in Pike County, Kentucky, where he remained about a year. His father then selling that property, Mr. Harman came to West Virginia with the Premier Pocahontas Colliery Company, in the capacity of assistant superintendent, a position which he retained for two years, his next location being at Matewan, where he took charge of the Lynn and Allburn Coal and Coke Company as superintendent. In May, 1921, Mr. Harman located at Burch Post Office and opened the Puritan Mine, thus securing the credit for opening the first mine in the Pigeon Creek District.

In opening the Pigeon Creek property Mr. Harman has what is known as the Thacker seam and the Winifred seam, both of which will ship from the one tippie. The first shipment from this district was made July 30, 1921. The product is a high volatile coal, and the property will produce 3,000 tons daily. In the operation of the Puritan Mine Mr. Harman is on the ground daily, mingling with his men and looking after their interests in a way seldom noted among the proprietors. He is unmarried, belongs to a number of organizations, and is extremely popular wherever known.

GEORGE W. PHILLIPS, M. D. Since completing his medical education Doctor Phillips has devoted his abilities and increasing skill to the service of the little community of Blacksville in Clay District of Monongalia County. He is a professional man of high standing, and also a citizen whose interest is in the welfare of the community.

Doctor Phillips in his home at Blacksville is not far from his birthplace, which was over the state line in Greene County, Pennsylvania. He was born at Waynesburg, September 30, 1878, son of Judge Jesse Phillips. The Phillips family moved from New Jersey to Greene County about 1820. The grandfather of Doctor Phillips was Richard Phillips, who spent his life as a farmer in Greene County and died in old age. Judge Jesse Phillips was born in Greene County, and was one of the effective leaders in that county for many years. He died at the age of sixty-five. His wife was Deborah Spragg, who was born on a farm in Greene County, daughter of David Spragg, for whom a village was named. David Spragg was a merchant and also postmaster of Spragg. Mrs. Deborah Phillips died in February, 1918, at the age of seventy-seven.

George W. Phillips was educated in the common schools, attended Waynesburg College, and from there entered Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, where he was graduated in 1904. For a year he was an interne in St. John's Hospital in Pittsburgh, and then located at Blacksville to take up his duties as a general practitioner. He has been the leading physician of Blacksville for the past fifteen years. Doctor Phillips is a member of the County, State and American Medical associations, for four years was a member of the Board of Education and also served as mayor of the town. He helped secure the construction of the M. & W. Railroad. Doctor Phillips owns farming lands to the aggregate of about two hundred acres, having one farm in Pennsylvania and one near Blacksville. This is underlaid with oil and gas, but these resources have not been developed. The farms are operated by tenants, and stock raising is the principal industry. Doctor Phillips has built a very pleasant home in the village of Blacksville. He was a member of the Volunteer Medical Corps during the war, and is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason.

On February 17, 1906, he married Mary Kennedy, of Mount Morris, Pennsylvania. They have a daughter, Nellie, now a senior in the Blacksville High School. Mrs. Phillips was president of the local Red Cross Chapter during the war.

E. W. ROSE, M. D. The leading physician of a large section of country included in the territory surrounding Wadestown, thirty miles west of Morgantown, is Doctor Rose, who located there after graduating from medical school, and has practiced over an ever increasing range of territory. He has been public spirited and has associated himself with every substantial movement for the general improvement of the community.

Doctor Rose was born in Greene County, Pennsylvania, son of a farmer, and he grew up on a farm. He acquired a common school education, and he studied medicine in Long Island Hospital Medical College at Brooklyn and spent two terms in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore. Some two years after he began practice he did post-graduate work in the same institution. Leaving college, he came to Wadestown, and the first year had practically no exercise for his professional talents, after which his abilities became recognized and his work has assumed increasing importance with every successive year. Doctor Rose is a member of the County, State and American Medical associations.

He is a democrat, and is recognized as the pioneer in the good roads movement in this locality. Associated with the late M. J. Garrison, Doctor Rose visited the County Court many years ago to arouse an interest in local road improvement. The court at their solicitation visited Wadestown, and out of this movement came the first paved piece of road in the western part of Monongalia County. This good road was later extended, after its patrons had realized the great advantage of substantial highways, and the educational campaign for good roads was ended in the Wadestown community years before the idea secured any hearing in less progressive communities.

Doctor Rose married Kate Henderson who died two months after their marriage. His second wife was Ida Lester, who died leaving one daughter, Lucile, now Mrs. Frank Tyler, of Elizabeth, New Jersey. For his third wife Doctor Rose married Bertha Evans, and they have one daughter, Elizabeth.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS MAC QUEEN, M. D. West Virginia has a share in some of the finest surgical ability of the world, but it was due not only to his exceptional standing in surgery but to his constructive leadership in the medical and surgical profession in general, to the task which he successfully performed in founding and building up a great private hospital, and his disinterested service in the profession and as a citizen that the West Virginia Medical Association so well bestowed upon Dr. George Augustus MacQueen of Charleston the honor of president at its fifty-fourth annual meeting held in Charleston in 1921.

Doctor MacQueen is a native of West Virginia, born in Nicholas County in 1879, son of David and Mary (McCue) MacQueen. His father was a native of Nova Scotia and his grandfather of Scotland. David MacQueen as a young man moved to Nicholas County, West Virginia, married there and reared a family of ten children, six sons and four daughters. Mary McCue was born in Nicholas County, of Scotch-Irish ancestry, her family having been among the pioneer settlers of Nicholas County, moving to that vicinity from Rockbridge County, Virginia.

Reared on a farm, Doctor MacQueen attained a thorough academic and medical education. He attended normal school in Nicholas and Fayette counties and Marshall College in Huntington, and spent two years in the study of medicine in the Baltimore College of Medicine. After passing the examination of the State Board of Medical Examination he began practice, and continued until he could earn the money to finish his advanced course. He received his M. D. degree from Baltimore College of Medicine in 1906, and soon after graduating moved to Charleston.

Doctor MacQueen continued in the general practice of medicine for ten years, but since then his work has been almost entirely in the domain of surgery. It was primarily to accommodate and afford proper facilities for his surgical practice that he founded and built the original Kanawha Valley Hospital in Charleston, of which he is owner and chief surgeon. Since then he has personally financed the successive additions that make it now perhaps the leading private hospital in West Virginia. In 1921 a new building was constructed, providing an addition to the above named hospital. This new building is four stories high, and now the hospital has a capacity of seventy beds. Its equipment is thoroughly modern including X-ray laboratory, Biological and Pathological laboratories, and every facility found in the larger hospitals. Each of the laboratories is under the direction of an expert and specialist. These laboratory facilities are open to the Medical profession in general. Charleston is justly proud of the Kanawha Valley Hospital, but it is primarily and almost solely a monument to the work of Doctor MacQueen.

Doctor MacQueen is typical of many modern surgeons in their whole hearted devotion to their work and to work that lies outside the strict limits of the profession. During the war he was chairman of the first Draft Board for Charleston. He was also the "war" mayor of the city, being elected in the spring of 1917. He was mayor eighteen months, and then resigned to go into war service in September, 1918. He was assigned with the rank of captain in the Army Medical Corps. He was assigned to Evacuation Hospital No. 47, at Camp Greenleaf, Georgia, and received his honorable discharge in December, 1918.

As mayor Doctor MacQueen had very difficult tasks to perform. The country was at war, the city treasury was embarrassed by lack of funds, and the ordinary resources could not be drawn upon because they were already taxed by heavy war demands. Public works and public duties within the ordinary scope of a municipal government had to depend upon extraordinary exertions on the part of Doctor MacQueen and his associates. Among other things he had to police the city with only twenty men. Therefore, adequate in normal times and with the population Charleston had before the war, was entirely insufficient due to the rapid influx of people attracted by the many industries established here, particularly the great munitions plant at Nitro. For all these difficulties Mayor MacQueen gave the city a splendid administration, marked by good order and efficiency.

Doctor MacQueen was chairman of the committee on Legislation and public politics of the West Virginia State Medical Association from 1907 to 1921. It was largely due to his work and influence as chairman that practically all of the present laws relating to public health were put on the statute books. It may properly be a lasting source of pride to Doctor MacQueen that he sponsored the legislation leading to the building of the State Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Terra Alta. It was a project for which he fought alone for a long period. He personally wrote and presented the original resolution No. 17 covering this project for the joint session of the Legislature of 1907.

Doctor MacQueen married Miss Nimmie Goad, of Braxton County. Mrs. MacQueen, who died in 1914, was a daughter of the late George Goad, of that county. George

George A. MacLennan

Goad was sheriff of the county, a leading citizen, and member of a family that has been prominent in that section of the state from early times. Doctor MacQueen has one daughter, Anna Mary.

Doctor MacQueen is a member of the American Medical Association, also of the Southern Medical Association. He is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, a Knight Templar and a Shriner. He is also a member of the Elks, and of both the Edgewood Country Club and the Kanawha Country Club at Charleston.

WILLIAM H. SPIKER is a leading merchant and business man at Clifton Mills in Preston County. His family is an old and honored one in that section of West Virginia, and further reference to it is made on other pages of this publication.

William H. Spiker was born in Pleasant District, November 2, 1872. His father is the venerable John J. Spiker, of Bruceton Mills, a retired farmer and hotel man and a veteran of the Civil war. William H. Spiker is a brother of Calvin F. Spiker, also of Bruceton Mills.

William H. Spiker was seven years of age when his parents moved, in 1879, to Grant District, where he acquired most of his education in Mountain Grove School, with also two terms of normal institute work. For two terms he taught in Pleasant District and then for a dozen years followed the vocation of farming. When he left farming he engaged in merchandising at Bruceton Mills as successor to the firm of Wolfe & Heimbaugh, at the old Harader stand, where since 1909 he has conducted a thriving and prosperous business under the firm name of William H. Spiker. His is a general business enterprise, affording an effective service not only for imported supplies and goods but also as a means of marketing the surplus products of the community. He operates a trading outfit between Clifton Mills and Uniontown, Pennsylvania, and buys practically any merchantable commodity offered for sale and sends it to market over the railroads. Mr. Spiker has also done an effective part in local citizenship. He has served as a member of the Board of Education, and for six years postmaster of Clifton Mills, under the Taft and a portion of the Roosevelt administrations, and is notary public of the community, receiving his commission from Governor Cornwell.

In Preston County, April 8, 1896, he married Miss Birdie Liston, daughter of Abraham and Lyda (Wolfe) Liston, and granddaughter of Henson Liston and Jacob Wolfe. This is the old and prominent Wolfe family of Preston County. Henson Liston was a Union soldier in the Civil war, spent all his life in Preston County and is buried in the Liston graveyard near Rockville. Abraham and Lyda Liston had the following children: Mrs. Birdie Spiker, who was born in Grant District, January 10, 1876; Callie, Mrs. H. V. Rhoades, of Haydentown, West Virginia; Lloyd, a minister of the Church of the Brethren, living near Mountain Grove, where for many years he has been a school teacher; Hosea, a coal miner near Morgantown; and Charles, a carpenter at Morgantown. Hosea and Charles Liston were soldiers in the World war, Hosea in the Motor Battalion and Charles in the Infantry. Both were overseas and at the front. Charles participated in the battles and campaigns of Belleau Wood, St. Mihiel and the Argonne. Both brothers were overseas about two years and returned to the United States in 1919.

Mrs. Spiker was educated in the country schools of Grant District. They were married by Rev. C. E. Feather, of the Methodist Church, in which denomination Mr. Spiker was reared. Mr. and Mrs. Spiker have two children, Ora M. and Lena Mary.

AARON N. LINGER. French Creek is one of the post offices and commercial centers of Upshur County, and a sustaining factor in its business life for over thirty years has been Aaron N. Linger, a leading merchant. Mr. Linger is well known in Upshur County, where he is interested in banking, farming and in civic affairs.

He was born on Big Skin Creek in Lewis County, West Virginia, August 23, 1858, son of Nicholas and Matilda (Bradshaw) Linger. He grew up on his father's farm there, attended the free schools, and was at home until the age of twenty-one. After his marriage he settled on a farm on Skin Creek, but six years later sold out and moved to French Creek, in 1888, and since then has been steadily in business as a merchant, and his store has brought a large amount of trade to that village center. Mr. Linger also owns a farm of seventy acres, is a director in the Bank of Adrian, and a stockholder in the Peoples Bank of West Virginia at Buckhannon.

He married Miss Lucy E. Sexton, of French Creek, and they have two children: Freeman S., a dentist at Clarksburg; and Dr. R. B. Linger, of Lost Creek, West Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Linger are members of the Presbyterian Church, and he is one of its trustees. In politics he is a democrat.

GRANVILLE TETER represents a substantial farming and stock raising element in Central West Virginia, is owner of a large farm on Prindle's Fork of Stone Coal Creek, and for many years has been doing his part as an agriculturist and stockman and also as a high minded citizen.

Mr. Teter's home is twelve miles southeast of Weston and just over the line in Upshur County. He was born on Peck's Run in Upshur County, March 26, 1856, son of Alva and Catherine (Strader) Teter. His father was born in Upshur County in 1822 and died January 21, 1893. He was a prominent farmer and also active in public affairs as a democrat, representing his county in the Legislature two terms, was deputy sheriff and for one term sheriff of Upshur County. He was an active member of the Reger Methodist Episcopal Church. His children were named Sarah E., James Lee, Elizabeth, Granville, John, Florence Crosby, Barbara, Sherman T., Lloyd and Burton I.

Granville Teter spent his early life on his father's farm and had a common school education. He married soon after reaching the age of twenty-one, and has since been primarily concerned with his growing interests as a farmer. His farm contains 602 acres, and he is one of the leading growers of cattle, for beef, in his community. He is a director of the Peoples Bank of Buckhannon and a director of the Upshur County Fair Association.

On April 12, 1877, Mr. Teter married Miss Berenice Brake. She was born in Upshur County, September 5, 1856, and was educated in the common schools. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Teter were as follows: Bertha B., born January 11, 1878, wife of W. P. Casto; Cozbi, born November 18, 1880, wife of D. P. Linger; Grace S., born in September, 1883, died in 1886; Claude W., born March 22, 1886, married Grace Reider; Maude M., born February 18, 1889, wife of Doctor Linger; Osie C., born June 15, 1896, died January 15, 1915; and Avis, born June 30, 1902, a student in high school. Mr. Teter is a republican, and has served as county commissioner of Upshur County and also as a member of the School Board.

ABRAHAM LINDON GRIGGS, president of the County Court of Lewis County, has become a figure in public affairs in his locality not through a special inclination for politics, but on account of his high standing as a citizen and record as a successful farmer, the basis of confidence which has been thoroughly justified in his official performance.

Mr. Griggs, whose home is on his farm eighteen miles west of Weston, was born in Harrison County, January 17, 1865, son of Hamilton and Sarah L. (Hurst) Griggs. His father was born in Monongalia County, West Virginia, in 1835 and his mother, in Harrison County in 1833. Both grew up on farms, were educated in the common schools, after their marriage settled in Harrison County and a few years later moved to a farm on Finks Creek, in 1869, where Hamilton Griggs continued his farming operations until 1890. In that year he divided his farm holdings among his children and then bought another farm in Calhoun County, to which he removed. He was never affiliated with any church, but his wife was an active member of the Baptist denomination. He belonged to the Grange, was a republican in politics, and fought for the Union two years in the Civil war. Of his eight children seven are living: Isabelle, deceased; Mary O. widow of A. E. Hudkins; John H., who lives in Kansas; Euna, wife of John Money Penny, of Kansas; Abraham L.; Howard, a Kansas farmer; Cora, wife of Dr. J. A. Dye, of Williamston, West Virginia; and Claude F., of Weston.

Abraham Lindon Griggs grew up on the farm, attended the public schools of Lewis County, and for six terms did a useful work as a teacher in the public schools. Since then he has been farming, and has made a progressive record in everything he has undertaken. He was first appointed to the County Court to fill a vacancy, and in November, 1920, was elected and is now president of the board. He has also served as a member and president of the Board of Education of the Freemans Creek School District. Mr. Griggs is a republican, and is clerk of the Baptist Church in his home community.

On November 28, 1888, he married Lena C. Taupel. She died in May, 1911, the mother of five children: H. Quay, a graduate of the normal and academic courses of Glenville, who was in the Aviation Corps during the World war and had overseas duty, and is now in the employ of the United States Government in the California oil fields; Edna is the wife of Cleveland Davison, a farmer in Lewis County; Ada is the wife of Doy Talbott, a farmer in Gilmer County; Ethel and Mamie, the youngest children, are at home. Mr. Griggs subsequently married May H. Lovell. She has one son, Orris, who was a soldier in the World war and was overseas.

EUGENE CARL FRAME, a prominent member of the Marion County bar and a loyal and popular citizen of Fairmont, the county seat, was born at Coolville, Athens County, Ohio, September 2, 1872, and is a son of Augustus J. and Harriet (Smith) Frame. Augustus J. Frame was born at Coolville in 1835, and his death occurred in 1908. His father, John Frame, was a young man when he came from his native Ireland and settled in Athens County, Ohio, where he passed the remainder of his life. Augustus J. Frame became a successful merchant and influential citizen of Athens County, where he held public office—county treasurer and county auditor—for a total period of twenty-six years. His wife was born at Letart, Meigs County, Ohio, in 1841, and died in 1884.

Eugene C. Frame attended the public schools at Coolville and Athens, Ohio, and in addition to taking a course in the law department of the University of West Virginia he furthered his technical knowledge by the study of law in the office of Berkshire & Sturgiss, a leading law firm at Morgantown. He was admitted to the bar in 1895, and he gave twenty years of effective service as official court reporter in Monongalia, Marion and Harrison counties. During Judge Sturgiss' administration as United States district attorney Mr. Frame was his official secretary and law clerk. Since 1897 he has been engaged in active practice at Fairmont, and within this period he has been a prominent figure in much of the important litigation in the courts of this part of the state. In 1911 he became junior member of the law firm of Showalter & Frame, and this effective alliance continued until January 1, 1921, when the senior member of the firm, Judge Emmet M. Showalter assumed his seat on the bench of the Criminal Court of Marion County. Since that time Mr. Frame has continued his practice in an individual way.

Mr. Frame is a past master of Fairmont Lodge No. 9, A. F. and A. M.; is a past high priest of Oriental Chapter No. 6, R. A. M.; past eminent commander of Crusade Commandery, Knights Templars; and in Sovereign Consistory No. 1 of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of the Masonic fraternity at Wheeling he has received the thirty-second degree. In November, 1921, he was made deputy grand master of the Masonic Grand Lodge of West Virginia.

In 1895 Mr. Frame wedded Miss Nellie Lee Haymond, daughter of Lindsey B. and Alice (Comerford) Haymond, of Fairmont. Mr. Haymond was one of the leading members of the Marion County bar and was serving as prosecuting attorney of the county at the time of his death.

He was a son of the late Judge Alpheus F. Haymon who served twelve years on the bench of the Supreme Court of West Virginia and who is more specifically mentioned on other pages of this work, especially in the personal sketch of Judge William S. Haymond of Fairmont. Mr. and Mrs. Frame have two children: Lindsey A., who was born October 31, 1896, graduated from the Fairmont High School and the State Normal School in this city, and thereafter continued his studies in the University of Ohio. When the nation became involved in the World war he enlisted in the United States Navy, in which he served as gunner's mate. He is now engaged in the fruit orchard and poultry business at Hancock, Maryland. He married Miss Mary Emmet, of Columbus, Ohio. James C., the younger son, was born September 9, 1899, and a graduate of the Fairmont High School and the State Normal School, as well as of the University of Ohio, and he is now associated with his brother in business at Hancock, Maryland.

JOSEPH BOWERS has lived nearly all his life in Union District of Monongalia County. His home, popularly known as "Joe Bowers' place," is eight miles northeast of Morgantown, on the Ices Ferry road. His daily mail delivery is over Route No. 10 from Cheat Haven, Pennsylvania. Mr. Bowers has been a farmer and is one of the most popular citizens in his section of the county.

He was born at Cheat Neck, January 31, 1852, son of John and Harriet (Baker) Bowers. John Bowers was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, was a carpenter by trade and it was work at his trade which attracted him in the first instance to this section of West Virginia. He was employed for a time as a carpenter in the old iron work on Cheat River, at the locality then known as Prideville, then a considerable industrial center, with iron furnace and other factories. His wages as a carpenter here were a dollar a day, and he boarded himself. While boarding he met and married Harriet Baker, daughter of John D. and Nancy (Norris) Baker, a substantial family of farmers in that neighborhood. Harriet Baker was a sister of Andrew C. Baker, father of George C. Baker, one of the prominent citizens of Monongalia County. John Bowers finally acquired the old home of his wife's grandfather and kept adding to his possessions until he had a valuable stock farm of several hundred acres. He was the type of citizen who could be relied upon for effective service, and for years he was a justice of the peace, school trustee, and in other offices. It is interesting to note that John Bowers seventy-seven years ago built a house for William Donaldson, and this house is now the home of Joseph Bowers who purchased it twenty-four years ago. John Bowers was a democrat, and was superintendent of the Sunday School of the Methodist Protestant Church. Eventually Prideville became known as Laurel Iron Works. The Iron Works including a rolling mill, were continued in operation until 1867, and the town which in its high tide of prosperity had a population of between twenty-five hundred and three thousand, also had a distillery, planing mill and other industries. Laurel Iron Works was situated on Cheat River seven miles northeast of Morgantown, and the community is still spoken of by the old timers as Laurel Iron Works though the post office has gone and there is practically no trade or industry centered there any longer. John Bowers died September 21, 1897, in his seventy-eighth year, and his landed possessions are still owned by his family. His widow survived him eight years and was the same age when she died. They reared six children: George C., who died while a soldier in a West Virginia regiment in the Union Army; John H., Joseph and William D., all residents of Union District; Harriet E., wife of Charles R. Goodwin of Smithfield, Pennsylvania; and Andrew Coleman, owner of the old Bowers homestead.

Joseph Bowers grew up in this locality and acquired common school education. With the exception of eleven months he has lived here ever since. For thirty-two years his father conducted a general store, and for twenty-seven years of this time Joseph managed this enterprise until his father's death. Since then he has lived on the farm, and he and Mrs. Bowers have made a practice of opening their home to summer guests who come to enjoy the beautiful scenery of this locality from as far away as New York City and Pittsburgh. The house is full every summer, and there are many parties that motor out to enjoy the chicken dinners which are Mrs. Bowers' specialty.

E. L. Truitt.

On December 11, 1886, Mr. Bowers married Hattie L. Mack, widow of David Savage and daughter of William and Elizabeth (Dusenberry) Mack, of Easton, Monongalia County, where her parents settled when Hattie was two years of age. Her parents moved here from Laurel Point, and her father was born at the City of Easton, Pennsylvania, and married about 1855, after coming to the Monongahela Valley, his wife being a daughter of Samuel and Dolly (Brakeiron) Dusenberry, farmers in that locality. William Mack was a carpenter by trade, but for many years lived on a farm. He died in May, 1911, when past eighty, and the widowed mother of Mrs. Bowers is still living, in her ninety-fifth year, a remarkable example of longevity and well preserved faculties. Her home is now with Mrs. Bowers. Mrs. Bowers lost her first husband a year after their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Bowers have no children, but they are rearing Eula Cuppett, now eleven years of age, and a bright and promising schoolgirl. Mr. Bowers is a democrat, but has kept out of politics, having refused to make a campaign for county commissioner. He is one of the original stockholders of the Commercial National Bank of Morgantown. Altogether he has prospered in a financial way, and is regarded as one of the best liked, most accommodating, self-sacrificing, public spirited citizens of Monongalia County.

GEORGE W. BAUSEMAN is successfully engaged in mine-construction work in connection with the coal mining industry in Upshur and neighboring counties, and in his prosperous contracting business in this line he is associated with W. P. Barlow, under the title of the Bauseman Company. He owns and resides upon his well improved fruit farm of thirty-three acres near the village of Lorentz, Upshur County, and here is a successful grower of apples, peaches, plums, cherries and other fruits. He is a loyal supporter of the cause of the republican party, and he and his wife are members of the Methodist Protestant Church at Lorentz.

Mr. Bauseman was born at Tenmile, Upshur County, September 21, 1874, and is a son of J. F. and Lavina (Boyles) Bauseman, the former of whom was born in Augusta County, Virginia, in March, 1843, and the latter of whom was born in Upshur County, in 1846. The parents now reside at Lorentz, and the father is living retired after many years of active and successful business as a carpenter and contractor. J. F. Bauseman was a gallant young soldier of the Union in the Civil war, in which he was a member of the same company as was his father. After the close of the war he engaged in the work of his trade at Tenmile, Upshur County, whence he later removed to the Hatcher's Creek District of Lewis County, but for the past thirty years he and his wife have maintained their home at Lorentz, Upshur County, both being earnest members of the Methodist Protestant Church. Mr. Bauseman is a stalwart in the ranks of the republican party, is affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic and is one of the sterling and honored citizens of Upshur County. Of their children Minnie M. is the widow of G. L. Woodley; George W., of this review, was the next in order of birth; Viola is the widow of Hugh H. Fox; Charles F. met his death in a mine explosion in one of the coal mines of this section of the state; Addie M. became the wife of Asbury Bailey, and after his death she became the wife of Henry Snow, their home being in Upshur County.

George W. Bauseman gained his youthful education in the schools of Lewis and Upshur counties, and learned the carpenter's trade under the direction of his father. He continued in the work of his trade until about the year 1907, and then engaged in construction work in connection with coal-mining operations. He later served a short time as superintendent of the Midway Mine, and then resumed contract work in mine construction, in which he is now actively engaged, as senior partner in the Bauseman Company, which controls a substantial and prosperous business.

November 9, 1897, recorded the marriage of Mr. Bauseman and Miss Ella T. Wilson, who was born and reared in Lewis County, this state, and they have two children. Orville F., who was born December 9, 1899, is married and is a member of the United States Navy, with which he saw active service in the World war period. George M., the younger son, was born December 16, 1907, and remains at the parental home.

JOHN L. MAHAN. An early settler of Hancock County, and for many years prominently associated with the river traffic on the Ohio, the late John L. Mahan was also a pioneer in commercial fruit growing in that district, and part of his extensive property is still devoted to that business.

He owned about 600 acres in his farm, what is now Arroyo Station, and during his lifetime he planted about 100 acres of that to a commercial orchard. His old home was on the river bank, close to the station, which is four miles north of New Cumberland. The old Mahan residence stood near the Ohio River. Part of the property is now occupied by his son-in-law, W. C. Aikin, whose residence is a quarter of a mile away, on slightly higher ground and commanding a fine view of the river. The background of the home are the hills that rise to an elevation of from 200 to 300 feet. Arroyo is the center of the finest fruit section in the Upper Ohio Valley, and hardly surpassed by the fruit country of the Eastern Panhandle. Near Arroyo are probably a dozen men who make apple growing their leading industry. The higher ridges of land in this section are especially fitted for the production of most excellent fruit.

John L. Mahan settled here in 1840. In early years he operated a saw and grist mill, and he also built barges and was part owner of the Cumberland Tow Boat Company. He did a large timber and barge business. He was an early convert to apple growing on a commercial scale, and the efforts he put forth in this line of development have been continued on his old farm ever since. He died in 1901, at the age of eighty-seven, having lived retired for some years.

John L. Mahan married Barbara Brenneman, daughter of Herman Brenneman. She died at the age of sixty-eight. Of their ten children the survivors are a son, J. P. Mahan, an insurance man of Pittsburgh. Another son, S. H. Mahan, at Rochester, Pennsylvania. A daughter, Mrs. Carrie N. Porter, widow of the late Capt. James Porter, a prominent character of the Upper Ohio Valley, whose history is given elsewhere. Another daughter is Mrs. George W. Clark, widow of an old steamboat captain on the lower river. Her home is at Louisville.

Mary Mahan, another daughter of the late John L. Mahan, died August 29, 1919, wife of W. C. Aikin, who survives her. They were married in 1889. They lived at the old Mahan residence until 1910. She and her sister, Mrs. Porter, had purchased what remained of the old Mahan estate, and Mrs. Aikin remodeled the house erected by her brother, S. H. Mahan, on part of the old tract. Mrs. Aikin was an active member of the local Methodist Protestant Chapel.

W. C. Aikin was born in Mercer County, Pennsylvania, and at the age of fifteen came to Wellsburg, West Virginia. For three years he was employed in a drug store, and he then became an office employe of a steamboat company, and was in the river traffic for about fourteen years, part of the time as captain. He was on steamboats all along the Ohio and Mississippi and their tributaries, and once or twice went up the Missouri to Fort Benton, Montana. After leaving the river he was a bookkeeper in a brick yard at New Cumberland, and for seventeen years devoted his time to fruit growing and stock raising on the Mahan farm. He developed a fine dairy herd of Guernsey cattle. The manager of the orchard is William McDonald, who lives with Mr. Aikin. Mr. Aikin has a life interest in the farm and receives half of the profits. He has been an active citizen in this community, and for twenty years has been on the school board and has kept in close touch with school developments in the district.

RICHARD H. HALL has become one of the substantial and representative citizens of his native county, where he is president of the Citizens Bank at Weston and where also he is a progressive exponent of farm industry, his residence being on Center Street at Weston, the judicial center of Lewis County. He was born on a farm near Freemansburg, this county, May 24, 1855, and is a son of James M. and Nancy (Burnside) Hall. The former was born May 16, 1820, at Westfield, Harrison County, Virginia, now Lewis County, West Virginia, while the latter was born near Goodhope, then in Harrison County, Virginia, now West Virginia. James M. Hall was reared on a pioneer farm, and owing to conditions of time and place received limited educational advantages. After his marriage he settled on a farm in Lewis County, and he eventually became the owner of about 800 acres of land, which he developed and improved into one of the valuable farm properties of the county, his success having been the result of his own well directed efforts. He was fifty-two years of age at the time of his death. He was a republican, was a strong Union man during the climacteric period of the Civil war, and he served for a time as a member of the County Court. He and his second wife were members of the United Brethren Church. His first wife was not a member of any religious body, although friendly towards all churches. By his first marriage he became the father of seven children and by the second marriage there were three children. Of those now living the following record is available: William H. resides at Weston and owns one of the best farms in Ritchie County; Minor J. is a successful farmer in Lewis County; Richard H. is the immediate subject of this sketch; Lot is a farmer and stock dealer in Lewis County; Samuel G. is identified with a gas company in this county; Mary M. is the wife of H. D. Bailey, and they reside in Missouri; Virginia is the wife of George A. Custer, residing in Clarksburg; Luella is the wife of Lloyd Allman, of Lewis County; and Bertha is the wife of Lee A. Beach. Sarah, who became the wife of N. A. Lovett, is deceased.

Richard H. Hall was reared on the home farm and received the advantages of the public schools of the locality and period. He was nineteen years old at the time of his father's death, and thereafter he worked two years in the employ of others. He received as a bequest from his father a farm of sixty acres and also the sum of $800. He continued to add to his landed estate until he had 1,400 acres, and he still gives a general supervision to his large and valuable farm properties in Lewis County. He remained on his homestead farm until 1914, when he removed to Weston, the county seat. In 1884 he was elected one of the assessors of the county, in which position he served eight years. In 1892 Mr. Hall was elected county sheriff, and his four years' administration fully justified his election. He continued the active management of his farms while serving as sheriff, and after retiring from office he lived on his home farm until 1914, when he and his wife came to Weston, where they have since resided. He was one of the organizers of the Citizens Bank, of which he later became vice president and of which he is now the president, his careful and well ordered executive policies having contributed greatly to the success of this representative financial institution of Lewis County. He is a republican, is liberal and public-spirited as a citizen, is affiliated with Weston Lodge No. 43, Knights of Pythias, and he and his family hold membership in the United Brethren Church, in which each of his sons have served as Sunday school superintendent.

February 3, 1886, recorded the marriage of Mr. Hall and Miss Virginia Gaston, who likewise was born and reared in Lewis County. Mr. and Mrs. Hall have two sons: Simeon A. is one of the representative farmers of Lewis County, as is also the younger son, Claude M., who studied law at Morgantown and who was for some time engaged in the practice of his profession, from which he withdrew to give his attention to progressive farm enterprise.

REV. HYRE D. CLARK, D. D., PH. D., who gave forty years of earnest and effective service in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church and who is now instructor in Greek and Latin at the West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, Upshur County, was born on a farm in said county, March 21, 1847, a son of Jacob and Susanna (Crites) Clark and a representative of one of the old and honored families of this section of the state. The Doctor gained his initial experience of practical order by assisting in the activities of the home farm, and after attending subscription and common schools of the locality and period he continued his studies in the normal school at Fairmont, this state, while later he graduated from Allegheny College, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Three years later he received from the same institution the degree of Master of Arts, and his degrees of Doctor of Divinity and Doctor of Philosophy were conferred upon him by the Illinois Wesleyan University. While a student the Doctor gave intervals of service as a teacher in various schools, and after his ordination to the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church he held pastoral charges in the State of Illinois, where he thus labored with all of consecrated zeal and devotion during the long period between 1880 and 1903. In the latter year he returned to West Virginia, where he continued his service in the ministry until 1920, when he retired from the high calling to which he had given the best years of his life. A man of high scholarship and exalted ideals, he finds an inviting field of service in his present position as one of the honored and valued instructors in the West Virginia Wesleyan College, the while he finds deep personal satisfaction, now that he is living in semi-retirement, in the fact that he maintains his home in his native county, where remain many of the friends and associates of his youth. He has served as district superintendent of the West Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he was for two years president of Hedding College at Abingdon, Illinois. His political allegiance is given to the republican party.

In 1891 was solemnized the marriage of Doctor Clark and Miss Grace Clippinger, a graduate of Monmouth College in the State of Illinois. Doctor and Mrs. Clark have two daughters, Misses Lois and Josephine, both of whom are graduates of the West Virginia Wesleyan College, from which each received the degree of Master of Arts, and a son Howard, who is deceased.

RALPH W. SEE was a merchant for some years, but since selling his business has been progressively identified with the farming enterprise of Lewis County. His home is on an extensive farm ten miles southeast of Weston, on Ranges Run.

Mr. See was born in Randolph County, West Virginia, December 26, 1881, son of Seymour and Emma (Sexton) See. His parents were both born in the French Creek community of Upshur County, his father February 9, 1849, and his mother, September 15, 1852. Both grew up on neighboring farms, attended the same school, and after their marriage they lived on a farm for a few years in Upshur County, then moved to Randolph County, where they owned a farm, and after selling that returned to Upshur County in 1882 and are still living there, being among the most respected and substantial residents of their community. They are Presbyterians and the politics of the family is republican. There are five children: Clarence L., who is married and lives on a farm in Upshur County; Arden A., in the West Virginia State Hospital at Weston; Pearl M., wife of Clarence Wingrove, living in Upshur County; Ralph W.; and Miss Louise L., at home.

Ralph W. See spent his early life on the farm and had a public school education. He did farming chiefly until he was twenty-three, when he established himself in the general mercantile business at French Creek, and remained there for twelve years. When he sold his store he took a farm in Ashtabula County, Ohio, in part payment. In 1917 he moved to a farm in Lewis County, comprising 960 acres; and has made many improvements on this place. He is also a stockholder in the Bank of Adrian. Mr. See is a republi-and a member of the Presbyterian Church at French Creek.

Hyre D. Clark

On September 24, 1913, he married Catherine Linger, who was born October 6, 1890, in Lewis County, a daughter of Charlie E. and Mary J. (Strader) Linger, and she was reared on the farm where she now lives. They have two daughters, Enola L., born July 1, 1917; and Irene M., born June 14, 1920.

WILLIAM E. BRAITHWAITE. Of the West Virginia colony in the City of Washington one of the very interesting and talented members is William E. Braithwaite, who for a number of years has been connected with the Bureau of Standards, but is most widely known as a professional musician, being tenor soloist of the National Quartette of Washington.

Mr. Braithwaite was born in Berkeley County, West Virginia, in 1887, son of John W. and Martha F. (Jenkins) Braithwaite, who reside at Martinsburg. This is an old family of Berkeley County of English ancestry.

William E. Braithwaite attended the public schools of Berkeley County and Martinsburg, and in 1908 he came to Washington as an employee in the administrative offices of the United States Bureau of Standards. His continued service with that bureau has brought him progressive promotion from minor clerical duties until he is now administrative assistant in the Industrial Laboratory of the United States Bureau of Standards (testing of materials). This position places him in the capacity of office executive of the plant of this division, located on Pierce Mill Road near Connecticut Avenue.

As a boy he was regarded as an exceptional singer in his home county of Berkeley, and after removing to Washington, a city rich in opportunities and facilities for study and culture, he devoted his spare time to vocal music. He studied under Professor Myron Whitney, son of the elder Myron Whitney, one of the most famous singers of his day; under Herndon Morselle, for several years tenor soloist with the old Bostonian Opera Company; and another teacher of distinction with whom he worked was Charles Bartlett. In his meantime he sang with various church choirs and concert organizations, and his work as a tenor soloist brought him increasing appreciation in the best musical circles of Washington. Mr. Braithwaite is one of the original members of the famous National Quartette, all of whom are professional singers, and an organization that stands in the very front rank in this country or abroad. The quartette has been heard in many cities, though the time of each is quite fully occupied with professional engagements in and around Washington. It has been a feature not only of choir concerts, but of many ceremonial occasions at the National Capital. Mr. Braithwaite sang with this quartette at the funeral of the late Admiral Dewey, the funeral of Hon. Champ Clark, the dedication of the Clara Barton Memorial, and has appeared on many programs before fraternal and other organizations meeting in Washington. One particularly interesting appearance was in November, 1921, when he sang with a quartette in the amphitheater at Washington or transmission by telephone across the continent to San Francisco. The demonstration, arranged for and carried out by the Bell Telephone Company, was entirely successful, and was the pioneer effort of the kind. During the great war the National Quartette was a feature in many patriotic programs and also in entertainments for enlisted men.

Mr. Braithwaite besides his duties with the National Quartette is music director of the Vermont Avenue (Garfield Memorial) Christian Church. He has given this church splendid musical organization, including a chorus choir of from forty to fifty voices, a male quartette and a mixed quartette.

Mr. Braithwaite married a Washington lady, who shares with him his musical tastes and enthusiasm, Miss Helen Louise Crennan, a native of Yankton, South Dakota, who was musically educated in Washington and in the Conservatory of Oberlin College, Ohio, and also under two famous New York voice teachers, Mr. and Mrs. Meehan. Her voice is a mezzo-soprano, and she has appeared as soloist with Sousa's Band. Mr. and Mrs. Braithwaite have a little daughter, Edna Louise.

GUY MARTIN BONAFIELD is active head of the Bonafield Coal Company of Tunnelton, and for many years has been identified with merchandising, coal development and banking in that community. The family name stands out as one of the most prominent in the affairs of that section of Preston County.

His grandfather was Thornton J. Bonafield, a native of St. George, Tucker County, West Virginia, who established his home in Preston County in early days and was a successful farmer. He died at Tunnelton at the age of seventy-three. He married Sarah Ervin, and their only son was Arnold Jacob, while their daughters were: Susan, who became the wife of George W. Hartman; Flora, who married Wilber Posten, of Monongalia County; Lettie, who married John S. Graham; Miss Julia, who has spent her life as a Missionary in China; and Ida, wife of Luther McMillen, of the Masontown locality.

The late Arnold Jacob Bonafield was born near the old Camp Ground on the Kingwood-Tunnelton Road, and died at Tunnelton, January 9, 1909, at the age of sixty. His active career was divided between merchandising and the coal industry. He was a democrat in politics, and very popular both in and out of his party, since he came very near to being elected sheriff of Preston County at a time when the democrats were in great minority. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Methodist Church. Arnold Bonafield married Elizabeth Virginia Robinson, daughter of James and Betsy (Baker) Robinson, natives of West Virginia and for many years residents of Fairmont. Mrs. A. J. Bonafield is still living, with her children, her home being with her son Guy. Her other children are Hugh W., of Tunnelton; Ethelind Virginia, wife of B. F. Hutton; and Stewart R., of Tunnelton.

Guy Martin Bonafield was born at Tunnelton March 18, 1874, and was well educated in preparation for the duties of life. He attended the common schools, the Fairmont Normal School and the West Virginia Wesleyan College. On leaving school he became bookkeeper and clerk for his father, and continued to be actively associated with the elder Bonafield until his death. As administrator he closed up his father's estate, and then engaged in the flour and feed business, but now for some years has been active as a coal operator. He and George Cummings, under the firm name of Cummings & Bonafield, developed a mine at the village of Tunnelton, operating it as the Loubert Coal Company. This is a successful mine operation today, and in 1918 Mr. Bonafield bought the interests of Mr. Cummings and organized the Bonafield Coal Company, of which he is two-thirds owner.

His father was a prominent factor in organizing the Tunnelton Bank, which opened for business in 1903, and was its president until his death. Guy Bonafield is a stockholder, vice president and one of the directors of the bank. He has frequently been honored with the duties of a councilman, and was once mayor of Tunnelton. Mr. Bonafield cast his first presidential vote for William Jennings Bryan, and is a democrat in national politics, though rather independent in local affairs. He is one of the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and is a thirty-second degree Mason, a Knight of Pythias and a member of other fraternities.

In June, 1898, near Tunnelton, he married Miss Alberta C. Bolyard, who was born in that community in 1873, daughter of Henry and Nancy (Sigley) Bolyard, of Harrison County, West Virginia, where her mother was born. Mrs. Bonafield attended the high schools of Kingwood and Terra Alta, also Mr. Bowman's school and normal in Barbour County, and was a popular teacher in Preston County until her marriage. Her last term was taught at Fellowsville. She is the fifth in a family of eight children: Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bonafield and are still in the home circle: Daisy L., Elizabeth Adelaide, Arnold Jacob, Ethelind Virginia and James Henry.

FRENCH M. FARNSWORTH is a doctor of dental surgery, carrying on a successful practice at Buckhannon. He is a son of Dr. F. F. Farnsworth, one of the officials of the State Health Department at Charleston.

French Farnsworth was born at Holly Grove in Upshur County, August 11, 1891, son of F. F. and Lasora (Martin) Farnsworth. His father was born at Buckhannon, April 2, 1869, and his mother, at Holly Grove, November 25, 1868. Dr. F. F. Farnsworth was reared at Buckhannon, is a graduate of Union College and the Maryland Medical College, and has had a highly successful career both in his profession and in educational and public affairs. He practiced nine years at French Creek in Upshur County, West Virginia. Altogether he devoted seventeen years to teaching and school administration, being superintendent of the Buckhannon schools from 1900 to 1903. For several years he has been director of the Bureau of Venereal Diseases under the State Health Department at Charleston. Doctor Farnsworth is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is a master Mason and a prominent republican. He was a member of the Legislature in the session of 1913, and for three years was president of the State Board of Health, being appointed by Governor Hatfield. Dr. F. F. Farnsworth has four children: Dr. French M.; L. E., station agent at Clay Court House, West Virginia; Ora, a graduate of the Charleston High School and now employed in the Public Health Department at Charleston; and Dorsy A., who is a graduate of the Charleston High School and a student in the Indiana Dental College.

French M. Farnsworth was reared at French Creek, finished his literary education in the Glenville Normal School, and in 1912 graduated from the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery. For the past ten years he has enjoyed a large practice as a dentist at Buckhannon, and is a member in good standing of the Monongahela Valley State and National Dental societies. He is a stockholder in several business enterprises in Buckhannon.

On August 4, 1913, Doctor Farnsworth married Edna Buntin, a graduate of Shepherd College. They have one son, Neil B., born June 18, 1918. Doctor and Mrs. Farnsworth are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he has served on the official board. In Masonry he is affiliated with Franklin Lodge No. 7, A. F. and A. M., Upshur Chapter No. 34, R. A. M., Buckhannon Commandery No. 25, K. T., and in the Scottish Rite is affiliated with Mizpah Lodge of Perfection No. 5 and the Knights of the Rose Croix No. 5 at Clarksburg. Both he and Mrs. Farnsworth are members of the Eastern Star.

JAMES J. DECK, PH. D., who holds the chair of modern languages in the West Virginia Wesleyan College, conducted under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Buckhannon, Upshur County, is a man of specially high intellectual attainments and has achieved marked success in connection with education work in the land of his adoption.

Doctor Deck was born in the canton of Zürich, Switzerland, on the 6th of January, 1861, and is a son of John J. and Anne (Heidegger) Deck, both of whom passed their entire lives in Switzerland. The father graduated from the great University of Halle, Germany, and was ordained a clergyman of the Evangelical Reformed Church, to the service of which he gave his active life, with utmost consecration and zeal.

Doctor Deck was reared in the City of Zürich, Switzerland, and in the local schools his discipline included the gymnasium, corresponding to college in the United States. His higher academic education was obtained in the University of Zürich, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and in the College of St. Francis Xavier in New York City, in which he completed the regular course and was graduated, his intention at the time having been to enter the priesthood. The Doctor was twenty years of age when he came to the United States and entered the college in the national metropolis, in 1881.

From 1883 to 1896 Doctor Deck was at the head of the department of chemistry in Georgetown University, District of Columbia, and from 1898 to 1900 he was a private tutor in higher branches of study at Washington, D. C. In the latter year he accepted the position of instructor in Greek at Taylor University, Upland, Indiana, but in the following year was called to the chair of languages in West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, with which institution he has since continued his effective service and as a member of the faculty of which he now holds the chair of modern languages. The Doctor is an honored member of the West Virginia Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and both he and his wife are active and influential in various departments of church work. He is past master of Franklin Lodge No. 7, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Buckhannon, past high priest of Upshur Chapter No. 34, Royal Arch Masons, in which he is again serving in this office in 1922, is the present commander of Buckhannon Commandery of Knights Templar, and is affiliated also with the Scottish Rite of the time-honored Masonic fraternity, besides which he is a charter member of Buckhannon Chapter No. 18, Order of the Eastern Star, of which he is a past patron and of which his wife likewise is an active member. In politics Doctor Deck gives his allegiance to the republican party.

In July, 1898, was solemnized the marriage of Doctor Deck and Miss Catherine F. Fitzgerald, who graduated from the high school in the City of Washington, D. C. They have three children: Ida M., who was born August 14, 1899, is a graduate of Miss Ellet's private school for girls at Washington, D. C., and of the Danrosch Institute of Musical Art, New York City, as a member of the class of 1921, where she is continuing her musical studies under the direction of Doctor Goetschius at the time of this writing, in 1922. Raymond S., who was born December 26, 1900, graduated from the college with which his father is connected at the present time, and later received from the West Virginia Wesleyan College the degree of Bachelor of Arts, he being now principal of the high school at Williamsburg, Greenbrier County, West Virginia. Stanley W., who was born June 16, 1902, graduated from the Buckhannon High School and is a member of the class of 1924 in Columbia University, New York City.

MICHAEL SEIBERT BUTLER, M. D. Nearly half a century of work as a physician constitutes a distinction such as few men can attain. In the case of Dr. Butler that work has been performed, except for the first few years, in the one community of Hedgesville in Berkeley County. His individual career deserves special mention, and it is noteworthy that his family record includes some of the oldest and best known names in the Eastern Panhandle, including Myers, Seibert, Henshaw, Anderson, Snodgrass and others.

Doctor Butler was born on the Michael Seibert homestead farm in Hedgesville district. His father, Thomas Butler, was born at Bunker Hill, Berkeley County, in 1823. The grandfather was probably a native of Pennsylvania, and as a young man came to Berkeley County and settled at Bunker Hill, where he followed his trade as a cooper. He married in Bunker Hill, and he and his wife spent their lives there. Thomas Butler learned the tailor's trade, and for several years was engaged in business as a merchant tailor at Martinsburg and Duffields. On account of failing health he removed to the Michael Seibert homestead farm, and died there at the early age of twenty-seven. He married Catherine Seibert, who was born in Hedgesville district, October 19, 1831. Her father, Michael Seibert, was born in Maryland in 1791, a son of John Jacob and Elizabeth (Bodarf) Seibert, and grandson of Wendell Seibert. This branch of the Seibert family came to Virginia about 1805. Michael Seibert bought land about a mile southeast of Hedgesville. The only improvements on the land were a log house and barn and a few acres cleared. Before the days of railroads in order to get his crops to market he transported them with wagon and team to Baltimore, spending a week on the road. He continued working the farm until his death, at the age of sixty-three. Michael Seibert married Catherine Myers, who was born near the present site of Berkeley Station, daughter of John and Mary (Kaufman) Myers, who were life-long residents of Berkeley County.

James J. Deck.

Mrs. Catherine Butler is now past ninety years of age, and lives with her son, Doctor Butler and is in full possession of all her mental faculties. Her only daughter died in infancy.

Michael Seibert Butler, the only son of his parents, acquired his early education in the local schools, and as a youth began the study of medicine with Dr. George Hamilton at Martinsburg, and later with Doctor Johnson at Hedgesville. He finished his medical education in the University of Maryland, where he graduated in 1874. For the first three years he practiced in the Bunker Hill community, and since then his professional skill and his kindly personal service has been at the disposal of the people of Hedgesville. Doctor Butler is a member of the Eastern Panhandle Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

At the age of twenty-two he married Lillie S. Henshaw, who was born on a farm one mile from Bunker Hill, in Berkeley County. Her father was Levy Henshaw, Jr., born on the same farm. The Henshaws are an old English family. There is record of a William Henshaw who was killed at the storming of Liverpool on June 20, 1644. He left a large estate. His two sons were Joshua and Daniel. In 1651 the widow died, and in 1653 the executor of the estate made a pretense of sending the boys to London, but instead shipped them to New England and put them under the care of Rev. Richard Mather at Dorchester, now a part of the City of Boston. They were reared and educated there, where Daniel died. The sons of Joshua, John and Nicholas, removed to Philadelphia. A son of Nicholas was Capt. William Henshaw, who was born March 16, 1736, and was one of the earliest pioneers of Berkeley County, purchasing a tract of land from Lord Fairfax, located on Mill Creek. He built his home on land about one mile west of the present site of Bunker Hill. He erected a grist mill and sawmill, which were among the first such institutions in Berkeley County. He was a man of great enterprise, acquired extensive and valuable holdings of land, and extended his investment to distant parts, having about 2,000 acres in Shelby County, Kentucky, and a large tract along the Kanawha River in West Virginia. He was a soldier in the Indian war and was at the battle of Point Pleasant in 1774, and was also present at the signing of the peace treaty with the Indians at Camp Charlotte at Chillicothe, Ohio. Many of the details of this frontiersman's life are preserved in the pioneer history. He was an active influence in securing the formation of Berkeley County in 1772, served as bondsman for Gen. Adam Stephen, was the first sheriff of Berkeley County and was a member of Col. Hugh Stephenson's Regiment. The body of this old pioneer rests in Christ Churchyard at Bunker Hill. He was a justice of the peace, and was one of the first board of trustees of Gerrardstown. Capt. William Henshaw married Agnes Anderson. Her father, William Anderson, was a native of Scotland, where he espoused the cause of Prince James and after the failure of that revolution fled to England and in 1715 came to America and was an early settler on the South Branch of the Potomac in Hampshire County, in the locality subsequently known as Anderson's Bottoms. He and his son Thomas joined Braddock's forces at Cumberland and during the western campaign. He always wore the Scotch dress. William Anderson died in 1797, at the age of 104 years.

Levi Henshaw, Sr., son of Capt. William and grandfather of Mrs. Butler, was born July 22, 1769, was a farmer and a miller and for many years operated a merchant and custom mill, shipping his flour to Harpers Ferry with wagons and teams. He was prominent in public affairs, serving as justice of the peace, and was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates in 1821-22, 1830-31, and in 1840 was sheriff of Berkeley County. He spent his last days on his farm. He married Ann McConnell, who was born September 18, 1773. Her father, William McConnell, served on Berkeley County's first grand jury.

Levi Henshaw, Jr., father of Mrs. Butler, inherited part of the old estate, and continued the operation of the mill and farm until 1868, when he removed to Hedgesville. He bought the Tomahawk Mill and also a farm, and managed both properties, though keeping his residence in Hedgesville, where he died at the age of eighty-two. He married Sarah Ann Snodgrass, who was born at Tomahawk in Berkeley County, daughter of Robert and Sarah Ann Snodgrass. Robert Snodgrass was a son of William and Catherine (Patterson) Snodgrass and grandson of William Snodgrass, who came from Scotland to America about 1700. William Snodgrass was a pioneer of Berkeley County, locating on Back Creek. Robert Snodgrass, who was born October 14, 1744, married, March 23, 1762, Susanne Rawlings, who was born December 26, 1742, and died November 2, 1820. Her son Robert was born September 21, 1792, and on March 29, 1821, married his cousin, Sarah Ann Snodgrass. This Robert Snodgrass commanded the sixty-seventh regiment of Virginia Militia and was a representative in the Virginia House of Delegates in 1832-34-36-39. The mother of Mrs. Butler died at the age of seventy-two, having reared seven children.

Doctor and Mrs. Butler had three children, named Charles Claude, Catherine and Edna. Charles Claude, who was educated in the public schools of Hedgesville, subsequently removed to Rockland, Massachusetts, where he was in the leather business with the firm of French, Shriner & Uner. He married in New York City in 1900 Florence Dalzell, and she and two sons survive him. Her sons are Charles Claude and James Dalzell. The older of these, Charles Claude, was a student for two years in the University of West Virginia and late in George Washington University at Washington, D. C. James Dalzell is now in his fourth year at West Virginia University.

Catherine, the older daughter of Doctor Butler, is the wife of Charles Frederick Koppisch, and they now live at New Rochelle, New York. They have four children, named Catherine Butler, Charles Frederick, Louise Henshaw and Charles Claude.

Edna Butler married George A. Smith, and they also live at New Rochelle, New York. They have a daughter, named Edna.

HERBERT H. WITHERS, who is conducting a prosperous livery business at Glenview, judicial center of Gilmer County, is a scion of a family that was founded in Virginia in the Colonial period of our national history. Alexander S. Withers, grandfather of Herbert H., was born in Virginia on the 12th of October, 1792, and became a man of fine intellectual and professional attainments, he having attended historic old William and Mary College in Virginia and having prepared himself for and been admitted to the bar. He did not long continue in the practice of law, but became a pioneer settler at Bridgeport, in what is now Harrison County, West Virginia, where his character and ability made him a citizen of prominence and influence and where he did much to advance civic and industrial development.

Herbert H. Withers was born at Weston, Lewis County, West Virginia, on the 19th of June, 1867, and is a son of Henry and Dorcas D. (Lawrence) Withers, the latter having been a daughter of Jacob and Melinda (Fisher) Lawrence. Henry Withers was reared to manhood in what is now West Virginia, received the advantages of the common schools of the period, and he was a young man when he tendered his services in defense of the Union at the inception of the Civil war. He became a member of the Tenth West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, was made major of the same, and continued as an efficient and popular commanding officer until the close of the war. With the same spirit of loyalty he then set himself to winning the victories of peace. He settled on Pink Creek in Lewis County, and became the owner of a large landed estate in that locality. Finally he sold this property and purchased another farm tract, on Cove Creek in the same county, and later he was elected sheriff of Lewis County, an office of which he was the incumbent at the time of his death. He was a democrat and was affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, his wife, who survived him by several years, having been an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Of the nine children only three are now living, and of the number the subject of this sketch is the youngest; John S. is actively identified with the banking business at Buckhannon, Upshur County; and Miss Emma resides at Weston, Lewis County.

Herbert H. Withers profited by the advantages of the public schools and thereafter attended the State Normal School at Glenville. He was identified actively with farm enterprise in Gilmer County for a number of years and also with the general merchandise business. He is now one of the substantial citizens of Glenville, where he conducts a well equipped livery. He is unwavering in his allegiance to the democratic party, and he attends and supports the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which his wife is an active member.

On Christmas day of the year 1894 Mr. Withers was united in marriage with Miss Estella Whiting, who had been a popular teacher in the public schools and who had attended the State Normal School at Glenville. Mr. and Mrs. Withers have two sons: Dr. Herbert F., a graduate of the State Normal School at Glenville and of the Ohio Dental College, is now engaged in the practice of dentistry at Normal School at Glenville, and he remains at the parental Glenville; Everett W. likewise is a graduate of the State home.

WILLIAM C. BOBBITT, whose permanent residence is in the City of Richwood, Nicholas County, has made a specially admirable record in connection with educational affairs in his native state and has done much to raise the standards of the various schools with which he has been identified in a pedagogic and executive way.

Mr. Bobbitt was born in Nicholas County, this state, September 15, 1886, and is a son of A. W. and Zerilda L. (Huff) Bobbitt, both likewise natives of that county, where the former was born December 3, 1853, and the latter, January 11, 1865. As a young man the father was a successful teacher in the schools of his native county, and after his marriage he settled on the old homestead farm of his grandfather, Rufus Bobbitt, who was one of the pioneer settlers in Nicholas County, the family having been founded in Virginia in the Colonial period of our national history. Rufus Bobbitt became the owner of a large landed estate in Nicholas County, reclaimed and improved much of the same and was prominently identified with the early development and progress of the county. A. W. Bobbitt has well upheld the honors of the family name and has been a prominent figure in industrial enterprise and civic advancement in his native county. He is the owner of a fine farm property in Nicholas County and is president of the Lanes Bottom Bank in that county, his son, William C., of this review, being a director of this institution. Of their family of eight children six are living: William C. is the immediate subject of this review; Luster, who completed her education by attending Rawlings Institute, is the wife of W. D. Rollison; Mary, a graduate of the Cowen High School, is the wife of William Rogers, of Clarksburg; Elmer is engaged in the brokerage business in the City of Charleston; Mabel, who is a successful teacher, graduated from the Cowen High School, and thereafter attended the normal training school at Sutton, the State Normal School at Fairmont, and the University of West Virginia; Lillian graduated from the State Normal School at Fairmont, later continued her studies in the State University, and she is now the wife of Harold Smith, of Fairmont.

William C. Bobbitt was reared on the home farm, was graduated in the Cowen High School, attended the Summersville Normal School, and later graduated from the West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Later he did effective post-graduate work in the University of West Virginia and the great University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor. His initial service as a teacher was in the rural schools of his native county, he was principal of the public schools at Cowen one year, later was principal of the schools at Webster Springs, district supervisor of Glade District, Webster County; principal of the Richwood High School, superintendent of the schools at Flatwoods, Braxton County; and principal of the Clay County High School at Clay, of which position he is the present incumbent.

Mr. Bobbitt is the owner of a fine stock farm in Nicholas County, where he is giving special attention to the raising of the best types of Hampshire sheep, Southdown and Duroc-Jersey hogs and good grades of cattle and horses.

Mr. Bobbitt is loyally aligned in the ranks of the democratic party, is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Cowen in which latter he is a past noble grand, and he is a member of the Baptist Church, while his wife holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Mrs. Bobbitt, whose maiden name was Alta Hatton, was graduated in the West Virginia Wesleyan College, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and is a teacher in the Clay County High School, of which her husband is principal.

JAMES W. PRICE, M. D. One of the old and distinguished families of West Virginia bears the name of Price. The etymology of the name goes back to Wales, the family's native country, where "ap" designates a son, and "reese" means strong or stout, the combination indicating a sturdy stock.

The earliest known Price ancestor in the United States was one Ap Price, who is recorded as having served the American colonies in the Revolutionary war, and his ancestor served in the battle of Bosworth Field in 1485, and is referred to in Shakespeare's drama King Richard III. One of the earliest bearers of the name in Virginia was one Samuel Price, a native of Wales, who settled near New Hope in Augusta County, and was the father of a family of sons. One of these, Samuel, settled in Greenbrier County; another, Jacob, lived on the Big Levels, and he had a son, also Jacob, who was a veteran of the War of 1812.

The Pocahontas County Prices are directly descended from Thomas Price, who came from North Carolina to what is now West Virginia, settling in Greenbrier County, where he was a farmer and also kept a hotel at Fincastle. His ashes rest at the base of the Seven Mile Mountain. Although not a graduate of medical school, he appears to have possessed extended knowledge of medical science and surgery for his time, and became widely known through voluminous writings. One of his books that was published in 1790, now a rare volume, is owned by his great-grandson, Dr. James W. Price, a prominent physician and surgeon of Marlinton, West Virginia.

Thomas Price was twice married. One son, John William Price, was born to his first marriage, and he served as a ship's surgeon during the second war with Great Britain. Thomas Price's second wife was Margaret, the eldest daughter of John Beard, and they had four children, the eldest of these being James Atlee Price. He was a farmer and stock-raiser, was an uncompromising whig and persistent voter for Henry Clay, was bitterly opposed to the Mexican war and was a man of wide importance. He married Margaret Davies Poage, one branch of whose family originated in Londonderry, in the North of Ireland. James Atlee Price and his wife both died in 1874. The late William T. Price, D. D., was the eldest born of their thirteen children, of which family but one, the youngest, survives in the person of Mrs. Mary McLaughlin, who lives in the old family home, "Maxwellton." A collateral member of the family is found in Dr. H. L. Beard, of Lewisburg.

The late William T. Price was one of the notable men of his time, distinguishing himself in more than one field of effort. He was born at Marlinton, then in Virginia, July 19, 1830, and his death occurred in the town of his birth on January 19, 1921, at the age of ninety years. The eldest of a large family, he had a favorable environment in his youth, a happy, healthful boyhood on the home farm and afterward educational advantages that well prepared him for the duties and compensations that pertained to the noble activities that engaged him through a long and busy life. He was early graduated from Washington College, Lexington, Virginia, where the degrees of A. M. and A. B. were conferred on him, and later, when this hoary institution became Washington and Lee University, he received the degree of D. D. For three years he was a student in the Union Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated in 1851. Practically his entire life was passed in the Presbyterian ministry, his work being mainly in Virginia nd West Virginia, with a short interval in Arkansas, and on numerous occasions he was called upon to serve as moderator of important synods. For over a score of years Doctor Price rode back and forth over the country on horseback, and he and his steed, "Prince," were familiar figures over a wide range. He developed the church field as the pioneer and practically alone that at the time of his death required the services of fifteen Presbyterian ministers to cover. Following his services in the war between the states he devoted himself as long as physical strength permitted to ministerial work, and his missionary efforts among the mountaineers of West Virginia brought forth influences that will ever bear fruit. He served as chaplain in Pickett's division of the Confederate army and was a close friend of Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson. As a member of the Thirty-first Virginia Regiment he was engaged in the first campaign of the war in the advance on Grafton, and he buried the first Confederate soldier killed in that conflict. When he war closed, although still chaplain but with the rank of captain, having twice declined staff positions under two Confederate generals, he had been commissioned to raise a regiment, but the coming of peace made this organization unnecessary.

Joseph N. Colburn

In 1865 Reverend Price married Miss Anna L. Randolph, who survives. She is a descendant of the famous Virginia Randolphs and a lineal descendant of Pocahontas. Aside from every other distinction Mrs. Price is a poetess, and her volume of verse, published in 1921, entitled "The Old Church and Other Poems," has attracted wide and favorable comment. Seven children were born to Dr. William T. Price and his wife: William R., who died at the age of four years; James W.; Andrew G., who is a prominent member of the Marlinton bar; Susan A., who is a practicing physician of Williamsburg, Virginia; Norman R. and Calvin W., both of whom are prominent in Pocahontas County; and Anna V., who is the wife of Frank Hunter, of Marlinton.

Norman R. Price, who is a leading medical practitioner at Marlinton, was born December 5, 1874. He graduated in 1903 from Maryland Medical College, Baltimore, and has been engaged in medical practice in his native city ever since. During the World war he was a surgeon, with the rank of captain, in the Tenth United States Infantry. He married in 1906 Miss Jean Kinsey, of Mingo County, West Virginia, and they have two children: Norman and Jean.

Calvin W. Price, who is the owner and publisher of the Pocahontas Times, was born November 22, 1880. At the age of fifteen years he started to learn the printing business and is still in the same line. Originally his two brothers were associated with him in the publication of the Times, but he is now sole proprietor. In politics he is a democrat, and is a deacon in the Presbyterian Church. During the World war he was one of the "Four-Minute" speakers, and was otherwise active in furthering the aims of the Government. In 1906 he married Miss Mabel Milligan, of Marlinton, and they have had five children: Elizabeth, Florence Randolph, Calvin Thomas, Ann Lockridge and Jane Stobo. All surviving except Calvin Thomas, who died at the age of eight years.

James W. Price was born at Monterey, Virginia, November 21, 1868, but was reared at Marlinton, West Virginia, and was primarily educated by his parents. When he had determined on his future career he entered Baltimore Medical College, now the medical department of the University of Maryland, from which he was graduated in 1891, after which for a time he was resident physician of the Maryland General Hospital and attended some post-graduate lectures at Johns Hopkins. Doctor Price has always maintained his home at Marlinton. He has been quite active in the political field as a republican, the only member of his family of this political faith, and in 1904 was elected a member of the State Legislature. He was the author of several important bills, and one of these, a state dispensary bill for the control of liquor, created wide discussion.

In 1894 Doctor Price married Miss Lura A. Sharp, of Gray, West Virginia, and they have two children: William L. and Julia L. Doctor Price and his family are Presbyterians, and he belongs to the Masonic fraternity. During the World war his attitude was that of a loyal and patriotic citizen. He was a member of the Volunteer Medical Corps, and was chairman of the County Board of National Defense. During the latter years of his life the father of Doctor Price took great pride in preparing a history of Pocahontas County, which was published by his sons, and which will, as years go by, prove incalculable worth to historians. Another of his published works, entitled "On to Grafton," a reproduction of his diary, is a valuable contribution to historical data.

JOSEPH NATHANIEL COLTRANE has been a resident of Lumberport over twenty years. He came into this community soon after arriving in the state, a comparatively obscure young man without capital or influential friends. There followed some years of struggle, when he made little or no progress in the tide of affairs. Persistence and industry had their due reward, and for some years past his place has been that of one of the most substantial business men in Harrison County.

Mr. Coltrane is a native of North Carolina and was born on a farm near Ashboro in Randolph County September 22, 1870, son of James A. and Flora A. (Hendley) Coltrane, natives of the same county. The Coltranes are a very old and numerous family of North Carolina, and the original stock was Quakers and many of the present generation cling to the same faith. James A. Coltrane was a farmer. The mother is still living, as are also her ten children, five sons and five daughters.

Joseph Nathaniel Coltrane spent his early life on the farm in North Carolina, attended country schools, and subsequently for two years was a student in Guilford College, a noted Quaker School of North Carolina. He worked to pay his expenses while in college, but after two years ran short of funds and did not realize his ambition to complete a college career. After leaving school he sold nursery stock, and came to West Virginia to sell a patent gate and wire fencing to farmers.

Mr. Coltrane came to this state in 1893. Subsequently, while at Lumberport, he met and in 1901 married Miss Anna Laura Mathews, then a student in the Fairmont State Normal School. She died, leaving a son, E. Glenn. Later Mr. Coltrane married Miss Allie Storkey. They have eight children, named Flora A., Johnnie Nelson, Nathan, Anna, Ruth, Nelson, Mary and Josephine.

The first turn in his affairs as a struggling business man came when after several failures, he brought in a group of paying gas wells. As a gas producer he has enjoyed exceptional success, and his judgment on all matters connected with gas production in this section of West Virginia is regarded as authoritative. In the course of years Mr. Coltrane has accumulated a number of important business interests. He is a contracting teamster, owning an outfit of wagons and horses. He has mercantile and real estate interests, and he owns and manages the Lumberport Hotel. He is a director and officer in several corporations, being a director in the Lumberport Bank, president of the Shinnston Gas Company, director in the Mound City Gas Company at Lumberport, the Ten Mile Oil and Gas Company, the Hedges Land Company and the Lumberport Land Company. Mr. Coltrane is a republican, and fraternally is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

WILLIAM H. H. GARDNER assumed the office of postmaster in the fine little Ohio River City of Point Pleasant, Mason County, on the 1st of January, 1922, and is giving an administration that fully justified his selection for this position. The postoffice building is a modern and well equipped structure that was erected in 1914, at a cost of $10,000, and the office is now one of the second class, with six office employees and with service to two rural free-delivery routes. In this Federal building are also the offices of the Government steamboat inspectors at this port.

Mr. Gardner was born at Pleasant Flats, Mason County, on the 27th of September, 1866, and is a son of the late George P. and Jane (McMaster) Gardner. The father was born in Mason County, in 1840, and was a son of George Gardner, who was an old-time pilot on the Ohio River, his service having extended from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to Cairo, Illinois, and his home in the meanwhile having been maintained on his farm in Mason County, where he died at the age of sixty years. George P. Gardner died at the age of seventy-two years, as did also his wife. She was born in Ireland and was a child at the time of the family immigration to the United States. Her father, John McMaster, became identified with coal mining in West Virginia. George P. Gardner became one of the successful and representative farmers of Mason County and was an honored and influential citizen. In the '80s he served two terms as county assessor, and thereafter he served one term as sheriff of the county. He finally purchased the plant and business of the Enterprise Marine Dock Company at Point Pleasant, and there developed an extensive business in the manufacturing and repairing of steamboats.

The present postmaster of Point Pleasant is indebted to the schools of Mason County for his early education, which was supplemented by his attending the University of West Virginia two terms and by continuing his studies in the University of Kentucky, at Lexington, in which he was graduated in 1887. Thereafter he served as deputy sheriff under his father, and later he was elected treasurer and general manager of the Point Pleasant Water & Light Company, a dual office of which he continued the incumbent seventeen years. Upon the death of his father he became treasurer and general manager of the Enterprise Marine Dock Company, and to the business of this corporation he gave his close supervision until his appointment to the office of postmaster, when his brother, Capt. S. G. Gardner, assumed the management of the dock company. He made no personal campaign for the office of postmaster, and his selection for the position was in consonance with the expressed wishes of the citizens of the community. Mr. Gardner is a director of the Point Pleasant Building & Loan Association, is influential in the local councils and campaign activities of the republican party, and is liberal and progressive as a citizen. He is prominently affiliated with the Lodge and Encampment bodies of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, was for twenty-seven years treasurer of Point Pleasant Lodge No. 33, and is treasurer of Fidelity Encampment No. 57. He finds his principal diversion in fishing trips on the Greenbrier River, and has marked prowess in fly-casting.

Mr. Gardner married Miss Fannie Long, who was born and reared in the Pleasant Flats section of Mason County, where her father, Morgan Long, was a successful agriculturist and stock-grower. He was drowned by falling from the deck of the steamer Bonanza in November, 1894, at Cincinnati, Ohio, while on a trip with a load of live stock. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner have one son, George L., who is now in the employ of the Standard Oil Company in the City of Charleston.

OSCAR L. HALL has won for himself secure vantage-places as one of the representative members of the bar of Clay County, and is established in the successful practice of his profession at Clay, the county seat. He was born in Braxton County, this state, April 13, 1883, and is a son of Henry Y. and Edna (McMorrow) Hall, the former of whom was born in Clay County, in 1845, and the latter in Braxton County, in 1849. After their marriage the parents established themselves on a farm in Braxton County, and on this old homestead they still reside, venerable and honored citizens of the county, both being most zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to the clergymen of which their pleasant home has ever extended cordial welcome and entertainment. E. B., eldest of the children, is a progressive and successful farmer in Braxton County; Ella is the wife of J. Lee Fox, a prosperous farmer near Sutton, that county; O. W. is a substantial agriculturist and cattle grower in Braxton County; W. C. is a popular teacher in the city schools of Charleston; Oscar L., of this review, was the next in order of birth; Percy, a graduate of the law department of the University of West Virginia, is now general counsel for the Ohio Fuel Oil Company for the State of Texas, with residence and headquarters in the City of Dallas, Texas; and May is the wife of P. M. Ramsey, a representative farmer in Braxton County.

Reared on the home farm and afforded the advantage of the public schools of his native county, Oscar L. Hall thereafter made a record of excellent service as a teacher in the rural schools, his pedagogic service having continued three years. He pursued higher academic studies in the University of West Virginia, and in the law department of this institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1907. Thereafter he was established in practice at Sutton, judicial center of his native county, until 1912, when he went to the City of Charleston and became connected with the legal department of the Ohio Fuel Oil Company. In 1914 he engaged in the active general practice of his profession at Clay, and he has here continued as one of the leading members of the Clay County bar. In 1916 he was elected prosecuting attorney of the county, an office of which he continued the incumbent until January, 1921, and in which he made a most excellent record, his being specially high standing as a trial lawyer of versatility and resourcefulness.

Mr. Hall is a stalwart advocate of the principles of the republican party, and as owner and publisher of the Clay Messenger, a weekly paper, he has been able to render effective service in promotion of the party cause. He is president of the Elksplint Coal Company and a stockholder in other industrial and business corporations. In the Masonic fraternity his affiliations are with Sutton Lodge No. 21, A. F. and A. M.; Sutton Chapter No. 29, R. A. M.; Sutton Commandery No. 16, Knights Templars; and Benj. Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine, in the City of Charleston.

In December, 1910, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Hall and Miss Fannie E. Lorentz, who had been a popular teacher in the Sutton High School, she having graduated in the same, and also in Morris Harvey College, from which she received the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Mr. and Mrs. Hall have two children: Jean E., born March 1, 1912; and Ann Lorentz, born May 3, 1917.

OLIVER E. REED is one of the popular young native sons of Clay County, and resides at its judicial center, where he is giving effective service as deputy county clerk. On his father's farm in this county Mr. Reed was born April 2, 1897, a son of Levi J. and Martha E. (Walker) Reed, the former of whom was born in Calhoun County, this state, February 22, 1863, and the latter of whom was born in Clay County, in 1868, her death having here occurred in 1903. The father still resides upon the homestead farm on which he and his wife established themselves within a short time after their marriage, and he is one of the substantial and honored citizens of Clay County. Of their five children three survive the mother, and of the number the subject of this review is the youngest, he having been but six years of age at the time of his mother's death; William C. is a resident of the State of Iowa, where he is telegraph operator and train dispatcher in the service of the Illinois Central Railroad; and Frederick W., who graduated from Marshall College and also from the University of West Virginia, is, in 1922, a student in the Western Reserve Medical College at Cleveland, Ohio. For his second wife the father married Adora Steorts, and the children of this union are four in number: Nina, Luther, Earl and Helen.

Reared on the home farm and afforded the advantages of the public schools, including the high school at Clay, Oliver E. Reed thereafter completed a commercial course in the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg. For two years thereafter he was identified with the general merchandise business in the Village of Precious, Clay County, and on the 1st of January, 1921, he assumed his present official position, that of deputy county clerk. He is a republican, is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America, he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a stockholder in the Elk Electric Light & Power Company at Clay.

In 1917 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Reed and iss Ella Strickland, and they have three children: Eunene, Garnett and Warren E., a merry trio of boys who add vitality and joy to the attractive home circle.

W. C. Chilton

PHILIP S. YOUNG was elected sheriff of Clay County in November, 1920, is giving a most effective administration and is one of the popular citizens of his native county and a judicial center, the Village of Clay, where he maintains a residence and official headquarters.

Mr. Young was born on his father's farm in this county, November 4, 1873, and is a son of Samuel E. and Helen L. (Hart) Young, the former of whom was born in Kanawha County, in 1828, when West Virginia as now constituted was still on the pioneer western frontier of Virginia. The mother of Sheriff Young was born at Charleston, his state, in 1832. After their marriage the parents resided fifteen years on a farm in Kanawha County, and then came to Clay County, where the father developed a good farm and where he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives, secure in the respect and esteem of all who knew them and both earnest members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Samuel E. Young became a loyal supporter of the principles of the republican party, was influential in its local councils and served for a long term of years as a member of the County Court of Clay County. He was actively affiliated with the Masonic fraternity. Of the family of ten children five are living at the time of this writing, in 1922: Mary is the wife of William Snyder; James is a substantial farmer in Clay County; Herbert M., who served twelve years as clerk of the Circuit Court for Clay County, is now engaged in the real estate business in the State of Arizona; Anna is the wife of W. D. Samples; and Philip S., of this review, is the youngest of the number. The father was a loyal and gallant soldier of the Union during virtually the entire period of the Civil war, and he manifested in later years his continued interest in his old comrades by maintaining affiliation with the Grand Army of the Republic.

Philip S. Young early began to assist in the work of the home farm, and while he thus waxed strong in physical powers he also profited by the advantages offered in the local schools. He has always continued his alliance with the basic industry of farming, and the aggregate area of his two well improved farms in Clay County is 500 acres, the value of these properties being enhanced by the gas wells that have been there sunk and are producing. Mr. Young is a stalwart in the local camp of the republican party, has been a zealous worker in its behalf, and on its ticket he was elected county sheriff in the autumn of 1920. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Young is a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Shrine. He and his brothers are affiliated with Clay County Lodge No. 97, Ancient Free & Accepted Masons, of which their father was an active member for many years prior to his death.

The year 1900 recorded the marriage of Mr. Young and Miss Mary Smith, and of their fine family of ten children all are living except one, there having been four sons and six daughters.

HON. WILLIAM EDWIN CHILTON. While his distinguished public service was in the United States Senate, where he was one of the most resourceful members who formulated and shaped the laws and policies of the Government during the first term of the Wilson administration, William C. Chilton in his home state has for forty years been a remarkably successful lawyer, and in and out of his profession has been a leader in West Virginia affairs.

He was born March 17, 1858, at the place then known as Colesmouth, now Saint Albans, in Kanawha County. The Chiltons were a well known family in old Virginia. His grandfather, Blackwell Chilton, was a planter in Westmoreland County, and about 1830 came from Fauquier County to West Virginia. He had been a boat owner on the Potomac River, and in Kanawha County he was a farmer and merchant. He died at the age of eighty-nine. William E. Chilton, Sr., father of former Senator Chilton, was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, and was a child when brought to West Virginia. He served as a captain in the State Militia, and for many years was a merchant at Clendenin, Kanawha County, and was twice democratic nominee for the office of sheriff. He died in 1881, at the age of fifty-six. His wife was Mary Elizabeth Wilson, a native of Kanawha County, who died in 1918, at the age of eighty-seven. Her father, Samuel Wilson, was brought as a child from Kentucky by his father, James Wilson, who was a native of County Tipperary, Ireland. Samuel Wilson was a tobacco manufacturer and also a manufacturer of staves and lumber and a merchant at Saint Albans, where he died at the age of eighty-eight.

William Edwin Chilton secured his early education in public and private schools and under private tutors, one of whom was H. B. Mickey, whose chief enthusiasm was Latin and Byron, still another instructor of his youth was W. R. Jones, still living. He attended the Baptist school known as Sheldon College at Saint Albans, whose proprietor was Peter B. Reynolds. One of his fellow students at the same time was George B. Foster. Senator Chilton had experience as a teacher, and for a time was principal of Saint Albans School. He was admitted to the bar and began his law practice at Charleston in 1890. He was admitted to the Supreme Court of the United States in 1891, and for thirty years has handled a large volume of business in the Federal Courts.

Mr. Chilton has steadily espoused the cause of the democratic party, and for many years worked for the success of the party and its candidates without thought of any reward for himself. Being in a locality where the party was in the minority, he accepted nominations for the good of the cause rather than through hope of election. In 1883 he was appointed prosecuting attorney of Kanawha County for an unexpired term. He was the democratic nominee for the same office in 1884, and was also nominated for the State Senate in 1886. In 1892 he was chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee, and he served a term as secretary of state of West Virginia from 1893 to 1897. In the early years of his practice he was a partner of John E. Kenna, and was active in the campaign that elected Mr. Kenna to the United States Senate, in which he served ten years beginning in 1883.

The State Legislature was democratic in 1910, and Mr. Chilton became a candidate before that body for the United States Senate. He was elected for the long term, from 1911 to 1917. In 1916 he was a candidate before the people for re-election. When Mr. Chilton entered the Senate, March 4, 1911, the republicans were still in the majority. He was placed on the judiciary committee and the printing committee, and after the democrats secured the majority he was made chairman of the census committee and later became chairman of the printing committee, one of the most important in the Senate. It is possible to review only some of the outstanding features of his work in the Senate. The Democratic Caucus and Judiciary Committee put him in entire charge of the matter of confirming Judge Brandeis' appointment to the Supreme Court. He was chairman of the subcommittee that took evidence, and he wrote the majority report and made the fight that after many weeks of delay and obstruction resulted in the confirmation. LaFollette was the only republican to vote for the confirmation of Justice Brandeis. The evidence on this subject made two large volumes. Owing to the illness of Senator Culbertson of Texas, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator Chilton was named to take charge of the Clayton Bill on the floor of the Senate. This bill, now a law, dealt with the interlocking directorates and other subjects in the field of interstate commerce, and the relations of capital and labor. He had charge of that bill while it was in conference, where he was active in the debate, and some of the sections of the bill were written by Senator Chilton. He was one of the Senate members who used their influence to carry out Wilson's policy for the repeal of the free canal tolls.

It was Senator Chilton, who discovered by digging through the records, that when in 1784 Virginia conveyed the Northwest Territory to the General Government of the colonies it did not deed it outright, but in trust, and that all the subsequent dealings of the Government disregarded the spirit of the words "in trust," and that all the revenues from the sale of the land in the Northwest Territory had been applied to the Federal Treasury and without any benefit to Virginia. West Virginia as an original part of the old State of Virginia was competent to sue in the Federal Court to share in the recovery of any moneys that might be recovered on this account. Senator Chilton was author of the bill authorizing West Virginia to sue for this purpose. His proposal met a great deal of ridicule, and among others Senator Cummings called his bill the "coldest trail and the longest line to the United States Treasury he ever heard of." Yet Cummings after studying carefully the document Senator Chilton had prepared and the latter's argument became a supporter of the bill. Similar ridicule was encountered from Senators Gallinger and Lodge, and they too became converted and the bill passed the Senate, but failed in the House through the congestion of business that piled up at the close of the session.

Senator Chilton has been chairman of several state conventions, including the Wheeling convention of 1920. He is chairman for West Virginia of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation. For twenty years he has been interested in oil development in West Virginia and more recently in Kentucky, and also in the development of the coal lands over the state. For eighteen years he has been owner of the Charleston Gazette, now the paper with the largest circulation in West Virginia. He was appointed a colonel in the National Guard of West Virginia in 1897. Senator Chilton is affiliated with the Masonic Order, the Elks, Modern Woodmen of America, Knights of Pythias and the Moose.

On December 19, 1892, he married Mary Louise Tarr, of Wellsburg, West Virginia, daughter of Campbell Tarr, who was the first treasurer of the State of West Virginia. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Chilton are four in number. William E., Jr., is president of the Daily Gazette Company of Charleston, is married and has a son, William E. Chilton, third. Joseph Eustace is completing his education abroad, in the University of Paris, where he is making a special study of French literature and institutions. The older daughter, Eleanor Carroll, graduated in 1922 from Smith College at Northampton, Massachusetts, and while in college distinguished herself as a playwright, being the author of several dramatic compositions that have won favor. The youngest child, Elizabeth Leigh, is the wife of Girard Rice Lowrey, of Essex, New York, and they have a son, Girard Rice, Jr.

ROBERT E. SLACK is bringing to bear the personal characteristics and the executive and scholastic ability which make for ideal administration of the affairs of the important office of which he is the incumbent, that of superintendent of the public schools of Clay County, his residence and official headquarters being at Clay, the county seat.

Mr. Slack was born in Kanawha County, this state, December 5, 1885, and is a son of William H. and Martha J. (Huffman) Slack, both likewise natives of Kanawha County, where they were reared and educated and where their marriage was solemnized. The parents continued their residence on their farm in Kanawha County until 1898, when they sold their property there and removed to Clay County, where they still reside on their well improved farm of 125 acres, not far distant from Servia, which is in the adjoining County of Braxton. They are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and in politics the father is a loyal supporter of the principles of the republican party. Of their nine children seven are living: Lillie is the wife of Mr. Hardway; Robert E., of this sketch, was next in order of birth; George E. continues as a successful farmer in Kanawha County, where he is also a popular teacher in the rural schools; Henry C., who is associated in the work and management of the parental home farm, was in the nation's military service in connection with the World war, his service having been principally at Camp Lee, Virginia; James H., a farmer and teacher in Clay County, married Miss Mary Rollyson; and Charles W. and Lewis C. are younger members of the parental home circle.

A vitalizing environment and discipline was that which the home farm gave to Robert E. Slack in his childhood and early youth, and after profiting by the instruction offered in the public schools he attended the West Virginia State Normal School at Glenville. He made a record of nine years of earnest and effective service as a teacher in the public schools, and in 1918 he was elected to his present office, that of superintendent of the public schools of Clay County, his able and progressive administration having done much to raise the standard of the schools under his jurisdiction, and his professional enthusiasm gaining to him the ready co-operation of the teachers and the people of the county in general. He is aligned staunchly in the ranks of the republican party, is affiliated with Henry Clay Lodge No. 233, Knights of Pythias, and is a stockholder in the Elk Electric Light & Power Company. Mr. Slack's name remains inscribed on the roll of eligible bachelors in Clay County.

GEORGE W. McCUNE is clerk of the Circuit Court for Clay County, and in his home village of Clay, the judicial center of the county, he is secretary of the board of directors of the Elk Valley Bank, in which he is a stockholder and director, and he is also secretary of the Board of Education of the Henry District, in which Clay is included. He is the owner of a tract of fourteen acres of land just outside the corporate village limits, and on this place is his attractive residence. Mr. McCune is a staunch republican, and has been active in the local councils of the party. He served as deputy circuit clerk of Clay County for six years, and was then elected circuit clerk, of which office he has been the incumbent since January 1, 1920. He is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America, and he and his wife are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

George W. McCune was born in Roane County, West Virginia, March 9, 1876, and is a son of William H. and Mary J. (Reed) McCune, both natives of Kanawha County, where the former was born in 1844 and the latter in 1848. William H. McCune was a soldier of the Union in the Civil war, held the office of orderly sergeant, took part in many engagements and was twice wounded. After the war he continued his activities as a farmer in Roane County until 1877, when he removed with his family to Clay County, where he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives, he having been one of the substantial farmers and highly honored citizens of this county. He was a republican in politics, and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Of their nine children eight are mentioned: Harrison is a prosperous farmer in Clay County; Jane is the wife of Henry Holcomb; Grant is numbered among the progressive farmers of Clay County; George W., of this sketch, was next in order of birth; Nancy is the wife of Henry Keller; Lucy died at the age of eighteen years; Patrick C. is a merchant at Clay; and Benjamin, who now holds a clerical position in the postoffice in the City of Charleston was in service with the American Expeditionary Forces in France in the World war, and took part in much of the terrific conflict that finally won victory for the allies.

George W. McCune was reared on the home farm in Clay County, and that he profited by the advantages afforded in the public schools is attested by the statement that for twenty years he was a successful and popular teacher in the schools of this part of the state, within which period he served as district superintendent of the schools of the Henry District.

Mr. McCune wedded Miss Martha E. Dodd, and to this union have been born nine children: Ada is the wife of Curtis Davis; Howard is employed in the general store of the Elk River Lumber Company; Edith is the wife of John Davis; Alice is the wife of Ervin Moore; and Vernie, Earl C., William, Kathleen and Blanche are the younger members of the parental home circle.

SAMUEL H. McLANE, who is a member of the bar of West Virginia, has been cashier of the Clay County Bank at since 1908, and his professional training and knowledge materially furthered the success of his administration in the affairs of the substantial institution with which he is affiliated.

McLane was born in Barbour County, West Virginia, March 17, 1866, and is a son of Jacob and Mary (Kelley) McLane, both natives of Randolph County, this state, which at that time still an integral part of the old mother of Virginia. Jacob McLane's father was William, and latter was a son of Daniel McLane. The family was settled in Virginia in an early day. The maternal grandparents of the subject of this review were Samuel and Mary (Cade) Kelley. After his marriage Jacob McLane established his residence on a farm two miles north of Hinton, Barbour County, and there he continued for many years as one of the substantial and successful exponents of agricultural and live-stock industry. Upon his removal from his farm he removed to Belington, where he now maintains his home, as one of the venerable and respected citizens of Barbour County. He is a democrat in political allegiance, and is a zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as was also his wife, whose death occurred in 1910. Of their eight children the following still survive the devoted mother, and of the number Daniel H., of this sketch, is the eldest; Hanning F. is a lawyer in the State of Nevada; Charles L. resides at Elkins, West Virginia, and is a railway clerk on the line between Hinton and Grafton; Fleming is a farmer in the State of Ohio; and Edwin P. is a resident of Nevada, so that only two of the number remain in the old home state of West Virginia.

Samuel H. McLane was reared on the old homestead farm in Barbour County, and after leaving the public schools attended and was graduated from the State Normal School at Fairmont, besides which he attended the University of West Virginia one year. He became a successful lawyer in the public schools, and in the meanwhile applied himself diligently to the study of law, his admission to the bar having been recorded in 1904. For the ensuing four years he was in the employ of the Davis Trust Company at Fairmont, and he then, in 1908, assumed his present executive position, that of cashier of the Clay County Bank, in which position he is a director. P. M. Summers is president of the bank, and J. F. Bradley is its vice president, and in addition to the active officers the directorate of the institution includes H. B. Davenport, L. H. Samples, J. F. Wilson, W. S. Wilson and B. C. Eakle.

Mr. McLane is a democrat in politics, is a director of the Clay County High School, is the present (1922) master of the Clay County Lodge No. 97, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, is affiliated also with the Modern Woodmen of America, and his wife is an active member of the Baptist Church at Clay.

Mr. McLane was solemnized the marriage of Mr. McLane and Ella Hutton Poe, who was educated in the West Virginia Wesleyan College, at Buckhannon, and who is a prominent figure in the social and cultural activities of her community. Mr. and Mrs. McLane have one son, Francis W., who was born March 31, 1909, and who is a student in the local high school at the time of this writing, in 1922.

CAPT. FRANCIS W. TURNER was an officer in the American Army during the late war, is a captain in the West Virginia National Guard, and is a prominent young business man of Albans, Kanawha County, where he is engaged in the insurance business with his father.

His father, W. T. Turner, was born at St. Albans, representing a pioneer family of Kanawha County. For a number of years he has carried on a general insurance business at St. Albans, the firm being now Turner & Turner. Francis Turner was born at St. Albans in 1895, son of W. T. and Annie (Wheeler) Turner. He acquired a public school education in St. Albans, and for three years was a student in the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of West Virginia. While at the university he received his military training, and was a member of the Cadet Corps.

Soon after America entered the war with Germany he enlisted, in May, 1917, at Camp Kanawha with the Second West Virginia Infantry. When this organization was mustered into the army it was sent for training to Camp Shelby, Mississippi, and while there Mr. Turner was commissioned a second lieutenant. The Second West Virginia became a part of the Thirty-eighth Division, but on going overseas, however, in September, 1918, Francis Turner went into the Twenty-ninth Division. With this division he was in the fighting in the Argonne Forest. He received his honorable discharge in June, 1919, and for some time thereafter attended the University of New Mexico at Albuquerque.

On returning home he joined his father in the insurance business. With the reorganization of the Old National Guard after the war, as a permanent unit in the Federal Military Establishment, Mr. Turner joined Company B, One Hundred and Fiftieth Infantry, and in the fall of 1921 was commissioned captain by Adjutant-General Charnock, of West Virginia. Captain Turner is in active charge of this unit. The National Guard is now formally incorporated in the Federal army, and is no longer officially designated as the First National Guard.

Captain Turner is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and is affiliated with the Masons, Knights of Pythias and Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

JOHN M. ABBOTT, division supervisor of supplies and motor vehicles for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company of West Virginia, has earned every step of promotion to his present responsibilities, and his career as a telephone man is an interesting personal story which will be elaborated more fully, after noting the facts of his life.

He was born at Newbern, North Carolina, in 1894, and was reared and attended common schools in that city. He left home at the age of thirteen and became an office employee of one of the lumber companies at Newbern. Subsequently he went to South Carolina, worked in the offices of the Hammer Lumber Company at Little River, and later with the same corporation at Wilmington, North Carolina. In 1909 he entered the service of the Fosburg Lumber Company at Norfolk, Virginia. Upon leaving that company he made application for work in the Norfolk office of the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, and a few days later secured a reluctant consent from the manager, his first duty being cleaning a storeroom, a job he did so well that he was put on the pay roll. November 21, 1912, he was transferred to Charleston as material clerk for what is now the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company, in 1917 was promoted to division storekeeper, in 1919, to division chief clerk, and in 1920, when the corporation organized the new department, he was selected as the first to fill the position of division supervisor of supplies and motor vehicles for the division embracing the State of West Virginia and several Ohio counties. His rapid rise to this important position as an executive of the company is a splendid tribute to his thoroughness, efficiency and fidelity to his work.

How he became a loyal lieutenant of E. F. Hill, at first in the Norfolk office and later at Charleston, was interestingly told by Mr. Hill in an article in a telephone journal a year or so ago. Mr. Hill describes his appearance as an applicant for work and his creditable performance, in the storeroom and then continues:

"Within thirty days he could read a blueprint, and I found one day that he was instructing an employee with several years' service in the proper way to rewire a sub-set. Shortly after this he was made a helper to an installer. On one occasion I happened to be out of my office for a few hours, and while away arranged to have my telephones changed.

"On coming in unexpectedly I found the wireman seated at my desk looking over the correspondence and smoking a cigar which he had found in the desk. After sticking around out of sight I found the helper was doing the work and the wireman was amusing himself in other ways. That night the services of the wireman were dispensed with and the helper was given the job.

"Within two or three months my clerk left and I had considerable trouble in locating another. One day this young man called up and remarked that he had heard I was looking for a clerk and that he had been studying shorthand and a business course at the night school, and that while he was not very proficient with his stenographic work, he could write very well on the machine and that if I were willing to give him a trial he would make every effort to please me.

"This I was very glad to do, and he became very efficient and in every way a satisfactory clerk. If I happened to be out of the office for a day, incoming mail was usually attached to the file if there was any, and after a very short period he was able to get the necessary information from the districts and answer certain portions of the correspondence.

"On July 1, 1912, when I was transferred to Charleston, he immediately requested permission to come also, but realizing that a new man going into the job at Norfolk would have an added hardship with a new clerk, I made him see the necessity for his staying on the job and doing his part. After being here a short time he again applied for permission to come out, but was still advised to stay on the job there. Later he got permission from Mr. Richardson to be transferred to this division, and came out early in 1913. In 1914 he resigned to accept a position as inspector with the Home Telephone and Telegraph Company at Henderson, North Carolina, but left them after five months and was re-engaged in October, 1914.

"During the time of his employment with the C. & P. Company he has looked after supplies. In fact he was the supply clerk for this division from 1913 to 1916; in 1917 he was made storekeeper at Charleston; in January, 1919, he became division plant clerk; early in 1920 he was promoted to division supervisor of supplies and motor vehicles, and has filled that position with credit to himself and his associates.

"To sum it up, John M. Abbott has made himself what he is today, and I consider him an efficient and reliable employe, who has educated himself by night study and correspondence school courses, so that he is at present capable of holding down any job on which he is started."

Aside from his absorbing duties with the Telephone Company, Mr. Abbott for several years has had a keen interest and active part in the Boy Scout movement, and is deputy commissioner of the Charleston Council of the Boy Scouts of America. These activities led quite naturally to his becoming interested in safety and first aid matters, and in October, 1921, he completed a course in First Aid with the American Red Cross at Washington, receiving the Red Cross diploma certifying to this fact, under which he is authorized to teach first aid to others. This instruction work he is directing among the telephone employes in West Virginia, a work that testifies to the interest the company has in its employes and the general public as well. Mr. Abbott is a Royal Arch Mason, a member of the Scottish Rite Lodge of Perfection, and is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias.

DAVID H. GAY, Charleston agent for the American Railway Express Company, is a young man who has made good in a very exacting line of work, and for his fidelity and efficiency has received repeated promotions, each one to higher positions and larger responsibilities.

He was born in the university city of Charlottesville, Virginia, in 1888, son of George W. Gay. He acquired his education in the Miller School at Charlottesville, and in 1906, at the age of eighteen, entered the service of the old Adams Express Company as a driver. The subsequent sixteen years have been a record of steady promotion to his work, and he was with the Adams Company until it and other express companies were merged as a war measure in the American Railway Express Company.

His first work as a driver was done at Hinton, West Virginia, and subsequently he did similar work at Charlottesville, Alexandria and Clifton Forge, Virginia. From driver he was promoted to messenger, having a run between Richmond and Clifton Forge on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. From road messenger came promotion to cash in the company's office at Alexandria, Virginia. From there he was made agent at Alexandria, and in 1916 was sent Charleston as agent in this city. Two years later, in 1918, he was transferred to Charlottesville, Virginia, where he continued his duties as agent until May, 1921, when he was again returned to Charleston. The express business of the Charleston office and the territory served from this city headquarters makes up a large part of the volume of business in the entire state, and the position occupied by Mr. Gay is one of important executive responsibility. Mr. Gay married Miss Vera Thomas of Virginia. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias.

ULYSSES SIMPSON JARRETT. For over thirty years Mr. Jarrett has been a working force in all that concerns the growth and progress of the little community of St. Albans. In that time St. Albans has grown from a very small village to one of the thriving little cities of Kanawha County. Mr. Jarrett was in charge of the business of the railroad at this point for a number of years, has been a merchant, head of the city government, and is now postmaster.

Mr. Jarrett was born on Cabin Creek, Kanawha County, June 26, 1870. The Jarrett family has been represented in several branches of the name in Kanawha County since pioneer times. One of the original settlers was Owen Jarrett, who came from Greenbrier County, and was the second man to settle on Elk River at Jarrett's Ford in Kanawha County. He died at the age of fifty-three. Eli Jarrett, son of Owen, spent his life at the old farm and died in 1897. His wife was Nancy Newhouse, daughter of Michael Newhouse. She died in 1899, at the age of eighty-eight. Her children were Squire Bennett, Eli T., John T., Mark T., Mary E., who married Marshall De Pew of Roane County, Caroline, who married Burdett Price of Elk River, a Nancy Catherine, who married D. S. Jarrett. Another representative of the name was William R. Jarrett, a grandson of William Jarrett and a son of Strawther Jarrett. William R. spent his life mainly on Elk River, and in his later years kept a hotel on Kanawha Street in Charleston. His son Strawther, born in 1848, and died June 22, 1898, was a cooper by trade and made salt barrels and later was identified with gas production. He married Nancy Young, a daughter of William R., who has been in the postoffice service at Charleston since 1895 and became superintendent of mills in 1908.

The parents of U. S. Jarrett were Addison and Margaret (Keeny) Jarrett. Margaret Keeny was a daughter of Moses Keeny, representing another old family. Addison Jarrett spent thirteen years of his life in Missouri, near St. Joseph, and was a member of the Home Guard there during the Civil war. He returned to West Virginia about 1868 and located at Cabin Creek. He was a carpenter, and he worked at this trade for thirty years with one coal company. He died at the age of seventy-four and his wife, seventy. Their two sons were John A., a former sheriff of Kanawha County, and U. S., who was named for General Grant, then President.

U. S. Jarrett attended country schools, at the age of fifteen learned telegraphy, and for twenty years was in the service of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company as telegraph operator and agent. He was assigned to duty at St. Albans in 1889 as operator, and became agent in 1891, continuing in that capacity for eight years. When he came to St. Albans in 1889 the place had a population of 100. There are now between 3,000 and 4,000 people living in this community. After leaving the railroad service in 1901 Mr. Jarrett was in the hardware business, was also deputy revenue agent, for a time resumed work as a telegraph operator, and during Taft's administration was appointed postmaster. He held that office until the change of administration, and later was called back to the duties of postmaster for a year and a half during Wilson's second term. Soon after the Harding administration came in he was selected as postmaster, and his present term began January 1, 1922. The business done by the postoffice which he has been connected with it is a graphic illustration of the owth of St. Albans itself. The receipts of the office are sometimes more than what they were when he first became postmaster. The receipts now average about $12,000 per year. There are four clerks and two rural carriers.

Myron G. Campbell

Mr. Jarrett has been interested in all civic movements of St. Albans, and he served eight terms as mayor and twice as a member of the city council and also a city recorder. He is a member of the Baptist Church, and is a past master of the Masonic Lodge and has represented it in the city and lodge. Mr. Jarrett married Clara A. Henley, whose father, Capt. C. W. Henley, was a Confederate officer and was a builder of railroad tunnels along the line of the Chesapeake & Ohio. He died at the age of seventy-four. Mr. and Mrs. Jarrett have one daughter, Margaret J., now a student in Lewisburg Seminary.

EDWARD CLARK COLCORD, SR. A resident of St. Albans since 1889, Edward Clark Colcord, Sr., came to this state as a timber expert, and for many years has been general superintendent of the lumber, coal and land interests of the Bowman Lumber Company. At the same time he has been an enlightened and progressive leader in the affairs of his community, and several times has gone to the Legislature from Kanawha County.

He was born in Franklin County, Vermont, September 1851. Now past the age of three score and ten and still active, he comes of a long lived and vigorous family, one of whom have reached the age of ninety. He is a son of John and Sylvia Prudentia (Bowman) Colcord. He is an old family in New England, established there before the Revolution. John Colcord served as a member of the State Legislature during the Civil war. His wife's father, Eben E. Bowman, was a contractor in the construction of the Erie Railroad. Mrs. Sylvia Colcord died at the old homestead when past ninety.

E. C. Colcord, Sr., at the age of seventeen went to the northwest with an engineering corps, and about 1872 became interested in the lumber industry at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, then and for years afterward one of the largest centers for the production of Northern White Pine lumber. He also became interested in lumber manufacture at Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and while there became associated with a group of capitalists who were interested in the purchase of timber lands in West Virginia. The Bowman Lumber Company began the buying of lands in this state in 1886. The first mill was constructed in 1888 and production began in the spring of 1889. The company were far-sighted and desired to secure land not only valuable for the timber, but also for coal. Mr. Colcord made personal inspections of large areas in the mountains of West Virginia, and purchased over 50,000 acres. In 1892 he took charge of all the Bowman manufacturing operations. In connection with this large business he has had much to do with the commercial and civic affairs of St. Albans. He is one of the original directors of the Bank of St. Albans, and is president of the St. Albans Board of Trade. He is a Knight Templar Mason, a Noble of the Mystic Shrine and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. As a republican he was elected to the House of Delegates in 1900 for the session of 1901, and in 1902 was elected a member of the State Senate, serving from 1903 to 1905. In 1908 he was again elected a member of the House. For many years he has been a member of the State Board of Equalization. While he has thus been in the service of the state government, his keenest interest is in his home town. St. Albans is one of the choicest residence towns in the state, owing largely to the high stock of citizenship that has been developed there.

In 1883 Mr. Colcord married Mary Agnes McManigal, of Williamsport, Pennsylvania. She died in 1919. She was a very active member of the Presbyterian Church. They were the parents of a family of seven children. The eldest is Edward Clark, Jr., now manager of the Bowman Lumber Company at St. Albans. Francis C. and his brother Eugene L. are the owners and operators of the Colcord Coal Company in Raleigh County. Sylvia Prudentia, the wife of M. W. Stark, a lumber manufacturer, formerly at St. Albans with the American Column and Lumber Company and now a resident of Columbus, Ohio. Mary Agnes is a graduate of the Dickinson Seminary at Williamsport and the Colonial School at Washington, and is at home. Tritain Coffin is a mining engineer. William Allison, the youngest, is associated with his brothers in the Colcord Coal Company.

EDWARD CLARK COLCORD, JR., is a civil engineer by profession, but for several years past his time and abilities have been expended with the Bowman Lumber Company of St. Albans, of which he is manager. His father, E. C. Colcord, Sr., is also prominently connected with that and allied industries at St. Albans, and a separate article gives the details of his career.

E. C. Colcord, Jr., is the oldest in a family of seven children, and was born at Williamsport, Pennsylvania, January 15, 1885. He has lived in West Virginia since childhood, and he secured a liberal education in the schools of this state. In 1907 he graduated in the civil engineering course from West Virginia University, and during the next four years he carried on a general practice as a civil engineer. For two years he was at work on Ohio River improvement. Since then he has been general manager of the Bowman Lumber Company at St. Albans. Mr. Colcord married Gertrude Roewe, daughter of Capt. A. A. and Julia Doddridge-Lackey Roewe, of St. Albans. They have one son, E. C. Colcord, III. Mr. Colcord is a republican, and has spent four years in the council of St. Albans and is a Master Mason.

The Bowman Lumber Company is a West Virginia Corporation organized and capitalized chiefly by men from Baltimore and Williamsport. It was organized about 1880, and its operations as a lumber mill have been conducted steadily at St. Albans. The first plant had a capacity of about 35,000 feet per day and an average annual output of between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 feet. It cut great quantities of timber along the Coal River, and those cut-over lands are now leased for coal purposes. In former years it drew much of its lumber from Boone County and later from Raleigh. The company has about 125 men on its payroll, fifty of them living at St. Albans, while the others are in the woods. Up to about sixteen years ago their plant manufactured only poplar lumber, but it now handles red and white oak, chestnut and maple, and it supplies large quantities of wood used for the high class product in furniture, interior work and automobiles.

The same interests who own the Bowman Lumber Company also comprise the Rowland Land Company, which owns coal and timber lands in Raleigh County to an extent of 50,000 acres. These lands are leased for coal operations, and there are seven different mines that have been started during the last fifteen years, known as the Long Branch Coal Company, the Marsh Fork Coal Company, the Birch Fork Coal Company, Colcord Coal Company, Glogora Coal Company, Hazy Eagle Collieries Company and Raleigh Wyoming Coal Company.

MYRON G. CAMPBELL. Thirty years ago Myron G. Campbell was a wage earner in the coal mines. It was not long until he was promoted to superintendent, and from that he easily progressed into the ranks of operators. He was a pioneer in the development of the Gauley River field. His home has been in St. Albans for a number of years, and he is now owner of the principal public utility of that little city, the St. Albans Water, Light and Ice Company, of which he is president and general manager.

The service represented by this corporation was first established on a modest scale by the organization of the St. Albans Water and Light Company in 1907. This company erected a power house, constructed a reservoir and started delivering electric current and water on a small scale. The plant represented an investment of $50,000. The owners of this company were W. E. and T. H. Mohler. In 1913 Mr. Campbell bought the business, and at once undertook enlargements and improvements that would permit a great expansion of the entire system. He ordered a light plant, enlarged the power plant, installed electric generators of larger unit capacity, but even now the demand for current is such that the plant can supply only about half, the rest being purchased from the Virginia Power Company. To the reservoir has been added a filtration plant, and the water works now have a daily capacity of 2,000,000 gallons. Mains have been extended four times the length of ten years ago. There are now about twenty-five miles of main, with thirty-three fire hydrants, and there are 750 water consumers and 400 light consumers. The ice plant has a capacity of twenty-two tons daily, and all is sold at wholesale for local consumption. At the present time this public utility has an investment of about $200,000, and there are ten regular employees.

Myron G. Campbell was born at St. Albans in February, 1874. His father, John Campbell, was a cooper by trade. The mother, Adaline Calvert, was born at Malden, and is now eighty years of age, living at St. Albans. Myron G. Campbell was only a boy when his father died, and with only a common school education he went to work in the coal mines at the age of seventeen. He was soon put in charge of a mining store, from that was advanced to superintendent, and at the age of twenty-eight began operating in the Gauley River field. He continued to give his personal supervision to his mining interests until 1913. As a coal operator he employed about 150 men and shipped six hundred tons daily. His brother, J. M. Campbell, and his brother-in-law, T. H. Mohler, were associated as partners in this industry, and from their three names they comprised the title of their company, known as the Gamoca Coal Company at Gacomona on the Gauley River. Around the mines they developed an industrial village containing eighty-five houses. The business was finally sold to the Midvale Colliery Company. This firm did the first development of the coal east of the Gauley River.

Mr. Campbell is a director and vice president of the St. Albans Glass Company, and is a stockholder in both banks. He is a Knight Templar Mason and Shriner, and is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

He married Miss Virgie Tasker, of Montgomery, West Virginia. They have three children, all educated in the St. Albans High School: Albert, in the garage and transfer business at St. Albans; Nell, now a Senior in Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois; and Grace, who is in her Senior year in Lewisburg Seminary.

N. L. HARDMAN, a prosperous farmer whose home is on Skin Creek, fourteen miles southwest of Weston, is a member of one of the old and prominent families of Lewis County.

Part of his present farm contains the old Hardman homestead, where he was born November 24, 1863. His parents were Marcellus L. and Mahala (Hyre) Hardman. Marcellus Hardman was born August 28, 1829, son of H. D. and Mary (West) Hardman. H. D. Hardman was born on Hacker's Creek in 1803, was a farmer and also a teacher, and instructed a number of pupils in the rudiments of surveying. He was a democrat and an active member of the Methodist Protestant Church. His three children were named Marcellus, Matilda and Bettie. Marcellus Hardman grew up on a farm, and had a common school education, and was one of the good and faithful men of his day. He and his wife had five children: Levi, born July 16, 1855, a farmer in Upshur County; Catherine, born February 21, 1859, now deceased; N. L.; William M. and John D., both deceased.

N. L. Hardman spent his early life on the farm, and his neighbors have known him as a man of great diligence and unusual foresight and careful as a manager. A number of years ago he bought the old homestead of 350 acres, and has since increased his holdings to 600 acres.

Mr. Hardman married Julia A. Linger, who was reared in the same community as her husband. They have six children: O. L. Hardman, born August 8, 1891, who had a common school education and was trained as a soldier for the World war at Fort Riley, Kansas; O. M. Hardman, born September 3, 1892, who enlisted in the Signal Corps, spent eleven months in France with the Twenty-eighth Division, was on front line duty three months, and received his honorable discharge May 14, 1919; Ludah, born March 5, 1899, who was educated in the common schools; Bryan, born November 7, 1900; Brannon, born February 28, 1902; and Benson B., born April 27, 1908. The family are members of the Methodist Protestant Church. Mr. Hardman is affiliated with Vandallia Lodge No. 321, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and has served as lodge treasurer. He is a democrat in politics.

His wife, Julia A. Linger, is a daughter of Nicholas D. and Margaret Matilda (Bradshaw) Linger. Her father was born February 20, 1821, on Stone Coal Creek in Lewis County. The grandfather of Nicholas was a follower of Marquis de Lafayette and came to America during the Revolutionary war to assist the Colonies in their struggle for independence. He remained here after the war, married and settled down and has a numerous posterity. The children of Nicholas Linger and wife were: Nicholas W. deceased; William, deceased, who married Eliza Sexton; John W., who married Dora Bartlett; Leonidas A., deceased, who married Rebecca Bartlett; Aaron N., who married Lucy Sexton; Mary J., deceased; Charles E., deceased, who married Mary J. Strader; Martha, wife of Joseph H. Flint, now deceased; Julia A., Mrs. Hardman; Edward B., who married Julia Clark; and David P., who married Cosbi Teter.

HON. ABE L. HELMICK, state senator from the Fourteenth District, belongs to one of the old families of Tucker County, and has achieved a number of important associations with the business and civic affairs of that section of the state. He is president of the Blackwater Coal Company, is vice president of the Miners & Merchants Bank of Thomas, and is a director in the Peoples Bank of Davis.

The old home of the Helmick family is in Pendleton County, where at least four generations of the name have lived. Senator Helmick was born at Circleville in that county, August 31, 1864. His great-grandfather and the founder of the name on this side of West Virginia was Phillip Helmick. A son of Phillip Helmick was Miles Helmick, a native of Pendleton County. Abe B. Helmick, father of the senator, was born in Pendleton County in 1842 and married Catherine Mullennax. Her father, Salathiel Mullennax, was a native of Pendleton County and lived there all his life. Abe B. Helmick and three of his brothers were in the Confederate army during the first half of the war and if they were not Union men in sympathy at the beginning they finally became convinced of the righteousness of the Federal cause and all of them one way or another found their way within the Union lines and fought as soldiers in that cause. Abe Helmick while on a furlough was taken prisoner by his Confederate comrades, and was kept in Libby Prison for some time without a hearing before being released. Mrs. Abe B. Helmick died in 1877, mother of the following children: Albert C., of Pinto, Maryland; Georganna, wife of John J. Knotts of St. George District, Tucker County; and Abe L.

When Abe L. Helmick was seven years of age his parents moved into Tucker County, settling at Sugarland, near St. George, and in that community he grew to manhood having such educational opportunities as were afforded by the local schools and the summer normals. Senator Helmick had a brief teaching experience in his home district. He assisted his father in farming and the stock business until his majority, and after leaving home he began work for the builders of the Western Maryland Railroad on a portion of the land between Thomas and Davis in Tucker County. For six weeks he did common labor and was then made a foreman. After the road construction was ended he clerked in a store at Thomas for two years, and in 1888 was appointed postmaster of that village, which then contained between 400 and 500 people. He was postmaster for six years, and in the meantime engaged in general merchandising and sold goods at Thomas for eighteen years, finally retiring when elected sheriff of the county.

While a merchant at Thomas he was a member of the County Court for six years, and for five years was president of the court. A large number of county road bridges were

It during his administration, and his name is on record one of the commissioners at the time the courthouse was erected. In 1908 he was elected sheriff, as successor of Sheriff Jack Jenkins, and served that post of duty four years, when he was succeeded by John F. Repair.

During his time of sheriff Mr. Helmick had become interested in business at Parsons, and on retiring from office he bought the Cheat Valley Insurance Agency at the county seat, and until recently was active in that line. He became a coal developer and operator in 1916 as an organizer of the Blackwater Coal Company. He also helped organize the new Colliery Company. He was one of the organizers of the Miners and Merchants Bank of Thomas, the strongest financial institution of the county, and which has a record of substantial success and prosperity for nearly twenty years.

Mr. Helmick was elected mayor of Thomas, and was endorsed by both parties for re-election, but declined that honor. While mayor he brought about the improvement of the city water plant and some of the streets. Mr. Helmick is a staunch republican, having cast his first vote for Benjamin Harrison in 1888. He was republican committeeman of Tucker County for many years, and has also served republican state committeeman. He was elected to the United States Senate, in November, 1920, as successor of Senator John of Preston County. At the organization of the Senate he was made a member of the finance committee, which deals with banks and corporations, railroads, military, federal relations, mines and mining, medicine and sanitation, public library and the redistricting committees, being chairman of the judiciary committee. In the Senate he was father of the movement which resulted in the employment of stenographers by the circuit courts of the state. He introduced an original bill for the hiring of stenographers by the district judges, thus saving to the state a great expense that has so frequently brought about by witnesses before grand juries, without the service of a public stenographer, denying their testimony. He also introduced a bill for the censorship of the moving pictures of the state, a measure that was defeated through the organized opposition of the movie interests. He also introduced a bill to make a felony the desertion of a father deserting without just cause his wife or child and leaving them without proper support. Another bill introduced by him was to abolish the State Hotel Inspector, a meritorious measure in view of the farcical character of hotel inspection under the old law. At the opening of the session of the Senate, Senator Helmick was chairman of the joint committee to wait upon the house and the governor to notify each that the Senate was organized and ready for business.

At Thomas, in 1891, Senator Helmick married Miss Kate Flinn, daughter of Patrick Flinn. She died leaving two children, Marie, wife of Alexander Parks, of Thomas; and John, who served with the Canadian army in the World war. In 1905 Senator Helmick married Fannie Liller, daughter of Oliver Liller, of Ridgeway, West Virginia, where Mrs. Helmick was born. She was educated in the Fairmont State Normal School, and was a prominent teacher in Mineral county for ten years. She was appointed postmistress to succeed Mr. Helmick's first wife, and held the office of postmistress of Thomas for two terms. During the war she was actively engaged in work as a member of the executive committee of the Red Cross in Tucker County, and Mr. Helmick was chairman of the membership drive for the county.

DAVID EARL CUPPETT. A resident of Thomas, and one of the leading members of the Tucker County bar, David Earl Cuppett has in the course of a quarter of a century done good work as a teacher, but for nearly twenty years time has been fully taken up with a law practice that afforded opportunity for the exercise of his striking abilities as a criminal lawyer.

The founder of the family in West Virginia was John Cuppett, Sr., who lived in Pennsylvania during the Revolutionary war and was one of the few men who escaped the coming Valley massacre. When he moved out of Bedford county he settled at Glade Farms in Preston County, Virginia, and spent the rest of his life there as a farmer. His son, Daniel Cuppett, was born in Bedford County, was a child when brought to West Virginia, and his life work also was identified with the farm. He married Mary Scott, and their nine children were: William; Alpheus; Daniel; Henry; David; Isaac; Lucy, who married Josiah Smith; Miss Jane; and Mrs. Nancy Edwards. Of these brothers, Henry was a Union soldier and captured a Confederate flag when Fort Donelson was taken; while Isaac was in the service as a member of General Custer's command and died in Andersonville Prison.

Alpheus Cuppett, father of David E. Cuppett, was born in Preston County, had a country school education, and his active years were spent as a farmer and stock dealer. He was interested in the success of the republican party, and was a prominent leader in the Methodist Church at Glade Farms, being influential in building the church there. He died June 15, 1900, at the age of seventy-four. Alpheus Cuppett married Elizabeth Harned, daughter of Edward and Sarah (Johnson) Harned. She died March 12, 1908. Their children were: Milford H., of Uniontown, Pennsylvania; Clark A., who died in Southern California; Ross, deceased; Edward E., of Terra Alta; Mary, wife of Rufus Augustine, of Confluence, Pennsylvania; Ella, who died at Addison, Pennsylvania, wife of C. H. Bird; Charles H., a school man of Belvern, Pennsylvania; Sylvia, who died unmarried; and David Earl.

David Earl Cuppett was born in the Glade Farms locality of Preston County, February 13, 1878. He lived there through his boyhood and youth, shared in the labor of the farm, attended the country schools, and several summer normal courses prepared him for teaching. He took his first school at the age of sixteen, being in charge of the North Avenue School. For six terms he continued teaching in the county, two terms being spent in Fayette County, Pennsylvania. He left teaching to enroll as a student in the literary department of West Virginia University, in which he did three years of work and then finished with the law course, graduating LL. B. in 1904. Immediately after qualifying as a lawyer he located at Thomas in Tucker County, and tried his first law suit in the courts of this county. He has practiced alone, and while he has appeared in some notable litigations in both the civil and criminal branches his reputation has become fixed as a defense lawyer in criminal practice. Up to the spring terms of 1922 he had figured in twenty-nine murder cases, and several of the cases in which he has appeared have gone before the Court of Appeals, where he has won victories as well as in the lower courts. Mr. Cuppett is a former president of the Tucker County Bar Association and a member of the West Virginia Bar Association.

His public service includes two terms as city recorder at Thomas and fifteen years as city attorney, during which time he handled the legal matters connected with bond issues for street improvement and water supply. For twelve years he was secretary of the Board of Education of Fairfax District, and in 1909 was elected member in the House of Delegates from Tucker County, serving under speaker James H. Strickling, and was a member of several committees. He was connected with the passage of the State Board of Control Bill at that term. In 1919 he was again elected to the Legislature, and Speaker L. J. Wolfe appointed him chairman of the committee on elections and privileges and a member of the judiciary, education, Virginia debt, mines and mining, private corporations and joint stock companies committees. In that session he was much interested in securing the passage of the Amended Workmen's Compensation Law, in the passage of the New School Code, the Child Labor Law and the amendment of the Juvenile Court Law, all of which measures originated in the judiciary committee. He also voted for the ratification of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Amendments to the Federal Constitution and was author of the Women's Registration Law, which enlarged the field for political action for women, carrying into effect the real purpose of the Nineteenth Amendment. Mr. Cuppett has participated in a number of campaigns as a speaker in behalf of the republican candidates, is a member of the Tucker County Executive Committee, and has attended several congressional and state conventions. Fraternally he is a member of the Sigma Nu college fraternity, the Knights of Pythias, and is president of the board of trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church. During the World war he was one of the Four-Minute speakers and chairman of that body in Tucker County, and was also a member of the County Council of Defense.

In a business way Mr. Cuppett is a director and attorney for the Miners and Merchants Bank of Thomas and the First National Bank of Bayard, and is local attorney for the Davis Coal and Coke Company, the largest industry at Thomas. He is a stockholder and director in the Blackwater Coal Company.

In Preston County, December 26, 1905, Mr. Cuppett married Miss Vida Barnes, daughter of J. P. and Amanda (Harshbarger) Barnes, both of whom lived in Preston County, though her father was a native of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Cuppett was reared at Brandonville in Preston County, and is a graduate of Southwestern State Normal School of Pennsylvania, and for five years taught in Charleroi, Pennsylvania. She and Mr. Cuppett have three children, named Reardon S., David Earl, Jr., and Mary Elizabeth. Mrs. Cuppett is one of the well known women in the republican party, being a member of the Republican State Committee. She came of a democratic family, but she cast her first vote as a republican. She is a Methodist, helped organize and has served as president of the Women's Club of Thomas, and was one of the active workers in the Red Cross Chapter during the war.

JAMES B. CLOSE, of Parsons, is the efficient sheriff of Tucker County, and is a representative of one of the old and well known families of this section of the state. He was born in the St. George District of Tucker County, September 11, 1883, and is a son of Alexander Close, who was born near the Village of St. George, this county, in 1857, and who here followed the trade of blacksmith for many years, and who more recently became a successful merchant at St. George, where he and his wife still reside. He served twelve years as constable and two terms as county commissioner, his political affiliation being with the republican party. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Protestant Church. As a young man Alexander Close married Miss Catherine Dumire, a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Pifer) Dumire, of Tucker County. Jacob Dumire, of German ancestry, became one of the substantial farmers of this county, served as county sheriff, was a republican, and his eldest son, A. Loman, was a gallant young soldier of the Union in the Civil war. The names of the other children are here recorded: John Wesley Oliver, George, Jane (Mrs. Frank Beavers, her husband having been a Union soldier in the Civil war), Catherine (Mrs. Alexander Close), and Florence, who became the wife of P. W. Lipscomb and died in Tucker County. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Close the present sheriff of Tucker County is the eldest; Edward resides at St. George; Jacob is a resident of Parsons; William lives at Elk Garden; "Tootie" died at the age of fourteen years; and Duncan, Chester and Charles are still members of the parental home circle.

David Close, grandfather of the sheriff of Tucker County, was born in Scotland, came to the United States in the '50s and obtained public land near Lead Mine, Tucker County, where he reclaimed and developed a productive farm and passed the remainder of his life, secure in the high regard of all who knew him. He and his wife were zealous members of the Methodist Protestant Church. In his native land he married Miss Agnes Ferguson, whose death occurred in 1914, he having passed away about 1890. Of their children the eldest is John, of Berkeley Springs, this state; William died at Thomas, Tucker County; James resides at Berkeley Springs; Alexander, father of Sheriff Close, was the next in order of birth; Duncan died at the age of fifteen years; Mrs. David Root resides at Thomas; Sarah, wife of Lewis Shaffer, died at that place; and Isabel is the wife of Grant James, of Thomas.

Sheriff Close gained his early education in the public schools of St. George and there learned the blacksmith trade under the effective direction of his father. At the age of sixteen years he found employment as blacksmith for the Burger Lumber Company, later was similarly employed two years by the Clover Run Lumber Company, and for twelve years thereafter he was blacksmith for Chaffey Lumber Company at William, this county. He then established at Parsons a custom blacksmith shop, which successfully conducted until he retired from the work his trade and became chief of police in this city in 1915. The service which he gave in this position fortified greatly for the broader duties which became his upon election to the office of sheriff of the county in 1920, by majority of 234 votes. Concerning his candidacy for the office the following statements have been made: "Despite the fact that some of the Tucker County electors feared that Mr. Close would not enforce the prohibition law, others feared that he would enforce it, his candidacy in the primaries took on somewhat of the aspect of a forlorn hope. However, the 'wet' element in the county has found that Sheriff Close has rigidly enforced the prohibition law, as well as all other laws, and his stand for law and order has convinced all opposers that he is a real sheriff who is making a record that has not been excelled in the history of the county. He knows no favorites in his official work, and has a high sense of his executive stewardship."

Mr. Close is a republican and is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

At St. George, this county, July 4, 1903, Mr. Close married Dora Hedrick, daughter of Solomon K. and Bet Judy Hedrick, the father being a farmer by vocation and having been a resident of Pendleton County at the time the birth of his daughter Dora. Sheriff and Mrs. Close have two children: Ruth and Earl.

JOSHUA S. ZIMMERMAN has been a prominent member of the bar at Romney for over a quarter of a century. His practice has involved a great deal of business organization work, and he has been interested personally and as an attorney in the commercial orchard development in this section of the state.

Mr. Zimmerman was born near LaPlata, at his mother's old home in Charles County, Maryland, January 16, 1838. The Zimmerman family lived near Baltimore, and the estate in that vicinity was the scene of activity of three generations of the family. Rev. George H. Zimmerman, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born in Baltimore County, on the ancestral estate, about thirty miles from the City of Baltimore, in 1838. He was graduate of Dickinson College at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and entered the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. During the Civil war he was chaplain in one of the Virginia regiments in General Rorer's command in the Army of Northern Virginia. After the war he resumed his church work as pastor, and was also presiding elder of Moorefield, Roanoke and Baltimore districts. While in charge of the Baltimore District he died in 1898. Rev. Mr. Zimmerman married Henrietta A. Rowe, of Glymont, Charles County, Maryland, daughter of William H. and Ann (Cox) Rowe. She died in 1881 at the age of forty-six. There were three sons: Joshua S., of Romney; Edgar R., of Ruxton, Maryland, member of the firm T. T. Tongue and Company, Baltimore agent of the Baltimore Casualty Company; and George H., mining engineer of Whitesburg, Kentucky.

As a minister's son Joshua S. Zimmerman lived in number of towns in Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia. However, most of his youth was spent in Woodstock at Salem, Virginia, and he was a student in Roanoke College at Salem in 1855-56, and in 1858 entered Randolph-Mac College, where he graduated A. B. in 1862. For a time he was a tutor on a Mississippi plantation at Shelby, and in 1863 became a clerk in the Census Department of the Government at Washington, during the second Cleveland administration. He was a clerk there three years, and the meantime studied law, attending the night law school at Columbia, now the George Washington University, graduating LL. B. in 1896.

J. S. Zimmerman.

Qualified by education and experience for his profession, Mr. Zimmerman located at Romney, opening his office in July, 1896. His first case before the Circuit Court was Vest Virginia vs Smith, charged with "breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny," which case he lost.

Since then he has had a general practice in Hampshire and adjoining counties and in both the Federal and State Courts. Seven years after he began practice he was appointed prosecuting attorney to fill the unexpired term of V. B. Cornwell, resigned, and was twice thereafter regularly elected to the office, serving altogether nine years and three months.

Mr. Zimmerman is a member of the dominant political party of Hampshire County, has been a leader in the party, served as chairman of the county committee, member of the Second District Congressional Committee, and has attended judicial, senatorial and state conventions. He was elected to the House of Delegates in November, 1920, and was made floor leader of his party. Governor Cornwell appointed him a member of the road commission to draft a new West Virginia State Road Law in connection with the fifty million dollar bond issue authorized at the 1920 election, as an amendment to the State Constitution. Mr. Zimmerman also supported the strict prohibition enforcement legislation introduced and passed while he was in the House.

Concerning his connection with the commercial orchard industry in this locality, he promoted several companies, is an officer in them and legal adviser, and is individual owner of 150 acres of apple orchard. He is attorney for the Capon Valley Bank at Wardensville, and handled the legal matters in connection with the incorporation of this bank. During the World War Mr. Zimmerman was a member of the Legal Advisory Board of the county and was attorney for the County Food Administration. He personally registered under the last draft.

On October 10, 1900, near Romney, Mr. Zimmerman married Miss Kitty Campbell Vance, daughter of John T. and Mary Elizabeth (Inskip) Vance. The Inskip and Vance families were pioneers in the South Branch Valley and have been associated by marriage with the Heiskells, Silkesons and other well-known families of this region. Mrs. Zimmerman was born on the old Vance estate near Romney, second among four children. Her brother William A., lives at Clarksburg, her second brother, Henry Macbir, is a farmer near Romney, and Frank Vance died in early manhood. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman are Mary Elizabeth, a student in the Mary Baldwin Seminary at Staunton, Virginia; George Henry, Vance and Kitty Campbell at home.

Mr. Zimmerman is a member of the West Virginia Bar Association, is affiliated with the college fraternities, Phi Delta Theta and Phi Delta Phi, and is an active layman in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, being steward of the Romney congregation and for a score of years has been superintendent of its Sunday school. He represented the church in district and annual conferences. Mrs. Zimmerman and several of the children are Presbyterians.

JAMES O. T. TIDLER. A legal practice extending over a period of more than twenty years has given James O. T. Tidler a first rank at the bar of Clarksburg, West Virginia. The law has been regarded by him as a high and honorable profession, not merely a vocation and source of livelihood. To its service he took a scholarship of unusual breadth to develop the excellent qualities of a brilliant mind and he is only now in the prime of manhood and rich experience, with the promise of more mature fulfillment still before him.

His ancestry on both sides is of the best old Virginia stock. His paternal grandparents were John W. and Elizabeth (Windle) Tidler. His maternal grandparents were Capt. Henry Harford and Frances (Snyder) Quaintance. The Quaintance family was prominent in the military affairs of Virginia. Capt. H. H. Quaintance was an officer and lost his two oldest sons, John and William, in the Confederate army during the Civil war. He was the son of Col. John Quaintance.

The father of the Clarksburg lawyer was George Washington Tidler, a teacher, stockman and farmer. He was born in Shenandoah County, right in the heart of the beautiful Valley of Virginia, June 11, 1842, and died at Slate Mills, Rappahannock County, Virginia, August 28, 1910. He was strongly inclined to intellectual pursuits and attainments, and became well educated for a man of his day, when there were no public free schools. He was kind and accommodating to his friends and neighbors, and people from all over his section would come to him for advice and counsel, which he gave freely and without remuneration. He was regarded as the best informed man in all his community. Though not a lawyer, his knowledge of the law was marvelous.

When the Civil war began he enlisted as a Confederate soldier in Shenandoah County, Virginia, and served as a Lieutenant under that famous military genius, Gen. Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson. Before the war terminated he was captured by the Federal army and was imprisoned on Rock Island in the Mississippi River, off the west coast of Illinois. The pangs of hunger and the severe case of typhoid fever which he contracted while in prison somewhat impaired his health. For a number of years he bought livestock and shipped it in carload lots to Baltimore and other Eastern markets. For many years he was justice of the peace, taught school, and was appointed by President Benjamin Harrison to a position in the United States internal revenue service. In politics he was a republican, a member of the Baptist Church and was worshipful master of his Masonic Lodge.

He is survived by his wife, Frances Quaintance Tidler, who was born in Rappahannock County, Virginia, April 20, 1849. After their marriage they lived on their farm at Slate Mills, Rappahannock County, Virginia. She was a beautiful and lovable woman, with strong Christian character, and her teachings, her life, her loyalty and love, her devotion and willing sacrifices indelibly impressed her children and molded their characters and ambitions for the accomplishment of worthy achievements. To her five sons and two daughters living the name "Mother," will always express the highest and most typical embodiment of all that is lovable, good, noble and sublime. Their seven children are Wilbur C., John W., James O. T., Mrs. Teresa Pearle Norris, Mrs. Ruth Thornhill, Harford S. and George W., Jr. The oldest of these, Wilbur C. Tidler, is a graduate of the University of Kentucky. He was for about twenty years a Government official in the United States internal revenue service, and prior to that service was a teacher and farmer. Their youngest son, George W. Tidler, Jr., is a farmer and soldier. He served in the World war against Germany, and was in France pursuing the German armies when the armistice was signed. After that he served in the United States Army of Occupation, and was stationed near Coblenz for several months.

James O. T. Tidler, of Clarksburg, was born December 31, 1876, and was reared to manhood on the Tidler home farm at Slate Mills, Rappahannock County, Virginia. His only early educational advantages were those of a country public school, but he was always a leader in his classes. At the age of eighteen years, the youngest age allowed by law, he taught school near his home in Rappahannock County, after having successfully passed the teachers examination, where he was granted a first grade certificate. Teaching three years supplied a considerable part of the fund he needed for his law course, as he sought no financial assistance from any relative or friend, but relied solely upon his own efforts and resources. His legal education is a record of brilliant achievements. In February, 1900, he entered Richmond College Law School, now Richmond University of Virginia, and made Junior Law in less than a half session. In the fall of 1900, following, he was offered and accepted a responsible position of financial trust and management in connection with the president's office, and entered the Senior Law Class, but in less than four months he went before the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia at its Richmond term on January 11, 1901, and successfully passed the most rigid bar examination, except one, ever held by that high court, and was by the Supreme Court granted license to practice law. Thirty applicants tried this examination for admission to the bar, of which number nineteen able men, most of them graduates in law, failed, and only eleven of the thirty applicants passed and obtained license to practice. This examination and its results were given considerable space in the Richmond and other Virginia newspapers at the time, the same being, also, a matter of record in Volume 6 of the Virginia Law Register.

Though being admitted to the bar by the Supreme Court under circumstances that were a splendid augury for his future, Mr. Tidler did not at that time quit school to practice, as might have been expected, but preferred to continue his studies to completion and become a full-fledged graduate before beginning the practice of his chosen profession. In the early spring, however, he was stricken down with inflammatory rheumatism, to such an extent that he could move neither hand nor foot without assistance and great pain, and was for several weeks treated in a Richmond hospital. Notwithstanding this great affliction he was undaunted in his purpose and the achievement of his ambitions. Leaving the hospital, though still sick and afflicted and unable to write, he stood oral examinations on all branches of law and books his class had completed during his illness, and then went to his parents home at Slate Mills, Virginia, to recover his health and strength. It was just three weeks prior to the June commencement before he was able to return from home and rejoin his class; but notwithstanding his serious illness, loss of time, and missing most important lectures of his class, he resumed his studies with such a zeal to win over all obstacles that in this three weeks period he mastered all legal subjects so completely as to pass the final written examinations with such a high percentage of proficiency that he was not only graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, June 13, 1901, but was by the faculty and trustees of the college awarded the first prize as the most distinguished and honored graduate of his class.

In October, 1901, Mr. Tidler, then but a briefless barister, with only meagre financial resources, opened a law office in Clarksburg, and since then has been eminently successful, gaining honors both as a trial lawyer and as a counselor. The same fertile brain that had distinguished him soon lifted him out of poverty and obscurity and made him a prominent man of affairs of Clarksburg, where he acquired valuable real estate holdings, being now the owner of a number of houses and lots in the City of Clarksburg and lands in the State of Virginia. He is a republican voter, but neither as a matter of necessity nor from inclination has he sought any public office or diversion in politics. He was, however, associate member of the Legal Advisory Board during the World war in 1917-18, and rendered valuable patriotic service without remuneration.

Mr. Tidler is, also prominent in fraternal circles, being at present dictator (presiding officer) of Clarksburg Lodge No. 52, Loyal Order of Moose, which has a membership of about a thousand men. For several years he was state treasurer of West Virginia, of the Patriotic Order Sons of America. He is a member of the Baptist Church.

On October 12, 1910, Mr. Tidler married Miss Anna Martha Wickes, of New Market, Shenandoah County, Virginia, where she was born September 10, 1885, daughter of Giles William and Mary Lizzie (Crim) Wickes. Her father was born February 12, 1854, and still survives. Her mother was born April 3, 1858, and died April 24, 1893. Her paternal grandfather Wickes was born in 1827 and died in 1867. He married Wilmoth Ann Kipps, who was born in 1827 and died in 1905. Mrs. Tidler's paternal great-grandparents were William (1795-1852), and Mary Wickes (1797-1871), while her maternal grandparents were David Crim (1822-1860), and Martha Jane (Windle) Crim (1828-1874). The latter's parents were Washington (1802-1882), and Charlotte Glenn, Windle (1806-1891). Mrs. Tidler is a member of the Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Tidler have two very promising children, the older, Hazel, born June 23, 1913, and the younger, James, born July 29, 1920.

H. FREEMAN COLEBANK brings to bear a high degree of efficiency and loyal stewardship in his service as clerk of the County Court of Tucker County, and he is one of the popular citizens of Parson, the county seat.

Mr. Colebank was born in Barbour County, this state, March 5, 1875, and is a son of Samuel Colebank, Jr., who was born in that county on the 12th of July, 1851, and whose wife, Malinda B., was born in Preston County, December 20, 1854, a daughter of Harman Freeman, who was there a substantial farmer. Samuel Colebank, Jr., devoted the major part of his active career to farm industry and was a resident of Fairmont at the time of his death, in January, 1916, his widow being still a resident of that place. Of their children the subject of this sketch is the elder, and Icy, who resides at Fairmont, is the widow of D. N. Dumire.

Rollo Colebank, grandfather of him whose name introduces this review, was born in Barbour County, a representative of a sterling pioneer family of that county, and there he continued his activities as a farmer until his death at Shiloh, his remains resting in the old Dunkard Cemetery in that county beside those of his wife, whose maiden name was Margaret Simpson. They became the parents of five sons and three daughters, one of the daughters having died in childhood. The sons were Sylvanus and Quinter (twins), Samuel, John and Jefferson, and the daughters who attained to maturity were Elizabeth, wife of L. C. Coffman, of Kason, Barbour County, and Mary, who became the wife of Isaac Lohr and was a resident of Barbour County at the time of her death.

H. Freeman Colebank was reared in his native county, received the advantages of the public schools, summer normal schools and the West Liberty State Normal School, and, beginning at the age of sixteen years, he taught in the rural schools during the winter terms for a period of five years, his pedagogic work having included also service as principal of the school at Hendricks and effective work as an instructor in summer normal schools. Thereafter he was for a time bookkeeper for the Hendricks Company, and for a few months was a traveling salesman for the Piedmont Grocery Company. For six years he was associated with the substantial real-estate business conducted by Levi B. Harr at Fairmont, and he then re-entered the employ of the Hendricks Company, then the J. E. Poling Company, as credit man and general supervisor of the bookkeeping department. His service in this connection continued somewhat more than five years, and while thus engaged he received the republican primary election for the office of clerk of the County Court of Tucker County, without opposition. He was elected to this office in the fall of 1914, assumed office January 1, 1915, and after serving his term of six years he was re-elected by the largest majority ever given to a candidate for this office in Tucker County, he having received a majority of 1,700 votes, this being far in advance of the party ticket in the county, which gave to the head of the ticket somewhat more than 500 votes. He is a stalwart supporter of the principles of the republican party, his initial presidential vote having been cast for President McKinley in 1896. In 1912 he was a delegate to the West Virginia state convention of his party at Huntington as a Roosevelt supporter, but when Colonel Roosevelt left the ranks of his party to become presidential candidate on the progressive ticket Mr. Colebank refused to be deflected from his allegiance to the regularly constituted party. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he has served the Parsons Church of this denomination as trustee and steward. He is a director of the Tucker County Bank, is a past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, and is affiliated also with the Masonic fraternity, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Junior Order United American Mechanics, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Royal Neighbors. Mr. Colebank was prominently identified with local patriotic service in the period of the World war, was an associate member of the Legal Advisory Board of Tucker County, and was a director of the War Savings Stamp drive in the southern part of this county.

On August 14, 1898, at Hendricks, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Colebank and Miss Myrtle Shaw, a daughter of George and Mary (Musgrave) Shaw, the latter of whom is now a revered member of the family circle of Mr. and Mrs. Colebank. George Shaw was born in Preston County, was associated with farm enterprise and lumbering operations, and at the time of his death was identified with the Hendricks Company. He was survived by three children: Wade W., who married and was a resident of Hendricks at the time of his death; John E., of Newark, Ohio, who is a locomotive engineer for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; and Myrtle, who is the wife of Mr. Colebank of this sketch, she having been born in Preston County, July 15, 1880. Harry, eldest of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Colebank, is, in 1922, a student in the engineering department of the University of West Virginia; Edwin C. is deputy to his father in the office of clerk of the County Court; Clifford S., who is chief clerk in the office of the county clerk of Randolph County, married Ruth, a daughter of Lee Poe, of Elkins; Elliott Freeman and Mary Lynn remain at the parental home.

JAMES P. SCOTT. The year 1922 finds Tucker County receiving effective service from one of its leading attorneys in the important office of prosecuting attorney, and this county official, Mr. Scott, has been a resident of Parsons, the county seat, since 1886.

He was born at Simpson, Taylor County, this state, April 21, 1857, a few years before the creation of West Virginia as a commonwealth of the Union. He attended the public schools of his native village, the West Virginia College at Flemington, and finally graduated from the State Normal School at Fairmont. He taught seven terms in the rural schools and one term as principal of the school at Webster. He retired from the pedagogic profession shortly after attaining to his legal majority and became the publisher and editor of the Simpson New Era, a weekly paper. Thereafter he read law under the preceptorship of Judge Lucas at Charles Town, and at the age of twenty-three years he was admitted to the bar at Grafton. He soon afterward came to Tucker County and founded the Tucker Democrat, a weekly paper, at St. George, where he also engaged in the practice of law as a partner of Col. A. B. Parsons. He continued these relations at St. George until the county seat was transferred from that place to Parsons, and he followed the county government to its new seat, both in the practice of law and in the publishing of his newspaper, which is now published by Daniel W. Ryan and which is one of the oldest county newspapers in this part of the state, with continued influence as an advocate of the principles of the democratic party.

Mr. Scott has served as a member of the Board of Teachers' Examiners for Tucker County, as commissioner in chancery, and is now divorce commissioner of the county, as well as its prosecuting attorney. He was reared a democrat, and has never wavered in his allegiance to the party, his first presidential vote having been cast for Hancock in 1880. He has been for many years chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Tucker County, has been a delegate to many county, judicial, congressional and state conventions of his party, and has given yeoman service in advancing the interests of his party in West Virginia. Mr. Scott served three terms as mayor of Parsons, has been several times elected a member of the city council, and is now serving his third term as city attorney. In 1920 he was elected prosecuting attorney of the county, and in his administration he has vigorously and effectively prosecuted violators of the laws of the state and nation. He is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America, is a director of and the attorney for the First National Bank of Parsons, of which he was one of the charter stockholders, and he aided also in the organization of the Tucker County Bank, of which he was formerly a director.

In Webster, this state, in the year 1893, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Scott and Miss Virginia Adams, who was there born and reared, her father having been for many years proprietor of the Adams House, a leading hotel in the village. Mr. Adams was a direct descendant of President John Quincy Adams and came from Massachusetts to what is now West Virginia, where he passed the remainder of his life. He married Margaret McClintick, from Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and they became the parents of two sons and seven daughters, all of whom attained to maturity. Mrs. Scott, the youngest of the number, died on the 16th of September, 1915, and is survived by two children, Miss Lah Ruth, who is her father's companion and who presides over the domestic and social affairs of the pleasant home, and Miss Ethel Fay, who holds a position in the internal revenue department of the Government at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Scott is a son of Sandy M. and Rachel (Davis) Scott, the former of whom was born in Monongalia County and the latter in that part of Harrison County that was set off as Taylor County in 1844. Morgan Scott, grandfather of the subject of this review, likewise was a native of Monongalia County, where his father, Col. David Scott, was one of the first settlers, Colonel Scott having come from the South Branch Valley of Virginia to what is now West Virginia after having served as a patriot soldier and gallant officer in the War of the Revolution. After his removal to the wilds of the present West Virginia he endured the full tension of life on the frontier, and in special evidence of this it is to be recorded that his daughters Phoebe and Ann were here murdered by the Indians. Sandy M. Scott was a carpenter by trade, and followed this vocation throughout his active career. He was a Union soldier in the Civil war as a member of the Seventeenth West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, was a democrat in politics, and was a citizen of sterling character. His death occurred at Simpson when he was about seventy-six years of age, and his wife passed away in 1876. Lemuel W., oldest of their children, is an architect by profession and resides at West Union, Doddridge County; Dora became the wife of A. E. Lake, and her death occurred at Simpson; James Porter, immediate subject of this sketch, was the next in order of birth; and Bruce was a resident of Liberty, Texas, at the time of his death.

Morgan Scott, grandfather of James P., married Sarah Barker, her death having occurred in Wirt County and that of her husband in Monongalia County. Sandy Morgau Scott was the eldest of their three children. The only daughter first married a man named Barker, who met his death while serving as a Confederate soldier in the Civil war, and thereafter she married William Dulin, her home being now in Calhoun County; Morgan, youngest of the children, died in Wirt County.

WAYNE K. PRITT has been a resident of Tucker County since he was a child of two years, and is now a representative member of its bar, he having been established in the successful practice of law at Parsons, the county seat, since 1911.

Mr. Pritt was born in Randolph County, this state, January 23, 1872, and is a son of George W. and Lucinda (Ingram) Pritt, the former of whom was born in what is now Randolph County, West Virginia, and the latter in Washington County, Pennsylvania. George W. Pritt, whose death occurred at Hambleton, Tucker County, in 1892, at the age of forty-seven, was the only child of Edmund and Susan (Ryan) Pritt, the parents of the former having been pioneer settlers in what is now Randolph County, West Virginia, and the lineage of the family supposedly tracing back to Irish origin. Representatives of this branch of the Pritt family were staunch supporters of the Union in the period of the Civil war. Edmund Pritt survived his only son and was a resident of Hambleton, Tucker County, at the time of his death, in 1894, when about seventy-six years of age. The widow of George W. Pritt survived him by ten years and died at Parsons in 1902, when past fifty-four years of age. Of their children the subject of this review is the eldest; Harriet is the wife of Walter Bagshaw, of Parsons; Charles E. resides at Columbus, Ohio; Frank W. resides at Charleston, West Virginia; and Bess is the wife of Robert W. Swink, of Parsons.

Wayne Kennedy Pritt was two years old when the family home was established on a farm near Parsons, and he continued his association with the work of the home farm until he was twenty years of age. That he profited fully by the advantages of the public schools was demonstrated in the success which attended his efforts during four terms of service as a teacher in the rural schools of his home county. In the meanwhile he attended the summer normal school at Philippi, and after leaving the pedagogic profession he was for four years in charge of the office of the Hendricks Company at Hendricks. In 1896 he was elected clerk of the Circuit Court of Tucker County, and of this office he continued the incumbent twelve years. In the meanwhile he found his duties and environment a spur to his ambition to enter the legal profession, and with characteristic determination and receptiveness he devoted himself closely to the study of law in a private way, this having continued during the two years which he passed as a student in the University of West Virginia, where he specialized in elocution and other branches of value in connection with his chosen profession. He was admitted to the bar in 1911, and has since been engaged in successful practice at Parsons. In 1912, on the republican ticket, he was elected prosecuting attorney of Tucker County, in which office he served four years and added materially to his professional equipment and prestige. Mr. Pritt served several years as chairman of the Republican County Committee of Tucker County, has been an effective campaign speaker and a delegate to state, congressional and judicial conventions of his party, as well as to the republican national convention of 1904 which nominated Roosevelt for the presidency, he having been sergeant at arms of the West Virginia delegation at this convention. In the World War period Mr. Pritt was one of the active workers in the local patriotic ranks, was a member of the Legal Advisory Board of his county, was a Four-Minute speaker in behalf of the Government loans and other war measures, and was chairman of the local committee in one of the drives of the Salvation Army. He is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Elks, Knights of Pythias, and the Beta Theta Pi college fraternity, and is a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, in which he has served as a trustee and as a conference delegate. He is still a bachelor.

CLAUDE FREDERICK CUNNINGHAM is an engineer by profession, was associated with railroad and other construction work for a number of years, and since locating at Huntington has carried on a large business with his private capital in the buying and selling of timber and mineral lands. He is also the present county surveyor of Cabell County.

Mr. Cunningham, who was born at Wallace in Harrison County, West Virginia, represents a branch of the Cunningham family that came out of Ireland to Virginia in Colonial times. His great-great-grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. His grandfather, Walter J. Cunningham, was born in old Virginia in 1832, and spent the greater part of his life as a farmer in Marion County, West Virginia, where he died at Peoria in 1903. He was a Union soldier in the Civil war. He married a Miss Walker, a native of old Virginia, who died in Marion County.

Ekana F. Cunningham, father of the Huntington business man, was born in Marion County, November 9, 1848, and as a young man removed to Harrison County, where he married and where he followed the trade and business of carpenter in the vicinity of Clarksburg. In 1911 he moved his family to Clarksburg, and died in that city November 6, 1921. He was a republican, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and in 1865 he enlisted and served during the few remaining months of the Civil war. Ekana F. Cunningham married Selma Hannah, who was born in Harrison County in 1844 and died at Bulltown in Braxton County in 1900. Their children were: Mattie, who died when one year old; Claude Frederick, who was born June 30, 1883; Clyde, who died at the age of four years; Clint, who died when nine years old; and Maude, wife of Charles Gaines, dispatcher for the Street Electric Railway Company at Clarksburg.

Claude Frederick Cunningham spent his younger life in a county district of Harrison County, attending school there and later, as his practical work and experience showed the need of it, he took correspondence courses and civil engineering with the American Correspondence School of Chicago and the International Correspondence School of Seranton. In the meantime, in 1903, at the age of twenty, he went to work in the engineer corps of the Wabash Railway, serving 1½ years in the capacity of rodman, for one year was instrument man with the C. C. & C. Railroad, for two years was transit man with the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, and was then promoted and for four years was stationed at Barboursville, West Virginia, as resident engineer. In the meantime he had studied diligently in the general field of engineering, and had completed his correspondence courses in 1908.

When Mr. Cunningham resigned from the Chesapeake and Ohio service in 1912 he took work as assistant engineer with the Louisville and Nashville Railroad at Birmingham, Alabama for three months, but in August of the same year came to Huntington, where he had an extensive business in the general practice of civil engineering until 1915. Since that year he has devoted his chief time and his capital to the real estate business, buying farms, coal lands and timber lands, handling all such transactions on his own account and doing no brokerage business. His offices are in the Stevenson Building at 1123-27 Fourth Avenue.

Mr. Cunningham was elected county surveyor of Cabell County in November, 1920, beginning his term of four years on January 1, 1921. He is a republican, and in the order of Masonry is affiliated with Minerva Lodge No. 13, A. F. and A. M., at Barboursville, Lodge of Perfection No. 4, and Knights of Rose Croix No. 4 of the Scottish Rite at Huntington, West Virginia Consistory No. 1 at Wheeling, and is a member of the Masonic Club of Wheeling, and Huntington Lodge No. 313, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On October 14, 1911, at Huntington, Mr. Cunningham married Miss Beulah Thompson, daughter of Robert T. and Ada (Burriss) Thompson, residents of Cincinnati, where her father is a passenger conductor with the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham have one son, Jack, born April 4, 1918.

WILLIAM HOMER WILSON, M. D. The First National Bank of St. Albans, of which Doctor Wilson is president, is an institution that has combined conservative banking with effective service to the community. A number of the best known citizens in that part of Kanawha County have been executive officers and directors of the bank.

The bank was established in January, 1910, and its capital is still maintained at $25,000, while the surplus and profits are nearly equal to the capital. The organizer of the bank was C. J. Pearson, who was its president until 1921. When he removed from St. Albans and resigned he was succeeded in August, 1921, by Dr. W. H. Wilson, who was one of the original directors and had been vice president for one year before his election to the presidency. The original vice president was M. W. Stark, who about two years ago left St. Albans. The first cashier was R. C. Sweet, who sold his interest to S. D. McGee, who for two years has been vice president and cashier. The bank now has total resources of about $500,000, and the deposits equal over eighty per cent of the resources. The bank has steadily paid dividend, and its stock is worth over $200.

Dr. W. H. Wilson was born at St. Albans, November 14, 1875. Oliver T. Wilson, his father, a building contractor, was also born at St. Albans, son of Samuel and Parthia (Teays) Wilson. Samuel Wilson came from Virginia when a young man and was a farmer and tobacco manufacturer. He died at the age of ninety-two, and his son Oliver T., at the age of seventy-three. Oliver T. Wilson married Mary C. Carpenter, and she is living.

Dr. W. H. Wilson grew up at St. Albans, where he attended the public schools, and in 1898 graduated from the Baltimore Medical College. He was at Washington the day the first shot was fired in the Spanish-American war. For three years he practiced as assistant physician in the insane asylum at Spencer, and another three years in the Hospital for the Insane at Huntington. This was a wonderful experience and a valuable training preceding his private practice. Since 1904 he has been engaged in a general practice at St. Albans, and is an able physician and surgeon as well as a successful banker. He is a member of the Kanawha County, West Virginia State and American Medical Associations.

C. F. Cunningham

E. F. Cunningham

Doctor Wilson has served several times on the St. Albans Council and also as mayor. He has been vice president and president of the Board of Trade, and is president of the High Lawn Land Company. He is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner, a member of the Knights of Pythias and president of the Rotary Club. Doctor Wilson married Kate L. Lackey, of St. Albans.

F. LORY & SONS. One of the older industrial establishments of Charleston, ante-dating the World war period, is F. Lory & Sons, planing mill operators. The business was established as a partnership in 1905, and in 1912 was incorporated. The business employs about twenty-five men, operates the machinery with power produced by natural gas engines, and makes a specialty of interior finish, flooring and house trim, mainly from hardwood lumber. Prior to 1905, when the business came to Charleston, F. Lory had operated a sawmill plant in Clay County.

F. Lory was born in Switzerland, and was brought when a boy to the United States, was reared in Ohio, and learned the sawmill operation in that state. In 1880 he moved to Kanawha County, and he was a figure in the lumber industry of the state until his death in 1914, at the age of sixty-six. The company also bought real estate and developed several desirable sections of residence property, and still owns some property of this kind in Charleston.

The four sons of F. Lory are now all identified with the business, Ed being president of the company, Fred, vice president, Albert, secretary and treasurer, and Christopher, also having a share in the work. They grew up along sawmills and planing mills, and Ed Lory has been president since the company was incorporated.

The mother of these sons is still living. Her maiden name was Anna Whitmer, and she was born at Switzerland, but was married in Ohio. Besides her sons there is a daughter, Elizabeth, wife of C. W. Burdette, of Charleston. The family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Ed Lory married Lottie Mayer, of Charleston. They have five children, John, Anna, Elizabeth, Dorothy and Louise.

FRENCH ARLINGTON YOKE. There is no class of men in the country today who are performing a more important service than that which has for its object the proper instruction of the rising generation through the medium of the public-school system. The conscientious educator of the twentieth century does not consider his obligation to his pupil by any means discharged when he has heard him recite, or has imparted to him the subject matter of the textbook. These duties are really of a secondary importance compared with the urgent need for awakening in the plastic mind a desire for further information and an appreciation of the high ideals in every walk of life. One of the young men of Monongalia County whose life so far has been devoted to the highest kind of educational work is French Arlington Yoke, superintendent of the Piedmont city schools, whose success in his chosen calling is generally recognized, and whose usefulness as a citizen is unquestioned.

French Arlington Yoke was born on Stone Coal Creek, Lewis County, West Virginia, April 18, 1891, and he is a son of Solomon Gordon Yoke, and grandson of John Yoke, the founder of the family in West Virginia, who came of English, Irish and Dutch descent. Professor Yoke can trace his family back in this country to an ancestor whose service as a soldier in the American Revolution gives to him and the other members of his family the right to membership in the Sons of the American Revolution and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Solomon Gordon Yoke was born in the same locality as Professor Yoke, the year of his birth being 1850. His educational training was limited to that given in the common schools, but he has always been a reader and student, and had little difficulty in qualifying himself for teaching school, and for eighteen years was numbered among the successful educators of Lewis County. During all of that time he was also engaged in farming, and after he retired from the schoolroom he devoted all of his time to agriculture until he moved to Morgantown to engage in the brokerage business. He is a democrat, and has served Lewis County as its assessor. For many years he has been a consistent member of the Methodist Protestant Church. He married Helen N. Wolverton, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Ferrel) Wolverton. James Wolverton was born in Scotland, but was brought to the United States by his parents when he was still a child, and he was reared at Big Bend, Calhoun County, West Virginia, where he was married. He took no active part in the war of the '60s, but was a prominent man of his locality, where he served as a magistrate, and he was influential in the ranks of the democratic party. In religious belief he was a Baptist. His life was devoted to farming, and he died at Big Bend. Mr. and Mrs. Solomon G. Yoke became the parents of the following children: Frank R., who is superintendent of the schools at Weston, West Virginia. Grace Elizabeth, who married W. H. S. White, president of Shepherd's College of West Virginia; and French Arlington, who is the youngest born.

Growing up in the midst of a highly intellectual atmosphere it was but natural that French Arlington Yoke should enter the profession which had claimed his father for so many years. After graduating from the preparatory school of the University of West Virginia, at Morgantown, he completed the literary course in that institution, and received his degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1915, since which time he has been actively engaged in educational work. His first school after leaving the university was that of West Union, and he remained there as superintendent. In 1917 he came to Piedmont to succeed W. H. S. White, his brother-in-law. Professor Yoke belongs to the county, state and national educational associations, and is a valued member of all of them, his original ideas and thorough grasp of the problems of the work giving him a high standing among his brother educators.

On October 27, 1915, Professor Yoke married at Oakland, Maryland, Helen Jo Lenhart, of Kingwood, West Virginia, a daughter of James A. Lenhart, of that city, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. Professor and Mrs. Yoke have one son, Kent Arlington, who was born September 22, 1919. Professor Yoke belongs to the college fraternity Phi Sigma Kappa. He has traveled the Masonic route from the Blue Lodge through the York Rites to Osiris Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Wheeling, West Virginia, and he belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias. Drawn in the Selective Draft, Professor Yoke was placed in Class 4 and was expecting to be called to the colors when the armistice was signed. Professor Yoke is earnest, sincere and thorough in his work, to which he is devoting the abilities of a really superior mentality, and the parents of Piedmont are fortunate indeed in having their children under his wise and watchful care and subject to the stimulus of his constant efforts in their behalf.

A. JAY VALENTINE, judge of the Twenty-first Judicial Circuit and a resident of Parsons, Tucker County, has been a business lawyer in that county for more than a third of a century, having tried his first case before reaching his majority. His is an unusual record for a West Virginia lawyer and judge, since he has never represented the defense in a criminal trial and has never appeared in a contested separation case between husband and wife. The civil and business branches of the law have been his special field, and it is also noteworthy that he was never a candidate for public office until he made the race for circuit judge.

Judge Valentine was born near Valley Furnace in Barbour County, March 8, 1866, son of Andrew and Rachel (Digman) Valentine, also natives of Barbour County, his mother being a daughter of George Digman. Andrew Valentine was a lieutenant in the Confederate army under General Imboden, and was never wounded in service, but for the last eleven months of the war was a prisoner at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio. He manifested the interest of a good citizen in politics and was a democrat. He died in 1887 and is buried near Montrose, West Virginia. The mother died in 1891. They had three children: Judge Valentine; Sarah E., wife of Stephen Murphy, of Montrose; and Carrie B., wife of Thomas Gross, of Levels, West Virginia.

A. Jay Valentine spent the first fifteen years of his life near the hamlet of Meadowville in Barbour County, on his father's farm. In 1882 the family moved to Randolph County, and another five years of his life were spent in the environment of a farm near Montrose. It was immediately after leaving this community that Judge Valentine began his professional work at St. George, then the county seat of Tucker County. His early education was acquired in the common schools and summer normal schools, and for four years he taught in the rural districts of Randolph County. As he looks back upon it Judge Valentine regards teaching as the hardest work he ever did. While teaching he became interested in the law, made some progress in his reading, and his two principal preceptors were the late A. C. Bowman of Barbour County and W. B. Maxwell, still practicing in Randolph County and a former member of the Tucker County bar. Mr. Valentine was admitted to the bar at Beverly, then the county seat of Randolph County, in 1887, taking his several examinations for admission, one under Judge A. B. Fleming, another under Judge Henry Brannon and another under Judge W. T. Iee. In his first year of practice he was associated with W. B. Maxwell, of St. George, West Virginia, but after a year he relied upon himself to handle all his law business. That business was principally in the commercial and corporation law, and before many years he had a very extensive clientele.

Judge Valentine is a republican without being a strict partisan, and increasing years and experience has made him less and less interested in partisan politics. He cast his first vote for Benjamin Harrison. In 1920 he was urged to make the race for judge of the Twenty-first Judicial Circuit. There were three competitors for the republican nomination, one of them being the presiding judge and the other two able lawyers. The judicial convention at Keyser which decided the matter held a session all night until 11 o'clock the following morning, before the conflicting partisans of the different candidates were harmonized in the nomination of Mr. Valentine, who was nominated on the 207th ballot. In the following election he led his ticket by several hundred votes and had a majority of 4,697 over his democratic opponent. Judge Valentine held his first term of court in Keyser in January, 1921, succeeding Judge Francis M. Reynolds on the bench.

At St. George, West Virginia, December 2, 1891, Judge Valentine married Lummie Kalar, a native of Tucker County, where her parents settled from old Virginia. Her father was Samuel D. Kalar, who married a Miss Mary Lee Gray. He was a farmer and died soon after the close of the Civil war, while Mrs. Valentine's mother lived until 1921, passing away at the age of eighty-four. In the Kalar family were the following children: Solomon W., of Parsons; Elam B., of Santa Cruz, California; Mrs. Valentine, who was born May 23, 1868, and was educated in the public schools; Mrs. Hoy Ferguson, of Randolph County; Mrs. Lloyd Collett, of Wheeling; Spencer Kalar, of Porterwood, West Virginia; and Lloyd Kalar of Parsons.

Judge and Mrs. Valentine had six children, two of whom died in infancy, and have one grandchild. Their daughter Zillah is the wife of Rev. A. B. Withers, of Louisville, Kentucky, and has a daughter Zillah Evelyn. Arthur, Jr., who was in the student army training corps during the World war, is now an automobile salesman at Parsons. Mark T. graduated in 1922 from the law school of West Virginia University. Paul, the youngest, is attending grammar school at Parsons.

Judge Valentine is a member of the Masonic Lodge and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. During the war he was a member of the Legal Advisory Board of Tucker County.

CHARLES E. KREBS, of Charleston, is a mining engineer and geologist of thirty years' experience and an acknowledged authority among the engineers and economic geologists in the coal districts of West Virginia. He is also an authority on oil and gas deposits in West Virginia and a member of the Western states.

Mr. Krebs was born at New Martinsville, Wetzel County, West Virginia, May 19, 1870, a son of John W. and Elizabeth (Hubacher) Krebs. His grandfather, Nicholas Krebs, was a native of Alsace-Lorraine, served as a soldier under the great Napoleon at the battle of Waterloo, and a year after that battle came with his family to America and settled in Ohio, where he lived until his death, in 1855, at the age of seventy years. John W. Krebs was born in Ohio, and spent his active life as a farmer and carpenter in Wetzel County, West Virginia, where he died in 1908, at the age of seventy-seven years.

Up to the age of sixteen Mr. Krebs lived on a farm, attended common schools, and from sixteen to nineteen he taught in rural schools. He then entered West Virginia University, where he pursued a scientific and engineering course, and graduated with the degree Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering in 1894.

The work he has done since graduation comprises a notable volume of professional interests. Up to 1897 he was engineer on location and construction of the Charleston-Cleiden & Sutton Railroad from Charleston to Elkins. During 1898-1900 he was a mining engineer in the New River coal field. In 1900 he became a member of the firm Clark & Krebs, and for eight years did prospecting and development work on coal properties, railroad construction, the building of coke ovens and the study of the different coal measures in West Virginia and Kentucky. In 1908 Mr. Krebs was appointed assistant geologist of the West Virginia Geological Survey, and worked as assistant to the distinguished Dr. I. C. White, West Virginia's grand old man of science. For six years he gathered data, made investigations of the resources of West Virginia, and submitted these data for publication to Doctor White. The detailed reports published by the survey, based on the data supplied by Mr. Krebs, are as follows: Detailed report of Jackson, Mason and Putnam counties 1911; Cabell, Wayne and Lincoln counties, 1913; Kanawha County, 1914; Boone County, 1915; Raleigh, Summers and Mercer counties, 1916.

Since 1915 Mr. Krebs has been engaged in general geological work and mining engineering in West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and several Western states. He has made a specialty of reports and valuation of coal, oil and gas properties. In 1919 he published the Fuel Ratio of Coal, showing the qualities of the West Virginia coals as compared with those of Ohio. During the years 1921-22 he assisted the state tax commissioner of West Virginia in making a small valuation of the coal lands in West Virginia for state taxation purposes.

Mr. Krebs is a member of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, and has been secretary of the Charleston section of that association. He is also a member of the West Virginia Coal Mining Institute. Before a convention of coal and mining engineers at Huntington in September, 1921, he read a carefully prepared article on coal deposits and production of Southern West Virginia. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, is a Knight Templar and Thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner, and is a charter member of the Rotary Club.

In 1899 Mr. Krebs married Miss Donnie Carr, of Clay County, West Virginia. She died two years later. In 1905 he married Josephine Stephens, of Paden City, West Virginia. They have one son, Charles Gregory, born December 10, 1907, and is now attending high school.

FRANK P. REASE, who is familiarly known by his title of captain, which he gained in his youth as a captain of a river boat, has been a prominent figure in connection with civic and industrial development and progress in West Virginia, where he is one of the representative and influential citizens of Beilington, Barbour County.

Captain Rease was born near Corning, Steuben County, New York, October 6, 1862, and is a son of Peter and Lucy N. (Watrous) Rease, the former of whom was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and the latter in Susquehanna

C. E. Krebs

County, that state. Peter Rease was born in the year 1808, and he became a successful merchant at Corning, New York, where also he conducted a hotel and was engaged in the manufacturing of lime, his death having there occurred in June, 1873, and his widow, who was born February 12, 1814, having died in 1888. Both were earnest communicants of the Protestant Episcopal Church and he was a democrat in politics. Of their children the eldest, Morris, who served as captain of engineers in the Union army in the Civil war, eventually became chief engineer of the Union Pacific Railroad, and he retained this position until his death at St. Louis, Missouri. Louise married B. N. Wentz, and after his death became the wife of A. J. Owen, her death having occurred at Wyalusing, Pennsylvania. Henry, a Union soldier in the Civil war, took part in the historic Red River campaign under General Banks, and died while in service and is buried at New Orleans. Helen is the wife of William H. Herriek, of Hollywood, California. Frank P., of this review, is the youngest of the number.

Capt. Frank Pierce Rease gained his early education in the public schools of Corning, New York, where he completed the curriculum of the high school. In connection with his father's business activities he early became identified with the operation of canal boats, and he served as captain of boats plying between Corning, New York, and Newark, New Jersey, in the transportation of lumber, steel rails and limestone. He was captain of a boat when but sixteen years of age, and continued his service until he was nineteen, when he was made superintendent of the Corning quarry which supplied stone for the building of the State Reformatory at Elmira and for the Beecher Church in that city. Leaving this position, he became outside superintendent of mines for the Fallbrook Coal & Railroad Company at Fallbrook, Pennsylvania, where he remained two years. This was during the reign of the "Molly Maguires," an unlawful organization which attempted to dictate policies in operating mines and the members of which became outlaws by the thousands, the while they terrorized mining communities and shed much innocent blood. Captain Rease gained the enmity of this organization and caricature of skull and crossbones was placed on the door of his home as a warning. After leaving Fallbrook he was transferred to Corning as baggage master and freight agent on the railroad operated by the same company, and finally became a train conductor. January 1, 1880, he became general superintendent of the Butler Colliery Company at Pittston, Pennsylvania, in the service of which corporation he continued twelve years. He then, in 1892, came to West Virginia to assume charge of development work for the United States Coal & Iron Company in Randolph County, where he opened the company's first mine and erected its first tippie, at Harding. He became concerned also in the construction of the company's service railroad, and soon after the completion of the Roaring Creek & Charleston Railroad, the Roaring Creek & Belington line also was constructed, this work having been done under the auspices of the Berwind, White Coal Mining Company, which bought out the other concern. The Belington & Beaver Creek Railroad was next built, between Belington and Weaver, to open up the coal owned by Captain Rease himself, the road having been built by Rease and Weaver. Captain Rease managed the mines and several railroads until 1901, when the properties were sold, the railroad lines being absorbed by other railroad companies.

Captain Rease then turned his attention to other development work, including the construction of the Consumers Heat, Light, Water & Power Company's plant at Belington. He was the originator of the enterprise for utilizing the power of the Middle Fork of the Tygart River in the developing of a system for the supplying of water and electricity for adjoining cities and towns of this section of the state. In this connection the Highland Water and Power Company was organized. They made surveys through Fairmont, Grafton and other places, and then sold the controlling interest to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, which has failed thus far to institute further development work. Captain Rease is still interested in mining properties that are producing coal successfully, and is still Southern representative of the Berwind, White Coal Mining Company. He was associated in the establishment of the first banking institution at Belington, and was president of the Belington National Bank until its consolidation with the First National Bank, of which he continues a director. He has lived at Belington since it was a village of less than 100 population, and has been an influential force in the development and upbuilding of the now thriving little city, of which he has served several terms as mayor, besides having been president of the Board of Education. He cast his first presidential vote for Samuel J. Tilden, and has since continued unflinching allegiance to the democratic party. He is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity.

On the 7th of January, 1873, at Corbetsville, New York, Captain Rease wedded Miss Anna C. Corbett, who was born at Corbetsville, that state, April 10, 1852, a daughter of Ira and Juliette (Bowes) Corbett. Mr. Corbett was born in Broome County, New York, and was there a successful farmer and extensive lumber manufacturer. Mrs. Rease was the sixth in a family of five sons and five daughters, of whom two sons and four daughters are living at the time of this writing, in 1922. Captain and Mrs. Rease became the parents of three children: Lena is the wife of A. H. Woodford, of Belington, and they have three children; Adelaide died in young womanhood; and Louanna is the wife of Rev. A. C. Carty, chaplain at the United States Navy Yard at Philadelphia, they having one child.

JESSE G. LAWSON, president and the organizer of the First National Bank of Bridgeport, Harrison County, has been one of the world's constructive workers, has enjoyed his work and has found life full of compensation. He has shown a fine sense of civic and personal stewardship, and has been specially interested in educational affairs.

Mr. Lawson is a native son of Harrison County, his birth having occurred on the family homestead farm on Bushy Fork of Elk Creek, seven miles south of Bridgeport, on the 17th of February, 1856. He is a son of Abner and Magdalena (Nutter) Lawson, who passed their entire lives in Harrison County, where the respective families were founded in the early pioneer days. Abner Lawson was one of the substantial farmers and honored citizens of Harrison County, and was influential in community affairs of public order.

After receiving the discipline of the rural schools Jesse G. Lawson was for two terms a student in West Virginia College at Flemington, Taylor County. Later he continued his studies in well conducted "pay schools" in his native county and in Lewis County, and he put his acquirements to practical test when he became a teacher in the rural schools, his first term of school having been taught in Lewis County, in 1877, and he having later been a successful teacher in the schools of Harrison County. He continued his activities in the pedagogic profession for twenty years, was progressive in his attitude, broadened his studies to meet the requirements of the advancing standards in local educational affairs, and did a service of enduring value, as is ever true when practical aid is given in teaching the youth of any locality in any period. Mr. Lawson's deep appreciation of the value of popular education has caused him to maintain at all times a deep interest in the furthering of educational work in his home county and state.

In 1896 Mr. Lawson was elected assessor of what was then known as the lower assessment district of Harrison County, of which office he continued the incumbent four years, besides which he served four years as deputy assessor. While engaged in teaching he maintained his home on his well improved farm on Bushy Creek, a property which he still owns, though Bridgeport has been his place of residence since March 17, 1898.

In 1920 Mr. Lawson became one of the leading promoters in the organization of the First National Bank of Bridgeport, and through his vigorous and well ordered campaign was effected the sale of all of the stock of the new institution, which received its charter on the 19th of October of that year and which bases its operations on a capital stock of $50,000. He was elected president of the bank, and as its chief executive has directed its policies with characteristic discrimination and ability. In politics Mr. Lawson gives staunch allegiance to the republican party, he is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, and he and his family hold membership in the Methodist Protestant Church at Bridgeport, he being a teacher in its Sunday School and the leader of the parents' class in the same.

On the 8th of September, 1897, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Lawson and Miss Minnie C. Henry, of Tycononell, Taylor County, she being a daughter of John H. and Eliza (Marker) Henry. Mr. and Mrs. Lawson have three children: Marion G., who remains at the parental home, is a musician of exceptional and well developed talent; Magdalena H. is, in 1922, a student in Western Maryland College at Westminster, Maryland, where she is preparing herself for teaching; and John H. Abner is a member of the senior class in the Bridgeport High School.

ORIN C. BRADLEY, D. V. S., is one of the skilled and successful veterinary surgeons of Monongalia County, where he controls a substantial practice, with residence and professional headquarters at Crossroads, Battelle District, on one of the rural mail routes from Wadestown, and about thirty miles west of Morgantown, the county seat.

Doctor Bradley was born in Venango County, Pennsylvania, and the place of his nativity, Bradletown, is a village that was named in honor of his grandfather, John J. Bradley. The latter's son and namesake, John J., Jr., passed his entire life in that immediate section of the old Keystone State, and there his son, Doctor Bradley of this sketch, was reared to adult age. He made good use of the educational advantages afforded him and at the age of eighteen years began teaching in the district schools of his native county. Thereafter he continued his studies in the Pennsylvania State Normal School at Edinboro, and in preparing for his profession he took a course in a leading veterinary college in the City of Toronto, Canada, and in the National Veterinary College at Washington, D. C., in which latter he was graduated in 1892, the school later becoming affiliated with Georgetown University. Instead of receiving the gold medal customarily awarded for highest class standing in the college Doctor Bradley was more emphatically honored by the faculty of the institution in being accorded the highest-grade diploma, together with the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Surgery. Nine years after his graduation the Doctor took an effective post-graduate course in the Chicago Veterinary College, which holds highest rank of all institutions of the kind in the United States.

In 1894 Doctor Bradley established himself in the practice of his profession at Mannington, Marion County, West Virginia, where he remained until 1905, when he removed to his present place of residence in Monongalia County. In 1900 he served as mayor of Mannington, the charter of which city had been amended in such a way as to lead to a period of splendid civic and material advancement, in which Doctor Bradley, as mayor, played an influential part. At Crossroads Doctor Bradley owns and resides upon a fine farm of 418 acres, to the active management of which he gives his attention, besides continuing in the practice of his profession and having been for fifteen years associated with oil-production industry, in which connection he is president of the Moon Oil & Gas Company, which is conducting successful operations on three large farms near Salem, Harrison County. Doctor Bradley became associated also with the late G. M. Allender, of Fairmont, in oil operations in Harrison and Monongalia counties, with about eighteen wells and with two strings of drilling tools. This enterprise was conducted under the firm name of Bradley & Allender until the death of Mr. Allender in 1916, when Doctor Bradley purchased the interests of his deceased partner. He gives much of his time to his oil-producing interests. He has high standing in his profession, has done considerable professional service for the state and is a valued member and for two years president of the West Virginia State Veterinary Association. Doctor Bradley is one of the progressive business men and loyal and public-spirited citizens of his adopted state, finds his chief recreation in hunting and fishing expeditions, is specially vigorous in supporting the construction of good roads, is a Knight Templar Mason and in the time-honored fraternity has received also the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite.

In April, 1905, Doctor Bradley wedded Mrs. Alice (Barr) Carrothers, widow of A. J. Carrothers, of Crossroads, Monongalia County, where he had been a representative agriculturist and stock-grower of his native county. He was born near Morgantown and his death occurred in 1896. Mr. and Mrs. Carrothers became the parents of four children, Edna, Mary, John and Audrey. For a portion of the time after their marriage Doctor and Mrs. Bradley resided at Fairmont in order that the children might there attend school, the summer seasons being passed on the farm at Crossroads. Mrs. Bradley passed to the life eternal in the year 1910, and the Doctor kept his stepchildren together and cared for them with true paternal solicitude. Edna, eldest of the children, is, in 1921, a student in Boston University, where she is taking a course that shall prepare her for religious service in the rural districts of her native state, she having already taken active part in Sunday-School work in West Virginia. Mary, who is a graduate nurse of marked ability, is now engaged in public-health nursing service in the mountain districts of West Virginia. John is actively associated with the work and management of the home farm. Audrey graduated from Mount de Chantel Academy at Wheeling, is a talented teacher of music and is at the head of children's Sunday School work in Monongalia County.

THE McBEE FAMILY, originally Machees, are of Scotch Highland extraction. The history of the family in West Virginia begins in the days of the Revolution in which some members were engaged. Sometime previous to 1790, a sister and five brothers crossed the Blue Ridge from Virginia, one of the boys stopping in Baltimore. The other four settled at Cheat Neck, and on the property now owned by John Pringle. They built a block house for defense against the Indians, remains of which may still be seen. One of the four, William, started back to Virginia after the completion of this fort, and was never heard of afterward. Another of them, Philip, later moved to Grant County, Kentucky. The two who remained here were Alexander, nicknamed "Sonny" and Zadoc. To their sister's husband, Joseph Pope, Jr., Governor Robert Brooke granted a patent bearing the date October 6, 1788, for 400 acres of land on Booth's Creek. This tract is now owned in part by Sanford and Zadoc Thomas, great-grandsons of Zadoc, who died in 1819.

Alexander died in 1828, leaving four children, Mary, who married John England, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; William, Walter and Zadoc Thomas. It is with son Zadoc Thomas and his descendants that this history is chiefly concerned. He was born at Clinton Furnace, May 16, 1814, and died there March 23, 1895. His wife was Sarah Steel, daughter of Thomas and Eleanor (Thorn) Steel. She was born at Steele Farm, now owned by Brice De Vault, October 12, 1809, and died December 23, 1858. Thomas McBee was a man of most exemplary character. He put into daily practice his belief that everyone should be honest and industrious, and he was faithful in carrying out every obligation he ever assumed. He was a staunch democrat, and was for years a deacon in the Goshen Baptist Church. Of his four children the oldest was Thomas H. The second, Cordelia A., born January 1, 1842, was married to Eugene Lanham March 13, 1866, and she died December 20, 1913, leaving five children, named Flora, Thomas, Frank, Harvey and George. Caleb Nelson, the third of the family, born September 17, 1843, was a Union soldier in Company C of the Fourteenth West Virginia Infantry, and died November 14, 1864, from wounds received at the battle of Carter's Farm in Virginia July 24, 1864. He died at Clayersville, Maryland, and was buried in the McBee family cemetery at Ridgedale. The youngest of the children of Thomas McBee was Elizabeth, who was born June 15, 1847, was married December 31, 1868, to Thomas Price, and died May 15, 1902, being survived by children Darius, William, Fleming, Marshall, Walter and Tana.

Guy W Burnside

Thomas H. McBee was born at Clinton Furnace June 14, 1838, and in many ways his life was typical of the sturdy example set him by his father. He was reared on the farm, had a subscription school education and in 1861 enlisted to help preserve the Union. He served with Company A of the Third West Virginia Infantry, later being transferred to the Second West Virginia Cavalry, and while in the army he participated in the battles of McDowell's Bluff, Cross Keys, Rappahannock, Bull Run, Hedgesville, Rocky Gap and Drop Mountain. December 27, 1864, he married Amelia Cartwright, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca Cartwright, of English ancestry. Amelia was born April 4, 1841, at Rosedale, across the Monongahela River from Point Marion, in Fayette County, Pennsylvania. Following his marriage Thomas H. McBee moved to a farm at Halleck in Clinton District of Monongalia County, where he became one of the most prosperous farmers and business men in that section, always a man of influence in his community. Physically he was a magnificent specimen of manhood, standing six feet, 2½ inches, weighing 250 pounds. His inexhaustible energy he applied to farming and business in a way to return success, and out of his prosperity he was able to assist his neighbors and to give all his children who desired it a college education. A staunch republican, he was proud of the fact that he had helped preserve the union of states and delighted in the companionship of his old army comrades. He was a member of the Baptist Church. He died December 13, 1900, and on January 9, 1909, his wife Amelia, passed away at Morgantown. Of their ten children five reached mature years. The oldest of these, Charles L., is a resident of Morgantown and by his marriage to Allie Dorsey has three children, Maude, Robert and Mazie. The second, Perry Caleb, who graduated in 1896 from the University of West Virginia, spent twenty years of his life as a city school superintendent in this state, earning a high place in educational affairs. He served one term in the State Legislature as representative from Monongalia County, and at the time of his death, May 5, 1918, was actively engaged in the coal business, owning and operating the Mile Ground Coal Mine Company. He married Ethel Carle, who survives him. The third child, Repta, lives with her brother Doctor McBee. Claude studied in West Virginia University, graduated from Delaware, Ohio, Business College, was for several years connected with the public schools and is now in the coal business at Morgantown. He married Lena Griffin of Kentucky.

Thomas Judson McBee the youngest of the family, passed his earlier years on his father's farm near Halleck, West Virginia. He attended public school there, was a student in the University of West Virginia during 1900-01, and in 1905 received his M. D. degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore. Following this his hospital experience was in the Mercy Hospital at Baltimore, and from 1906 to 1911 he practiced his profession at Elkins. For the past ten years his home and professional headquarters have been at Morgantown.

At the time America joined the allies in the war against Germany Doctor McBee was appointed by the Governor as medical member of the Monongalia County Draft Board. He resigned in August, 1917, to become a casual officer in the Medical Corps of the Army, and was soon assigned to the British Royal Army Medical Corps. With the British he saw service in England, Ireland and Italy, and later was recalled to the American Army and assigned to the New York Post-Graduate Unit at Base Hospital No. 8 at Savenay, France. One incident of his service was supervising as medical officer the transport of a shipload of wounded soldiers back to the United States. He received his honorable discharge at Camp Dix on March 6, 1919, and at once returned to Morgantown and resumed his professional work.

Doctor McBee is a member of the County, State and American Medical Associations. He is a past commander of General Daniel Morgan Post No. 548 Veterans of Foreign Wars, department surgeon of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of West Virginia, and is affiliated with Morgantown Union Lodge No. 4, A. F. and A. M., and Morgantown Lodge No. 411, B. P. O. E. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club. His career as a professional man and as a medical officer in the World war is highly creditable to the McBee family, which is one of the oldest and most honored in Monongalia County.

GUY HERMAN BURNSIDE. The legal profession in Harrison County finds one of its able and successful representatives in the native son whose name initiates this paragraph, Mr. Burnside having been born at Good Hope, this county, October 3, 1885, and being now well established in the practice of his profession at Clarksburg, the county seat. He is a son of William Calvin Burnside and Ada Melena (Post) Burnside.

William C. Burnside was born in Lewis County, this state, March 8, 1861, and was a resident of Clarksburg, Harrison County, at the time of his death, April 8, 1919. He was a son of John S. and Jenima (Yerky) Burnside, the names of the other children of the family being as follows: Jacob Patterson, Mary R., John G., Robert B., Stephen M., Elizabeth A. and George W. John S. Burnside was a son of Robert and Rebecca (Bennett) Burnside, the former of whom was a son of John Burnside, who was twenty-one years of age when he left his native Ireland, came to the United States and established his home in the neighborhood of Good Hope, in what is now Harrison County, West Virginia, where he passed the remainder of his life.

After having profited by the curriculum of the public schools William Calvin Burnside continued his studies in the State Normal School at Fairmont. In 1881 he began teaching in the schools of his native county, and he continued his effective pedagogic service three years. From 1884 to 1888 he was manager of a general store at Good Hope, and he then became associated with his father-in-law, Isaac L. Post, in organizing the Economy Stone Company. They continued the business successfully until 1895, when they sold the property and business. Thereafter Mr. Burnside owned and operated a flour mill at West Milford for six years. In 1897 he became a traveling salesman, and in 1903 he removed with his family to Clarksburg. Here he was engaged in the mercantile business from 1906 to 1908, and later he continued his services as a successful traveling salesman for several years. He continued his residence at Clarksburg until the time of his death, and was a man who commanded unqualified popular esteem and confidence.

On the 14th of September, 1884, William C. Burnside wedded Miss Ada Melena Post, who still maintains her home at Clarksburg. She was born in Harrison County, on the 3d of April, 1865. Mr. and Mrs. Burnside became the parents of eight children, namely: Guy Herman, Enoch Ray, Roy Zelot, Howard Thaddeus, Martha Rachel, John Isaac, Celia Elizabeth and William Calvin, Jr.

Guy H. Burnside was graduated in the West Virginia State Normal School at Fairmont on the 13th of June, 1906, and thereafter was for two years associated with his father in the retail grocery business. In the autumn of 1908 he entered the University of West Virginia, where he took an academic course of one year and where he thereafter continued his studies in the law department until his graduation, June 13, 1911, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Thereafter he held an executive position in the title department of the United Fuel & Gas Company at Charleston until October, 1913. On the 1st of January, 1914, he opened an office at Clarksburg, where he has since continued in the successful practice of his profession, besides having developed a prosperous real-estate business, in which connection he is now vice president of the Stealey Realty Company.

Mr. Burnside has taken loyal interest in political affairs and has served as a member of the Republican Executive Committee of Harrison County. He has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite of the Masonic fraternity, and is a knight commander of the Court of Honor, besides being affiliated with the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Delta Tau Delta college fraternity. He and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

December 28, 1911, recorded the marriage of Mr. Burnside and Miss Ada Stealey, daughter of Andrew L. and Emma Jane (Baltzley) Stealey, of Harrison County. Mr. and Mrs. Burnside have a winsome little daughter, Emma Jane.

HERMAN GUY KUMP. The practice of the law has been the field in which Herman Guy Kump has made a distinguished career at the city of Elkins. He is one of the prominent younger men at the West Virginia bar, was an officer in the War Department during the World war, is the present mayor of Elkins, and is a member of an old and prominent family in the eastern section of the state.

He was born at Capon Springs, Hampshire County, October 31, 1877. His great-grandfather, Henry Kump, was a native of Pennsylvania of Holland-Dutch ancestry, served as a Virginia soldier in some of the early Colonial wars and was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. And was a pioneer settler in Hampshire County. His son, Jacob Kump, was born in Hampshire County and married Julia Milsagle. Benjamin Franklin Kump, father of the Elkins lawyer, was born in Hampshire County in 1841, served as a confederate soldier in Company K of the Eighteenth Virginia Cavalry, was a life-long democrat in politics and lived in close communion with the Presbyterian Church. He died in 1915, having spent his active years on the farm. He married Frances Rudolph, who was born in Hampshire County in 1841, the same year as her husband, and is still living. Her parents, Sylvester and Nancy (Clutter) Rudolph, were also natives of Hampshire County. Nancy Clutter's mother was a Miss Dewing, of a prominent Virginia family of Revolutionary stock. The four children of Benjamin F. Kump and wife were: Garnett Kerr Kump, a lawyer and state senator, a leader in educational and good roads legislation, a resident of Romney; Herman Guy; Volunta, Mrs. E. V. Miller, of Petersburg, West Virginia; and Otelia, deceased wife of John Philip Harless.

Herman Guy Kump spent his early life on the farm in Hampshire County, attended the common schools there, and subsequently entered the University of Virginia, where he completed his law course and graduated LL. B. in 1905. Mr. Kump has been in active practice at Elkins since graduation, and had made a successful record as a lawyer before he entered politics. He was elected as democratic candidate in 1908 prosecuting attorney of Randolph County. He was again elected to the same office in 1912. Mr. Kump was elected mayor of Elkins for a term of two years in March, 1921, and as mayor he has given that city a thoroughly progressive, business-like and economical administration of its affairs. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce. Is a past president of the Rotary Club, is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Elks, is a member of the American Legion, and attends the Presbyterian Church.

He volunteered for service in the World war in June, 1918, and received a commission as captain and was assigned to duty with the Ordnance Department at Washington, continuing there until after the signing of the armistice. Mr. Kump married in 1907 Miss Edna Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Scott, of Elkins. They have a family of six children, as follows: Cyrus Scott, Frances Irvine, Margaret Rudolph, Elizabeth Logan, Mary Gamble and Benjamin Franklin.

CLARENCE B. PIFER is mayor of Parsons and one of the most active of the business men and citizens of that River City. He is a man of good education, was a teacher until he entered merchandising, and possesses the qualifications that give the individual an opportunity for influence and service in a community.

He was born in Clover District of Tucker County, October 12, 1879. His grandfather, Andrew Pifer, was a farmer in the same district, and owned a large body of land there. His interests were rather closely confined to his farm and his immediate community. He was a republican and a Methodist. By his first marriage his children were: Frank;

D. S.; Caroline, who married Thomas Miller; Nettie, who married James Bolyard; and Mrs. John Carrieco. His second wife was Elizabeth James and she was the mother of Lewis King Pifer; John Wesley Pifer; Keturah, who died at Parsons, the wife of Robert Murphy; and Spencer.

Lewis King Pifer, father of the Parsons mayor, was born in Tucker County, and devoted his active lifetime to the farm. He had a country school education, and he voted as a republican and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died in May, 1895, when about fifty years of age. He married in Preston County Miss Belle Bishop, who lives at Parsons and is now Mrs. Belle McCoy. She was a daughter of Mack Bishop, a merchant of Fellowsville, Preston County, and member of a well known family in that section. Lewis K. Pifer and wife reared only two children: Clarence Bishop and Pearl, the latter of whom died as the wife of Porter Bennett at Tanner, West Virginia.

Clarence B. Pifer received a common schools education in Barbour County. At the age of seventeen he taught his first term of school, and he was active in the profession for a period of ten years, his last work being done as principal of the Parsons school at the age of twenty-seven. While teaching he carried on the highest studies of the West Virginia University at Morgantown for two years. After resigning as principal of the schools he engaged in the clothing business at Parsons, and conducts one of the leading stores in the county seat.

He has always been a republican in politics. He was elected mayor in April, 1920, and re-elected in April, 1922. He entered the office as successor to M. B. West. During his administration he cleared up the indebtedness left by the former administration, and his service has been one of general satisfaction to all good citizens. During the World war period he was a Four Minute Speaker in behalf of the Liberty Bond and Stamp sales and other auxiliary work. Mr. Pifer is president of the Business Men's Club of Parsons, known as the River City Club. He has twice served as chancellor of the Parsons Lodge of Knights of Pythias and has sat in the Grand Lodge.

At Basic City, Virginia, September 10, 1914, Mr. Pifer married Miss Mildred Weaver, who was born at Madison Court House, Virginia, in 1891, daughter of E. D. and Bessie (Jones) Weaver. She finished her education in Powhatan College at Charles Town, and was a teacher in the schools at Parsons when she met her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Pifer have three children, Lewis Weaver, Melba and Robert Theodore.

LEWIS H. PERRY. The oldest industry of the town of Parsons, established when there was practically nothing to distinguish the site from the surrounding region, is the Parsons Tannery, now operated as the J. K. Mosser Company and owned by the Armour interests. It is one of the largest and best equipped plants of the kind in West Virginia.

The founder of the business was Thomas B. Gould, a man of prominence in the public affairs of West Virginia and of extensive business connections. It was located in 1893, the plant being moved here from Milton, Northumberland County, Pennsylvania. The first side of leather was turned out at the new location in July, 1894, by the present superintendent, Lewis H. Perry, who came here from Milton, Pennsylvania, and who has been in charge of the industry at Parsons for nearly thirty years. There has never been a real interruption to the continued operation of this industry. Mr. Perry had been with the same plant at Milton for nearly ten years, before coming to Parsons, and when he closed the plant at Parsons temporarily at the end of the season in July, 1922, he will have spent almost forty years of his life as a tanner.

The Parsons plant has a capacity of 1,500,000 pounds of finished leather every thirteen weeks. The product is heavy oak sole leather. The run every day is 700 sides, and in the course of a year an enormous aggregate of steer hides are utilized. The raw material comes from the meat packers of the West and from the packing plants of South America as well. In point of mechanical facilities this is one of the most modern tanneries in operation today. It is electrically equipped throughout, the entire plant having been remodeled during 1921.

Will A. Quimby M.D.

Mr. Lewis H. Perry, the superintendent, was born in Chemung County, New York, February 5, 1860. His grandfather was also a tanner and died in the vicinity of Wirtsboro, New York. Simeon Perry, father of Lewis, was born in Connecticut, where he spent his youth and early manhood, learned the trade of mason, and from Connecticut removed to Sullivan County, New York. He lived at Monticello in that county, and died there in 1866, when about forty-two years of age. He married Della Gray, of Sullivan County, daughter of David Gray, a farmer in the Monticello community. Mrs. Simeon Perry died in 1904 at Elmira, New York, as Mrs. Lane. The children by her first marriage were six in number: Caroline, who married Nathan Brown and died at Corning, New York; Miss Lydia, deceased; Ida, wife of Jesse A. Mitchell, of Horseheads, New York; David K., of Elmira, New York; Lewis Hornbeck; and Edward F., of Elmira. The only one of these to have children of their own is Lewis H. Perry.

Lewis H. Perry grew to manhood in Chemung County, New York, and remained there until the age of twenty-three, when he moved to Pennsylvania. He acquired a common school education. He became a foreman in the Milton Tannery at Milton, Pennsylvania, and joined that industry in 1889, about the time of the great Johnstown flood. Mr. Perry had the practical supervision of the removal and installation of the machinery at the new plant at Parsons. He saw the site when it was a cornfield, and when there was not a wagon bridge in all of Tucker County. The entire delta on which the plant is built was then almost a sea of mud, and there was only one store in Parsons proper. He was here when the records of the county were removed from St. George to Parsons. When he brought his wife to this community one of his first acts in order to enable her to get around was to purchase a pair of gum boots.

Mr. Perry has performed a great service to Parsons as superintendent of the town's oldest industry, but has worked with other citizens in promoting matters connected with the general welfare. He has served on the city council, has been secretary of Parsons Lodge No. 39, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, is a past master of Pythagoras Lodge No. 128, A. F. and A. M., and is a director of the Tucker County Bank. He has also been active in republican politics. His first vote in West Virginia was cast for Gordon Dayton, candidate for Congress, in 1894. He has served on the Republican County Committee at various times and is still a member. He has attended senatorial and state conventions, and he cast his first vote for president in 1884, for James G. Blaine, while at Elmira, New York.

At Horseheads, New York, August 29, 1882, Mr. Perry married Josephine Chandler, who was born at Chester, New York, December 8, 1859, youngest of the six daughters of John Chandler and wife. She has four surviving sisters: Mrs. Helen Stanard, of Newark Valley, New York; Mrs. Sarah R. Jenkins, of Elmira; Mrs. Francella Phelps, of Millport, New York; and Mrs. Harriet E. Farr, of Parsons.

The only child born to Mr. and Mrs. Perry was a son, Maurice M., born May 25, 1887, at Breesport, New York. He was educated at Parsons and at Keyser, was deputy county clerk of Tucker County, bookkeeper in the office of the tannery and finally assistant to his father. He died of the influenza October 22, 1918. His wife was Georgie V. Kee, and he is survived by a son, Lewis Phillips.

During the World war the Parsons tannery was operated by Mr. Perry at its full capacity, the Government taking all the products. Besides keeping the industry going he was associated with other patriotic citizens in promoting the success of the various loan drives and other campaigns.

DAVID WALLACE THURSTON, editor and publisher of the Parsons Advocate at Parsons, judicial center of Tucker County, was born at Waverly, New York, March 12, 1885, and was eight years of age at the time of the family removal to West Virginia, where the home was shortly afterward established at Parsons, he having here profited fully by the advantages afforded in the public schools, including the high school. In his school vacations Mr. Thurston gained his initial experience in the "art preservative of all arts" by service in the office of the Mountain State Patriot. Later he was employed as a compositor and general workman in the office of the Mountain State Patriot, and in September, 1907, he became identified with the paper of which he is now editor and publisher. On the 1st of July, 1913, he leased the plant and business of the Parsons Advocate, and under this lease he continued the publication until November, 1919, when he became owner of the property. The Advocate was founded in 1896 by A. A. Dorsey, who in 1907 sold it to the Cheat Valley Publishing Company, from which Mr. Thurston acquired it in 1919, as above noted. The paper has continuously been an influential local advocate of the principles and policies of the republican party, and under the present control is an especially effective exponent of local and community interests, with an excellent corps of correspondents throughout Tucker County, of which county it is the official paper. The excellence of the paper as a news vehicle and as a director of popular thought and action is shown in the fact that its circulation has been extended largely outside the limits of Tucker County. Mr. Thurston is secretary of the Republican Central Committee of Tucker County and chairman of the Parsons City Committee of the party. He has been influential in the local councils and campaign activities of the "Grand Old Party," and cast his first presidential vote for Col. Theodore Roosevelt, in 1904.

Mr. Thurston is a stockholder in the Philippi Blanket Mill, the Dr. O. A. Miller Chemical Company, and with the local company engaged in development work in the oil and gas fields of Oklahoma. He has passed the official chairs in the Parsons Council of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, and in their home city he and his wife are active and valued members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Mrs. Thurston having charge of the cradle work of its Sunday school.

April 27, 1912, recorded the marriage of Mr. Thurston and Miss Vesta S. Kryder, who was born at Jersey Shore, Pennsylvania, the fourth in order of birth of the nine children of Amos and Blanche (Moran) Kryder, who came to West Virginia when Mrs. Thurston was a child, she having been educated in the schools of Davis and Parsons, this state. Mr. and Mrs. Thurston became the parents of three daughters, Gladys and Grace, twins, the former of whom died March 26, 1920, and Lila Pet.

Mr. Thurston is a son of Daniel Wallace Thurston and Clarissa L. (Wiggins) Thurston, whose marriage was solemnized at Williamsport, Pennsylvania. Daniel W. Thurston, who died at Parsons, West Virginia, November 18, 1920, at the age of seventy-nine years, was born and reared in the State of New York and represented the same as a gallant young soldier of the Union in the Civil war, he having been a member of Company I, One Hundred and Ninth New York Volunteer Infantry, which was assigned to the Army of the Potomac, and with which he served until the close of the war. He took part in many engagements, including the battles of Petersburg and Antietam, and having been once wounded in the hip. He was one of the honored comrades of the post of the Grand Army of the Republic at Parsons at the time of his death. His widow, aged seventy-one years (1922), still resides at Parsons. She is a native of New York State, a daughter of the late John Wiggins. Alta R., eldest of the children, is the wife of E. D. Shuck, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; LaPetite LaFay is a valued assistant of her brother in the office of the Parsons Advocate, and this brother, the only son, is the immediate subject of this review.

WILL A. QUIMBY, M. D. A Wheeling physician, Doctor Quimby after several years of general practice specialized in X-Ray and Radium work, and through his broad study and specialization of the technical facilities on which he has concentrated has made his specialty an invaluable service to the public and to the medical and surgical profession of Wheeling.

Doctor Quimby is a native of Wheeling, where he was born August 19, 1881. His father, Charles H. Quimby, was born in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1838, was reared in Massachusetts and Maine. In 1862 he moved to Marietta, Ohio, and in 1865 located at Wheeling. He was a tanner by trade, and continued to follow that work for some time after coming to Wheeling. He then engaged in the newspaper and stationery business, and was an active merchant of Wheeling until he retired in April, 1920. He is now living at Bridgeport, Ohio. He is a republican, and for many years has been a faithful member of the Baptist Church. He first married in Peabody, Massachusetts, but the two children of that union died in infancy. After coming to Wheeling he married Sarah Baker, who was born at Captive, Ohio, in 1841, and died at Blaine, that state, in 1905. To that marriage were born six children: A. Judson, an X-Ray specialist in New York City; Charles H., Jr., a civil engineer at Washington, D. C.; Miss Jennie C., a graduate nurse and superintendent of the Maternity Hospital at Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Will A.; Mary D., wife of Milton Kennedy, a contractor at Bridgeport, Ohio; and John C., a teacher of agriculture in the State Normal School at Dillon, Montana.

Will A. Quimby acquired his early education in the public schools of Blaine, Ohio. He graduated from Linsly Institute at Wheeling in 1903, attended the West Virginia State University, and subsequently entered Starling-Ohio Medical College at Columbus, Ohio, where he was graduated M. D. in 1908. One year he spent as interne in the Miami Valley Hospital at Dayton, and also did some general practice there. Doctor Quimby has been a member of the medical profession at Wheeling since 1909. He was the first physician in Ohio County to use radium in the treatment of certain cases, and his work is practically confined to X-Ray and Radium practice, for which he has an equipment probably not excelled in any other city in the Ohio Valley. His offices are in the Wheeling Steel Corporation Building. Doctor Quimby is a member of the Ohio County, West Virginia State and the American Medical Associations, the American Roentgen Ray Society, the Radiological Society of North America, and is secretary and treasurer of the Curie Radium Society, Inc., of Wheeling.

In politics he is a republican, is a member of the Methodist Church, is affiliated with Bridgeport Lodge No. 181, F. and A. M., Wheeling Consistory of the Scottish Rite, Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine, and is a member of Fort Henry Club. His residence is at Lenox, Wheeling.

Doctor Quimby married at Bridgeport, Ohio, in 1913, Mrs. Helen Dunlevy Sprott, daughter of Major Seymour and Emma (Rhodes) Dunlevy, both of whom died at Bridgeport.

CHARLES D. SMITH has been engaged in the practice of law at Parsons, judicial center of Tucker County, for a period of twenty years, and has gained prestige as one of the able and representative members of the bar of this part of the state. Prior to coming to Parsons he had been engaged in practice at Terra Alta, Preston County, about two years.

Mr. Smith was born in Montgomery County, Maryland, near the Frederick County line, and the date of his nativity was June 21, 1870. He was reared in the Village of Hyattstown, and his discipline in the public schools was supplemented by a course in the Maryland State Normal School in the City of Baltimore. After leaving this institution in 1891 he became a teacher in the rural schools of Howard County, Maryland, and he continued his effective service in the pedagogic profession seven years, during about five of which he was principal of the schools at Oakland, besides having taught in summer normal schools. His final work as a teacher was at Kensington, Maryland, and in 1900 he was graduated in the law department of George Washington University at Washington, D. C. After thus receiving his degree of Bachelor of Laws he held for a short interval a position as bookkeeper in the Garrett National Bank at Oakland, Maryland, but before the close of the year he located at Terra Alta, West Virginia, where he continued in the practice of law until his removal to Parsons, as noted in the opening paragraph of this sketch. His practice has included connection with numerous cases of important order, both civil and criminal, and he is known as a strong and resourceful trial lawyer. Upon coming to Tucker County he was made assistant prosecuting attorney under William G. Conley, with whom he was associated in law practice and who later became attorney general of the state. Mr. Smith became acting prosecuting attorney of the county to fill out the term of Mr. Conley when the latter retired. In 1904 he was elected prosecuting attorney. He was re-elected in 1908, and retired at the end of his second term. In 1916 he was again called to this office, in which he thus served a third term. He effected, as prosecutor for the county, the first conviction for murder in the first degree ever recorded in Tucker County. In the World War period Mr. Smith was ex-officio advisor of the selective-service board of the county, besides serving as Government appeal agent for the county and as advisor of the food administrator of the county. His wife was actively identified with the women's auxiliary war work and did much to advance the service of the Red Cross. Mr. Smith is a republican in politics and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Loyal Order of Moose and the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

June 29, 1904, recorded the marriage of Mr. Smith and Miss Edith Townshend, who was born at Oakland, Maryland, a daughter of Singleton L. and Elizabeth (Jones) Townshend, the father having long been a leading merchant at Oakland. Mrs. Smith received excellent educational advantages, including those of private schools and of the Brier Bend Seminary at Mountain Lake Park, Maryland. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have three children: Edith Dorsey, Arra Townshend and Mary Rawlings.

MICHAEL E. WHELAN, M. D. The duties and labors of a physician and surgeon, practicing largely in a country district, have been carried and faithfully discharged by Dr. Michael E. Whelan for over forty years. His home during most of his practice has been at Roanoke, and in that community no citizen enjoys a higher degree of esteem.

Doctor Whelan was born on Long Island, September 19, 1837, son of James and Johanna (Welsh) Whelan. His parents were natives of Ireland, where they were reared, educated and married, and on coming to the United States they lived for a time around New York and then in Pennsylvania, where James Whelan took up contracting of railroad construction. He built a section of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to West Union, West Virginia. Later he filled other contracts of a similar nature, and in the meantime bought a farm on Mud Lick Run, three miles south of Weston. For many years he lived on the farm and operated it, and finally left the country and moved to a comfortable home on Chestnut Street in Weston, where he and his wife both died. They were devout Catholics, and he was a staunch believer in the principles of the democratic party. They had a family of sixteen children, all of whom grew to mature years and five are now living: A. F. Whelan, of Weston; Thomas, of Weston; Michael E.; Margaret, widow of John Morrison; and Miss Julia.

Michael E. Whelan had the home farm as the environment of his childhood and youth. He attended the public schools, and at the age of seventeen began doing a man's part on the farm in the summer and taught winter terms of school in one district four successive terms. While operating a hotel he studied medicine for two years under Dr. William Bland, and then completed his course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, where he took the three years course. On returning to West Virginia, Doctor Whelan practiced at Burnsville in Braxton County one year, and in 1880 established his home and office at Roanoke, where for four successive decades he has rendered the service of a skillful and sympathetic physician. He is a member of the County, State and American Medical associations.

On October 28, 1903, Doctor Whelan married Ella Carney, who was born May 31, 1873, in Braxton County. They have one son, James Edward, born October 17, 1905. He is a graduate of the Roanoke High School and is now a student in Rockhill College at Ellicott City, Maryland. Doctor and Mrs. Whelan are members of the Catholic Church, and he does his voting as a democrat. He has prospered in his professional work, and is the owner of 500 acres of land in Lewis County and considerable other real estate. His farms are operated by tenants.

HON. JAMES WESTON WEIR. In journalistic circles, political activities and public life in Randolph County there are few names that are better known than that of Hon. James Weston Weir. His career has been one in which he has won honors in several fields of endeavor, and he is now the editor and publisher of the Randolph Review at Elkins, and one of the most prominent and influential democrats in his section of the state.

James Weston Weir was born at New Brunswick, New Jersey, March 12, 1882, and is a son of Silas E. and May (Frothingham) Weir. On the paternal side he is of Scotch-Irish descent and on the maternal side of English ancestry. His father was born at Germantown, Pennsylvania, and by profession was a civil engineer. For a time he was assistant engineer for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, and afterward chief engineer for the old West Virginia Central Railroad, now a part of the Western Maryland system, and the occasion of his locating at Elkins in 1896 was in connection with his duties in the latter position. About two years after his arrival at Elkins he died, when only forty-five years of age. He married at Camden, New Jersey, May Frothingham, who survives him as a resident of Washington, D. C.

The place of residence of the family changed frequently during the youth of James Weston Weir, owing to the nature of his father's vocation, but during the winter months the family lived at Washington, D. C., where the lad attended the public schools, which included one year in high school. He had just reached his majority, in 1903, when he accepted a position on the editorial staff of the Wheeling Intelligencer as a reporter, and during a part of 1904 held a like position on the Columbus (Ohio) Evening Dispatch. Returning to Wheeling, he became assistant secretary of the State Board of Trade, but about a year later returned to journalism as editor of the Randolph Enterprise at Elkins. This position he held until 1911. In the meantime, in 1908, he had been elected to the State Legislature, and served one term in the House of Delegates. In the spring of 1911 he became secretary to United States Senator C. W. Watson, of Fairmont, a position which he held for two years, Senator Watson having been elected to fill an unexpired term of that duration. In 1913 Mr. Weir established the Randolph Review, a weekly newspaper, which he has since edited and published. He was again elected to the West Virginia House of Delegates in 1914, and two years later was re-elected to succeed himself in that office, but resigned in March, 1917, to become the private secretary of Governor Cornwell, a position which he held during the four years of that executive's administration. In May, 1921, he was chosen field secretary for the West Virginia Publishers and Employing Printers Association, a post which he still retains.

Mr. Weir is a Chapter degree Mason and a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He belongs also to the Rotary Club of Elkins and the Chamber of Commerce, and his religious affiliation is with the Presbyterian Church. In 1909 he married Miss Vie Harding, the youngest daughter of the late Maj. Joseph French Harding. Major Harding was born in Anne Arundel County, Maryland, November 9, 1838, a son of Joseph and Alice (Elliott) Harding, and died in 1919, at Elkins, West Virginia. At the outbreak of the war between the states, Major Harding entered the service of the Confederacy and served gallantly until the close of that struggle, rising to the rank of major and being named for promotion to colonel just before the close of hostilities. After the war he took up the life of a civilian and became one of the prominent and influential men of his community. He served two terms in the West Virginia Legislature as representative from Randolph and Tucker counties, won distinction as a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1872 and was sheriff of Randolph County from 1877 to 1881. In 1885 he commenced the practice of law at Elkins, having as his partner his son Clare W. Harding, who afterward served two terms as county prosecuting attorney. His other children were: French Leslie, now manager of the Randolph Review; Luceba M.; Roella; Jo L., and Vie, the wife of Hon. James W. Weir. The mother of these children was formerly Miss Luceba Wilmoth, of Randolph County, this state.

» III—63

ROBERT WIRT DUNHAM, M. D. There is one profession, that of the medical practitioner, which opens to its followers an extremely wide range of usefulness. Its sphere is many-sided, and that particular phase which accomplishes the more than splendid work of preserving God-given life says nothing of the world of sorrow that is banished or of the happiness which is re-enthroned through health restored at the exercise of the divine art. It is indeed an art which approaches divinity, and those who study it, mellowed and enriched as they are through their association with unmasked humanity, are possessed of a priceless ability to answer the command to "heal the sick." Among the leaders of the Randolph County medical fraternity is Dr. Robert Wirt Dunham, of Elkins, who since taking up his practice in this community has gained the confidence of all and the gratitude of many.

Doctor Dunham was born at Belington, Barbour County, West Virginia, November 19, 1881, and is a son of Jacob A. and Lola Montes (Shurtliff) Dunham. His paternal grandfather was Rev. Robert Foster Dunham, who was a native of New Jersey, and as a youth came to what is now West Virginia with his father, Jacob Dunham, who settled in Taylor County. Reverend Dunham was a pioneer Baptist preacher, his field of labor including Barbour, Randolph and Taylor counties. He lived to the remarkable age of ninety-seven years, and at his death it was said of him: "A grand old man has passed away." The maternal grandfather of Doctor Dunham was Frank Shurtliff, who came from Boston, Massachusetts, and settled in Barbour County, West Virginia, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred when he was fifty-one or fifty-two years of age. He married Lucinda Booth, a daughter of Gen. Isaac Booth, one of the makers of history in what is now West Virginia.

Jacob A. Dunham was born in Tyler County, West Virginia, and for many years was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Barbour County, where he was the owner of a farm in the vicinity of Belington. He died at the age of sixty-seven years, highly esteemed and respected as a good citizen and honorable man of affairs. In politics he was a democrat, but he did not seek political honors. With Mrs. Dunham, who died when fifty-three years of age, he belonged to the Baptist Church. They were the parents of four children: Rhoda F.; Robert Wirt, of this notice; Emma Q.; and Dr. Porter C., who is engaged in the practice of dentistry at Bridgeport, West Virginia.

Robert Wirt Dunham was reared on the home farm, and after attending the country schools went to the Belington High School, from which he was graduated. From 1901 to 1905 he was a student at West Virginia University, to obtain further literary training preparatory to the study of medicine. He graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1908, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine, and in the same year was also given a degree of the same kind by West Virginia University. Doctor Dunham began the practice of his profession at Junior, West Virginia, but in a few months removed to Bemis, this state, where he remained in practice for about ten years. He next went to Atlanta, Georgia, to continue his professional activities. Subsequently he returned to West Virginia for a visit. While here, in 1919, he was offered the post of medical examiner for the Western Maryland Railroad, and, accepting, located at Elkins, where he has since discharged the duties attached to that position and has also carried on a general practice. He has built up a large clientele and is now accounted one of the leaders of the Randolph County profession. Doctor Dunham is a close and careful student and has done post-graduate work at the Post-Graduate School of Medicine, New York City; Washington University, St. Louis; Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, and at Harvard. He is a member of the Tri-County Medical Society, the West Virginia Medical Society and the American Medical Association. As a fraternalist he is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, a Knight Templar and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine, and also holds membership in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. His religious affiliation is with the Baptist Church. Doctor Dunham is unmarried.

GEN. WILLIAM WALTER SCOTT, former brigadier general of the West Virginia National Guard, still keeps his voting residence at Fairmont, where he began the practice of law thirty years ago, but duty early called him to Washington, where he was an assistant in the Department of Justice and where for the past decade he has handled a large volume of practice, largely in the Federal Courts and as a member of the Bar of the District of Columbia and the Supreme Court of the United States.

General Scott was born at Fairmont in 1879, son of Newton J. and Mary S. (Scott) Scott. His parents bore the same family name but were not relatives. Newton J. Scott was a Union soldier in a West Virginia regiment during the Civil war. The family is of old Virginia stock of Scotch ancestry. William Walter Scott, grandfather of his namesake, was the son of Thomas Scott, a Virginia soldier who lost an arm in the battle of New Orleans in 1815. General Scott's maternal ancestors lived in Armstrong County, Pennsylvania.

William W. Scott after leaving the common schools became a practical printer and entered the printing establishment of the West Virginian of Fairmont, West Virginia, a weekly news sheet. Later he became manager of the Mannington Times, of Mannington, West Virginia. He read law in the office of Scott & Meredith in Fairmont, was admitted to the bar in his home county and began practice in 1892. While in Washington he continued his studies in the National Law School, from which he received two degrees, Master and Bachelor of Laws.

Mr. Scott went to Washington in 1897 to become assistant in the office of Joseph McKenna, attorney general in President McKinley's cabinet, now a justice of the Supreme Court. In the attorney general's department Mr. Scott was assigned to the defense of suits against the United States, duties that took him at times to distant parts of the United States. His work in the Department of Justice continued until 1912, in which year he resigned, his resignation being effective January 1, 1913. He then established his present offices for private practice in the Woodward Building. General Scott handles a general practice, but chiefly as representative of clients in suits against the United States. He is one of the lawyers of highest standing in the West Virginia bar. For two years after leaving the Department of Justice he edited the reports of the United States Court of Claims. His practice in that court, particularly in the preparation of his briefs, has received high commendation from the bench.

His connection with the West Virginia National Guard began in 1894. That year he organized and was made captain of Company G at Fairmont, a unit of the First West Virginia Regiment. Subsequent promotions made him major, lieutenant colonel, colonel and finally, in 1905, brigadier general by appointment of Governor Dawson in command of all West Virginia troops in the National Guard composed of the First and Second Regiments. General Scott kept up his active connection with the National Guard during his official connections in Washington. He is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, and is a past master and past high priest at Washington.

He married Miss Claudia Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Rice, of Fairmont, West Virginia, and a niece of Col. Dick Fast of Morgantown, West Virginia. General Scott has a son, Capt. William Ward Scott, of the United States Marine Corps. He was educated in the schools of Washington, the University of Michigan, and joined the Marine Corps in February, 1917, before America entered the war. He was made a second lieutenant, and by subsequent promotions became captain. During the greater part of the war he was in command of a detachment of Marines on board the Galveston, escorting and conveying troops and supplies to France.

ANTHONY R. BROWN, M. D., of Clay, judicial center of Clay County, has passed the palmist's span of three score years and ten, but is still engaged in the active and successful practice of his profession, in which he has made a record of faithful and effective service, the while he has broadened the province of his work to include also practice as a veterinary surgeon.

Doctor Brown was born in Nicholas County, West Virginia, February 15, 1848, and is a son of John and Susan (Neal) Brown, both likewise natives of that county and both representatives of pioneer families there. John Brown was born in the year 1812, was reared on a pioneer farm and he eventually became one of the successful practicing physicians in his native county, where he remained until 1855. He then removed to Clay County, where he built up a large and substantial general practice, in connection with which he manifested a high sense of personal and professional stewardship. He became a loyal supporter of the cause of the republican party, and both he and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Of the nine children only two are now living, the subject of this sketch being the younger, and the elder brother, Dr. George W., being engaged in the practice of medicine at Lizimore, Clay County.

Dr. Anthony R. Brown was reared on the home farm and attended the schools of the locality and period. He was a lad of sixteen years when his youthful patriotism led him to enter the Union service in the Civil war, and as a member of a West Virginia regiment of volunteer infantry he continued in service until the close of the war. Thereafter he studied medicine under effective private preceptorship, and after thus duly qualifying himself he engaged in the practice of his chosen profession, in which his success attests alike his technical skill and his unqualified personal popularity. He has maintained his residence in the Village of Clay since 1902, and in his professional service he has ever been ready to minister to those in suffering or distress, no matter how great the labor involved, how inclement the weather or how difficult the incidental traversing of muddy or unimproved roads. He has thus gained the gratitude and appreciative regard of those whom he has thus unselfishly served, and he is one of the substantial and honored citizens of Clay County. He is a republican in politics and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Grand Army of the Republic.

As a young man Doctor Brown wedded Miss Elizabeth D. Jarrett, and her death occurred in 1908. Of the six children of this union four are living. In 1909 Doctor Brown married Miss Ella Taylor, who was born in Braxton County, July 1, 1887, the three children of this union being William R., Ardelle M. and Naomi V.

EDGAR H. WILLIAMS. Among the men of business importance in Pocahontas County perhaps none are better known than is Edgar H. Williams, of Marlinton, civil engineer, lumber merchant and farmer, and formerly county surveyor. Mr. Williams has been a life-long resident of Pocahontas County, and on the maternal side is of Revolutionary stock and a descendant of one of the earliest settlers in this section.

Edgar H. Williams was born four miles north of Edray, West Virginia, October 18, 1884, the youngest of a family of four children born to Dr. Richard and Hannah (Sharp) Williams. His father died when he was young and he was reared by his maternal grandfather, Alexander Sharp, who was a son of William Sharp II and a grandson of William Sharp, who settled in what is now Pocahontas County in 1773. Later he served as a soldier and scout in the Revolutionary war. He married Mary Meeks, and they had several daughters and two sons, John and William. William Sharp II married Elizabeth Waddell, and one of their fourteen children was named Alexander. He married Mary Dille, a daughter of Martin Dille. They had but one daughter, Hannah, who became the wife of Dr. Richard Williams and the mother of Edgar H. Williams.

Dr. Richard Williams was born in County Cork, Ireland. He graduated with the degree of M. D. from Dublin University, where he also had high standing in the field of chemistry. He then entered the English army and saw service in India. In 1876 he came to the United States and established himself in the practice of medicine in the vicinity of Edray, West Virginia, and his practice soon extended over a wide area. He became an American citizen, and his learning and sterling qualities made him a highly valued one. To his marriage with Hannah Sharp the following children were born: Alexander Dennis, Mollie (Mrs. Benjamin Johnson), Lena (Mrs. Elmer Poage), and Edgar H. Alexander Dennis Williams is an ex-member of the State Legislature and a resident of Morgantown. He served six years as state road commissioner and is the author of the present State Road Law.

W. W. Scott

Edgar H. Williams attended the public schools and spent one year at Marshall College. He studied civil engineering, and later served four years as county surveyor, but during the greater part of his life has been identified with the lumber business, in which he is largely interested at the present time. He also gives considerable attention to his farm of 100 acres, a valuable, well developed property, and he owns additionally a tract of ninety acres of grazing land. His various undertakings are profitably managed, and he is considered a business man of foresight and good judgment.

Mr. Williams married, May 6, 1913, Miss Rose Poage, who belongs to an old Pocahontas County family and is a daughter of John R. and Elizabeth (Sharp) Poage, of Poage's Lane, this county. Mr. and Mrs. Williams have two children: Edgar Moffett and Thelma Elizabeth. In political life Mr. Williams has always been identified with the republican party. He has long been interested in increasing the efficiency of the public schools and has been president of the Board of Education. He is now serving in his second year as a county commissioner. For many years he has been a member of the Masonic fraternity.

SAMUEL B. WALLACE. One of the large business concerns at Marlinton, West Virginia, is the wholesale drug house of S. B. Wallace & Company, which was founded in 1903, in a small way, by its present president and treasurer, Samuel B. Wallace. Questioned concerning the evident success that has crowned his efforts, Mr. Wallace attributes it to hard work, but in no complaining mood, for he is quick to add "work is a blessed privilege." This undoubtedly is considered rank heresy by those of his fellow men who apparently take pleasure in awaiting a mythical "opportunity" to catch up with them, but Mr. Wallace has been in the habit of making opportunities rather than awaiting them, and financial success and mental contentment have rewarded him.

Samuel B. Wallace was born at Fairfield, Rockbridge County, Virginia, September 29, 1879, and until eighteen years of age lived there with his parents, John W. and Jennie (Tysinger) Wallace. He was educated in the public schools, attending the high school, after which for a time he was a clerk in a general store in his native town, subsequently finding a wider field for his energy and business enterprise as a traveling salesman for a Baltimore wholesale drug establishment, and still later in the same capacity was honorably connected with a Charleston wholesale drug house.

In 1903 Mr. Wallace came from Charleston to Marlinton, and his interests have been centered here ever since. In June of that year he embarked in the retail drug business, to which he devoted close attention, and gradually, through business integrity and practical business methods, built up a prosperous trade, in the meanwhile taking advantage of a favorable opportunity for expanding into the wholesale line. The two departments were continued until 1910 as one business, but both were maintained until January 1, 1920, when the retail end of the business was entirely closed out, and since then Mr. Wallace has given his entire attention to the wholesale business, in which he had earlier such excellent training and wide experience. In 1915 the business was incorporated as S. B. Wallace & Company, with a capitalization of $50,000. The company owns a fine brick business home, gives employment to fourteen individuals, and has a trade territory that covers some eight counties in West Virginia and Virginia. This establishment and its volume of business would be creditable in a much larger place than Marlinton.

On April 30, 1902, Mr. Wallace married Miss Eleanor Virginia Bennick, of New Market, Shenandoah County, Virginia. Mr. Wallace is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is active in good citizenship, is a member of the town council and president of the Pocahontas County Fair Association, and during the World war was generous and helpful in advancing patriotic movements. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

SUMMERS HEDRICK SHARP. Pocahontas County has citizens of great worth, many of these being descendants of old pioneer settlers who did much in early days to substantially develop this section of West Virginia. A very early settler who left an impress because of his admirable traits of character, his industry, his reliability, his generous recognition of the rights of others and his devotion to church, family and friends, bore the name of John Sharp, and he was, undoubtedly, the first of his family to become an American citizen. Among his descendants is a distinguished citizen of Pocahontas County of today, no less a personage than Hon. Summers Hedrick Sharp, judge of the Eleventh Judicial Circuit of West Virginia.

John Sharp, the great-great-grandfather of Judge Sharp, was a native of Ireland, but prior to the Revolutionary war he came to the American colonies with the tide of Scotch-Irish that spread throughout Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other sections. He married Margaret Blaine and established a home in Rockingham County, Virginia. His rapidly increasing family led him to seek another home farther west, where land was cheaper, and thus in 1802 he came to what is now Frost in Pocahontas County, where he became a citizen whose sterling worth was appreciated and he survived into old age. His children are recorded as follows: John, Robert, Daniel, William, James, Joseph, Margaret, Anna, Isabella, Rosa, Elizabeth and Polly.

William Sharp, son of John Sharp, seems to have inherited the sturdy qualities and admirable attributes that made him, like his father, a man of worth. He was naturally endowed with mental gifts, and was industrious, law-abiding and charitable. To his marriage with Margaret Nesbitt one son and two daughters were born: John, Mary Paulina and Eliza Jane. John Sharp remained with his parents until he established a home of his own. He married Elizabeth Slavin Wade, of Highland County, Virginia, and they had children as follows: Charles Osborne Wade, William Alexander Gilmer, John Benjamin Franklin, Aaron Uriah Bradford and Emma. All these children were born and reared near Frost and some of their descendants still reside there.

Charles Osborne Wade Sharp developed into a man creditable in every way to family training and tradition. From childhood he had been taught that the duties of an American citizen meant veneration for the Almighty, just dealing with his fellow men, obedience to the laws of the land and loyalty to the Constitution of the United States. When friction developed between the North and the South in 1861 his convictions led him to become a soldier in the Federal Army, although many of his friends and neighbors saw duty differently and had espoused the cause of the Confederacy. He had an honorable career as a soldier, and afterward retired to his farm and former occupations near Frost. In early manhood he married Miss Amanda Grimes and they became the parents of the following children: Hannibal Hamlin, Charles Hanson, David Franklin, George Winters, Summers Hedrick, Austin John, Trudie Montgomery, Isa Amanda and Esta Medora.

Summers Hedrick Sharp was born at Frost, West Virginia, June 20, 1880, and spent his early years on the home farm. After completing the public school course he attended the normal school at Concord, and in 1907 graduated from Marshall College. In 1908 he entered the law school of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, and in 1910 graduated therefrom with his degree. In December, 1910, he was admitted to the bar and at once opened a law office at Marlinton and has maintained his home at the county seat ever since. In 1912 and again in 1916 he was elected prosecuting attorney of Pocahontas County, proving fearless and exceedingly efficient in this office, but he resigned in 1917 in order to accept the appointment of judge of the Twentieth Judicial Circuit. In 1918 he was elected to this high office to serve out the unexpired term of the former incumbent. In the meanwhile the Twentieth Judicial Circuit, by legislative enactment, had become the Eleventh Judicial Circuit, and in 1920 Judge Sharp was elected circuit judge for the full term of eight years. Although one of the youngest sitting judges in the county, Judge Sharp has demonstrated great judicial ability.

Judge Sharp married Miss Grace Stewart, who is a daughter of William J. Stewart, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, and they have two children: Jean and George. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he belongs to the Masonic fraternity. In political life Judge Sharp is a republican. During the World war he was foremost in all patriotic movements, and served as chairman of the Legal Advisory Board of Pocahontas County.

WILLIAM J. LEAHY, M. D. This family came from New England. William J. Leahy, M. D., a well known physician of Mannington, West Virginia, is the youngest son of John and Ellen (Lane) Leahy, of Ansonia, New Haven County, Connecticut. Both his paternal and maternal ancestry were of Irish origin and were among the early settlers of that section of New England, famous as the seat of Yale University and for its numerous and diversified manufacturing industries. The old homestead in which Doctor Leahy was born, October 23, 1876, is still occupied by his married brother and is located in the center of the residential section of that now thickly populated New England City. His father, who died January 19, 1922, at an advanced age, was by vocation a mechanical draughtsman and machinist. His mother died in September, 1901. Nearly all his male relatives were killed in the Civil war, being among the first to volunteer. His mother lost three brothers on the field of battle, only one brother, Capt. Maurice Lane, surviving the war.

William J. Leahy attended the public school at Ansonia and completed his literary and scientific education in the Sheffield Scientific School. In 1899 he graduated as an honor man from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore. The following year he served as resident physician of the Maternity Hospital of Baltimore and the next year was tendered the appointment of superintendent of the Bay View Hospital in the same city. He declined this appointment in order to enter private practice. He passed the West Virginia State Board examination July 10, 1900, being one of the youngest graduates of medicine ever granted a license by this board. He immediately located in Mannington, where he has been actively engaged in the practice of his profession ever since. He is active in the affairs of his profession and entertains the most cordial relations with his brother practitioners. He is a member of the Marion County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He was president of the Mannington Medical Society in 1910, and was re-elected president in 1911. In January, 1912, he was elected president of the Marion County Medical Society, being the first Mannington physician to receive that honor.

He served four years as city health officer. His investigation and public exposure of the deliberate contamination of the city water supply was an important step toward securing pure water for the city and improving the health conditions of its citizens.

He has a fine general and professional library, and is a frequent visitor to the clinics of the largest medical centers. Although located in a small city, he maintains a modern office, fully equipped and with a complete X-Ray and Fluoroscopic Laboratory in connection. He is a medical examiner for about twenty-five life insurance companies and fraternal orders, is surgeon to the Marion Window Glass Company, and is a member of the surgical staff of Cook Hospital, Fairmont, West Virginia.

He is heavily interested on Mannington city real estate and owns a large, finely constructed modern office building in the center of the business section, a part of the Post Office Block. He is a member of the Mannington Building and Loan Association, an organization of twenty-five of the leading business men of the city who are endeavoring to build enough good houses, in good locations, to sell at such fair prices as to encourage and increase the number of property owners and reduce the rents of all property to reasonable prices.

Fraternally he is connected with the Elks, Knights of Columbus and several other organizations. He is a member of the Fairmont Country Club and the Allegheny and Cheat Mountain Hunting Club.

Along with the duties and engagements of a busy physician and surgeon Doctor Leahy has constantly exercised during his twenty-two years of residence there a helpful and hopeful influence in community affairs. His progressive character as a citizen led to his election and service as president of the Mannington Chamber of Commerce during its existence. Almost as soon as elected he began an active advocacy of good roads building, and helped personally as an organizer of public opinion in securing the adoption of a bond issue for the improvement of the county roads. After a strenuous fight a bond issue for $350,000.00 was carried and twenty miles of brick road built. Fairmont district immediately followed with a bond issue for $450,000.00 and today as a result of that first campaign Marion County has nearly two million dollars worth of permanently improved roads. Since that time the entire state has awakened to the needs and benefits of improved roads and recently the state voted $50,000,000.00 for state highways, but to the Mannington Chamber of Commerce, of which he was the active, hard fighting president belongs the credit of being among the pioneer Good Roads Boosters in the State of West Virginia. He was successful in locating several industries in Mannington during his term, such as the large Marion Window Glass Company and the James Haggerty Cigar and Machine Company, both of which are still prosperous and busy additions to the industrial life of Mannington.

In 1899 he married Alice W. Golden, daughter of Hon. John and Cordelia Golden, of Washington, D. C. Mrs. Leahy died in 1918, no children surviving her. Shortly after her death he volunteered for service in the World war and was commissioned captain in the Medical Corps of the United States Army.

Upon his return from service he resumed the active practice of his profession. His strenuous public spirit and willingness to help others was not forgotten, and he was three times elected post commander of Millan Post No. 40, American Legion. He organized and built this post up to a big membership, the morale of which is wonderful and which has the well wishes and backing of every citizen of this community. He also organized a Women's Auxiliary that has been of wonderful assistance. Upon his declining a renomination the 200 members of the Post presented him with an engraved Service Medal as a token of their appreciation of his services.

At present he is engaged in an effort to perfect the local organization of Boy Scouts of America, and holds a commission as Scout Master of Troop No. 3. He welcomes this opportunity to aid this organization, since it has already "done much good, and will do more, for it is, in its essence, a practical scheme through which to impart a proper standard of fair play and consideration for others, and courage and decency to boys who have never been reached and never will be reached by the ordinary type of preaching, lay or clerical."

CAPT. WILLIAM J. BRIGHTWELL. A remarkable record of service is credited to Capt. William J. Brightwell of Hinton. He has been in the service of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company fifty-two years. He helped lay tracks for this road through Hinton when there was only one house in what is now a thriving city. His home has been in

William J. Leahy

Hinton since 1890, and for over thirty years he has been in charge of the wrecking train or tool cars on the Hinton division.

Captain Brightwell was born in Prince Edward County, Virginia, May 4, 1851, son of Charles William and Hopie Elizabeth (Epperson) Brightwell. Both were natives of Prince Edward County. Charles William Brightwell was a farmer, and early in the war between the states joined the Confederate Army under Gen. J. E. B. Stuart. He was a participant in Stuart's raid through Maryland, and for three days and three nights was in the saddle, swimming the Potomac River. Finally exhausted, he fell from his horse and was left under a tree in which hornets had built a nest, and it is said that the sting of the hornets revived him and enabled him to escape death from his enemies. After this terrific experience he was discharged, but was again mustered in and performed duty as a train guard between Lynchburg and Petersburg, on what is now a part of the Norfolk and Western Railroad. Later he joined the infantry as a member of the Prospect Grays, and was made a prisoner at Tarborough, North Carolina, being sent to Point Lookout, Maryland, and later to Elmira, New York, and was exchanged thirty days before the close of the war. Throughout the remainder of his life he was practically an invalid, but lived to the age of seventy-three. He was a life long democrat, and before the war was a member of the Good Templars organization. By his first wife, Elizabeth Epperson, he had seven children, three now living: Capt. William J.; Joseph, carpenter foreman for the Chesapeake and Ohio at Milton, West Virginia; and Alice, widow of Jerry Jamison, a farmer who died at Farmville, Virginia. Another son, Walter, was a carpenter for the Chesapeake and Ohio, and was killed in an accident. Charles W. Brightwell for his second wife married Betty Wilkerson, and there were two children by that union: C. T. Brightwell, bridge carpenter with the Big Four Railroad at Louisville, Kentucky, and Hattie, of Hinton, widow of John H. Jordan, one of the founders of the Bank of Summers.

William J. Brightwell attended school for only ten months during his boyhood and while living on the Virginia farm. As the oldest of the family he had to do most of the farm work while his father was in the army, and on account of the latter's invalidism he continued to be the main provider for some time after the war. However farming was not a vocation suited to his temperament, and when he was about seventeen he began railroading. The story of his service is well told by an old friend in a copy of the Chesapeake and Ohio Employees Magazine, from which the following paragraphs are taken:

"He left home, boarded a train at Prospect Depot, on what is now a part of the Norfolk & Western Railroad, and went to Lynchburg, Virginia. Thence he went by Packet Boat, on the James River Canal, to Buchanan, from Buchanan he walked across the mountains, thirty-six miles, to Jackson's River and there took a train on the Chesapeake and Ohio to White Sulphur Springs, then the Western Terminus of our road. At that time the big Jerry's Run fill and Lewis Tunnel had not been finished. Jerry's Run was crossed by a temporary trestle, and a temporary track had been constructed over the mountain at Lewis Tunnel.

"From White Sulphur he walked to where is now Big Bend Tunnel, arriving there July 11, 1869. Preparations were made for the construction of that tunnel. On the tenth of January 1870, the work of actual construction began. At the tunnel Mr. Brightwell fired a hoisting engine. When the tunnel was finished he went with the track layers, helping lay the track from Big Bend to Hawk's Nest, where were met the track-layers from the west. He had the honor of helping to drive the last spike, a ceremony that was participated in by Gen. William C. Wickham, vice-president of the road, and the veteran contractor, Claiborne R. Mason. Both of the latter named gentlemen struck the spike, the others present enjoyed the same privilege, so that the remnants of the spike were buried in the cross-tie. Thereafter Mr. Brightwell went to Richmond and ran a hoisting engine at Church Hill Tunnel until the completion of that work. Mr. Brightwell says that those days spent in Richmond were 'great'. He was eating his 'white bread.' He arrived at Richmond with $140.00 in his purse. When the Church Hill Tunnel was finished he had $140.20.

"After this he went with the road carpenter department, under Mr. C. F. King, master carpenter, from Staunton to Hinton. In 1878 he was promoted to carpenter foreman in charge of work on bridges, trestles and general carpenter work. In 1880 the writer of this saw him do fine work on the trestles erected under some difficulties between Huntington and Big Sandy River. While carpenter foreman Mr. Brightwell arched Big Bend Tunnel throughout with timber eight times, and, when the brick lining was put in, he had the difficult task of pulling down the timber lining, which was always attended by some danger because of the loose rocks and disintegrated material that fell as the timbers were removed.

"March 15, 1890, Mr. George W. Stevens, then general manager, assigned Mr. Brightwell to take charge of the Hinton tool cars. Thus has the subject of this sketch climbed by his own merits from the bottom upwards, until now he stands honored by the confidence of the officers of our fine organization and by the love of all who know him. Not a man killed, no one hurt seriously of all who have served under this Foreman of Men. Often he has gone where he would not risk the lives of men, and thus he practiced Safety First for his men."

Captain Brightwell entered the railroad service with a very meager education, but for a number of years in addition to working through the day he conducted his studies far into the night until he had made up most of his early deficiencies. He has been one of Hinton's most loyal and capable citizens, and in the aggregate has served on the City Council for fifteen years and as street commissioner for eight years. He is a democrat, is a past master of Alderson Lodge No. 70, F. and A. M., is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and a member of the Shrine at Charleston and also of the Scottish Rite Consistory.

June 25, 1875, he married Dora Virginia Saylor, daughter of David Saylor. She was born in Augusta County, Virginia, October 3, 1857, and died August 8, 1918, after forty-three years of married life and companionship. Captain Brightwell was the father of five children: Mand, wife of Dr. H. M. White, a druggist of Newport News, Virginia; Kate, of Parkersburg, widow of Dr. C. W. Plumley; H. A. general foreman of the Chesapeake and Ohio roundhouse at Thurmond; F. H., a Chesapeake and Ohio machinist at Hinton; and Pauline, wife of D. F. McClung, of Fayetteville.

While a resident of Hinton Captain Brightwell has built, bought and sold a number of houses, and he was also one of the organizers of the Bank of Summers, being associated with Judge J. H. Miller and John H. Jordan. He has continuously been a director of the bank from the beginning. He also served as director and vice-president of the Hinton Water Light and Supply Company until the plant was sold recently.

PERRY FRENCH MARKS, M. D. While he has very heavy responsibilities as the only physician and surgeon at Walton, Doctor Marks is also a leading farmer, in that part of Roane County and is a prominent young man whose activities have earned him the highest esteem.

Doctor Marks was born at Burning Springs, Wirt County, West Virginia, May 10, 1879. He comes of frontier stock. His great-grandfather, named Thomas Marks, was a native of France, and was a follower of General Lafayette in the expedition to the American Colonies in their struggle for independence. When the war was over he remained in America and ultimately settled in Gilmer County, West Virginia, where he spent the rest of his life on the frontier. His son, Morgan, was born near Glenville and spent most of his career in Gilmer County, where he owned and conducted a large farm. He died near Arnoldsburg in Calhoun County in 1890. His wife, Sarah Jones, was also a native of Gilmer County, and died at Gandeeville in 1890.

Cornelius J. Marks, father of Doctor Marks, was born near Glenville in Gilmer County in 1845, grew up there, and as a young man removed to Gandeville in Roane County, where he married and where he owned and operated a large and valuable farm. He was a Union soldier at the time of the Civil war, enlisting in 1862 in Company B, of the 9th West Virginia Infantry. In the battle of Cloyd Mountain he was struck four times by enemy bullets, being wounded in the shoulder and in the chin. He voted as a republican, and was a member of the Masonic fraternity.

Cornelius J. Marks, who died at Gandeville in 1912, married Louise Hays, still living at Gandeville. She was born near Richardson in Calhoun County in 1844. Her children were: Howard, who operates the homestead farm and lives with his mother; Roanna, who died at Richardson in 1910, wife of Frank Connolly, a farmer in that section; Floyd, who died at the age of three years; Chessie, who is the wife of Dr. W. G. Camp, a prominent physician at Spencer; Perry French; Harry, a barber at Blue Creek in Kanawha County; George, an attorney by profession and now doing the work of an oil company in Louisiana; William, a farmer near Walton; Walter, who died at Colorado Springs in 1911, was a teacher in Mingo and Roane counties; Nellie died at the age of twenty-one and McKinley, at the age of fifteen.

Doctor Marks showed a studious disposition as a boy, and his inclinations were for a profession rather than the career of a farmer. He grew up in the country, attended the rural schools, and at the age of nineteen began teaching. This work he continued in Roane County for six years. He then entered the medical department of the University of Louisville, where he graduated M. D. in 1907, and took another general medical course at Louisville in 1910. Doctor Marks for a brief time in 1907 was contract physician for the Gauley Consolidated and Bell Creek Coal Company at Belva in Nicholas County, and during the same year removed to Walton, where now for fifteen years he has been the doctor for the community, the only member of his profession in that locality. His modern home and offices are on Cunningham Street, and he also has 140 acres of land there and eighty acres near Gandeville. In farming he makes a specialty of fine stock, raising Hampshire sheep and Hereford and thoroughbred Jersey cattle.

Doctor Marks has served as president of the Board of Education of Walton for six years, and has represented his district in the county, state and senatorial conventions of the republican party. He is affiliated with Walton Lodge No. 150, F. and A. M., Spencer Chapter No. 42, R. A. M., Kanawha Commandery No. 4, K. T., West Virginia consistory No. 1 of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, Benikodem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He is also an Odd Fellow, and is a member of the Roane County Medical Society. Doctor Marks is a stockholder in the Poca Valley Bank of Walton and the First National Bank of Spencer. During the war he was an active worker in behalf of the various patriotic drives, and was himself in the draft, but could not respond to the call to the colors because of influenza which he had contracted during the fall of 1918.

At Point Pleasant in Mason County July 17, 1907, Doctor Marks married Miss Josephine Byrd. Mrs. Marks is a graduate of the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg, and for eighteen months before her marriage was a stenographer at the Spencer State Hospital for the Insane. She now performs the duties of postmistress at Walton. Doctor and Mrs. Marks have two children: Perry F., Jr., born December 31, 1911; and Cornelius F., born April 5, 1915.

ENOCH STAATS. Some of the many staunch friends of Enoch Staats, County Court clerk of Jackson County, recall him as a teacher and farmer in the county, though for the past dozen years his work has been at the county seat of Ripley either as deputy or head of the office of County Court clerk.

Staats is one of the old and well known names of Jackson County. The founder of the family was Isaac Staats, who was born in Rockingham County, Virginia, in 1799, and as a young man moved to what is now Jackson County, West Virginia, and became owner and operator of a grist mill, long known in the geography of the county as Staats Mill. Though an old man at the time, he served as a member of the Home Guards during the Civil war. He died at Staats Mill in 1885. Isaac Staats married a Miss Tolley, who was born in that portion of old Mason County that is now Jackson County. Their son, William Staats, was born at Staats Mill in 1841, and chose farming as his vocation. He was reared and married at Staats Mill, but later moved to the vicinity of Ripley, and he owned and operated a large and prosperous farm four miles south of that town, where he died in 1914. He was a member of the Home Scouts during the Civil war, was an independent democrat in politics, and very closely identified with the Methodist Protestant Church. William Staats married Emily J. Casto, who was born at Staats Mill in 1847, and died at the home farm four miles south of Ripley in 1910. She became the mother of seven children: Cordelia, who died at Parchment Valley, Jackson County, in 1898, wife of Lovell M. Parsons, the well known Ripley farmer and banker; Avah B., who died at Fairplain, Jackson County in 1900, wife of Jacob Post, now a retired farmer of the community; Louisa, wife of David C. Shamblen, a farmer at Fairplain; Hollie F., a farmer at Flatrock in Mason County; subject of this sketch; Dora, wife of C. L. Skidmore, a farmer at Skidmore in Jackson County; and Cora L., wife of Everett Simmons, a farmer at Kenna in Jackson County.

Enoch Staats was born October 7, 1875, and grew up on the home farm south of Ripley. He attended rural schools there, the public schools at Ripley, in 1896 graduated from the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg, and during 1897-98 attended the State Normal School at Glenville in Gilmer County. Mr. Staats began teaching at the age of eighteen. His work was altogether in the rural districts of Jackson County, where he taught a total of fifteen terms, devoting his time and energies in the interval to farming. This phase of his career was concluded in 1909, when he was made deputy County Court clerk, and he served twelve years in that capacity, 1909-20. In 1920 he was chosen by election as County Court clerk for the six year term beginning in January, 1921.

Mr. Staats is a republican, active in the Methodist Protestant Church, and has served as Sunday School superintendent, and is affiliated with Ripley Lodge No. 16, A. F. and A. M., Ripley Lodge No. 30, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Walker Wright Lodge No. 5, Knights of Pythias. He is a stockholder and director in the Bank of Ripley, owns a farm of 275 acres four miles south of Ripley, on Mill Creek, and another farm of 600 acres four miles east of Ripley, on Sycamore Creek. His home is a fine suburban place, recently completed, on a choice tract of seven acres on the Charleston Pike.

In 1899, at Ripley, Mr. Staats married Miss Allie Carney, daughter of William A. and Rosa (Wedge) Carney, a well known family living two miles east of Ripley. Mr. and Mrs. Staats have four children: William, born November 12, 1900, is a graduate of the Ripley High School, attended Berea College at Berea, Kentucky, and is now teaching at Salt Hill in Jackson County; Delbert born December 28, 1903, is a graduate of the Ripley High School and a teacher at Tracefork; Russell, born in 1906, and Corinne, born in 1910, are students in the public schools at Ripley.

GARLAND TODD THAYER. The South Side Foundry and Machine Works, of Charleston, of which Garland Todd Thayer is president and owner, is an important industry of that city and has been established for fifty years. It has manufactured, sold and installed more machinery and equipment for coal mines than any institution of its kind in the state.

Two brothers, O. A. and W. T. Thayer, in 1863 established a foundry and machine works at Malden, West Virginia, which was then the active business center of the Kanawha Valley, in fact that town was larger and more important at hat time than Charleston. The principal industry of the valley was the manufacture of salt, and many furnaces were established. The Thayer brothers established a foundry and machine works and manufactured steam engines and other equipment for these furnaces. A few years later they realized Charleston would prove a more favorable center for their plant, and it was removed to its present location on the south side of the Kanawha River opposite Charleston and adjacent to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway (then in the course of construction). The entire plant was moved from Malden to Charleston in 1872, just fifty years ago. The brothers then engaged in the manufacture of machinery and special equipment required for coal mines, including haulage and hoisting engines and machinery used for coal tipples and other mining operations. About the year 1893 the two brothers who founded the concern retired from its active management, which was taken up by the subject of this sketch. In 1900 the South Side Foundry and Machine Works was incorporated with a capital of $100,000.00. G. T. Thayer, with his son, G. T., Jr., now own the plant, the former having purchased the interests of all the others. This company specializes in machinery and equipment for the coal mining industry. In normal times from 125 to 150 men are employed. The foundry is well equipped for making castings for almost any purpose, both heavy and light. The company manufactures castings for many of the industries located within the Kanawha Valley and elsewhere, and enjoys the reputation of supplying only the highest grade of mining machinery and equipment. The site secured by the brothers over fifty years ago has proved to be an excellent location for the business, being situated between the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway and the Kanawha River, thus affording excellent shipping facilities, both by water and rail.

W. F. Hallenar

Messrs. Otis A. and William T. Thayer, the founders of this business, were born in the Kanawha Valley, sons of Job Thayer, who was a native of Braintree, Massachusetts. O. A. Thayer died in 1900 and his brother, W. T. Thayer, in 1901. Both owned coal lands in Fayette County, West Virginia, and these properties were developed and are now under lease. One of their associates in the coal business was Col. Joseph L. Benry, a well known coal operator in the New River coal district of West Virginia.

Garland Todd Thayer is a son of Otis A. Thayer. Early in life he learned all details of the mechanical end of the industry, and is thoroughly familiar with every phase of the foundry and machine business. His close, personal supervision of the industry has resulted in the continued successful operation of the plant. He was married in 1892 to Miss Gertrude Venable, whose father, M. W. Venable, is a well known civil and mining engineer of Charleston. Mr. and Mrs. Thayer have four children, three daughters and a son, Garland Todd, Jr., who is secretary of the South Side Foundry and Machine Works and is connected with his father in the operation of the business.

WALTER S. HALLANAN. State Tax Commissioner Walter S. Hallanan, one of the youngest and most popular officials at the state capitol, has had a remarkable career as a journalist and public official.

Born at Huntington, West Virginia, in 1890, he is the son of Dr. Thomas and Martha (Blake) Hallanan. His father died October 15, 1921, at the Hallanan homestead in Barboursville, after a long and distinguished career as a physician and writer. His mother still resides at Barboursville.

Most of Mr. Hallanan's life was spent in Cabell County. He was educated in the public schools at Huntington and afterward was graduated from Morris Harvey College at Barboursville. Immediately after finishing college he entered the newspaper field, being employed as a reporter on the Huntington Herald. He shortly afterward became editor of the paper, and in 1909, when the paper consolidated with The Dispatch, he became managing editor of The Huntington Herald-Dispatch, one of the state's leading dailies.

Mr. Hallanan first attracted state-wide attention in connection with his handling of the publicity bureau of the Republican State Committee during the campaign of 1916. The republican forces in the state were divided on the Taft-Roosevelt issue, and to his tact and ability in maintaining the common interest of both factions in the state ticket is credited the success of the republican party in West Virginia during the campaign. West Virginia was the only normal republican state which elected a republican governor that fall.

Mr. Hallanan gave up journalism in 1913, when he was appointed private secretary to Governor Henry D. Hatfield. On March 1, 1917, near the close of Governor Hatfield's term of office, he was appointed state tax commissioner. In September, 1921, at the annual meeting of the National Tax Association, Mr. Hallanan was elected a member of the executive committee of the association.

By virtue of his office as state tax commissioner Mr. Hallanan became prohibition commissioner of West Virginia, and his record as a law enforcement officer and his splendid administration of the duties of the tax commissioner's office have won for him universal trust and admiration.

Mr. Hallanan was a member of the West Virginia Electoral College in the presidential campaign of 1920. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is an active participant in church affairs.

Mr. Hallanan married Miss Imogene Burns, of Huntington, West Virginia, and in October, 1921, their marriage was blessed by a son, Walter S. Hallanan, Jr.

HERMAN MORRISSEY BROWN, who is giving most effective administration as superintendent of construction for the International Nickel Company at Huntington, was born at Liberty (now Bedford), Virginia, on the 25th of May, 1884. His father, Charles C. Brown, now a resident of Roanoke, Virginia, was born at Panther Springs, Tennessee, in 1852, and was there given his early education. After the close of the Civil war his parents moved to Prospect, Virginia, and later he became a locomotive fireman for the Norfolk & Western Railroad, with headquarters at Lynchburg, Virginia. He won advancement to the position of engineer, and is now trial engineer for the same railroad company, with residence at Roanoke, where he and his wife have maintained their home since 1886 and where he is an active member of the Masonic fraternity. At Liberty, Virginia, was solemnized the marriage of Charles C. Brown and Miss Millie E. Morrissey, who was born at Bridgeport, Connecticut, in 1857, and of their children the subject of this review is the eldest; Albert is general foreman at the roundhouse of the Norfolk & Western Railroad at Bluefield, West Virginia; James W. is assistant chief clerk to the superintendent of motive power for the same railroad at Roanoke, Virginia; Charles C., Jr., is secretary to the superintendent of transportation of the same railroad; and Eleanor remains at the parental home.

Herman M. Brown attended St. Andrew's School at Roanoke, Virginia, until he was sixteen years old, and thereafter he worked in turn in a foundry and a blacksmith shop in that city. In 1901 he found employment as a laborer in the service of the Norfolk & Western Railroad, and later served an apprenticeship as a machinist in the shops of the company. At the completion of his apprenticeship he took a position as a draftsman in the offices of this railroad company at Roanoke, and the opportunity presenting, he entered the engineer of tests department, conducting a seven months test in one of their fast passenger trains operating between Richmond and Norfolk, Virginia. Leaving the services of the N. & W., he entered the services of the American Locomotive Company and later allied with the automobile industry, which at that time was just beginning. Later he entered the services of the C. & O. Railroad Company at Richmond, Virginia as draughtsman, from which position he was promoted to roundhouse foreman at Huntington, and in October, 1907, he was made general foreman at Thurmond, West Virginia, where he remained two years, the next year having been passed in a similar position at Handley. He was then transferred to Hinton, this state, and became master mechanic. In 1911 he was made master mechanic of the Cincinnati division, with headquarters at Covington, Kentucky, and in 1912 he returned to Huntington, where he served as shop superintendent for the same company. During the war he was of service to the Government at Watervleit Arsenal. On January 1, 1921, he resigned his position and accepted his present office, that of superintendent of construction for the International Nickel Company, a position that he is well qualified to fill due to previous opportunities offered and which has been demonstrated in the beautiful plant that is now rapidly nearing completion.

The general offices of the above company are at 67 Wall Street, New York City. He is at the present time superintending the construction of the company's new plant at Guyandotte, a suburb of Huntington. Here will be the company's only rolling mill, and the plant will be one of the largest and most important placed in operation by this corporation. A force of 400 men will be required to initiate operations, and with the normal expansion of the business this force will be materially increased. Mr. Brown is a stockholder in the Guyandotte Bank and is vice president and chief designer for the Fordette Engine Company of Huntington. He is a democrat. He and his wife are communicants of the Catholic Church, and he is a director of the Huntington Chamber of Commerce, and is affiliated with Roanoke Council No. 562, Knights of Columbus, at Roanoke, Virginia, and with Hinton (West Virginia) Lodge, No. 821, B. P. O. E. He maintains his permanent residence in Huntington, and is the owner of his modern home property, at 1411 Sixth Avenue.

On the 12th of June, 1908, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Brown and Miss Catherine Mae Furlong, at the Sacred Heart Church, Norfolk, Virginia. She is a daughter of James P. and Jane Furlong, the former of whom, a ship chandler by vocation, died at Norfolk, Virginia, and the latter now resides at Willoughby Beach, that state. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have three children, whose names and dates of birth are here recorded: Charles James, July, 1910; Mary Eleanor, May 25, 1914; and Herman M., Jr., January 25, 1920.

EDWIN FRANCIS HILL recently received a change of title and a new line of duties with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company of West Virginia, his present title being division information manager at Charleston. He is a veteran of the telephone industry and business in America, and while his duties now involve chiefly the public relationship of the telephone industry and its personnel, his experience ranges over nearly every phase of work from the construction and equipment of lines to the management of large and important divisions of the Bell Telephone System of America.

Mr. Hill, who was born in Orange County, Virginia, January 15, 1882, represents a family of many honorable distinctions in Virginia Colonial and State history. His first English ancestor settled in Virginia early in the seventeenth century. The family produced a number of notable statesmen and military leaders, including Col. Henry Hill of the Revolutionary war and Gen. Ambrose Powell Hill of the Civil war. Mr. Hill bears the name of his grandfather, Edwin Francis Hill, who married June 4, 1840, Lucy Scott Borton. Their son Rowland Flint Hill was born at the Hill ancestral home, Indian Trace, near Louest Dale, Madison County, Virginia, January 5, 1852. On January 5, 1881, at Mt. Zion Church in Oak Park, Madison County, Virginia, he married Etha Garnett, daughter of Jeremiah Cave and Sarah Elizabeth (Willis) Garnett, who were married at Burlington, Boone County, Kentucky, May 5, 1853. Jeremiah C. Garnett was a member of the Fifth Virginia Cavalry, Lomax' Brigade, and was wounded at the battle of Newmarket in 1862. Albert G. Willis, an uncle of Etha Garnett, was a member of Mosely's raiders and was captured and executed by the Union Army at Gaines' Cross Roads, Virginia, October 13, 1864, in retaliation for the death of a Union soldier supposed to have been killed by Mosely's men.

Edwin Francis Hill began work with the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company at Portsmouth, Virginia, February 10, 1900. His first service was digging holes for the company's lines in that city. That was the beginning of a service which subsequently took him all over the South and involved the erection of telephone plants in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Alabama, and the performance of nearly every kind of plant service. By virtue of more than twenty-one years of continuous service in the telephone industry Mr. Hill is a member of the Telephone Pioneers of America.

In December, 1900, following his early experience at Portsmouth, he was sent to Danville, Virginia, where he worked on the changing of the old system to the common battery system. In April, 1901, he went to Jacksonville, Florida, and was in service with the Bell system there during the fire of May 3, 1901. June 1st of that year he returned to Danville for a short time, and then worked at Winston-Salem and other points in North Carolina. January 1, 1902, he was transferred to Atlanta, Georgia, and remained in the plant construction service of the Southern Bell Telephone Company in that city and territory until September 1, 1905. Then, after a little more than five years' experience in the telephone business, he was made district foreman of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, with headquarters at Atlanta. The district then comprised the states of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and portions of Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi and Louisiana. He first came to Charleston, West Virginia, in November, 1906, again in the employ of the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, superintending the placing of the underground system, changing the old magneto system of the city to the common battery system. The cut-over on this undertaking was made in December, 1906. At that time, it is interesting to note, Charleston had 1,168 telephones; it now has over 11,000.

Leaving Charleston June 22, 1906, Mr. Hill went to Norfolk, Virginia, remaining there until December, 1907, and after another month or two at Lynchburg, Virginia, returned to Atlanta, where he continued on duty until the latter part of August, 1908. September 1, 1908, he was transferred to Norfolk as district plant chief in charge of the Norfolk District, comprising Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News, Hampton and Suffolk, reporting to the Richmond superintendent of plant.

June 30, 1912, Mr. Hill was transferred to Charleston as division plant superintendent of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company, a part of the Bell system. His jurisdiction embraced the entire State of West Virginia. Recently a new position was created, primarily involving the relations of the telephone business with the public, and the title of the official supervising this branch of the service is division information manager. Mr. Hill assumed this title and its duties on November 1, 1921, his jurisdiction comprising also the State of West Virginia.

Among other mementoes of his long and interesting service Mr. Hill has two letters directed to him in September, 1921, one from Brigadier General H. H. Bandholtz, and the other from Maj. General Charles T. Menchor, chief of the air service, both expressing the heartiest appreciation and commending Mr. Hill for personally conducting a constant day and night telephone search for information that might lead to the location and discovery of the wrecked aeroplane and its crew in Nicholas County. Mr. Hill has received the Theodore N. Vail Medal for "Noteworthy Public Service" in connection with locating the airplane in September, 1921.

Mr. Hill is a charter member of Charleston Lodge No. 153 A. F. and A. M., a member of Charleston Chapter, Knights of Rose Croix No. 3, and Odel Squier Long Lodge of Perfection No. 3. Mr. Hill married Miss Marie Virginia Nicholson, of Fort Worth, Texas, at Portsmouth, Norfolk County, Virginia, December 7, 1910.

ABRAHAM E. HUDDLESTON, mayor of White Sulphur Springs, ex-member of the West Virginia State Legislature, and one of the most prominent men of Greenbrier County, was born in Allegheny County, Virginia, December 16, 1855. He is a son of David G. and Agnes (Hook) Huddleston. According to the family tradition two brothers bearing the name of Huddleston came to the American Colonies from England in 1734, one settling in New York State and the other at Tidewater, Virginia. It is from the latter that Mayor Huddleston descends. One of the name served in the American Revolution, a portion of the time being on the staff of General Washington. Practically all of the Virginian Huddlestons sympathized with the South in the war between the two sections of the country, and bore their part in the Confederate cause. The majority of the Huddlestons have followed farming. For the past century, with the exception of a few years, Bedford County, Virginia, has had a sheriff of the name of Huddleston. As a rule all of the name have been law-abiding, industrious and upright, a credit to the communities in which they have resided.

A. L. Robey

The grandfather of Mayor Huddleston was Abraham J. Huddleston, born in Bedford County, Virginia, in 1800. During the '20s of the last century he located in Alleghany County, and was there married to Leah Bowyer, and they had a large family. David G. Huddleston, one of their sons, and father of Mayor Huddleston, was a civil engineer and engaged in railroad construction work. Prior to the '60s he helped to build the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, and he followed that line of endeavor very successfully until his death, which occurred September 7, 1878.

Abraham E. Huddleston is the eldest of five sons and five daughters, and was reared in his native county. After completing a common-school education he began to be self-supporting as a telegraph operator, and worked as such and as a station agent for ten years. At the expiration of that period he branched out into a lumber and mercantile business at Callahan, Virginia, and in 1888 came to White Sulphur Springs and established himself here in the same line, in which he has since continued.

Coming as he did to White Sulphur Springs when it was in its formative period, he has taken a determining part in all of its progress and was one of the prime movers in the organization of the Mountain Milling Company; built and installed the electric light plant; and was one of the leaders in the establishment of the local bank. A strong democrat, he was elected mayor of White Sulphur Springs when it was first incorporated, and has also long served on the Board of Education. In 1912 he was elected to the State Assembly and re-elected in 1914, and while a member of that body served on some of its most important committees, and was very efficient as a legislator. In 1922 he was again elected mayor of his city, and it is a singular fact that he was nominated by every vote cast in the convention, and elected by every vote at the polls. Mayor Huddleston is a thirty-second degree Mason, A. A. S. R., and also a Knight-Templar of the York Rite. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and has served as a lay delegate to its general conference three different terms.

In 1877 Mr. Huddleston married Isabella Richardson, of Callahan, Virginia, and they became the parents of thirteen children, five of whom now survive. Mrs. Huddleston died January 4, 1918. Mr. Huddleston married for his second wife, Miss Elizabeth Peacock. Mr. Huddleston is a practical man who has reached his present leadership through his own efforts and because of his personality and ability to accomplish big things. The city of which he is chief executive owes practically everything to his energy, far-sightedness and good sense, and he has achieved marvels for it not only as an official, but as a private individual as well. His work of a public character has not been confined, however, to local issues, for as a member of the State Legislature he did much for the entire state, and a number of excellent laws are on the statute books because of his introduction or championship of them, or both. Personally he is one of the most popular of men with all classes, and in spite of the honors which have been bestowed upon him, is simple and unassuming, glad to lend a helping hand or to further any enterprise which in his judgment will bring about some improvement. There are not many men of his caliber in a community or even in a generation, and when they are found they are appreciated by the more intelligent, who know their value.

DAVID AUSTIN JAYNE was born March 4, 1878, in Eaton Township, Wyoming County, Pennsylvania, son of David and Hannah (Kisbaugh) Jayne. He attended county school, spent the early part of his life on the farm, and graduated from the commercial department of Keystone Academy, Factoryville, Pennsylvania, in June 1898, and from the East Stroudsburg State Normal School in June, 1901. He taught country school and commercial schools at Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania, Elyria, Ohio, and Charleston, West Virginia.

Mr. Jayne began the practice of public accounting in 1905, and was commissioned as a certified public accountant by the State of West Virginia in 1911. He is a member of the American Institute of Accountants, American Society of Certified Public Accountants and Association of Certified Public Accountants of West Virginia.

He married Anna Evelyn Carey, of Wyoming County, Pennsylvania, in 1905, who died soon after their marriage. In 1907 he married Cecelia MacCutcheon, of Erie, Pennsylvania. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, Shriner and Elk.

Mr. Jayne was appointed on the State Board for the Examination of Public Accountants by Gov. H. D. Hatfield, and re-appointed in 1922 by Gov. Ephraim F. Morgan.

HOWARD LEE ROBESY, cashier of the Cabell County Bank of Huntington, West Virginia, who has devoted the greater part of a quarter of a century to banking, possesses all the technical, detailed knowledge of bank operations, and has proved equally able in the field of executive management.

Mr. Robesy was born in Roane County, West Virginia, December 30, 1876. His paternal ancestors were English and came to Maryland at the time of Lord Baltimore. His grandfather, Randolph Robesy, born May 8, 1907, was a farmer in Marion and Roane counties, and he died while serving as a soldier in the Mexican war. His wife was Louisa Hardy, who was born March 13, 1806, and died in Roane County, West Virginia in 1887. She reared a family of four sons and four daughters, the only survivor being John Nelson Robesy.

John Nelson Robesy was born in Marion County, June 23, 1841, and in 1844 his parents moved to Roane County, where he was reared and where he became an extensive farmer. As a young man he enlisted in the Confederate Army, in the Thirty-seventh Virginia Infantry, and served until the end of that conflict. While he lives with his son Hamond H. in Spencer, West Virginia, he still owns and gives more or less active supervision to his farm five miles west of that town. While buying his farm and rearing his children he supplemented his income by teaching in some of the old-time log-cabin schoolhouses of that period. He also held the office of justice of the peace. A large gas pumping station is located on his farm. He enjoys prosperity after several years of economic struggle to provide for his family. He is a democrat, and for forty-five years has been a member of Moriah Lodge No. 38, A. F. and A. M., Spencer, West Virginia.

John Nelson Robesy married America Howell, who was born in Roane County, January 23, 1853, and died June 12, 1883. Five children were born to them: Lillian M., born July 10, 1873, died July 28, 1919; Howard Lee; Fleet M., born November 21, 1878, assistant cashier of the Cabell County Bank of Huntington, West Virginia; Hamond H., born February 24, 1881, proprietor of a chain of moving picture theatres at Spencer, West Virginia, where he lives, and at Ravenswood and St. Marys, West Virginia; and Olive J., born February 7, 1883, wife of J. Mell Schwender, cashier of the First National Bank of South Charleston, West Virginia.

Howard Lee Robesy acquired a rural school education in Roane County. At that time the terms of rural schools were for four months each year. These he attended regularly, and during the remainder of the year worked on the farm, continuing his studies under his father, who had formerly been a school teacher. At the age of fifteen he was awarded a teachers certificate, and taught school for four successive terms. At the age of nineteen he secured a position as bookkeeper in the Bank of Spencer, at Spencer, West Virginia, and in less than two years was made cashier, at that time being the youngest bank cashier in West Virginia.

He remained with the Bank of Spencer until 1901, when he went to Point Pleasant, West Virginia and became a bookkeeper in the Merchants National Bank. A year later he returned to Roane County and organized the Bank of Reedy at Reedy, West Virginia, and served as cashier until the fall of the same year, when he received the nomination by the democratic party in a three cornered fight for the office of clerk of the County Court of Roane County. He was defeated in the republican landslide of that year, but had the satisfaction of leading his ticket by over two hundred votes.

Mr. Robey then returned to the Merchants National Bank at Point Pleasant, West Virginia, and in addition to his services with the bank, he was assistant secretary to two building and loan associations. In 1906 he joined with other Point Pleasant business men and associates in the organization of the Point Pleasant Trust Company. He became secretary-treasurer of the company, and at the same time held the office of treasurer of the Town of Point Pleasant. These duties engaged him until 1910, when, on account of failing health, he concluded to farm for awhile and moved to his wife's farm at Maggie, West Virginia, where he remained for two years. Another year he sold life insurance, and then he located at Matewan, West Virginia, where he organized the Matewan National Bank, which institution was very successful from its beginning under the management of Mr. Robey as cashier.

Mr. Robey had a desire to locate in Huntington, West Virginia, and when he read in the papers that the Central Banking Company had met with some difficulty in 1916 he got in communication with those interested, and after he had made careful investigation of its affairs he concluded he could "right the ship," and in a very short time arrangements were made for him to take charge of the institution. The name of the bank was changed to the Cabell County Bank on September 19, 1916, and its success is reflected in the rapid growth the bank has made since his connection with it, its resources having already passed the half million mark, and its continued growth is assured. The officers of the bank are: S. H. Bowman, president; M. Biederman, vice president; H. L. Robey, cashier; Kathryn L. Robey, his wife, assistant cashier; and F. M. Robey, his brother, assistant cashier. The bank has a capital stock of $25,000; surplus of $5,000, and deposits of over $400,000. Those familiar with the history of this institution give the chief credit for its steadily growing prosperity to Mr. Robey and Mrs. Robey. The bank is located at the corner of Washington Avenue and Fourteenth Street. It has adopted the following slogan, "A good bank in a good part of the City."

Mr. Robey is a past master of Minturn Lodge No. 19, A. F. and A. M., at Point Pleasant, West Virginia; is past recorder of Point Pleasant Chapter No. 7, R. A. M., was the first recorder of Franklin Commandery No. 17, Knights Templar, at Point Pleasant, and he still continues his membership with the above bodies. He is also a member of Beni-Kedem Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Charleston, West Virginia, and of Huntington Lodge of Perfection No. 4 of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry.

Mr. Robey married at Point Pleasant, West Virginia, on December 7, 1907, Kathryn Long, daughter of Morgan Long and Mary Frances (Hogg) Long, two of the oldest and most distinguished families of Southern West Virginia.

Mrs. Robey was educated by private teachers, and as noted above, is assistant cashier of the Cabell County Bank. She acquired her first experience in banking in the Matewan National Bank of Matewan, West Virginia, having entered the bank with Mr. Robey the day it opened for business, and she was soon promoted to the office of assistant cashier.

JOSEPH HARVEY LONG, who has recently retired from the office of postmaster of the City of Huntington, has long been numbered among the representative members of the newspaper fraternity in West Virginia, and since 1895 has been editor and publisher of the Huntington Advertiser, which he has made one of the strong and influential papers of the state.

Mr. Long was born in Lebanon County, Pennsylvania May 21, 1863, and is a son of Edward C. and Sarah (Robuck) Long. The house in which he was born figured all as the birthplace of his father and his paternal grandfather and the ancient building was erected over flowing springs and in such a way as to constitute a sort of block house (fort to afford protection against the Indians, the while the springs supplied water which could not be cut off in case of siege by hostile Indians. Edward C. Long became a traveling salesman for a manufacturing and wholesale house in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to which city he removed with his family in 1873. There the future newspaper man Joseph H. Long, was reared to adult age and received the advantages of the public schools. As a boy Mr. Long came into possession of a small printing outfit, which he utilized in the printing of visiting cards. This amateur enterprise doubtless had direct influence in leading to his continuous alliance with the "art preservative of all arts." He gradually expanded his juvenile printing enterprise to include measure of commercial work, and he continued to increase his working knowledge of the mystic details of the printing trade and business. In April, 1879, Mr. Long went to Lagrange, Ohio, a town later known as Brilliant, and there invested all his capital in the Novelty Glass Company. Financial disaster robbed him of all he had invested, and he then resumed his alliance with the printing business by taking employment as a compositor in the office of the Ohio Press at Steubenville. Within a short time thereafter he became a general utility man on the Wheeling Leader, which was then a Sunday paper, at Wheeling, West Virginia. He thus continued until about the year 1882. In the meanwhile Dana Hubbard, a brother of W. P. Hubbard, who at that time was publisher of the Wheeling Leader, had become editor of the Erie Dispatch at Erie, Pennsylvania, and Mr. Long joined the staff of this Pennsylvania paper. In the autumn of 1884 he found employment with the Oswego Palladium, at Oswego, New York, but in September of the following year he returned to Pittsburgh and took position in the office of the Wheeling Register, and later became interested in the Wheeling News. In the autumn of 1893 Mr. Long came from that West Virginia city to Huntington, and here purchased the plant and business of the Herald, then in a dilapidated and run-down condition. He soon developed this into a well regulated and prosperous newspaper property, and made it so influential as a republican paper that within a year, mainly through its medium the republican party elected all officers in Cabell County with the exception of county clerk. In 1895 Mr. Long sold the Herald property and purchased the Huntington Advertiser of which he has since continued the editor and publisher and which he has made a power in politics throughout the state. In May, 1916, Mr. Long was commissioned postmaster of Huntington, and after giving an effective administration of five years and one month he resigned, and has since given his exclusive attention to his newspaper business. The history of the Huntington Advertiser and the record of the local career of Mr. Long are so closely linked and interwoven as to be practically inseparable, and both the man and the paper have wielded large influence in local affairs. The Advertiser had its inception at Buffalo, West Virginia, and about the year 1870 its owner, Dr. O. G. Chase, removed the plant and business to Guyandotte, Cabell County. When the present fine industrial city of Huntington was born, Dr. Chase removed his plant to the new town, and after a time he was succeeded in the ownership by Major E. A. Bennett. In September, 1885, C. L. Thompson, of Hinton, and W. O. Wiatt purchased the property and continued the publication of the Advertiser as a weekly paper. On September 2, 1889, the Daily Advertiser was founded and published in conjunction with the weekly of the same name. At this time Mr. Wiatt retired from the firm, and the publications were continued by Mr. Thompson, who later was succeeded by Thomas E. Hodges, a former principal of Marshall College, and George F. Donnelly, a local attorney, each of whom had previously acquired an interest the property. J. Hoffman Edwards, of Weston, became the next owner, he having been succeeded by George Summers and the latter by Major G. Downtain and his son, William S. Up to this time the two papers had maintained somewhat precarious existence, but a new vigor was instilled when J. H. Long purchased the properties, July 20, 1895, he having since continued the directing spirit of the now splendid newspaper enterprise. Of those formerly identified with the Advertiser, Dr. Chase Major Bennett, Messrs. Thompson, Hodges and Donnell, and Major Downtain are all deceased; Mr. Wiatt is treasurer of Hagen, Ratcliff & Company, wholesale grocers at Huntington; Mr. Edwards amassed a fortune in oil production and now resides at Weston, this state; Mr. Summers is a widely known newspaper correspondent, with headquarters at Washington, District of Columbia.

Under the effective control and management of Mr. Long, the Huntington Advertiser has become one of the valuable newspaper properties in West Virginia. Its mechanical equipment includes a sixteen-page Duplex press, with color attachment; nine linotype machines, of which five have multiple magazines; one monotype and one Ludlow typesetting machine. It is virtually a non-distributing plant and is wholly independent of the type trust. Equipped throughout with new steel furniture, the establishment is one of the most modern and complete newspaper and printing plants in the state, and the plan of Mr. Long is to install, in the near future, the plant in a model new building to be erected for the purpose at the corner of Tenth Street and Fifth Avenue.

Mr. Long is a leader in the councils and campaign activities of the democratic party in West Virginia, and in the Masonic fraternity he has completed the circle of each the York and Scottish Rites, in the latter of which he has received the thirty-second degree.

In 1884 Mr. Long was united in marriage to Miss Cora I. Thompson, of Steubenville, Ohio, and they have three sons, Luther T., Paul Walker and Edward H., all of whom are associated with the Huntington Advertiser. Paul W. and Edward H. were in the nation's service in the World War period. Luther T., being over thirty years old and married, was not called. Paul W., a graduate of Cornell University, completed a course in the air service of the United States Navy at Seattle, Washington, and was later stationed at San Diego, California. Edward H. was a student in Cornell University at the time when the United States became involved in the war, and was in the Student Army Training Corps at Washington and Lee, Lexington, Virginia, when the armistice was signed.

MILTON STANLEY HODGES, city attorney of Franklin, is fortunate in the choice of his profession, for its employments are congenial to him and he has followed them with flagging interest and zest. To him the work of the law is not drudgery, but the source of keen, intellectual pleasure, and through it he has been able to render a much-appreciated service to his community. Nature equipped him generously for the profession, and he has supplemented her gifts by the conduct of his life. Possessing as he does a broad, clear and vigorous mind, everything he undertakes is carried out in an orderly and logical manner, and some of the large interests of this locality recognizing this, and his inherent honesty, are glad to secure his services in their behalf.

Mr. Hodges was born at Piedmont, Mineral County, West Virginia, September 28, 1876, and is a son of Milton Hodges, a railroad engineer, in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for thirty years. Milton Hodges a son of Joseph and Edith (Bennett) Hodges was born in Washington County, Maryland, in 1840, and spent his early life on a farm. When war broke out between the two sections of the country he enlisted in the Union Army, and belonged to Company K, Third Maryland Infantry. Following his honorable discharge at the close of the war, he went into railroad work, and continued in it until his useful life was terminated in an accident while passenger engineer for its road, April 26, 1892. He is buried at Keyser, West Virginia.

Milton Hodges married at Cumberland, Maryland, Mrs. Martha Ellen Sharf, who was the only child of Levi and Ellen (Paxton) Curtis, and who died at Keyser in 1909, where she had lived since 1877. She had one child by her first marriage, who is now Mrs. J. W. P. Welch, of Cumberland, Maryland. Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hodges had the following children: William L. who died at Keyser, West Virginia in 1914, unmarried; Mrs. Oscar Spotts, who lives at Keyser; Mrs. A. M. Pugh, who is also a resident of Keyser; Charles R., who lives at Keyser; A. H., who lives at Keyser; Milton Stanley, whose name heads this review; Mrs. Edward Hall, who lives at Crafton, Pennsylvania; Mrs. B. E. Wells and Harry C., who are residents of Keyser, and Roy, who died at Keyser in 1895.

When he was but three months old, Milton Stanley Hodges parents removed to Keyser, and here he was reared and attended school graduating from the high-school course in 1892. In 1899 he was graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan University with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. His legal training was secured in the law department of the University of West Virginia, at Morgantown, from which he was graduated in 1901 with the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

Admitted to practice at the bar of his native state, Mr. Hodges established himself in a general practice at Keyser, but after a year left that city for Franklin, and since then has continued to be identified with this community. Here he became a member of the law firm of Forman and Hodges, his partner being Senator L. J. Forman of Petersburg. This firm, now twenty years old, still exists, and is the oldest law firm in Pendleton County. Mr. Hodges is identified with the courts in general practice. In 1904 and again in 1920 he was the candidate of the republican party for the office of county prosecutor, but his party is so decidedly in the minority in this region that there was no possibility of election. His first vote was cast for Governor Bushnell in Ohio in 1898, while a student of the Ohio Wesleyan University; his first presidential vote was cast for William McKinley in 1900, and he has continued his affiliations with the republican party ever since, being very active in organization work. Until 1916 he was chairman of the Pendleton County Republican Central Committee, and since then has been a member of the party committee of the Second Congressional District, and on the state committee by proxy at times. Although frequently urged to make the race for state senatorship, he has declined to do so. His presence as a delegate to the state conventions of his party has been frequent and regular, and he was secretary of the last one held at Huntington. He was a member of the famous 1904 republican convention held at Wheeling, West Virginia, and the one in 1912, held at Huntington, in which the progressive wing of the party attempted to depose the regular republican committee. In 1901 Mr. Hodges was appointed assistant clerk of the House of Delegates, and served as such in the sessions of 1903 and 1905, and as chief assistant in 1907. In 1909 he was secretary to the president of the Senate; assistant clerk of the House in 1913, and was elected clerk of that body in 1921.

During the Spanish-American war, Mr. Hodges volunteered as a member of Company K, Fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, while he was a student in the Ohio Wesleyan University. The company mobilized at Camp Bushnell, Columbus, Ohio, was ordered to Chickamauga Park, Tennessee, and went from there into active service in Porto Rico. The regiment sailed from Newport News in August, 1898, on the auxiliary cruiser Saint Paul in the command of Captain Chadwick, who commanded the ill-fated Maine at the time it was blown up in Havana Harbor. The troops landed at Arroyo, Porto Rico, and the day following advanced and captured, after a short engagement, Guayama. On August 8, they fought the battle of Las Palmas, and on August 13, the day after the terms of peace were signed at Paris, the command was engaged in making a general attack upon the Spanish blockhouse in the mountains around Guayama, and was stopped by a messenger from headquarters announcing the close of the war. The troops were returned to the United States early in November, and proceeded from New York City, where they were landed, to Washington, and there they were received by President and Mrs. McKinley at the White House. They were honorably discharged at Columbus, Ohio, in January, 1899. Mr. Hodges was neither wounded nor was he confined in the hospital, as were so many of his comrades, and after his discharge returned to his studies in the university at Delaware, Ohio.

During the World war he also rendered a loyal service, and was chairman of the Pendleton County War Board, was a member of the County Council of Defense, and chairman of the drives for the Salvation Army and the Young Men's Christian Association. He participated in all of the drives for the sale of Liberty Bonds and those of the Red Cross, canvassing the county in their behalf and making many eloquent speeches at different gatherings. He was also secretary of the Home Service section of the Red Cross.

Mr. Hodges is a member of the Franklin Presbyterian Church, manager of benevolences for the congregation and teaches the Men's Bible Class in the Sunday school. His religious work is not confined to the local congregation, however, for he is president of the Franklin District State Sunday School Association, and was a delegate to the last state convention of this association held at Charleston. Made a member of Beta Theta Pi at the Ohio Wesleyan University, he was one of the founders of the present chapter in the University of West Virginia. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and past counsel of the local camp. He has been advanced through Ancient Arabic Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and Wheeling Consistory, No. 1 Scottish Rite. He has been Wheeling Consistory, No. 1 Scottish Rite. He has been worshipful master of Pendleton Lodge, A. F. and A. M. for eleven years, except two, and is serving his third appointment as district deputy grand master for the Fourteenth Masonic District of West Virginia.

On December 13, 1905, Mr. Hodges married at Franklin, Miss Carrie McCoy Campbell, a daughter of the late W. A. and Mary V. (McCoy) Campbell. Mrs. Hodges was born in Highland County, Virginia, was educated in the Franklin schools, and is the younger child in her parents' family, consisting of her and her brother, Roy L. Campbell, of Franklin. On her mother's side of the house Mrs. Hodges is closely related to Gen. William McCoy, for twenty years congressman from Virginia, chairman of the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives, and a man so prominent that he was offered, but refused, a place in the cabinet of President Andrew Jackson. Through her father, Mrs. Hodges is descended from the famous Lewis family of Augusta County, Virginia, which had representatives in the battle of Point Pleasant with old Chief Cornstalk, one of whom was General Lewis of Revolutionary fame. Mr. and Mrs. Hodges have one daughter, Mary Virginia, who was born September 13, 1908, and is now a high-school student.

As before stated, Mr. Hodges is city attorney of the City of Franklin and has devoted much of his time and energy to the betterment of the city. He is attorney for the Farmers Bank of Franklin, and for the Stephen B. Elkins estate in Pendleton County. Mr. Hodges and two of his brothers own and operate the Hodges Orchard at Keyser, a noted fruit-growing section of the state. For years he has been a persistent agitator for permanent roads, and is now seeing the fruition of his hopes and labors in the present construction of hard-surface roads through his own and adjacent counties of the state.

In all of his service, public and private, in war and peace, Mr. Hodges has shown a flawless integrity above question or criticism. All who know him intimately recognize his honesty, and a careful inspection of his record fails to reveal a single act properly subject to the smallest criticism, judged by the highest standards of honor.

SAMUEL EDWARD BRADLEY, president of the Madison National Bank, a former president of the Royal Block Coal Company, county road engineer of Boone County, is one of the most important men of his section, and one who has traveled far on the road which leads to prosperity and civic honors. He comes of a long line of honorable ancestry, dating back in this country to four brothers by the name of Bradley who were passengers in one of the little sailing vessels which almost immediately followed the historic "Mayflower." One of these brothers remained in New England; another traveled further West; one eventually made his way into the wilderness which subsequently became Kentucky; and Joshua Bradley took up his residence in Virginia, and it is from the last named that Samuel Edward Bradley is directly descended. All of these Bradley brothers and their descendants took a very active part in the history of the American Colonies, the Revolutionary war, and the subsequent events down to the present day, and they are to be found all over the country, in all the professions and honorable trades and business enterprises.

The birth of Samuel Edward Bradley occurred January 9, 1862, and he is a son of John D. and Martha J. (Pauley) Bradley, both of whom were born in West Virginia. John D. Bradley was a farmer and blacksmith during his earlier years, and during the war between the two sections of the country he espoused the Union cause and served it as a brave soldier. He lived to be nearly ninety years of age, dying at Charleston, West Virginia, May 13, 1922.

Growing up in his native county of Raleigh, Samuel Edward Bradley attended its common schools, and pursued his studies by himself to prepare for a normal training, it being his youthful ambition to become a teacher. After he had secured his certificate he taught in Raleigh, Boone and Kanawha counties from 1881 to 1892, and during this time studied surveying, for he is one of those men who can never rest content with what he has accomplished, but is always trying to further fit himself for other and more important duties. In 1884 he was elected county surveyor of Boone County, and in order to better discharge the obligations of this office took up the study of railroad construction and general engineering with the Scranton Correspondence School, from which he secured his diploma in both. A further recognition of his abilities was shown when he was appointed deputy sheriff of Boone County and he served as such for four years, during which time he proved his utter fearlessness and resourcefulness.

In 1897 Mr. Bradley was elected clerk of the Circuit Court of his district, and served as such until 1903, since which time he has devoted considerable attention to his profession and land surveying. In 1919 he was elected county road engineer, and still holds that office. He still gives a general supervision to the construction and right of way matters for the county in its road work. In 1915 Mr. Bradley branched out in his activities, going at that time into the coal business as an operator, and opened up the mine of the Royal Block Coal Company on the Altman Branch, of which concern he was president. He was one of the original organizers of the Madison National Bank in 1902, has continued on its directorate since its inception, and became its president in 1916.

On April 13, 1885, Mr. Bradley married Nannie J. Hunter, a daughter of Robert and Janet (Thompson) Hunter, natives of West Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley have two children, Hattie and Ernest. Ernest Bradley is a veteran of the World war, and after his return home became Assistant Division engineer on the State Road Commission of West Virginia. He enlisted in the aviation branch of the service, but was transferred to the engineering corps, in which he held the rank of lieutenant. He married Ada Davis, of Huntington, West Virginia.

Mr. Bradley and his family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He is a Scottish-rite, Chapter, Knight-Templar and Shriner Mason, and he belongs to the Masonic Club of Wheeling, West Virginia. He also maintains membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is a Past Grand Patriarch of the West Virginia Grand Encampment. He is a certified member of the American Association of Engineers. His rise has not been spectacular, but it has been steady, and whatever he has undertaken to do he has accomplished with painstaking fidelity. Today if he voices his approval of an enterprise or movement his associates know that it is because he has taken it under consideration and carefully studied it from viewpoints before rendering his decision, and they are usually guided by his opinion, for they realize that they can rely upon his good judgment and innate fairness.

C. S. Merritt.

WILLIAM H. RUBY, vice president and general manager of the Trace Fork Coal Company, on the Virginian Railroad, one mile west of Mullens, general manager of the Wilton Smokeless Coal Company, and president of the Spencer Fork Coal Company on Piney branch of the same road, is one of the well known figures in coal mining circles of Wyoming County. He has been identified with one branch or another of this industry since boyhood, and his advancement there has been gained through sheer merit and not because of any fortuitous chance or lucky circumstance.

Mr. Ruby was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, July 19, 1887, and is a son of William Frederick and Minnie (Gilcher) Ruby, natives of Germany. William Frederick Ruby was only twelve years of age when he made the journey to America alone to join four brothers and a sister, who had preceded him to Cincinnati. For a period of thirty-six years he was identified with the Fleischman Yeast Company, and during a large part of this time was a foreman and one of the company's most trusted employees. He retired two years prior to his death, which occurred in 1921, at Cincinnati, when he was sixty-three years of age. He was a faithful member of the Lutheran Church, to which also belongs his wife, who was three years of age when brought by her parents to the United States, and who is now a resident of Cincinnati, aged sixty years. Mr. and Mrs. Ruby were the parents of two sons: Walter W., sales manager for the Chesapeake & Virginian Coal Company, at Lynchburg, Virginia; and William H.

William H. Ruby went to the public schools of Cincinnati and as a boy displayed unusual industry and ambition. As soon as allowed he secured employment, but after working at unskilled labor for several years came to the conclusion that he should be better prepared for his struggle with competition in the business world, and accordingly pursued a course in general mechanics at the Ohio Mechanical Institute, which he finished at the age of eighteen years. In 1907 he came to Prince, West Virginia, in the capacity of foreman for the New River Collieries Company, and at the end of two years had advanced to assistant in the engineering department. He then became assistant engineer of the Gulf Smokeless Coal Company at Tams, Raleigh County, a concern with which he remained for seven years, at the end of which time he was superintendent of the Hotcoal Mine, a Gulf Smokeless property. Subsequently for one and one-half years Mr. Ruby was general superintendent of the Iroquois Coal Mining Company, and in 1917, with others, purchased the Trace Fork Mine, of which he has since been vice president and general manager. During the five years that he has been in charge there have been made numerous improvements, including a new tippie, new houses, a new water system and steel mine cars. Mr. Ruby's official associates in this company are H. E. Tribou, president of Tams; and R. F. Wildey, secretary-treasurer, of Traccoal. In April, 1920, Mr. Ruby became one of the organizers of the Wilton Smokeless Coal Company, of which he is general manager, his associates being: J. B. Clifton, of Beckley, president; J. H. Meador, Beckley, vice president; and H. R. Tribou, Tams, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Ruby is a thoroughly informed coal man, having worked his way up through the various branches and learning the details of all during his upward climb. He has the full confidence of his associates and the friendship and loyalty of his men. He is a republican in his political affiliation, and his religious connection is with the Lutheran Church, and as a fraternalist he belongs to the Blue Lodge of Masonry at Tams, of which he is a past master, and the Mystic Shrine at Charleston.

In June, 1913, Mr. Ruby married Miss Anna Mae Woldey, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and to this union there have been born two children: William H., Jr., and Jack W.

CHARLES STEPHEN MEREDITH, of Spencer, is a building contractor and has been associated with a firm that has handled many of the largest contracts both in general building and in road construction in this section of West Virginia.

Mr. Meredith was born in Tyler County, West Virginia, July 3, 1868. He is descended from one of three brothers that came from Wales in Colonial times, one locating in Pennsylvania, another in Maryland, and the third in West Virginia. His grandfather, Davis Meredith, was born in Ohio in 1815, spent his early life as a farmer in Noble County, that state, and in 1855 moved to Tyler County, West Virginia, where he continued farming and also his labors as a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died at Centerville in Tyler County in 1895. His wife was Naomi Snodgrass, who was born in 1817, and died at Centerville in 1883. Absalom Meredith, their son, was born in Noble County, Ohio, in 1842, and was thirteen years of age when his parents settled in Tyler County, where he finished his education, where he married and devoted all his active years to the pursuits of agriculture. Late in life he removed to Wetzel County, where he lived on his farm until his death in 1904. He was a republican, a Methodist, a member of the Odd Fellows, and in 1863 joined Company C of the Seventh West Virginia Infantry and was in the service of the Union cause until the end of the war. Absalom Meredith married Catherine Riley, who was born in Tyler County in 1836 and died at Weston in Lewis County in 1912. They were the parents of a large family of children: Laura, wife of John Kelley, an oil field worker living near Ellenboro in Ritchie County; Jennie, wife of John Horner, a farmer in Ritchie County; Gilbert B., district superintendent of the Hope Natural Gas Company and living at Smithfield, West Virginia; Rufus D., an oil and gas well drilling contractor at Claremore, Oklahoma; James A., twin of Rufus, an attorney at Fairmont, West Virginia, and appointed by Governor Morgan, judge of the Supreme Court of West Virginia; Emma B., wife of Campbell Martin, a farmer near Ellenboro; Harry, a leaser for the Sun Oil Company at Sweetwater, Texas; Emery, an oil well driller in Ohio.

Charles S. Meredith grew up in Tyler County, where he attended country schools and spent two years in the Middlebourne Normal School, leaving that institution in 1892. At the age of twenty-one he began teaching in the country districts of Tyler County, and altogether taught for twelve years. In 1901 he removed to Calhoun County, and was a farmer in that section four years.

Since 1905 Mr. Meredith has been a resident of Spencer, for four years he was a merchant here, and since then has been in the general contracting business. In 1909 he became associated with C. H. Rhodes and A. C. Thomasson, under the firm name of the Spencer Brick & Concrete Company, but since 1912 the business has been conducted as the Spencer Brick Company. A lengthy catalog might be compiled of the important work this firm has done. This list includes the buildings of the First National Bank, the Whiting Hotel, the new High School, the Dye Garage, the C. H. Holswade garage, the new City Building, all in Spencer, besides a number of other business and residence structures, while they have also constructed bridges and many miles of road throughout Roane and surrounding counties.

Mr. Meredith owns a fine home at 214 Front Street. He was for two years town recorder of Spencer, is a republican, a trustee and steward of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Fraternally he is affiliated with Moriah Lodge No. 38, A. F. and A. M., Spencer Chapter No. 42, R. A. M., West Virginia Consistory of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, Nemesis Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Parkersburg, is a past grand of Campbell Lodge No. 101, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Spencer, and a member of Spencer Lodge No. 55, Knights of Pythias, and Spencer Lodge No. 6576, Modern Woodmen of America. During the war he put the demands of patriotism first, and was active in promoting the success of all the drives for the various purposes in his home county.

In 1903, in Tyler County, he married Miss Callie F. Hassig, who was born in that county. Mrs. Meredith is a member of the Methodist Church and the Modern Brotherhood. Her father, Jacob Hassig, was born in Monroe County, Ohio, in 1830, spent his early life there as a farmer, and about 1870 moved to Tyler County, West Virginia, where he continued farming on an extensive scale. He was a democrat and a very active member of the Christian Church. Jacob Hassig, who died at Spencer in 1912, married Rebecca Smith, who was born in Belmont County, Ohio, in 1839, and died in Tyler County in 1910. Their children were: William, a farmer who died in Tyler County at the age of fifty-one; Laura, who died in Tyler County aged twenty-seven, wife of James Feist, a farmer still living in that county; Delia, wife of John Fuchs, an employe of an oil company in Tyler County; Charles, of New Martinsville, West Virginia; Mrs. Meredith; Alice, wife of Gilbert B. Meredith, previously mentioned; Miss Charlotte, who was a Red Cross nurse in the hospitals of France fourteen months and is now night superintendent of the Ohio Valley General Hospital at Wheeling; Ross with an oil company living in Wetzel County.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Meredith are the parents of three children: Alice, who graduated from West Virginia Wesleyan College in Buckhannon, is the wife of Dr. Prince W. Houchins, a dentist at Kimball, McDowell County; Gilbert E., who was in a training camp at Morgantown during the war, is a truck driver at Charleston, West Virginia; Paul R., born June 18, 1907, is a student in the Spencer grade school.

WILLIAM HAY KEIM. Under modern conditions one of the most important county offices to which individuals may be elected by their fellow-citizens is that of sheriff. The proper discharge of the duties of this post call for personal courage, executive capacity, faithfulness and ability for the handling of detail work, as well as integrity and an appreciation of the responsibilities involved. In none of these attributes has William Hay Keim, sheriff of Randolph County, failed. Since taking office in 1921 he has conducted its affairs in an energetic, efficient and conscientious way, fully vindicating the faith reposed in him by the voters of the county.

Sheriff Keim was born at Elk Lick, Somerset County, Pennsylvania, December 27, 1869, and is a son of Silas Clark and Annie (Arnold) Keim. His father was born on a farm in the same community, being a son of Jonas and Sarah (Livingood) Keim, and a member of a family of Swiss origin. Silas Clark Keim was a farmer in early life, but later turned his attention to banking and merchandising, and also acted as a minister in the Dunkard Church. He died in 1881, at the age of forty-six years. His wife, Annie (Arnold) Keim, was born in Mineral County, West Virginia, the daughter of Rev. Joseph Arnold, a Dunkard preacher, who was born in West Virginia, of English descent. Mrs. Keim died in 1912, at the age of seventy-five years. They were the parents of seven sons and two daughters.

One of the sons of Silas C. and Annie Keim was the late Hon. Noah G. Keim, of Elkins, who was born at Elk Lick, Somerset County, Pennsylvania, and was primarily educated there in the public schools. Later he attended Ashland College, at Ashland, Ohio, and Juanita College in Pennsylvania, and after leaving the latter took up the work of a teacher in the public schools. He came to Elkins, West Virginia, as a tutor for the sons of the late United States Senator Stephen B. Elkins, and later engaged in mercantile business with his brother, William H., with whom he subsequently embarked in the insurance business. He became a leader in the republican party, served with credit as state senator, and was known as a man of high principles and marked ability. In his death his community lost one of its able and public-spirited men.

William Hay Keim attended the public schools of his native place and a Dunkard school at Bridgewater, Virginia, and for two years in young manhood was employed by the Pittsburgh Street Car Company. Later he was identified with steel industrial companies at Elwood, Indiana, and Joliet, Illinois, and in 1897 located at Elkins, West Virginia, where he and his brother, Noah G., above noted, embarked in a mercantile business. This they continued for three years, following which they turned their attention to general insurance, under the firm name of Keim & Keim, and the business is still being conducted by William H. Keim and his brother's son, Howard H. Keim. This enterprise has grown to important proportions and is one of the leading concerns of its kind in Randolph County. In 1920 Mr. Keim became the republican nominee for sheriff, a position to which he was elected by a majority of 415 votes, being the first republican sheriff elected in Randolph County since the Civil war. In the same election James M. Cox, the democratic candidate for President, carried Randolph County by 618 votes. He has an excellent record in office and has proved his capability as a public official. Sheriff Keim is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and his religious faith is that of the Baptist Church.

In 1894 Sheriff Keim was united in marriage with Miss Eva Rees, of Elk Lick, Pennsylvania, and to them there have been born three sons and six daughters.

HARLEY C. KESLING. One of the young and energetic officials of Randolph County, Harley C. Kesling, clerk of the County Court of Randolph County, is one of the popular and efficient men handling the county's business. He is likewise a veteran of the World war, in which he saw much active service overseas, and has the added distinction of belonging to one of the old and honored families of what is now West Virginia, and which originated in the Old Dominion many years ago.

Mr. Kesling was born in Upshur County, West Virginia, April 12, 1895, and is a son of Adam and Etta May (Lanham) Kesling, and a grandson of Mineor and Lucinda (Radabaugh) Kesling, the former of whom was born in what is now West Virginia. Adam Kesling was born July 15, 1863, in Upshur County, where he was reared and educated, and established a residence at Elkins, Randolph County, in 1905. In his youth he had learned the trade of carpenter, and this he has followed as a contractor, many of the large buildings and residences of Elkins being examples of his good workmanship and reliability. He is a republican in politics and in fraternal relations is an Odd Fellow, being a past grand master of his lodge. Years ago he and his wife joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he still belongs. Mrs. Kesling was born in Upshur County, a daughter of Granville Lanham, who was a native of Virginia and a farmer and public official of Upshur County. Mrs. Kesling died May 9, 1921, aged forty-nine years.

The only child of his parents, Harley C. Kesling was ten years of age when brought to Elkins, and here he grew to manhood and attended the public schools. After graduating from high school he took a course at the Mountain State Business College, Parkersburg, West Virginia, and his first position was as labor accountant for the firm of Babcock & Wilcox Company at Barborton, Ohio. He remained with that concern for one year and then became bookkeeper for the Elkins Provision and Storage Company of Elkins, a position which he was holding at the time the United States became embroiled in the World war. Mr. Kesling volunteered in the regular United States army and enlisted September 25, 1917. After five weeks of infantry drill at Columbus, Ohio, he was sent to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, with Company C, Fifth Field Battalion, and given signal corps training. Sent overseas in February, 1918, he served first in France with the Forty-seventh French Infantry, in reserve, and later was attached to Company K, Thirtieth Infantry, Third Division, as signalman, with the rank of corporal. At the second battle of the Marne Corporal Kesling was automatically transferred to the infantry, with which he served from the Marne to the Vesle River, following the enemy. At the latter point, August 9, 1918, his detachment was relieved by French troops, and he went back to Grandecourt, where he entered the gas and infantry training school. Later he participated in the St. Mihiel drive until September 12, 1918, when relief came from an American division to hold the line. His infantry was drawn back and transferred to a point near Verdun, being held in reserve to support the Seventy-seventh Division. He entered upon the engagement of the Argonne Forest September 26, 1918, passing through Montfaucourt, September h, and he continued with the advance until October 5th, which date Corporal Kesling was severely wounded by a shot which tore away his left hand and injured his left leg and amput. The seriousness of the wound made it necessary to amputate his arm at the shoulder joint. He was in the hospital thereafter until sent back to the United States in March, 1919, and received his honorable discharge on 9th, of that year. He is a member of the American Legion and served as the first commander of H. W. Daniels Post at Elkins.

Upon his return from military service Mr. Kesling became traveling salesman for the Elkins Provision and Storage Company, a position which he held until 1921. As the nominee of the republican party he was elected clerk of Randolph County Court in 1920, and January 1, 1921, he began the duties of that office for a term of six years.

An official record thus far is an excellent one, and he is one of the best incumbents of this office that Randolph County has ever known. Mr. Kesling is a member of the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, and his religious connection is with the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1920 he was united in marriage with Miss Flossie Cleckrick, of Elkins.

GEORGE LEEDOM PEIRCE, M. D. Enthusiastic students of medical science have been the mediums through which have been the medical knowledge that has made the present era so notable than any other in the history of medicine. These quiet, serious students seek experience in many fields, and their accumulated knowledge benefits the world. A noted member of the medical profession at Elkins, West Virginia, is Dr. George Leedom Peirce, a physician and surgeon in active practice here, a veteran officer of two wars, a member of the representative medical organizations of the country, and president of the Tri-County Medical Society.

Doctor Peirce was born at Reading, Pennsylvania, January 14, 1872, and is a son of George H. and Adalaide (Leedom) Peirce. George H. Peirce was also born in Pennsylvania, a son of George Scaerlet Peirce and a grandson of William Peirce. The earliest record of the family concerns one George Peirce, a native of England and a Quaker religious belief, who accompanied William Penn and his Quaker colony when the great peacemaker settled in the Delaware country they found in Pennsylvania. George H. Peirce was an architect and building contractor at Reading for many years, and died in that city in his sixty-eighth year. He was married first to Adalaide Leedom, who died in 1875. She was a daughter of John and Helen Leedom, who were of German extraction. When the war between the states was precipitated they were residents of Richmond, Virginia. Mr. Leedom was a sympathizer with the Union cause and therefore removed with his family from the Southern city and established a home at Reading, Pennsylvania, and it was there that his daughter was married to George H. Peirce. At the time of her death her son George Leedom was three years old. The second marriage of George H. Peirce was with Emma Solt, and five of their children grew to maturity.

George Leedom Peirce was reared in his native city. He attended the public schools and after graduating from the high school entered the Bordentown (New Jersey) Military Institute, from which he was graduated in 1887. Although fifteen years old at that time, he had already made the choice of a future career, and after some preliminary preparation entered the medical department of the University of Louisville, Kentucky, and was graduated from that institution in 1894. He entered upon the practice of his profession at Elk Garden, Mineral County, West Virginia, which place continued to be his home until 1901.

In the meanwhile, when the Spanish-American war came on the young physician was one of the first to volunteer for service, entering the United States Marine Corps as a private. Although he never saw any active fighting and did not get out of his own country, he found the experience professionally valuable and was a better informed physician when he returned to his practice at Elk Garden. It was in 1901 that he volunteered to serve in the Medical Corps of the United States Navy, entering the service with rank of junior lieutenant, and when he resigned in 1915 he enjoyed the rank of full senior lieutenant.

When Doctor Peirce returned again to civil life he located at Belington in Barbour County, West Virginia, but before he had become well established there professionally the United States had entered the great conflict of the World War, and once more, with noted patriotism and earnest desire to be helpful along the line for which he was best qualified, Doctor Peirce volunteered early in the Medical Corps of the United States army. He was immediately commissioned captain, and from then on until the signing of the armistice gave himself entirely to the general hospital at Camp Oglethorpe, Georgia, when he received his honorable discharge. In addition to the invaluable experience with which these various activities had enriched him professionally Doctor Peirce in 1916 gave some time and study to post-graduate work in the Presbyterian Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital in the City of Baltimore, but since locating at Elkins, in 1918, has not specialized but has found himself very busy in the field of general practice, although he is an oculist and aurist for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company at this place.

Doctor Peirce married in 1900 Miss Elsie M. Fenton, of Elk Garden, West Virginia, and they have two children, George Fenton and Lawrence Barry Peirce. With his family Doctor Peirce belongs to the Presbyterian Church.

In the main Doctor Peirce takes little active interest in politics, but as a private citizen, with home interests at Elkins, he concerns himself with civic and social movements that promise to be of substantial benefit. He is a member of the Tri-County Medical Society, of which he was elected president in 1922, and is also a member of the West Virginia State Medical Association, and is a Fellow of the American Medical Association. In fraternal life he is an Odd Fellow, and he is a member of the American Legion.

LEROY SEE, a representative citizen of Elkins, West Virginia, and an able member of her bar, belongs to one of the oldest settled families of this section of the United States. In 1734 Adam and Michael Frederick See, brothers, came from Prussian Silesia, Germany, to America and settled in Pennsylvania. They belonged to a colony of Schwenkfelders, a religious sect which immigrated to escape religious persecution.

In 1745 Adam and Michael F. See removed from Pennsylvania to Virginia and settled in what is now Hardy County, West Virginia. About 1760 Michael See removed to Greenbrier County, and was killed there by the Indians July 17, 1764. Adam See was the father of several daughters and of one son, George See, who in 1767 married Jemima Harness, born in Hardy County, and they had five sons and four daughters born to them: Adam C., Michael, George, Charles and John, Barbara, Hannah, Elizabeth and Dorothy. The two oldest sons, Adam C. and Michael, removed to Randolph County in 1790, where the former was admitted to the bar in 1793. In 1798 he became prosecuting attorney for Randolph County, being the fourth lawyer to hold that office in that county. Afterward he served in both branches of the Virginia Legislature, and in 1829 was a member of the Virginia Constitutional Convention. This able and distinguished citizen was the great-grandfather of LeRoy See, a worthy descendant.

Anthony B. See, son of Hon. Adam C. See, married Julia Leonard, and they reared a family of children. Randolph See, son of Anthony B. and Julia (Leonard) See, was born in Randolph County, West Virginia, May 9, 1837, and died in Upshur County, April 16, 1915. He was twice married, first to a Miss Sexton, and afterward to Sarah E. Talbott. One daughter, Minnie, was born to his first marriage, and one son and one daughter, LeRoy and Agnes, to the second. The mother of LeRoy See survives and still resides in Upshur County, of which she is a native. Randolph See was a farmer by occupation and from choice. During the war between the states he served with gallantry in the Confederate army for two years. In church faith he was a Presbyterian, while Mrs. See's religious association has always been with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

LeRoy See was born on his father's farm near French Creek in Upshur County, West Virginia, on February 6, 1874. He grew up on the farm and his early education was secured in the rural schools and afterward he taught for five terms in the county, prior to entering Wesleyan College of West Virginia, from which he was graduated in 1899. His tastes and talents indicating the law as a congenial career, he entered upon its study and for a time was a student in the University of West Virginia, and in 1903 successfully passed his bar examination and at Buckhannon, West Virginia, was admitted to practice.

Since 1905 Mr. See has been established at Elkins, and has honorably built up a very substantial practice. He has been an active and influential factor in democratic politics for many years, and in 1896 was his party's chosen candidate for sheriff of Upshur County. Although he failed of election it was not on account of lack of confidence by his party, for he carried its full strength, as he also did in 1904, when the contest was for prosecuting attorney. In 1906 he was again honored by a loyal party that chose him as the democratic nominee for state senator, from the Thirteenth Senatorial District, when he again carried his party's full strength, but was defeated, as were many other prominent men of his political faith in that year.

As a private citizen of Elkins Mr. See is public-spirited and watchful of the town's best interests. For many years he has been identified with such representative fraternal organizations as the Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America, and additionally belongs to numerous social bodies. Mr. See is unmarried.

WILLIAM A. BROWN. Few men in West Virginia know the actual practical operation of coal mines or have had as much to do with the development of the coal industry of the state as William A. Brown, now a resident of Alderson. His entire life has been devoted to the business from the time that he worked as a mule driver, through the period that he labored in every intervening branch of the industry until the present, when he is an owner and operator.

Mr. Brown was born at Ashland, Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania, February 8, 1858, a son of David P. and Margaret (Hamilton) Brown, natives respectively of England and Scotland. The parents of David P. Brown died when he was a lad, and he accompanied an aunt to the United States, where, having come of coal mining people, he naturally drifted into this line of endeavor and was a pioneer in the anthracite field when coal was carried by gravity to the point of shipment. He married in Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania, and subsequently moved to Goshen, West Virginia, where he assisted in the development of ore mines. Later he located at Quinimont, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits, and was so engaged until his death. His worthy wife passed away at Hemlock, West Virginia. They were the parents of eleven children, seven daughters and four sons.

William A. Brown had only meager opportunities for the securing of an educational training, but he made the most of what he had, and in later life has improved his knowledge by self teaching, reading and observation. He was only eleven years of age when he began to work, and by the time he was seventeen years of age he was driving a team of mules in the mines. He was industrious, faithful and persevering, and was later advanced to boss driver, then to mine boss at Berry, and later to the same position at Caperton. Mr. Brown at this time, having saved his earnings carefully, became a fifth owner in the Alaska Mine in Fayette County, where he had charge of the inside operation, and later was put in charge of the Greenwood, Hemlock and Laurel Creek mines, on Laurel Creek. In the meantime, in 1919, he moved to Alderson, where he now makes his home. Mr. Brown has witnessed practically the entire development of the coal mining industry in this section, and has had a part in most of it. In 1874, right after the advent of the railroad, the Quinimont coal mine was started by J. L. Berry. John Nuttall opened the Nuttallburg Mine, and John McGuffin started the Sewell Mine, these being the three pioneer operations. Later on the Page Mine at Anstead, the Fire Creek Mine and the Stone Cliff and Caperton mines were established, and still later the Roya and all the mines on the north side of New River below Caperton. These were followed by the Ephraim's Creek Slater and Loup Creek mines, after which the south side of the river brought in mines, those coming later including the Laurel Creek branch, Kinney Creek branch, Piney branch, the Meadow River country, the White Oak and the branch up to Minden, these practically comprising the coal activities in this section. Mr. Brown is not only thoroughly informed mine owner and a business man on the highest integrity, but is a thoroughgoing American citizen and a loyal supporter of all worthy causes for the general good. In politics he is a republican, and has served as a member of the Board of Education, and also was for a time postmaster at the mines. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and as a fraternalist is a Knight Templar, Mason and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine.

Mr. Brown married for his first wife Miss Henrietta Hughes, who died after having been the mother of ten children: Harry; Ellis; William; Percy; Lester, deceased; Joseph, deceased; a child who died unnamed in infancy. Annie, the wife of Harry Nickol; Courtney, the wife of Dr. F. W. Groome; and Margaret. Of these, Ellis served in the World war as an officer and saw service overseas where he had a splendid record. The second wife of Mr. Brown was formerly Miss Maude Hickline, daughter of Jesse Hickline, of Bath County, Virginia.

HARRY K. OWENS, M. D. Incomplete indeed would be the history of West Virginia, or any other state for that matter, without distinctive and honorable mention of that large body of men and women who labor in the broad field of medical service. Some have chosen a particular path and some work under special combinations of method, but all can be justly credited with scientific knowledge and a due regard for the preservation of the public health with a faithful devotion to their own patients that has, on occasion, been heroic. Dr. Harry K. Owens, of Elkins, early devoted his energies to the practice of medicine, and after an honorable and successful practice of more than twenty-seven years stand as a representative of all that is best and highest in this line of human endeavor. He is also one of those who, whose his country stood in need of his services, volunteered in the World war in spite of the fact that he was long past the military age, and had a large and lucrative practice at home. The day will come when the sacrifices made by the physicians of middle age who put to one side all personal considerations, and because of their love of country and desire to provide for the soldiers proper and expert attention, went into a service which was arduous to the limit of endurance, will receive proper appreciation. When such a day arrives Doctor Owens will be highly honored, even if it comes too late for his personal acceptance of it.

Doctor Owens was born at Bloomington, Garrett County, Maryland, September 18, 1869, a son of William M. and Mary Ellen (Knight) Owens. The Owens family is of Welsh extraction, and the Knights are of French origin. Both have long been established in Maryland, where the progenitor settled during the Colonial epoch of the country. The settled on the eastern shores of Maryland, and the parent of Doctor Owens were born on the western slope of the state. William M. Owens was a civil engineer by profession. He and his wife had four sons and two daughters that reached maturity, but Doctor Owens is the only survivor.

From the age of seven years, Doctor Owens was reared at Westernport, Maryland, where he attended the public schools. Subsequently he attended Dickinson Seminary at Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, where he took an optional or select literary course. For one year he was a medical student at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City, and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, Maryland, where he obtained his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1895. From then until 1897 he was engaged in practice at Davis, West Virginia, from whence went to Hambleton, West Virginia, and remained there until 1906. In the latter year he came to Elkins, where he has since remained with the exception of the time he was in the army. Doctor Owens has taken post-graduate courses under Professor Simon of Baltimore, Maryland, in microscopic work, and also under Professor Rytina of Baltimore, Maryland, in genito-urinary work. He is a member of the Tri-County Medical Society, of the West Virginia State Medical Society and of the American Medical Association.

W. A. Brown

For three years, from 1903 to 1906, Doctor Owens served as a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the West Virginia National Guards. In May, 1917, he volunteered in the United States army for the World war, and was commissioned captain. He took his training at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Indiana, and remained there until November, 1917, when he was transferred to Camp Meade, Maryland, and there attached to the Seventy-ninth Division. When the division sailed for overseas service, Doctor Owens, on account of his age, he then being over forty-eight, was returned to Camp Meade and placed in charge of one of the camp hospitals. He continued in the service until, at his own request, he was honorably discharged, February 1, 1919. In September, 1918, he was commissioned major, and is now acting assistant surgeon for the Veterans Bureau. After receiving his discharge Doctor Owens returned to Elkins and resumed his private practice. It will always be a source of gratification to him that he was able to enter the service, and, like the majority of his profession, is very modest with reference to his military record, and if the subject is mentioned will contend that he only did what was his duty to his country and to the boys in the army.

In 1901 Doctor Owens married Gertrude Horton, of Huntington, Pennsylvania, and they have two children: Harry C. and Barbara Gertrude. Doctor Owens is a republican. In the creed of the Methodist Episcopal Church he finds expression for his religious faith, and he has long been a consistent member of that denomination. Well-known in Masonry, Doctor Owens had been advanced to the Knight Templar degree, and he is also a Noble of the Mystic Shrine. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows as well, and is very popular in his fraternities. During the time he has been in practice he has built up an enviable reputation for professional reliability. He has always been a close student and has borne his part in research work beyond performing the duties which he feels are the responsibilities of good citizenship, he takes no very active part in public affairs. After his long residence at Elkins he has every reason to be proud of the fact that he is recognized as one of the ablest physicians and surgeons in Randolph County, and one of the most public-spirited of its citizens.

HERMAN GORDON JOHNSON, newspaper editor and publisher at Elkins, is one of the most influential men of Randolph County, and one who is a compelling force in this part of the state. He was born near Meadowline, Barbour County, West Virginia, October 22, 1875, a son of Levi and Helen Angeline (Poling) Johnson. On the same farm on which Herman Gordon Johnson was born, his father and grandfather, John G. Johnson, came into the world. The great-grandfather, Levi Johnson, settled in Barbour County during the pioneer period of that part of the state, and he was a soldier in the American Revolution, serving from Virginia. He was born in England, from whence he came to the American Colonies, and after a time spent in New Jersey, came South to Virginia.

Helen Angeline Poling, mother of Herman Gordon Johnson, was born on a farm adjoining the one owned by the Johnsons, in Barbour County, and she was a daughter of Mary Poling. Mrs. Johnson died May 8, 1920, aged sixty-five years, but Mr. Johnson survives and is now seventy-three, and makes his home in Barbour County. Farming has been his life work. Both the Johnsons and Polings were in sympathy with the Confederate cause during the war between the North and the South, and Levi Johnson for many years supported the candidates and measures of the democratic party, but for the past few years has been a republican in politics. For a long time he has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and his wife was also a member of the same denomination. They reared three sons and three daughters to useful manhood and womanhood.

Growing up on his father's homestead, Herman Gordon Johnson early learned under his father's watchful instruction the importance of industry and thrift and the true dignity of labor well performed. His preliminary education was obtained in the rural schools, and he was for three years a teacher in them during his early manhood. He entered the educational field in order to earn the money to further pursue his own studies, for he was ambitious and realized that it was only through the training of a higher education could he hope to carry out his ideals. He attended the Fairmont State Normal School, and then matriculated at the University of Nashville, Tennessee, but before completing his literary course there was offered a position as a reporter on the Nashville American, which he accepted and in that connection began his association with newspaper work. From 1896 to 1898 he remained with that news paper, but in the latter year accepted an offer to become manager of the Elkins Inter-Mountain, and was so employed for over one year. Resigning then, Mr. Johnson took charge of the Mountain Echo at Keyser, West Virginia, in which he had bought an interest. Two years later he bought the Elkins Inter-Mountain, which he has since edited and published, being its sole proprietor, although he operates under the firm name of Inter-Mountain Printing Company. The Inter-Mountain is published as a daily every week day, and also as a weekly newspaper, and as an exponent of republican principles. Until 1907 the paper was issued only as a weekly, but in that year its scope was broadened and it has since been a daily as well. For twenty years Mr. Johnson has edited and managed his journal, and has made it one of the most modern and newsy papers in his part of the state.

Always active as a republican, in 1918 Mr. Johnson was the republican nominee for the office of state senator from the Thirteenth Senatorial District, composed of Randolph, Upshur, Barbour and Pendleton counties. Elected by a gratifying majority, he took his seat in the Upper House of the State Assembly, and his record since doing so has been a clean and notable one, and his service has been characterized by more than average ability. As chairman of the Senate committee on education Mr. Johnson led his associates in recommending, and had enacted into laws, some of the most important educational measures now on the statute books. He was a strong advocate of what is known as the "depletion tax," a tax on coal, oil and gas.

Mr. Johnson is a member of several fraternities, including the Knights of Pythias, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Ancient and Accepted Order of Masons, in the latter of which he has been advanced to the thirty-second degree, Scottish Rite, and the Knight Templar degree, York Rite, and he is also a noble of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Elkins Rotary Club, the Elkins Country Club and the Cheat Mountain and Alleghany Mountain clubs. As a member of the Presbyterian Church he finds expression for his religious faith.

In 1899 Mr. Johnson married Miss Mary Barnes, of Elkins, who was born at Cumberland, Maryland. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are the parents of two children, namely: Bess Kathryn, who is a student in the School of Drama in the Carnegie Technical Institute; and Herman Gordon, Jr., who is a student in the Elkins High School.

It is not an easy task to do full justice to a man like Mr. Johnson in a notice of this brevity, for he has entered into so many movements, both personally and through the medium of his paper, has inaugurated and carried to successful completion improvements of great importance, and never spared himself or his means in order to advance his community. In all of this he has been actuated by the highest principles of good citizenship and local pride, and his worth is fully appreciated by those who know him best. His nomination and election to the State Senate came as a just reward for years of great public service, and the honor was so accepted, although it brought with it added labors, for no man as earnest and conscientious as Mr. Johnson could accept such an office without exerting himself to the utmost to do the greatest amount of good. Always a friend of education, for years he had fought for better schools and higher standards for educators. As a member of the Senate he had the opportunity to score a victory over the reactionary element which had always opposed him, and the school children today are reaping the benefits. Mr. Johnson has already accomplished much, but his friends contend that his career is not by any means closed, and that further honors will be offered him, for his constituents realize the fact that he is one who will look after their interests fearlessly, resolutely and successfully, and because of that and their personal friendship for him will desire his advancement in office so that their rights may be properly protected and honestly defended.

ELMER ALLEN BOWERS, general attorney for the Western Maryland Railroad in Virginia, division counsel for the Charleston Division of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, general counsel for the West Virginia Coal & Coke Corporation, and vice president of the Elkins National Bank, is one of the capable lawyers and public-spirited men of this part of West Virginia, and an honored citizen of Elkins, where he has lived since 1900. He was born at Hopewell, Bedford County, Pennsylvania, February 25, 1877, and is descended on both sides from solid Pennsylvania-Dutch stock.

His parents, Henry Harrison and Florence (Detweiler) Bowers, were born and reared in Bedford County, Pennsylvania. The date of the father's birth was in 1847, and when he was fourteen years old war was declared between the two sections of the country. In spite of his youth he volunteered and for eighteen months rendered gallant service in the Twenty-second Pennsylvania Cavalry, participating in the campaigns in the Shenandoah Valley. After receiving his honorable discharge he became a laborer, working first on railroad construction, and later in the coal mines. Still later he was engaged in merchandising at Hopewell, Pennsylvania, and died there in 1915. He and his wife became the parents of three daughters and one son, Elmer Allen. Mrs. Bowers survives her husband and continues to live at Hopewell, and is still conducting the store she and her husband established.

In the private and public schools of his native city Elmer Allen Bowers received his preliminary educational training. Leaving school, for two years he taught in the public schools, and then attended and graduated from the Central State Normal School at Lockhaven, Pennsylvania, in 1896. For three more years he continued his work as a public school teacher, and in the meanwhile began the study of law under the preceptorship of Hon. John H. Jordan, of Bedford, Pennsylvania. Mr. Bowers then attended Dickinson Law School, at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, completing his course there in 1900, having taken a two-years' course in one. In August of that same year he took up his duties as law clerk in the office of the late C. W. Dailey of Elkins. In 1902 he was admitted to practice at the bar of West Virginia, and thereafter was associated with Mr. Dailey as a partner until the latter's death. Mr. Bowers then succeeded Mr. Dailey as general attorney in Virginia for the Western Maryland Railroad. He is a republican, but has never aspired to public honors, his time and interests being absorbed by his professional duties. Fraternally he maintains membership with the Masons and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

In 1904 Mr. Bowers married Rissa D. Heatherly, of Philippi, West Virginia, and they have three children, namely: James Hubert, Jo-Ellen and Jean Williamson. Mr. Bowers is acknowledged to be one of the efficient corporation lawyers in the state. Care and precision mark the preparation of all of his cases of whatever nature, thus insuring a convincing and clear presentation of whatever subject comes before him for adjustment.

DANIEL HARVEY HILL ARNOLD. The law is known as a stern mistress, demanding of her devotees constant and unremitting attention, and leading her followers through many mazes and intricacies before she grants them success at her hands. This incessant devotion frequently precludes the idea of the successful lawyer indulging in activities outside of the straight path of his profession, especially if his straight vocational duties are of a large and important nature. Such has been and is the case with Daniel Harvey Hill Arnold, lawyer and member of the bar at Elkins, master of the perplexities and complexities of the law, whose activities are directed incessantly to the demands of his calling. He was born at Beverly, West Virginia, January 18, 1879, a son of Thomas Jackson Arnold, and a member of one of the old and honored families of the South.

The Arnold family records show that in 1765 three brothers, Jonathan, Andrew and Jesse Arnold, removed from Chester County, Pennsylvania, to what became Greene County, Pennsylvania. Prior to 1765 but one family of the name of Arnold lived in Chester County, where in 1720 Richard Arnold died. He is believed to have been the grandfather of the above-named brothers, of whom Jonathan Arnold married Rachel Scott. According to the reliable authority of a genealogical chart of the Arnold family on file in the Congressional Library at Washington the Arnolds are of English lineage, dating back to the eleventh century.

It was Jonathan Arnold, the grandfather of Daniel Harvey Hill Arnold, who founded the Arnold family in what is now Randolph County, West Virginia, when he settled at Beverly in 1822. There he continued to reside the remainder of his life, dying July 20, 1883. Upon locating at Beverly, Jonathan Arnold established a tannery, which he operated for a few years, and then engaged in raising and handling cattle, in which he met with a very gratifying success. He was conservative and of sound judgment and of unquestioned integrity, kind-hearted, sympathetic, considerate of those in distress, and faithful in his friendships. He was an ardent whig in the days of that party, was strongly opposed to the secession of Virginia, and in 1861 voted, with the minority of the country, against the ratification of the ordinance of secession. Early, however, during the war, when he felt that the Federal administration, in his opinion, was going beyond the limits of the constitution, he experienced a change in his opinions, and his sympathies were more in accord with the seceding states, which to him then were more in accord with the underlying principles of the forefathers. Hence he opposed and voted against the formation of the State of West Virginia, and because of this was regarded by the Federal authorities as disloyal. In the autumn of 1863 he was arrested and was virtually held as a prisoner until the close of the war, notwithstanding that through the intercession of influential friends he was paroled within narrow limits not long after his arrest, but he was not allowed to return to the vicinity of his home until a short time before he was released immediately before the war terminated. He was the eldest son of William and Hulda (Knotts) Arnold, and was born on his father's farm near West Brownsville, Greene County, Pennsylvania, March 27, 1802. William Arnold was born and reared in Greene County, Pennsylvania, and there became a well-to-do farmer, and there he spent his life and died. William Arnold and his wife had the following children: Jonathan, William, Rachel, Sarah, Charles, Pinkney and Caroline. William Arnold was a son of Jonathan and Rachel (Scott) Arnold, whose children were as follows: Samuel, Benjamin, Levi, Jonathan, William and James, twins, Rachel, Hannah and Sarah. It was Jonathan Arnold, father of the above family, who was one of the three Arnold brothers who in 1765 migrated to Greene County, Pennsylvania, as related above.

Jonathan Arnold, grandfather of Daniel Harvey Hill Arnold, and grandson of Jonathan Arnold, the founder of the Arnold family in Greene County, was three times married. His first wife was Thursa Butcher, who died about a year after their marriage. No descendants survive from this marriage. In 1841 he married Phoebe Ann Collett, and was again unfortunate, his wife dying within a few months. In 1844 Jonathan Arnold married Laura Ann Jackson, of Clarksburg, West Virginia. She was a daughter of Jonathan and Julia (Neale) Jackson. By this marriage there were three children who grew to maturity, namely:

C. F. Mahood - M.D.

omas Jackson, Anna Grace and Stark W., the first named, omas Jackson, being the only survivor. He was born at ively, West Virginia, November 3 1845.

Thomas Jackson Arnold when thirteen years old was ed in a school at Lexington, Virginia, and made his ne with his uncle, then Major Jackson, but afterward aining to undying fame as General "Stonewall" Jack-. In 1863-4 he attended school at Parkersburg, West rginia, under Rev. William L. Hyland, rector of Christ rch. In 1866 he began the study of law at Beverly r Col. David Goff, and afterward took the course in y and equity at Washington and Lee University, Vir- ia, graduating therefrom in 1867, with the degree of elcher of Laws. The following year he entered upon the ctice of his profession at Beverly, and in the fall of that r he was elected prosecuting attorney for Randolph County, I was three times elected to this office. In 1880 he went an Diego, California, where he continued to practice y, and in 1886 he was appointed by President Cleveland ector of the port of San Diego, which office he held for ut two years in that period making a splendid record. In 1896 Mr. Arnold with his family, returned to West Vir- ia to look after his estate in Randolph County. He ated at Arnold Hill Station, and here he continues to ide. Since his return from California Mr. Arnold has e practiced law. He is the author of "Early Life and tters of 'Stonewall' Jackson," published in 1916 by ming H. Revell Company, New York.

On June 1, 1876, Thomas Jackson Arnold married Miss enia Hill a daughter of Lieut.-Gen. D. H. Hill, a dis- guished Confederate soldier and officer, who, following the close of the war was prominent in literary and educa- tional work until his death, which occurred September 24, 1899. Mrs. Arnold was born at Lexington, Virginia, but was reared at Charlotte, North Carolina. The following ldrren were born to Thomas Jackson and Eugenia (Hill) old: Isabel, D. H. Hill, Thomas Jackson, Jr., and gene H. Their son Thomas Jackson Arnold, Jr., was for en years a Presbyterian missionary in Africa. The other us became lawyers.

Daniel Harvey Hill Arnold, the person whose name heads s review, is a worthy representative of both the Arnold d Hill families. He was reared at San Diego, California, ere his preliminary education was obtained. In 1900 he eived his Master of Arts degree from Washington and e University, and afterward, in 1902, completed his law dudies at the University of Michigan. Ann Arbor, Mich- an, and that same year was admitted to the bar of West rginia, and has since then been engaged in the practice of e profession at Elkins. He is a democrat in politics, t has never sought or accented political honors, preferring e devote his entire time to the practice of the law. He is a eacon in the Presbyterian Church, and sincere in the per- ormance of his religious duties. Fraternally he maintains embership with the Benevolent and Protective Order of ks and is a Royal Arch Mason. Through the Rotary ub he keeps in close touch with the progress of Elkins d its vicinity, and is helpful in the carrying out of the ects of this organization.

In 1906 Mr. Arnold married Miss Mary Ann Denham, of orida, who died September 1, 1909, leaving no children. In 1914 Mr. Arnold married Miss Rebecca Andrews, of ainton, Virginia, and they have two children, namely: eugenia Elizabeth and Rebecca Arnold.

Mr. Arnold is a commanding figure in his profession, ld, independent, fearless, scorning petty tricks, fighting t in the open for what he believes to be right, a man of d judgment who weighs carefully both sides of a ques- ion so as to be just to each. Few men have a family his- ry so replete with interest, and Mr. Arnold is proud of e connection with some of the historic characters of his ntry.

CHARLES F. MAHOOD, M. D. In the midst of these och-making times recognition of the work of the medical ofession has come to a fresh and even thrilling distinc- ion. Through its skill and knowledge that wonderful machine, the human body, is not only rehabilitated, but sometimes reconstructed. Medical science is elastic, its boundaries are limitless, but it is at all times held firmly in the grasp of intelligent men who uncover its mysteries. Some of the most important discoveries in recent years have come in the treatment and cure of diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, a department of the profession in which many physicians specialize. In this branch of his honored and humane calling Dr. Charles F. Mahood, of Alderson, has made rapid strides, and is now accounted one of the leaders in his specialty in this section.

Doctor Mahood was born at the village of Oak Hill, Fayette County, West Virginia, January 19, 1878. His father, Chester B. Mahood, was a native of Giles County, Virginia, and was a contractor and builder by vocation. When he was little more than a boy he enlisted in the Confederate Army for service during the war between the states, belonging to Colonel French's company of Stark's battery. He developed into a man of the finest character and of unusual mental stability, whose life was an inspira- tion, whose ideals were of the highest and whose probity and integrity were unquestioned. During the early '70s he went to Fayette County, West Virginia, to assist in the construction of the court house, and thereafter made his home at Oak Hill, where his death occurred February 27, 1922. He had reached the age of seventy-three years, having been born November 9, 1848. Mr. Mahood was a democrat in politics, and served very capably for three terms as mayor of Oak Hill, winning and holding the confidence of the people. Fraternally he was a Mason. His religious faith was that of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he was one of the founders of the church of that faith at Oak Hill, of which he was for years an official member. He married Lucy Margaret Huddleston, a member of a pioneer family of Kanawha County, this state, who died March 29, 1920, leaving eight children, of whom all but one are living.

Chester B. Mahood was a son of Capt. Francis Preston Mahood, a Virginian by birth, who attained his rank in the Confederate army during the war between the states. His father was a native of the North of Ireland, whence he moved to Scotland and then immigrated to the United States, founding the family in Virginia.

The third child in order of birth, and the eldest son, Charles F. Mahood was primarily educated in the public schools of Oak Hill, supplemented by private tuition, and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore in 1898. Later he enrolled as a student at the University College of Medicine (now the Medical College of Virginia), and was graduated therefrom in 1901, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine, following which he entered upon the practice of his profession at Oak Hill, where he followed his calling until coming to Alderson in 1907. Here he has built up a splendid practice of the most desirable kind, and at the same time has risen to a high place in the confidence of his patients and in the esteem of his fellow-practitioners. In 1906 and 1907 he took special work in the New York Poly- clinic of New York City in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. At the time that the United States entered the World war Doctor Mahood entered the Medical Officers' Training Camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, where he received his commission as a first lieutenant and served as surgeon in the eye departments of the camps at Camp Wadsworth, South Carolina, and Camp Green, North Carolina. He was promoted to the rank of captain and honorably discharged as such at the close of the war. Since coming to Alderson he has specialized in the same depart- ment of work, in which he has met with great success. He is a member of the Greenbrier Valley Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. While a democrat in politics, he is not active in public matters, although taking a good citi- zen's interest in civic affairs. He is a Presbyterian in his religious faith, and as a fraternalist is a Knight Templar and York Rite Mason and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine.

On November 11, 1903, Doctor Mahood married Mary

Marguerite Connor, daughter of Morgan and Virginia (Bright) Connor, of Greenbrier County. They have one daughter, Kathleen.

WILLIAM T. GREEN on leaving college was identified actively for a number of years with the coal industry of West Virginia. His real profession, however, was that of certified public accountant, and he organized and was honored with election as the first president of the Association of Certified Public Accountants of West Virginia.

Mr. Green, who was owner of the National Audit Company of Charleston, was born in Culpeper County, Virginia, in 1880, son of M. C. and Eliza (Thorne) Green. He spent his early life in Culpeper County, though most of his education was acquired in West Virginia. He attended Marshall College at Huntington, and in 1900 graduated with the degree Bachelor of Science from the University of West Virginia at Morgantown. Following that for sixteen or seventeen years he had a broadening range of responsibilities in the coal business, most of the time serving as secretary and treasurer of the New River Smokeless Coal Company. For the greater part of the time this company maintained its headquarters at Thurmond, and Mr. Green removed to Charleston when the general offices were removed to that city.

In 1916 he resigned from the coal company to devote his entire attention to the growing business of the National Audit Company, which he founded. This is an organization perfected with a view to skillful service in interpreting the Federal and other laws requiring special reports from corporations, and Mr. Green gave his company a very high standing and a select clientage throughout West Virginia and the adjoining states of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky.

To promote higher standards in public accounting and the welfare of certified public accountants in general, Mr. Green took the lead in organizing the Association of Certified Public Accountants of West Virginia, and was elected its first president in 1919. After serving as president one year he served as secretary. He was a member of the Kanawha Country Club and was a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason. Mr. Green married Annie Laing, and to this union were born three children: William, Elizabeth and Marcellus. For his second wife Mr. Green married Miss Geraldine Robinson, and to them was born a daughter, Nell.

SEBASTIAN M. MILLER is a mining engineer, with a wide and varied experience in the mining district of West Virginia and other states. He has been the engineer and operating official in the development of the most important coal districts in the southern part of the state. His home for the past ten years has been at Beckley in Raleigh County, and he has been manager of the sale of land for a large group of mining properties in the interest of the Interstate Coal and Dock Company of Huntington. This company is incorporated under the laws of Maine, and its officers and directors comprise one of the most powerful groups of coal operators in the Middle West. The general manager and secretary-treasurer of the company is C. H. Mead of Berkeley, and Mr. Miller for a number of years has been associated with the Mead coal interests in this state.

Mr. Miller was born February 18, 1868, at Pine Grove, Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania. His ancestors have been in Pennsylvania since Colonial times, and comprise an admixture of English, German and Scotch. About 1750 the German branch of the family acquired an interest in lands in Pennsylvania, and subsequently brought a colony of Germans who settled on the land. The parents of Mr. Miller were George and Katherine (Mull) Miller, natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. Miller's grandfather on his mother's side was an Abraham Lincoln elector for Pennsylvania. The Millers were pioneers in the development of the anthracite coal fields of Schuylkill County. Sebastian Miller's grandfather began mining coal in that county in 1827, and subsequently associated with him his sons David, George and another son, and they continued these operations until 1890. George Miller was a Union soldier who joined the army in the closing months of the Civil war. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and belonged to the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died in 1881.

Sebastian M. Miller attended the common schools of Schuylkill County, also Mercersburg Academy, and from there entered Franklin and Marshall College of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, where he graduated A. B. in 1888. Subsequently he pursued special courses in mine engineering, and also as a matter of general business education rather than with a view to fitting himself for the profession he read law for about a year. On leaving Pennsylvania Mr. Miller spent about a year and a half as a practical geologist and engineer in the gold, silver and lead fields of Colorado in his own interest. He was also in the coal mining district of Utah and acquired some interest in a considerable acreage of coal land. For about a year he was in the coal mining section around Fort Scott, Kansas. While in the West he became interested in a proposition to build what was to be known as the Utah & California Nevada Railway, and connected with the construction company as treasurer and director in charge of the survey, and secured the right of way for this line. He returned to New York in the interest of the railroad in 1896. Not long afterward he became associated with his uncle in coal mining operations in Clearfield County, Pennsylvania. His uncle died in 1900 and the mine properties were sold to New York parties, Mr. Miller remaining in charge for the new owners. The operators subsequently became interested in West Virginia, and Mr. Miller came to the state to represent them in 1900 and he handled many of the matters connected with the purchase of the properties of the New River Smokeless Coal Company, Cunard Coal Company, Brooklyn Coal Company, Red Ash Coal Company, Rush Run Coal Company, the Sun Mines Nos. 1-2-3, the Lanark Coal Company and the Royal Coal Company. These purchases included nine mines in all, and the properties were organized as the New River Collieries Company. Mr. Miller became general manager of this corporation, and he negotiated the lease of 8000 acres from the Crab Orchard Land Company. He was the practical man in charge of the development of this property, and supervised the installation of two sets of shafts and the building of railroads, power plants, store buildings, office buildings, dwellings and club house. The first coal was shipped from this property in 1907. Mr. Miller remained with the organization for two and one half years, and then established himself as a consulting engineer at Beckley. In 1912 he became associated with P. M. Snyder, S. A. Scott, J. L. Bungardner and others in securing leases of fifteen hundred acres of coal lands in the Winding Gulf District. The development of this property was under his personal supervision, and the corporation handling it was known as the East Gulf Coal Company.

Mr. Miller sold his interests in this corporation in 1911, and then became interested in the Interstate Coal and Dock Company, a Coal Sales Company, becoming its manager in order to round out his experience in the coal business in this district. He is also interested in the Low Volatile Consolidated Coal Company, of which C. H. Mead is president. Mr. Miller is now general sales manager for all the coal produced in the properties of C. H. Mead Coal Company, Bailey-Wood Coal Company, Ragland Coal Company, Ingram Branch Coal Company, and the Low Volatile Consolidated Company, there being six mines producing about a million tons annually.

In November, 1907, at Washington, D. C., Mr. Miller married Miss Anna B. Scott, daughter of Samuel Scott, a native of Maryland. Mr. Miller is affiliated with the Elks Lodge and the Kiwanis Club, and is a member of the Episcopal Church. He is also a member of the Raleigh County Country Club, the White Oak Country Club, and the Old Colony Club.

ROBERT EMMETT O'CONNOR. Bringing to his practice of the law a carefully trained intellect and natural inclination, broadened by his experience as an officer during the World war, Capt. Robert Emmett O'Connor, of Elkins, is one of the ablest practitioners of the Randolph County bar.

and a man widely known and universally respected. He is enthusiastic with reference to his profession and his community, and is rapidly becoming one of the foremost actors in the affairs of this part of West Virginia. Still in the very prime of vigorous manhood, he has a keen sense of civic responsibility and local pride, and is determined to see that every advantage is given the people of this region for further development.

Captain O'Connor was born on his father's farm near Morton, Randolph County, March 22, 1888, and is of pure Irish lineage both paternally and maternally. His father, Michael O'Connor, was born in Randolph County, West Virginia, August 25, 1843, a son of Patrick and Bridget McGuire. Patrick O'Connor was born near Dillanry, County Kerry, Ireland, from whence he immigrated to America about 1839, landing at Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada. From that port he came to New York City, and thence to the South to work on the construction of the old Chesapeake and Potomac Canal. Subsequently he was similarly employed on the construction of the Staunton and Parkersburg Turnpike, and was so employed when he came to Randolph County, West Virginia, then a part of Virginia. Here he acquired land in Roaring Creek District, settled on it, and here he spent the remainder of his life. His death occurred October 22, 1900, at the remarkably old age of 104 years.

Patrick O'Connor was the direct descendant of the old O'Connor clan of Ireland, of which King Roderick O'Connor was a member. King Roderick exercised supreme sovereignty in Ireland until 1172, when he surrendered his scepter to King Henry II of England.

Michael O'Connor, father of Captain O'Connor, was twice married. His first wife, whose maiden name was Martha Allett, bore him the following children: Mary, John, Barney and Charles. For his second wife Michael O'Connor married Mary Elizabeth Corley, and both of them survive and are living on a farm in Randolph County. They had the following children: Robert Emmett, William and James. Mrs. O'Connor was born in Randolph County, October 18, 1852, a daughter of William Fogg and Sarah Ann (Skidmore) Corley. William F. Corley was born in Randolph County about 1817. The progenitor of the Corley family in America was Minoah Corley, who came from County Cork, Ireland, to the United States and landed at Norfolk, Virginia.

Growing to manhood amid the healthful rural surroundings of farm life, Robert Emmett O'Connor first attended the local schools and later the Fairmont State Normal School. During this time he taught two terms of school during the vacation months. Matriculating in the Davis and Elkins College, he was graduated therefrom in 1914, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. While still a youth he had decided upon a professional career, and his course thereafter was shaped with this end in view, and he consequently took his legal training after completing his classical course, entering the West Virginia University, from which he was graduated in 1917, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

Under ordinary conditions he would, of course, have entered at once upon the practice of his profession, but 1917 was not a year of normalcy, and he, like millions of others in this country, became a soldier for service in the war in which his country had become a participant. Captain O'Connor was a volunteer, and upon his acceptance was sent to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Indiana, where he attended the Officers' Training School. Subsequently he was sent to the Officers' Training School at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, and while there received his commission as first lieutenant, November 27, 1917. Coast Artillery Corps, and was placed on duty at Fort Moultrie, South Carolina. He was assigned to Battery A, Sixty-first Coast Artillery Corps, with which he was ordered overseas in July, 1918. After his arrival in France he was assigned to the Thirty-third Brigade, First Army Corps, artillery, and in October, 1918, he was commissioned captain and was assigned to the command of Battery D, Sixty-first Artillery, in which he saw service in the Meuse-Argonne sectors. In February, 1919, his battery was ordered back to the United States, but he was detached and assigned for special duty in the rents, reclamation and claims service, and so did not return to his own land until September 29, 1919. He received his honorable discharge October 16, 1919, with the rank of captain of Coast Artillery Corps, Organized Reserves, U. S. A.

Captain O'Connor was a favorite of his men, for he possesses the quality of securing from others a whole-hearted co-operation, and can bring out the best characteristics of those under him. It is a pleasure and a duty to him to continue to maintain the relations formed during the war through the medium of the American Legion, and in 1922 he was elected commander of the H. W. Daniels Post, American Legion, at Elkins.

In politics Captain O'Connor is a republican, and is zealous in behalf of his party. He maintains membership with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Elkins Chamber of Commerce and the Elkins Rotary Club. On April 20, 1922, he was honored by being appointed United States commissioner at Elkins. He is unmarried.

Upon his return to civilian life Captain O'Connor entered upon the practice of the profession for which he had prepared himself, and has built up an enviable connection. During the brief time he has been practicing at the bar of Randolph County, Captain O'Connor has gained a high reputation for ability and fidelity, and for his force of character and natural qualifications. A man of comprehensive knowledge along many lines, the originality and profound grasp of his intellect command respect. In every relation of life his actions reflect the light which comes from justness, generosity, truth, high sense of honor, proper respect for self, and a sensitive consideration for others, combined with true loyalty and flaming patriotism. With these salient characteristics he is bound to give a truly valuable service in his new office, and in earning new laurels will once more be accorded opportunities for working in behalf of his country.

WILLIAM ADOLPH ARNOLD came to Elkins in 1905, and for half a dozen years was a clerk and stenographer in the law offices of a prominent railroad attorney. He was admitted to the bar, and for the past ten years has been a very busy lawyer and has associated himself with all the organized movements for the growth and progress of Elkins.

He was born December 25, 1886, at Martin's Ferry, Ohio, just across the river from Wheeling, son of John B. and Emily (Evans) Arnold. His grandfather, Marcus Arnold, was a native of Germany. John B. Arnold was born at Wheeling, West Virginia, in 1861, but has spent practically all his life in Ohio, where he has been connected with a steel industry as a foreman and superintendent of plants. Emily Evans was born in England, and was twenty-one years of age when her father, William Evans, brought his family to America. William Evans located at Martin's Ferry, Ohio, and was instrumental in founding the Aetna Standard Steel Mills in that city. John B. Arnold and wife are now retired and live at 432 North Boulevard in Firestone Park at Akron, Ohio. The oldest of their children is John Marcus Arnold, a steel mill foreman at Woodlawn, Pennsylvania. William A. Arnold is the second in age. Albert Henry Arnold, an electrician living at Akron, volunteered in the regular army with the Fifth Signal Battalion, Third Division, became a sergeant, and while overseas participated in the battle of Chateau Thierry, the Marne and Saint Mehiel campaigns, and in the battle of the Argonne was severely and permanently wounded in his right arm and shoulder. The daughter, Eleanor B. Arnold, married Philip Moeve, who is original research man in the employ of the Goodrich Rubber Company at Akron.

William A. Arnold spent his early life at Martin's Ferry in New Philadelphia, Ohio. He acquired a common and high school education, took a course in stenography and typewriting, and in 1905 came to Elkins as clerk and stenographer in the law office of the late C. Wood Dailey. Mr. Dailey was then general counsel for the West Virginia Central and Pittsburgh, the Western Maryland and the Coal and Coke Railways. At his death Mr. Dailey was succeeded in this office by E. A. Bowers. Mr. Arnold continued with Mr. Bowers until 1912 as his clerk and law assistant. In the meantime he had diligently pursued the study of law privately and also by a course in the West Virginia University. He was admitted to the bar in 1912, and at once took up practice and was associated with Mr. Bowers until 1916. Since then he has handled a general practice and he is also counsel for the Relief Department of the Western Maryland Railway. Before his admission to the bar Mr. Arnold did a large amount of work as a court reporter, and his special ability gave him a large amount of practice in that field.

Mr. Arnold, who is unmarried, was a volunteer at the time of the great war. In August, 1917, he entered the Second Officers' Training Camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, and from there was sent to Camp Ethan Allen in Vermont, and later to Camp Gordon, Georgia, where he was commissioned a second lieutenant. He was in the service until December, 1918, when honorably discharged. He is a member of the American Legion Post at Elkins, and is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

ROBERT KEMP MORTON brought to the profession of law an education and early training derived from contact as a student with some of the foremost institutions of education in America. He had decided talents for the profession, and his record as a practicing lawyer for fifteen years has brought him deserved prominence. Mr. Morton has been a member of the Charleston bar for the past ten years, and is widely known over the state as state president of the West Virginia Elks' Association.

He was born in Tazewell County, Virginia, in 1880, son of William Benjamin and Margaret (Crockett) Morton. His parents were also born in old Virginia, representing families long identified with that commonwealth. The Mortons had their ancestral seat in Prince Edward County. Margaret Crockett represented one branch of the family that produced the famous pioneer Davy Crockett.

Robert Kemp Morton was educated in Randolph-Macon College in Virginia, graduating in 1903, with the Bachelor of Arts degree and did postgraduate work in history and political science in Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

After one year at Johns Hopkins Mr. Morton decided to take up the profession of the law, and prepared for the bar at the University of Virginia. He began the practice of law at Tazewell Court House in his native county in 1906, but in 1912 moved to Charleston. For some time he was associated in practice with Judge A. S. Alexander, now on the bench. Mr. Morton is now senior member of the firm of Morton and Mohler. They have a large general civil practice and represent among their clients some of the important business and industrial interests of the state.

Mr. Morton has for a number of years been active in the Charleston Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, is past exalted ruler of Charleston Lodge, and the many valuable services he has rendered the Order led to his being elected president of the West Virginia Association of Elks at the annual state convention of the Order at Charleston in September, 1921. He is also a member of the college fraternity Kappa Alpha. He is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason and a member of Beni-Kedem Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

Mr. Morton married Miss Julia Ward Davidson, of Mercer County, West Virginia, in 1909. Their three children are Robert Kemp, Jr., Margaret Elizabeth and William Benjamin III.

BENJAMIN MILTON HOOVER came to Elkins after graduating from the University of Virginia a well trained and qualified young lawyer, and for twenty years has enjoyed an increasing share in his profession and in the civic and social life of this county seat town of Randolph County. He became a resident here August 12, 1902. For a number of years he has been a member of the law firm Talbott & Hoover, associated with E. D. Talbott.

Mr. Hoover was born on a farm near New Market in Shenandoah County, Virginia, October 30, 1879, son of Samuel R. and Linda (Neff) Hoover. His father was a native of Rockingham County, Virginia. The paternal grandparents, Benjamin and Melvina (Sites) Hoover, were also natives of the Valley of Virginia. The great-grandfather was of Pennsylvania Dutch ancestry and came from his native state of Pennsylvania as a pioneer to the Valley of Virginia. Samuel R. Hoover was a small boy when the Civil war broke out, but at the age of fifteen he enlisted in the Confederate army and saw some service during the last two months of the struggle. He married Mary Mallard better known as Linda Neff, daughter of Daniel Neff, native of the Valley of Virginia, and spent the rest of his life as a practical farmer in Shenandoah County. He died at the age of fifty-seven, being survived by his widow until 1922, when she died at the age of seventy-one. Their two sons were Claude Neff and Benjamin Milton Hoover, both of whom grew up on the Virginia farm.

Benjamin M. Hoover attained a high school education at New Market. He finished his literary education in the University of Virginia and also graduated in law there. In 1902, was admitted to the Virginia bar and soon afterwards established himself at Elkins. He has kept himself close within the channel of his chosen profession and has sought none of the special honors of politics or the larger responsibilities of business. He is a democrat, is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and Elks and is a member of the Episcopal Church.

Mr. Hoover in 1905 married Miss Sallie Wellford Scott, a native of North Carolina. Their two children are Mary Bruce and Samuel R. Hoover.

NATHAN ISAAC HALL has had a long and active association with business and financial affairs in West Virginia. For a quarter of a century his home has been at Elkins, and he has become one of the group of officials managing the great financial and industrial interests of the Davis and Elkins families here. He is vice president and treasurer of the Davis Trust Company.

He was born December 26, 1867, on a farm near Grafton in Taylor County, son of William K. and Abalona (Knotts) Hall, and grandson of Nathan and Mary (Means) Hall and James and Susanna (Miller) Knotts. Both the Knotts and Hall families were pioneers in Taylor County. His father William K. Hall, was a farmer, a republican and he and his wife were Methodists. They had four sons and two daughters, and the three living sons are Arthur A. Hall, connected with the West Virginia University at Morgantown, James K. Hall and Nathan Isaac Hall.

Nathan Isaac Hall received the first diploma ever issued to a graduate of the Grafton High School. His early education was followed by a bookkeeping course in Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, New York, and he began his business career as a bookkeeper in the Tygart Valley Bank at Philippi. For three years he was a merchant at that Barbour County city. Mr. Hall came to Elkins in 1897, and for a time served as bookkeeper in the Elkins National Bank. After a year he became connected with the coal industry as bookkeeper for what is now known as the West Virginia Coal & Coke Company.

With increasing familiarity with these interests and notable proficiency in every duty assigned him, Mr. Hall in 1907 was chosen treasurer of the Davis Trust Company. He is still treasurer, and subsequently the duties of vice president were also bestowed upon him. He is a member of the Board of Education of Elkins.

Mr. Hall has not been in politics, is a republican vote a Methodist, a Knight Templar Mason and Shriner and has taken fourteen degrees in the Scottish Rite.

In 1908 he married Miss Grace Darlington. Their two sons are Nathan Isaac, Jr., and William Darlington Hall.

ROBERT SIDNEY IRONS. In the village and city of Elkins the family name of Irons has been represented in two professions, medicine and law, for a period of thirty-five years. Robert Sidney Irons is a son of the physician Dr. John Calvin Irons, and is one of the prominent young lawyers of the Elkins bar and has practiced there except during the period while he was in the American army during the World War.

He was born at Elkins December 8, 1889, son of D.

R. Kempton

Mr. Pritt was born on a farm three and a half miles above Beverly, March 29, 1873, son of John B. and Rose A. (Crickard) Pritt and grandson of Edward and Susanna (Phares) Pritt. His mother was born in Staunton, Virginia, but was reared in Randolph County, and died at the age of sixty-eight. John B. Pritt, a native of Randolph County, who died at the age of seventy-two, was a Confederate soldier throughout the period of the Civil war, devoted his active life time to farming, was a democrat in politics and he and his wife were Presbyterians. In their family were four sons and four daughters.

Thaddeus Pritt spent his early life in a rural environment, attended the public schools, and for six terms was a teacher himself. For over twenty years his time was taken up with public duty. He was appointed in 1899 public appraiser of real estate for his county. In 1901 he became deputy sheriff, serving eight years, two terms. In 1908 he was elected sheriff, serving one term of four years. In 1914 he was elected clerk of the County Court, for the term of six years.

While still in office Mr. Pritt was appointed cashier of the Elkins National Bank, in 1919, and for over a year performed the duties of both offices. Since the expiration of his term as clerk of the County Court he has given all his time to his duties as bank cashier. Mr. Pritt is a democrat, is a Presbyterian and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Elks. He is a member of the Elkins Chamber of Commerce and a charter member of the Rotary Club.

In 1915 he married Miss Mary McClellan, a native of Jefferson County, Pennsylvania. They have one son, Thaddeus McClellan Pritt.

EDWIN A. WILSON, M. D., is not only one of the representative physicians and surgeons of Harrison County but also has the distinction of being the pioneer druggist of his attractive and vital little home city of Salem.

Doctor Wilson was born at Berca, Ritchie County, West Virginia, on the 30th of September, 1865, and is a son of Hiram and Mandane Ellen (Lowther) Wilson. Hiram Wilson was a skilled workman as a cabinetmaker, and in this connection did a prosperous business also as an undertaker, when coffins and caskets were manufactured by hand work. He served for some time as deputy sheriff of Ritchie County, has never wavered in his allegiance to the democratic party, and he is now living retired at Salem, at the venerable age of eighty-four years (1922), his wife having passed away at the age of sixty-nine years. To them were born one son and three daughters, one of the daughters being deceased. Mr. Wilson has long been a zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, his wife having held membership in the Seventh Day Baptist Church.

After attending school one year at Pullman, Ritchie County, Doctor Wilson accompanied his parents on their removal to Salem, Harrison County, where he continued his studies in the public schools until he had profited by the advantages of the high school. He then entered the Iron City Commercial College at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and in the same he was graduated as a member of the class of 1886. In furtherance of a definite ambition the Doctor thereafter completed a correspondence course in pharmacy, and in due time he successfully passed the examination that gave him status as a registered pharmacist in his native state. He at once opened the first drug store to be established at Salem, and this he successfully conducted ten years, within which decade he attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the City of Baltimore, Maryland one year. In advancing his professional studies he thereafter continued his studies two years in the Cincinnati (Ohio) College of Medicine and Surgery, and in this institution he was graduated in 1898, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In the preceding year he had successfully passed examination before the West Virginia State Board of Medical Examiners and had been licensed to practice. The Doctor has continued a close student and has insistently kept in touch with the advances made in medical and surgical science, in which connection it is to be noted that he took a post-graduate course in the Chicago Medical School in 1903, and that in 1907 he completed an effective post-graduate course in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, New York City, and also in the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary. Though his substantial and representative practice in his home community is of general order, Doctor Wilson gives special attention to the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, in which field he has authoritative status. He holds membership in the Harrison County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He has served as city health officer of Salem, a position which he retained several years, is a democrat in political allegiance, he and his family attend and support the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and in the Masonic fraternity he is affiliated with the Scottish Rite bodies and with the Mystic Shrine. He is also a charter member of the Knights of Pythia Lodge of his home city. The Doctor is the owner of an appreciable amount of real estate at Salem, including his residence, which is one of the fine homes of the city, and he has real estate holdings at Clarksburg.

January 7, 1891, recorded the marriage of Doctor Wilson and Miss Carrie Gain, daughter of Samuel and Cordelia (Randolph) Gain, of Salem, her father having been for many years one of the most extensive buyers and shippers of live stock in this section of the state. Doctor and Mrs. Wilson became the parents of three children: Charlie Clifford, who is successfully engaged in the practice of his profession, that of optometrist, in the City of Clarksburg, was born and reared at Salem, where he graduated from the high school and Salem College. Later he graduated from the Duff Business College in the City of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, the New York Institute of Optometry, and the Philadelphia School of Horology and Optics. He is a Scottish Rite Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine. He married Miss Neva Monroe, of Mannington, Marion County. Edna Blanche, the second child, likewise was graduate from the Salem High School and Salem College, and later she completed a course in the West Virginia Business College and in King's School of Oratory, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Thereafter she graduated from the medical department of physics and ophthalmology in McCormick Medical College, Chicago, Illinois, and she is now successfully engaged in the practice of her profession of optometry, with headquarters in the office of her father. Her husband, Harold E. Ross, is associated with the Salem Bridge & Construction Company. The third child, Will Louetta, died at the age of eleven years. At the time of her death she was in the fifth grade of the public school and was a student of music and elocution in the Morning Conservatory in New York City during the year 1907. She had a very promising future before her.

LEE CROUCH, president of the Elkins National Bank, is a West Virginian who was reared in the back country, had no particular advantages beyond those he worked for, and with determination to succeed has achieved something more than the ordinary station in life, not only as a business man but as a citizen. He has held public office, and for two years was a merchant before he entered banking.

Mr. Crouch represents one of the oldest families of Randolph County, and was born on a farm in that county July 13, 1859, son of Abram and Elizabeth (McNeil) Crouch. His father was born and reared and spent his life in Randolph County, a practical farmer. The grandfather was Andrew Crouch. Maj. John M. Crouch, a brother of Andrew, is said to have been the first white male child born in Randolph County. Andrew Crouch was also a native of that county, and in 1810 married Elizabeth Hutton, of another pioneer family. The old farm of Andrew Crouch is now owned by his grandsons Lee and Jackson Crouch.

The mother of Lee Crouch was born in Pocahontas County, was a woman of fine qualities of heart and mind and she did much to inspire her son with an ambition for worthy achievement. Lee Crouch was one of six children all of whom grew up on the farm.

The country schools attended by Lee Crouch hardly averaged more than a four months term each year. With this education and with his home training he started out without capital to do for himself, and soon afterward was a partner in a small store at Huttonsville. From merchandising he became deputy sheriff, filling that office two terms, or eight years. He was next elected clerk of the County Court of Randolph County, and at the end of his first six year term was re-elected and filled that office with every degree of efficiency for twelve years.

On leaving public office Mr. Crouch was made cashier of the Elkins National Bank. On the death of the late United States Senator Henry Gassaway Davis, Mr. Crouch was elected president of the Elkins National Bank. This bank has total resources well upwards of two million dollars, and is one of the strongest banks in this part of the state.

E. A. Wilson M.D.

Mr. Crouch is president of the Board of County Commissioners, his term ending in December, 1924. He has always been an active democrat, is a member of the Masonic Order and the Elks and is a Presbyterian. In 1893 he married Sarah A. Wallace, a native of Augusta County, Virginia. Their four children are: Mary, Wallace, Maude and Evelyn.

ROBERT E. KING. A high minded and progressive educator who has rendered splendid service to the schools of Tucker County both as teacher and administrator, Robert E. King has for several years been superintendent of the county system of schools. Since his connection with the schools of the county covers a period of twenty-two years it is doubtful if any individual has ever exercised a more beneficent influence on local education than Mr. King.

He was born April 24, 1881, on Sam's Fork of Little Kanawha River in Wood County, West Virginia. His grandfather, Samuel King, was a native of Ireland, and was a boy when his parents brought him to the United States, the family landing at Baltimore and traveling over the old Northwestern Turnpike to Noble County, Ohio. Samuel King remained in that section of Ohio the rest of his life, his home being near Summerfield. Though of foreign birth he proved his Americanism by four years of service as a Union soldier in the Civil war. He married Elizabeth Snyder, and they were the parents of a dozen children, and the nine to reach mature years were: John W., mentioned below; Martha, who married John King of Macksburg, Ohio; Robert, who lived in Nebraska; Lincoln, of Athens, Ohio; James, of the old King homestead at Summerfield; Josie, widow of Hiram Curtis, in Noble County; Laura, who married and lives in Noble County; Mrs. Lucy Davis, whose husband is in the oil business in Mexico City; and Ruth, wife of Aaron Wilson, of Salem, West Virginia.

John W. King, father of the Tucker County educator, was a resident of that county almost thirty years, a farmer near St. George. He was born in Noble County, Ohio, in February, 1847, and died at Parsons, West Virginia, May 29, 1922. He was reared in a country district there, acquiring a rural education. He married Edith Haddix, who was born in Barbour County, West Virginia, April 16, 1862, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Stansbury) Haddix. She died September 5, 1921. The children of John W. King and wife were: Robert Edgar; Charles Blaine, who died at Kitzmiller, Maryland, leaving a wife and five children; Harry Clyde, a garage man in Parsons, who married Amy Nestor and has four children; Lillie R., mother of four children by her marriage to Hugh Calvert, of Cromanton, Florida; Laura M., deceased, wife of Pat Owens, of St. George, West Virginia, and the mother of four children; and Lelia P., who married John Owens, brother of Pat, and they live on a farm near St. George and have two children.

Robert E. King was an infant when his parents left West Virginia, and for two or three years lived at Macksburg, Ohio. They then returned to West Virginia and settled in Knottsville District, where Robert King began his school training. In 1894, when he was thirteen years of age, the family moved to Tucker County, and he came to manhood on the old farm near St. George. He completed the work of the common schools and at the age of seventeen was qualified to teach his first term. He taught for two terms and then enrolled as a student in the West Virginia Preparatory School at Keyser. For several years following he alternated between teaching and studying, and nearly completed his course in the Preparatory School. For nine years Mr. King was principal of the St. George School, and he was also principal of the Williams School in Fairfax District, and later had charge of a rural school in the Black Fork District. While at St. George he introduced the subject of agriculture in the schools, and was also chairman of the first reading circle in that district, comprising both a reading circle and general institute work. In every way he proved himself a progressive school man, striving to make the schools an auxiliary to the needs of modern life. With his record of fifteen years' experience as a teacher Mr. King entered upon his duties as county superintendent, being elected on the republican ticket in 1918 as successor to C. R. Parsons. Since becoming county superintendent he has introduced into the schools physical drill, hot lunches, district school days, at which time all the children of the district are assembled at one point and engage in contests in educational and athletic work; the urging of teachers' attendance upon summer schools, which has been generally responded to, there being as a reward for such attendance an additional five dollars a month salary. While superintendent Mr. King has had the pleasure of seeing five new school houses built over the county. That of the White School in Licking District is one of the best one-room school buildings in this part of the state.

While a teacher Mr. King served as deputy county assessor for six years, for four years under S. C. Simpson and two years under J. T. Darkey. Mr. King was reared in a republican household and has always acknowledged that party allegiance.

At Keyser, West Virginia, April 13, 1913, he married Miss Susan D. Dickson. She was born at Tuscaloosa, Alabama, in 1879, daughter of Flinn and Lee Dickson, of Sumter, South Carolina. Her mother was a first cousin of Gen. Robert E. Lee. Flinn Dickson was a Presbyterian minister and teacher, founded a colored school at Tuscaloosa, and was widely known over the South not only for his practical work in the educational and religious field, but also as author of several religious books and several religious songs that were published. Rev. Mr. Dickson and wife had the following children: Katie D., who married Charles Beard, of Sumter County, South Carolina, where she is now teaching; Howard Dickson, who was a soldier in the Spanish-American war and subsequently went into old Mexico, but has not been heard from since; George Dickson, a major in the Bailey Military Institute at Greenwood, South Carolina; Mrs. Susan Dozier King; and A. Flinn, who was a soldier in the Spanish-American war and is now a member of a wholesale grocery firm at Fredericksburg, Virginia.

Mrs. King was well educated, attending Presbyterian School at Fredericksburg and also the University of Virginia and the University of Tennessee. As a practical educator she did some splendid work as teacher of some missionary schools in the mountain districts of Virginia, North and South Carolina. She also taught for several years at White Gate and Roanoke, Virginia, and during the year she was a teacher in the High School at Thomas, West Virginia, she made her acquaintance with Mr. King. She is a member of the Eastern Star and a member of the National Federation of Women's Clubs. Mr. and Mrs. King have two children, Eileen Lee and Robert Edgar, Jr.

Mr. King is affiliated with the Fraternal Order of Eagles, is a past consul of the Woodmen of the World and a past councillor of the Junior Order United American Mechanics. He is affiliated with the Presbyterian Church, of which Mrs. King is an active member.

OWEN J. KING, who has served two terms as postmaster of Elkins, began his business career in that city before it was the county seat of Randolph County, and has had an increasingly active part in local affairs ever since.

He was born on a farm near Kingsville in Randolph County, August 29, 1871, son of John A. and Mary (O'Connor) King. John A. King was born in Ireland and was six years of age when his parents, Michael and Bridget (Mounigan) King, came to this country. Michael King was in railroad construction work and finally located on a farm in Randolph County, and the adjacent village of Kingsville was named in his honor. John A. King served as a teamster in the Union Army during the Civil war, and after the war became a farmer and spent his active life at that vocation. His wife, Mary O'Connor, was born at Philadelphia, and her father, Michael O'Connor, was a native of Ireland. John A. King and wife were devout Catholics, and they reared thirteen children on their farm, eleven of whom are still living.

Owen J. King spent his boyhood on the farm and had the advantages of the common schools. At the age of eighteen he started making his own way, and he has made a success without any inheritance of money and has not only pulled his own weight in the world, but has done much to help others. He was in business at Elkins as a merchant for twelve years. After selling his store he entered the real estate and insurance business, and carried that line of activities for eight years.

He is an active democrat, and in 1914 President Wilson appointed him postmaster of Elkins. He was re-appointed for a second term, and throughout his administration he gave the utmost satisfaction to the patrons of the office. Mr. King is a Catholic and is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and Elks. In 1904 he married Miss Gertrude Collins, of Logansport, Indiana. Their three children are Madaline, Mildred and Clarence C.

CLARENCE SILAS BATES, M. D. A native of Harrison County, where he devoted his early years to farming, Doctor Bates after graduating from medical college returned to the same community for the work of his profession, and for upward of twenty years has performed with quiet efficiency and ability the arduous round of duties required of a country practitioner.

He was born on a farm in Harrison County, July 4, 1874. His great-grandfather was a native of England, and on coming to America settled in Erie County, Pennsylvania. The grandfather of Doctor Bates was Andy Bates, a native of Erie County, Pennsylvania, and an early settler in West Virginia. Nötley S. Bates, father of Doctor Bates, was born in Doddridge County, this state, in 1846, and when he was three years of age his mother died and at the age of fourteen he left the home of his father and stepmother to begin life for himself. For several years he worked as a farm hand for a man whose daughter he married. After his marriage he settled on a farm in Harrison County. He served one year in the Union Army during Civil war, was an active republican, and he and his wife were Methodists. Nötley S. Bates married Laura Frances Swiger, who was born in Harrison County. She died in 1898, and her husband died at Wilsonburg in 1918. She was a daughter of Jerah and Ruth (Wilson) Swiger, the former a native of Harrison County and the latter a native of Ireland, she having been brought to America when an infant.

Clarence Silas Bates was one of a family of twelve children, ten of whom reached mature years. While on the farm he attended the public schools, also took a course in Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, and he remained a factor on the farm until he was twenty-six. He then entered the Baltimore Medical College, and remained there until graduating M. D. in 1904. In May of that year Doctor Bates located at Lumberport, and has ever since carried the burdens of a general practitioner. He is a member of the Harrison County, West Virginia State and American Medical Associations. Three times he has taken a vacation from his practice in order to keep in touch with the advanced knowledge of his science, and he took one postgraduate course in the Mayo Brothers Clinic at Rochester, Minnesota. Doctor Bates is a republican, a Baptist, and is a member of the Masons and Odd Fellows.

In 1898 he married Allie A. Coffman, daughter of Jesse F. and Virginia (Harbert) Coffman, of Harrison County. Their two sons are Selman J., and Everett Brice.

JOHN N. SHACKLEFORD, whose death occurred February 18, 1922, resided at Glenville, judicial center of Gilmer County. He was a citizen of distinctive loyalty and progressiveness, and the estimate placed upon him in his native state was indicated by the fact that in the election of 1920 he was chosen a member of the State Senate, as representative of the Tenth Senatorial District, which comprises the counties of Braxton, Gilmer, Pocahontas, Webster and Calhoun.

Senator Shackelford was born in Upshur County, West Virginia, February 18, 1860, a son of Robert C. and Lucy C. (Hodges) Shackelford, both natives of Virginia, where the former was born in Albemarle County and the latter in Orange County. The father's early educational advantages were limited, but his strong and alert mind and determined ambition enabled him effectually to overcome this youthful handicap and to become a man of broad information and mature judgment. Both he and his wife were young at the time of the removal of their respective families to what is now Upshur County, West Virginia, where they were reared to adult age and where their marriage was solemnized. Robert C. Shackelford settled on a farm near the present Lorentz Railroad station in Upshur County, where he developed and improved a productive homestead of 134 acres and became one of the successful exponents of farm industry in that county. He was a staunch democrat, and, while never a seeker of public office, his civic loyalty was signally shown in his effective service as a member of the Board of Education of the Buckhannon, or county-seat, District. He and his wife were zealous members of the Methodist Protestant Church. Of their eleven children the Hon. John N., of this review, was the eldest; Martha E. is the wife of George L. Crites, of Buckhannon, Upshur County; Lucy E. is the wife of Wayne Meredith, of Fairmont, Marion County; Lettie is the wife of Lawrence Haymond, of Cincinnati, Ohio; O. F. resides at Buckhannon, Upshur County; Issa M. is the wife of Arthur K. Hinkle, of Fairmont; Sarah E. is the wife of Ira Smith, of Fairmont; and Sidney R. resides on the old homestead farm in Upshur County. The remaining three are deceased.

John N. Shackelford early gained practical lessons of enduring value through his youthful association with the varied activities of the home farm, and after having profited by the advantages of the common schools he attended the West Virginia State Normal School at Glenville. He taught eleven terms of school, with marked success, and in connection with business enterprise he early began to deal in live stock and coal lands. For twelve years he was a traveling commercial salesman, and in connection with his various productive activities he gained substantial success and secure standing as a reliable and progressive man of affairs.

Senator Shackelford was ever a staunch advocate of the principles of the democratic party, and was influential in the local councils and campaign activities of the party. In November, 1920, he was elected to the State Senate, and in the general assembly of the West Virginia Legislature for 1920-21 he was a member of the finance committee of the Senate and loyally supported appropriations for the benefit of the various institutions of the state, especially those of educational order. Through his influence was made an appropriation for the construction and equipping of a boys dormitory at the State Normal School in his home city of Glenville. He served also on the conference committee of the Senate, and it is uniformly conceded that he did much to gain and retain the requisite appropriations for the colleges and schools of the state. As a member of the Senate he gave to the new state road from Charleston to the Pennsylvania line the name of Morgan Highway.

Senator Shackelford was the owner of the old homestead farm upon which he was born and reared, in Upshur County, and aside from its intrinsic value he placed high estimate upon the property by reason of the gracious memories and associations which it represented. He was liberal and progressive as a citizen and an active member of the Baptist Church, as was also his wife, whose death occurred February 16, 1919, no children having been born to them. The maiden name of Mrs. Shackelford was Gertrude Bell, and she was a daughter of William W. and Sarah A. (Brannon) Bell, of Gilmer County.

WALTER S. BAMBRICK, who is United States postmaster at Weirton, demonstrates in his life the truth of the saying that real merit receives proper recognition, and the other saying as well, that nothing succeeds like success. Persistent, conscientious endeavor alone, along legitimate lines, has resulted in his case in public advancement, and in his official position he has discharged his duties faithfully and rendered the people of his community splendid service.

Mr. Bambrick was born at New Cumberland, Hancock unity, West Virginia, September 19, 1888, and is a son of wis S. and Sarah M. (Baxter) Bambrick, natives also of Hancock County. The grandfather of Walter S. Bambrick, Thomas Bambrick, was born, reared and educated in Ireland, where as a young man he was a teacher. He immigrated to the United States about 1820 and settled in West Virginia, where he first engaged in teaching and later turned his attention to farming, also carrying on surveying work all over the state. As he was possessed of a superior education, he was frequently asked to do work of a semi-judicial character for the pioneers, particularly before the sessions of the County Court. He was the father of the family which brought into being Hancock County, which was taken off from Brooke County, and sat as a delegate in the House of Representatives at the time the county was created, in 1848. He named the county seat Pughtown, and such it continued for many years or until being removed to New Cumberland. He was a stalwart democrat, and in his death, at the age of eighty-four years, his community left a strong leader and a reliable and straightforward citizen.

C. S. Bates M.D.

Like his father, Lewis S. Bambrick was a teacher in his earlier years, but later turned his attention to farming and continued to be engaged therein in Hancock County all his life, with the exception of two years passed in Wayne County, Iowa. He is now living in retirement, having reached four-score years, but takes a lively interest in the affairs of life and is a member of the Board of Equalization. In politics he is a democrat. Mr. Bambrick married Miss Sarah M. Baxter, daughter of Samuel Baxter, who is born in Brooke County, West Virginia, and at marriage came to Hancock County, where he spent the rest of his life in agricultural operations, being a progressive cattle and sheep breeder. He died when eighty-four years old. Mr. Bambrick died at the age of sixty-six years, after a happy married life of about forty-five years.

Walter S. Bambrick received his education in the graded and high schools of New Cumberland, and in 1912 came to Martinsburg as an employee of the shipping department of the Martinsburg Steel Company. He remained with this concern until named postmaster, the duties of which office he assumed September 5, 1916. At that time the office boasted of two employees, occupied a one-room building, 11x36 feet, and had annual receipts amounting to $9,000. There are now eight assistants, the post office occupies a rented building, 33x72 feet, and the receipts amount to $160,000 annually. Mr. Bambrick gives his entire time and attention to the work of his position and has improved the service materially. At the present time there are no deliveries made and no rural free delivery system, as the work of numbering houses on the various streets has not been done in this is fast-growing municipality. As soon as this work is accomplished deliveries will commence. Mr. Bambrick has a distinction of having his name on the Honor Roll and went to the postmaster general at Washington, D. C., as a mark of special distinction. When the sale of War Savings Stamps and Thrift Stamps was discontinued the new Treasury Savings Certificates were offered the public, and Postmaster Bambrick was an entrant in the postmaster contest which closed December 31, 1921, in competition with 10 other postmasters of the same class offices in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, being one of the winners in this state. A bronze honor pin of attractive design, bearing the inscription "Honor Postmaster," has been conferred upon Postmaster Bambrick by Howard T. Cree, director of the Government Savings Organization, Richmond, Virginia, as a reward for patriotism and faithful service. Mr. Bambrick is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and during his vacations humors his hobby of hunting.

Mr. Bambrick married Miss Myrtle Herron, of New Cumberland, and they are the parents of two children: Walter Lewis and William Herron.

ALEXANDER B. PAXTON. Perhaps no other line of manufacturing goods better serves to make the City of Wheeling known abroad than the product of the Hazel Atlas Glass Company, whose general offices have been at Wheeling for many years. The industry is in fact largely one of local origin in this section of the Upper Ohio Valley. Alexander B. Paxton is identified with the Hazel Atlas Glass Company through direct relationship with some of the founders and also by virtue of a long and continued personal service. He is now vice president of the corporation.

Mr. Paxton was born at Wheeling, August 31, 1866. His grandfather, Alexander Paxton, was a native of England, born in 1797, and from early manhood lived at Wheeling. He was one of the old time jewelry merchants, and later a man who used his capital in other enterprises. He died at Wheeling in 1874. His son, Elisha W. Paxton, was born at Wheeling in 1826, and for a number of years was member of the wholesale grocery house of Paxton, Oglebay & Company. Later he was an official in the North Wheeling Window Glass Company. On account of ill health he gave up active business in 1878 and bought a farm at Wellsburg, and finally moved to Washington, Pennsylvania, where he lived retired until his death in 1905, at the age of seventy-eight. He was always a thorough-going republican and an active member of the Presbyterian Church. Elissa Paxton married Flora Wellman, who was born in Massillon, Ohio, in 1828, and died at Washington, Pennsylvania, in 1906. Of their children the oldest is Mary, wife of C. N. Brady, now living retired at Washington, Pennsylvania. Mr. Brady was founder of the original Hazel Atlas Company of Wheeling. The second child is Mrs. Amelia N. Hensell. George P. died at Washington, Pennsylvania, at the age of fifty-four and Elisha, Jr., died in infancy. Martha is the wife of H. King Pendleton, now a retired minister of the Christian Church living in California. The sixth in the family is Alexander B. Jesse W. is president of the Highland Glass Company and lives at Washington, Pennsylvania. Richard M. is vice president of the Highland Glass Company at Washington. William P., treasurer of the Highland Glass Company, is New York City representative of that industry and lives at Montclair, New Jersey.

Alexander B. Paxton was about twelve years of age when the family left Wheeling and went to a farm near Wellsburg. He attended public school in Wheeling and graduated from the Wellsburg High School in 1883, and then spent one year in Purdue University at Lafayette, Indiana. Practically his entire business experience has identified him with the glass industry. He was connected with the original Hazel Atlas Glass Company at Wellsburg as manager or superintendent four years. He and C. N. Brady then established the Hazel Glass Company at Washington, Pennsylvania, and Mr. Paxton was secretary of that company until the consolidation of the Hazel Glass Company and the Atlas Glass Company in 1900. This was the source of the present widely known corporation, the Hazel Atlas Glass Company, of which Mr. Paxton has been secretary or vice president for over twenty years and has been a resident of Wheeling during this time. He has held the post of vice president since 1917, and is manager of the export business. The general offices are in the Conservative Life Building at 1580 Market Street.

The only plant of the Hazel Atlas Company in Wheeling is a metal plant for the making of metal caps for bottles, jars and also strip zinc. The glass plants are located, three at Washington, Pennsylvania, one at Grafton, and two at Clarksburg, West Virginia. The corporation is one of the largest in measure of potential benefit to this region, employing in normal seasons six thousand hands. The Hazel Atlas products are justly famed, and comprise a great variety of glass manufacture, tumblers, fruit jars and other containers and specialties. These products have a worldwide market. The officers of the corporation are: Joseph C. Brady, president; A. B. Paxton, vice president; A. F. Brady, treasurer and vice president; J. H. McNash, secretary; G. G. Oliver, vice president and general manager.

Mr. Paxton is also a director of the Highland Glass Company and of the Wheeling Bank & Trust Company. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, does his voting as a republican, is a trustee of the Presbyterian Church and is affiliated with the Masonic Lodge and the Elks Lodge at Washington, Pennsylvania, the Wheeling Country Club, Fort Henry Club of Wheeling, and is a member of the National Chamber of Commerce at Washington, D. C.

On September 27, 1893, at Washington, Pennsylvania, Mr. Paxton married Miss Edna D. Maxwell. She was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, graduated from the Washington Female Seminary, and also attended Kansas University at Lawrence. Mr. and Mrs. Paxton have two children: Elizabeth is the wife of Carl O. Schmidt, a Wheeling attorney; and the son, Alexander M., is living in Cleveland, and is connected with the Cleveland office of the Hazel Atlas Glass Company. He has a record of service in the World war, having been on a submarine chaser.

JOHN A. KANE came from Baltimore, Maryland, to Bluefield, Mercer County, West Virginia, in the year 1910, and here established the commercial printing business which is conducted under the title of the Kane Printing Company. This is a modern printing plant of the best order, established in a building erected specially for the purpose and in a remarkably attractive location, the building commanding a fine view of the valley, the Baptist College grounds and the city in general. With the best of mechanical equipment and accessories and with a corps of skilled employes this company is able to give the highest grade of service to its patrons, the work of the plant being confined to commercial printing and the trade of the concern being of most substantial order.

Mr. Kane was born in New York City, on the 27th day of March, 1871, a son of John C. and Ellen Mary (Cassery) Kane, both natives of the State of New York. The father died in 1895, at the age of fifty-five years, his wife having passed away a few years previously. John C. Kane was manager for the firm of Hotchis, Field & Company, manufacturers of steam boilers, in New York at the time of his death, and he was survived by three sons and two daughters.

John A. Kane profited by the advantages afforded in the public schools of Brooklyn, New York, and at the age of seventeen years he entered upon a practical apprenticeship to the printing trade in the office of the old New York Recorder. Later he found employment in the office of the New York World, and he had the distinction of becoming one of the first skilled linotype operators in the United States. In 1905 Mr. Kane found employment in the office of the Gazette of Colorado Springs, Colorado, later he worked on the San Antonio Express, San Antonio, Texas, and still later he worked in the State Printing Office of Texas, at Austin. His further experience included service with the Kansas City Star, the Oklahoma Daily News, and the Jacobs Advertising Agency in the City of Clinton, South Carolina. He thereafter established an independent commercial printing office in the City of Baltimore, where he remained until 1910, when he came to Bluefield, West Virginia, and founded the printing business of which he continued the executive head until his death, March 9, 1922. Mr. Kane was a valued and appreciative member of the Bluefield Chamber of Commerce and the local Kiwanis Club. He was affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and in politics was a leader in the local councils of the democratic party, as a representative of which he was manager of the party campaign in Mercer County in 1920. He was an active member of the Presbyterian Church, of which his widow is also a member.

At Colorado Springs, in the year 1906, Mr. Kane married Miss Irene Mott Darland, daughter of C. C. Darland, and the two children of this union are Carroll John and Ellen Mary.

WAITMAN DEVER CORDER. Barbour County has repeatedly honored and given evidence of its esteem of the Corder family, who through a long period of years have been leaders in country life and in the official affairs of the county. W. D. Corder, one of the younger members, has given most of his active years either to business or the public service, and is the present circuit clerk of the county.

His father is William Benton Corder, who was born near Berryburg in Barbour County in May, 1859. He acquired a liberal education, attending old West Virginia College at Flemington, an institution that gave many prominent men to the state. His active career has been devoted to farming and official affairs. He was elected assessor of Barbour County, and served four years, represented the county one term in the House of Delegates, was the chosen state senator from the old Tenth District for a term, and for four years was sheriff of the county. He is now president of the Barbour County Farm Bureau. William B. Corder married Bertha Jane Bartlett, who was born near Simpson, Taylor County, daughter of William and Sallie (Reck) Bartlett. Their children are: Land R., of Clarksburg; Waitman D., of Barbour County; William Everett, a farmer near Berryburg; Hassell Wade, of Clarksburg; Leno Bartlett and Rossil Atkinson, both of the home farm.

Waitman Dever Corder was born in Pleasant District of Barbour County, near Berryburg, March 24, 1883. He lived on the farm until he was about twenty-three. In the meantime, after leaving the common schools, he attended Broadus College, then at Clarksburg, was a student in Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, and for five terms taught county school while getting his own education.

Mr. Corder left the farm to become deputy sheriff and his father, and he performed these duties for four years. After leaving office he remained at Philippi and engaged in the general insurance business, building up an agency that is one of important service throughout Barbour County and of which he is still the active head.

Mr. Corder in 1914 became a candidate for circuit clerk. He had no opposition in the nomination, but in the election had a rival on the other ticket and was chosen by majority far beyond the normal majority for the count. He entered office in January, 1915, as the successor of Charles W. Brandon, and in November, 1920, was re-elected so that he is now serving in his eighth year.

Mr. Corder comes from a republican family, cast his first presidential vote for Colonel Roosevelt in 1904, and served as chairman of the County Committee from 1911 to 1914. He is a York Rite Mason, has taken the work of the Lodge of Perfection in the Scottish Rite, is a member of the Mystic Shrine, and is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church and of the trustees of Broadus College at Philippi. Mr. Corder helped finance and build the Blanket Mill at Philippi, and was secretary and treasurer of the company for a time. He has been a director of the Kiwanis Club, and for two terms was on the City Council, when such important public improvements were under way as paving and sewerage. He is chairman of the Finance Committee of the Red Cross Chapter of Barbour County.

In Barbour County Mr. Corder married Miss Iva Talbot, daughter of S. H. and Edith Talbot and sister of V. Bruce Talbot, the present prosecuting attorney. Mr. and Mrs. Corder were born within a mile of each other, attended the same country school, and she was also educated at Wesleyan College. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Corder are: William Dever, Edith Jane, Joseph Talbot, Waitman Bartlett, Ellen Rose, June Lee and Bettie Ann.

BUREN STEPHENSON is a native son of Clay County, and that he is one of the popular young men of this county is indicated by the fact that he is serving as postmaster at Clay, the judicial center of the county. He was born on the parental homestead farm in this county, January 3, 1890, and is a son of Sherman C. and Sarah A. (Legg) Stephenson, both likewise natives of Clay County, where the former was born in 1863 and the latter in 1865. After his marriage Sherman C. Stephenson continued his activities as one of the progressive and substantial farmers of his native county until he removed to the county seat and engaged in the lumber business, with which he continues his connection until his tragic death in 1900, he having been killed in an accident. He was a staunch democrat and was an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as is also his widow, who still resides at Clay. Of their four children the eldest is Byron, one of the successful farmers of this county; Hulbert likewise is identified with constructive industry in his native county; ren, of this sketch, was next in order of birth; and nie, the only daughter, died in childhood.

W. D. Branden

The public schools of Clay County so thoroughly fortified ren Stephenson that he proved himself eligible for agogic honors and became a successful teacher in the al schools. In 1914, under civil-service regulations, he as appointed postmaster at Clay, and of this office he has e continued the efficient and popular incumbent. His itical allegiance is given to the democratic party. Mr. phenson is a past master of Clay County Lodge No. 97, cient Free and Accepted Masons, and is affiliated also h the local camp of the Modern Woodmen of America, wife being a member of the Order of the Eastern Star of the Baptist Church.

April 4, 1914, recorded the marriage of Mr. Stephenson l Miss Florence Sizemore, who likewise was born and red in Clay County, and they have two children: Janie, n November 11, 1915, and Gladys, born August 22, 1918.

JESSE OSCAR BAILIFF, M. D. Gifted in marked degree, ed by training and natural inclination as a physician l surgeon, it is not surprising that Dr. Jesse Oscar iliff, of Mullens, is making rapid strides in his calling, that he has gained in such a large measure the respect l confidence of the people of his community within so rt a period of time. While a member of his profession y since 1914, he has had experience in several locations l capacities, including extended and valued service on front in France during the recent war.

Doctor Bailiff was born October 23, 1885, on a farm ar Marshall, Illinois, and is a son of J. T. and Clara (hipple) Bailiff. The parents of Doctor Bailiff during youth resided in several communities, in Illinois, near arshall, in Iowa, again in Illinois, near their old home, and ally in Missouri, where they now occupy a farm near idley in Stoddard County. They had two sons and one ughter. Doctor Bailiff's brother, William Bailiff, is the esentative of the Standard Oil Company at Dexter, ssouri.

Jesse Oscar Bailiff attended the public schools of Illinois d Iowa, and after graduating from the Marshall (Illinois) gh School entered the College of Medicine and Surgery Chicago, from which he was graduated with the degree Doctor of Medicine, as a member of the class of 1914. prepare himself further he served as an interne and use physician at the Frances Willard Hospital, Chicago, r eighteen months, and then entered general practice at Chicago, where he was engaged until February, 1918. At at time he entered the Medical Training School at Fort ley, Kansas, where he received the commission of first enant, and was assigned to duty at Fort Des Moines, wa. He remained there only a short time, and was then at overseas, arriving in France in August, 1918, and being tioned at Evacuation Hospital No. 114, on the Argonne ont, where he remained until December, 1918. He was en transferred to Base Hospital No. 81, at Bazailles, er Messe, until May, 1919, when he returned to the ited States and received his honorable discharge at Camp ix. He was recommended for a captain's commission. ollowing the completion of his military service he was ntified with Princeton Hospital of West Virginia until 21, when he located at Mullens. Here he has built up a bstantial and lucrative practice and has established a putation as a thoroughly reliable, capable and learned ember of his calling. He belongs to the various organiza-ons of his profession and keeps fully abreast of the ivancements being made therein. While a resident of Chicago he was made a Master Mason, and now holds embership in Mullens Lodge, A. F. and A. M. He also belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Loyal Order of Moose and the American egion. Worthy civic movements have his full cooperation d support.

Doctor Bailiff married August 14, 1913, Miss Grace eorgia Shoemachker, of Chicago.

DANIEL ROY MOSS. In 1913 there arrived at Mullens a freight car, tucked in one end of which was a small collection of miscellaneous articles destined to form the nucleus for the stock of the first hardware store of this city. The owner, Daniel Roy Moss, had his household goods stored in the other end of the car. Since that time he has experienced the ups and downs of business life, but at all times has applied himself energetically and assiduously to his task, even cheerfully in the face of misfortune, and out of it all has built up a prosperous business, established himself firmly in his own self-confidence and in the esteem of others, and has come to the conclusion that hard work has never injured anyone and that honest methods eventually bring success when backed by good management and industry.

Mr. Moss was born at Keyser, Mineral County, West Virginia, February 10, 1879, and is a son of Herbert and Sallie (Taylor) Moss, the latter of whom died when her son was still a boy. Herbert Moss was born in 1842, and for many years was engaged in the drug business at Front Royal, Virginia, Keyser, West Virginia, and Charleston, but eventually disposed of his holdings and became a "Knight of the grip." He is now one of the veteran traveling salesmen for large dry goods houses, and has an extensive acquaintance and many friendships all over this part of West Virginia. Despite his advanced years he is still hale and hearty and active in body and mind. He is a Union veteran of the war between the states, and in his political allegiance is a staunch democrat.

Daniel Roy Moss received only a public school education, attending at Romney and Mechanicsburg, West Virginia, but made the most of his opportunities, as he always had. At the age of fifteen years he became a delivery boy for the local butcher in the town in which he was living at the time, and when he was only eighteen years old induced the Charleston Street Railway Company to give him work as a conductor on their line. His next experience was with the Payne Shoe Company of Charleston, and when he left that house he went to Beckley, where, with his brother, he founded a modest hardware establishment, known as the Randolph Hardware Company. Later Mr. Moss decided that Mullens offered a better field for the display of his business talents, and he accordingly shipped all of his worldly goods, both mercantile and household, to this city in a single freight car, in which there was also a large wagon. Of this wagon, it may be said in passing, that it was sold on credit shortly after Mr. Moss' arrival in the city, and that a good part of its sale price is still due the hardware merchant. His first sale was an axe, purchased by "Peacheye" Davis, a local character, and the dollar thus taken in was the only one that wandered into the cash drawer all day. He did not allow himself to become discouraged, however, nor did he when his place was destroyed by fire in December, 1917, or when again he was burned out in August, 1918. His faith and labor have been vindicated and rewarded, and today he has a fine store, conducted under the style of the Mullens Hardware and Furniture Company, and a hillside residence that is one of the best in the place. He carries a complete stock of furniture and hardware and has extended his patronage all over the surrounding countryside. Mr. Moss is a democrat in politics, and has taken some active part in public affairs, having served two years as a member of the City Council, with an excellent record for able and conscientious work. As a fraternalist he is a Master Mason and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

In 1907 Mr. Moss was united in marriage with Miss Estella Hudnall, daughter of Samuel Hudnall, of Charleston. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church at Mullens and has been active in its work.

HON. JOHN C. GORDON, M. D. A well-known figure in medical circles of Wyoming County, Dr. John C. Gordon has the mine practice of the Miller Pocahontas Coal Company at Corinne, and has also the responsibility of a large general clientele. In addition to being active as a medical and surgical practitioner he is taking an active and prominent part in civic affairs, and at the present time is discharging the duties connected with the office of mayor. He is able both as a physician and an executive, and has done much to make Corinne a model coal camp.

Doctor Gordon was born at Lafayette, Montgomery County, Virginia, on his father's farm, April 9, 1887, and is a son of Joseph Thomas and Ella (Francis) Gordon. Joseph T. Gordon was a very successful truck gardener and an authority on agricultural subjects, more particularly matters pertaining to watermelons. He was preparing a series of articles on watermelon culture at the time of his early death, in 1902, when he was only forty-eight years of age. He sold the product from his farm at Roanoke, Christiansburg, Blacksburg and in the coal fields, and was widely known as a man of integrity and fair dealing. An advanced thinker, he was deeply interested in educational affairs and always supported the public schools. His religious connection was with the Baptist Church, while Mrs. Gordon, who died in 1905, at thirty-eight years of age, was a Methodist. They were the parents of three sons and three daughters: Frank, who is a telegraph operator in the employ of the Virginian Railroad Company, at Ellett, Virginia; Doctor Joseph, who is a dental practitioner at Kingsport, Tennessee; Pearl, the wife of D. C. Horsley, in the United States Secret Service at Oakland, California; Grace, who is married and living at Birmingham, Alabama; Lillian, who died at the age of thirty-two years, as the wife of W. W. Gardner, of Lafayette, Virginia; and Dr. John C.

John C. Gordon was a lad of fifteen years, with a public school education, at the time of his father's death, when he began to work to assist in the support of his mother and sisters. Being desirous of further educational advantages, he attended high school part of the time and worked hard to pay his way, being a member of an engineering corps on the Virginian Railroad and a cross engineer in the coal fields of Kentucky. Thus he secured the means whereby he was able to enter Bell-Montgomery Academy at Nashville, Tennessee, and in 1908 commenced the study of medicine at the University of Tennessee, Nashville, from which institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1912, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine. At that time he located at Keystone, McDowell County, West Virginia, taking up a mine practice, but after two years removed to Fort Pierce, on the east coast of Florida. After three years he removed to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where he spent one year, going then to Mullens, West Virginia, where he remained until 1921, the time of his advent at Corinne. Doctor Gordon recognizes and practices the highest ethics of his honored profession, and those unable to pay a fee receive his professional services free of charge. During the World war he acted as surgeon for the Wyoming County Draft Board. Doctor Gordon is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has been active in religious work for the past fifteen years. He is a Master Mason at Graham, Virginia, belongs to the Chapter at Princeton, West Virginia, and the Commandery at Mount Hope, this state, and holds membership in the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. As mayor of Corinne he has effected many needed municipal improvements and has discharged the duties of his office in a conscientious and highly efficient manner.

Doctor Gordon married on his birthday, April 9, 1919, Miss Ruth Barnett, daughter of G. A. Barnett, of Lynchburg, Virginia, and to this union there has been born one daughter, Virginia Clifton.

FREDERICK EARL THOMPSON, editor and publisher of The Belington Progressive, has made this vital weekly paper a potent force in furthering the interests of the City of Belington and Barbour County, his father having the active management of the business at the present time, and Frederick E., while having active editorial management, finding further claims upon his attention through his effective work as salesman in Barbour County for the Morris Grocery Company, one of the leading wholesale concerns of Clarksburg, which he has represented since 1917.

Mr. Thompson was born on a farm near Belington, on the 15th of October, 1883, and in the schools of Barbour County he acquired his early education. He attended summer normal schools, and at the age of sixteen years he taught his first term of school, his pedagogic service having continued two years. He finally fortified himself further by taking a course in a business college, and he became stenographer in the office of Kane & Keyer, wholesale dealers in hardware. With this concern he won a vancement to the position of sales manager, and in 1911 he made a wholesome swoop into the local newspaper realm by purchasing the three weekly papers then published at Belington—the Independent, The Central Republican and The Observer, which he promptly merged into The Belington Progressive, of which he has continued the publisher and which he has made a vigorous champion of the prohibition and woman-suffrage causes. Prior to the passage of the national laws eliminating the liquor traffic Mr. Thompson had been actively allied with the prohibition party and had been candidate on its ticket for various local offices. In 1920, on the republican ticket, he was elected to represent Barbour County in the House of Delegates of the State Legislature. In the legislative session of 1921 he was chairman of the committee on privilege and elections, and also of that on enrolled bills, besides having been a member of the printing and contingent expenses committee. He took a stand for economy in the management of state affairs, and fought for the reduction instead of the increase of salaries on the state payroll, besides opposing the creation of new offices which would involve further drain upon the state treasury. He was specially active in championing appropriations for legislation in behalf of the construction of good roads, and previously had made his newspaper the staunch advocate of such improvements. He also advocated in the Legislature liberal policies in connection with the public schools of the state. He was a member of the City Council of Belington when the municipal sewer system and street paving were under way, and he loyally supported these and other progressive movements, including the bond issue for the erection of a new high school building. He has served as city recorder also, and one of the most loyal and progressive men of his home city. Mr. Thompson is a charter member of the local organizations of the Woodmen of the World and the Royal Order of Moose, and he and his wife are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The plant of The Belington Progressive is modern in equipment and facilities, with linotype machine, Babcock cylinder press, two platen presses, and electric and gas-engine power provisions. Its excellent job department was one of the first in Barbour County to take a contract for the printing of a book, and the work was performed in most creditable manner. The Progressive is issued on Thursday of each week, a model in letter press and in its presentation of news of local and general order.

December 25, 1904, recorded the marriage of Mr. Thompson and Miss Lenora Stalnaker, who was born and reared in Barbour County, a daughter of Garrison and Mary A. (Newlon) Stalnaker. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have four children: Wilfred A., Robert E., John A. and Mary Ann.

Francis L. Thompson, father of him whose name initiates this review, was born in Barbour County, in December, 1859, and was a student in one of the first free schools established in the county. He learned in his youth the blacksmith trade under the direction of his father, John B. Thompson, who was a Union soldier in the Civil war as a member of Company F, Fifteenth West Virginia Volunteer Infantry. John B. Thompson was born in Barbour County, where his father, David Thompson, an mother, Polly (Wyatt) Thompson, settled at the time when Gen. Andrew Jackson was President of the United States. David Thompson here purchased an extensive tract of land for which he paid four cents an acre, and his old home was six miles north of the present City of Belington. John B. Thompson married Sarah Ann Jones. Both are dead. John B. died in Taylor County. Their eldest son, Solomon David, became a successful farmer near Moatsville, Barbour County; Francis L. was the second son; Mrs. Mary Ogdin died at Clarksburg, this state; Excella is the wife of M. D. Gainer, of Belington; Donna is the wife of Solomon Skidmore, of Grafton, this state; Alphonso resides at Belington; and General Ord was shot and killed by a desperado while in discharge of his official duties as chief-of-police at Gassaway, West Virginia.

Fred. E. Thompson

Francis L. Thompson, now manager of The Belington Progressive, married Anna Weaver, daughter of William and Ellen (Skidmore) Weaver. The Skidmore family have been one of prominence in this section of West Virginia since the early pioneer days. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Thompson, Frederick Earl, immediate subject of this sketch, is the eldest; Mrs. Edna Richardson resides in Los Angeles, California; Harry D. is engaged in the candy jobbing business at Morgantown; Omer C., a commercial traveling salesman, resides at Belington; W. Wayne, a printer by trade, is a resident of Los Angeles, California; Miss Carol holds a position with the agricultural department of the University of West Virginia; Hugh A. is a linotype operator at Los Angeles, California; Georgia is in the employ of the Belington Light & Water Company; and Roma, Theodore and Sallie, who remain at the parental home, are, in 1922, students in the public schools of Belington.

BUREN HARRISON TOLER. No calling brings into play a more diversified exhibition of capability than that of teaching. In order to rise to any degree of distinction in that profession it is necessary first to possess the natural inclination toward the work, without which it is almost impossible to render efficient service, and superimposed upon this must be an extensive training, coupled with varied and extensive experience. The life of a conscientious teacher is one of self abnegation and sacrifice that finds its chief reward in the realization that young minds are developed properly and characters trained so that in the future, when the stress of life is brought to bear upon them, they are able to meet its demands. Wyoming County has produced some able educators, and prominent among them is Buren Harrison Toler, supervisor of schools of the Slab Fork District, who, while still a young man, has already made rapid strides in his calling.

Mr. Toler was born at Clear Fork (formerly Sun Hill), Wyoming County, West Virginia, February 1, 1895, and is a son of Henry P. and Darthula (Brown) Toler. His grandparents were John and Polly Toler, of old pioneer stock, who came from Mingo County to the wide bottoms of Clear Fork of the Guyandotte in about 1857. Numerous anecdotes have come down regarding this rugged and hot-hearted couple. It is related of Polly Toler, who was related to the famous Hatfield family of feudists, that on one occasion during young widowhood, when she was doing the family washing at the riverside, a deer, pursued by her hunting hounds, managed to find refuge in a narrow foothold on a ledge of rocks under an overhanging cliff on the opposite side of the river. It had been some time since the Toler family had enjoyed venison, and the intrepid Polly, leaping into the water, swam the stream, dragged the deer from the ledge into the water, where she held his head under until he was drowned, and then reswam the stream, towing with her the means of supplying the familyarder with fresh meat. The next day she gave birth to a child. She lived to reach the remarkable age of 100 years, passing away in 1918, while her husband, who reached the age of ninety-five years, died in 1902. They were members of the Methodist Church. Of their large family of children three sons survive: Ellis, a resident of Mingo County, and W. S. and Peter, who live at Sun Hill.

Henry P. Toler was born in 1856, at Sun Hill, Wyoming County, and passed his life in agricultural pursuits, in addition to which he dealt in the timber cut from his land, which he contracted to deliver at the river bank. He was a leader in the Baptist Church, and, like the other Toleres, as well as the Browns, was a staunch republican in politics. He died November 30, 1915. At Oceana, West Virginia, Mr. Toler married Darthula Brown, who was born on Big Buff Creek, Wyoming County, a daughter of Jack Brown, and was the same age and weight as her husband at the time of their marriage. She survives him and lives at the old home on Clear Fork. Of their eleven children seven are still living. W. R., is justice of the peace at Mullens; Lilly died in 1915, as the wife of the late Buoy Goodman; J. Albert, formerly a member of the County Court, later prosecuting attorney, is now engaged in general practice at Mullens; Roxie is the wife of Floyd Graham, living on the old home place at Clear Fork; Cleveland, died as a boy; John H., who went to the Concord Normal School at Athens and the State University, is now principal of the Mullens High School; Eva is the wife of Alfred Moore, of Clear Fork; Buren Harrison; and Cora is the wife of B. Aliff, of Clear Fork.

Buren Harrison Toler secured his early education in a one-room schoolhouse and when he was only thirteen years of age began teaching school at Mill Creek schoolhouse. He subsequently taught two other schools, and then went to Concord Normal School, where his brother John H. was working his way through school by operating the pumping system. Buren H. Toler secured the position of caring for the ladies' dormitory, and by doing this work paid his way through the course and was graduated in 1914. In 1914, 1915 and 1916 he was principal of the Pineville schools, and then entered the State University, but in 1917 resumed teaching at Pineville. In the fall of 1917 he thought that by going to Washington he could be assigned to duty in the aviation service of the United States army, but he was disappointed in this ambition. Accordingly, he volunteered for duty and was assigned to the bacteriological department in the Medical Corps, and after six weeks of training in the Army Medical School at Washington was sent to duty at Fort Leavenworth, where he remained three months. His overseas service began at this time, for he went from Hoboken to St. Nazaire, France, and was then sent to Tours as accountant in the chief surgeon's office. After his return from France he received his honorable discharge at Mitchell's Field, Long Island, May 13, 1919, and his first position after his discharge was as store manager in a road construction camp at Bud, Wyoming County. One month later he was made school supervisor of the Slab Fork school district, a position which he has since retained. He has had charge of the erection of seven schools in his district, including the district high schools at Mullens and Milam Fork, and in various ways has aided the cause of education in this locality, where he is held in high esteem as a progressive and constructive educator and as a citizen who is contributing to the advancement of his native locality.

On June 30, 1919, Mr. Toler was united in marriage with Miss Hazel Dunn, daughter of W. W. Dunn, of Peterstown, West Virginia, and a graduate of Concord Normal School. Mrs. Toler is an active worker in the Methodist Church, while her husband is no less helpful in the Baptist Church. He is a member of Mullens Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and Princeton Chapter, R. A. M., and has served as commander of the local post of the American Legion. In politics he is a republican.

JOHN MARSHALL WOLVERTON. In point of continuous service John Marshall Wolverton is the dean of the Nicholas County Bar. He is the present prosecuting attorney, serving his second term, and for many years has enjoyed an extensive practice in all the courts of this district.

His father was a farmer, and the son grew up on a farm, but was named in honor of the great chief justice, John Marshall, and the name may have had something to do with his choice of a career. Mr. Wolverton was born on the home farm at Big Bend in Calhoun County, West Virginia, January 31, 1872, son of James S. and Eliza Ann (Ferrell) Wolverton. His father was born in 1832 in Taylor County, West Virginia. His mother was born in 1835 at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, and was a child when her parents settled at White Day in Monongalia County, West Virginia. James S. Wolverton was both a farmer and business man at Big Bend in Calhoun County, and for twenty-four years held the office of justice of the peace at that place. He was a democrat. His father, Joab Wolverton, was a Baptist minister, but in the absence of a church of that denomination James S. Wolverton became affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He passed away venerable in years, highly respected and honored and within a month of his eightieth birthday. His widow is now living with her oldest son, Thomas J., on the home farm in Calhoun County. The nine children of these worthy parents were: Helen A., wife of S. G. Yoke, of Morgantown; Thomas J., mentioned above, a bachelor; Lewis C., a farmer also on the homestead; Robert F., deceased; Joab D., an attorney at Long Beach, California; James A., deceased, who died a short time before graduating in medicine; Lillian, who died in infancy; John Marshall, next to the youngest of the family; and Hattie M., wife of Doctor S. W. Riddle, of Mount Zion in Calhoun County.

John Marshall Wolverton grew up in his native county, acquired a common school education, attended the Glenville and Fairmont State Normal schools, and graduated in the Law Department of West Virginia University in 1901, being admitted to the bar at Grantsville, Calhoun County, the same year. Mr. Wolverton practiced law at Grantsville until August 1904, when he moved to Richwood, Nicholas County, and has since been permanently established there. He was a partner of A. L. Craig, under the firm name of Craig and Wolverton, for a number of years, until the retirement of Mr. Craig. Since then he has been associated with Mr. Ayres, and the firm is now Wolverton & Ayres. For three years, until April 1, 1922, W. G. Brown, present state prohibition commissioner, was a member of the firm, under the name of Brown, Wolverton and Ayres.

Mr. Wolverton was elected in 1912 for a term of four years as prosecuting attorney of Nicholas County. He had the distinction of being the only republican elected on the county ticket that year. His efficient service justified in every way the confidence of the people indicated by his election. In 1920 he was again elected prosecuting attorney, and in the line of public duty he also served one term as mayor of Richwood. Mr. Wolverton owns the building where his office is located. It is thoroughly modern, and contains perhaps the best law library in Nicholas County. Mr. Wolverton is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

In December, 1907, he married Laura V. Harold, a native of Nicholas County and daughter of Lanty W. and Laura B. (McNutt) Harold. Her father was a prominent and substantial farmer and stockman of Nicholas County. Four children of Mr. and Mrs. Wolverton were: John Lanty, born April 12, 1913, and died March 31, 1914; Helen, born June 22, 1914; James H. born June 19, 1916; and Barbara Ruth, born September 17 1918.

THOMAS EDGAR KIRTLEY, is general office manager of Kirtley & Company, a firm which has developed an extensive business in the drilling of oil and gas wells in Lincoln and Putnam counties, the offices of the concern being at 1415-16 Miller-Ritter Building in the City of Huntington. The firm was organized in 1907, and the three Kirtley brothers, Thomas E., Wade Hampton and John William, are the principals who constitute the organization.

Thomas E. Kirtley was born at Hurricane, Putnam County, this state, on the 28th of December, 1879, and is a son of Malhom Simms Kirtley, who was born in Virginia, August 16, 1838, and who died at Hurricane, Putnam County, August 18, 1881. Captain Malhoun S. Kirtley lived a life of signal activity and usefulness, he having been in earlier days a successful teacher, and having also served as county superintendent of schools in Putnam county, as well as county engineer. He also became one of the progressive farmers of that county, where he resided from the time of his marriage until his death. He was a captain in the Confederate service in the Civil war, 1861 to 1865, was a staunch democrat, was affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, and he and his wife were members of the Baptist Church. He represented Putnam County in the State Senate for two terms, one at Wheeling and one at Charleston. Mrs. Kirtley, whose maiden name was Edna Frances Dudding, was born at Winsfield, Putnam County, October 11, 1840, and her death occurred at Hurricane, that county, December 1, 1919. Jeanette, eldest of their children, was born November 7, 1861, and died December 31, 1917. She was the wife of Thomas H. Harbour, and both died in Putnam County, where he was a farmer. Woodville, born in 1864, is a merchant at Hurricane. He married Sallie Wingfield, and has two boys and three girls, all living. Della, born December 18, 1866, is the wife of William C. Ely, a retired farmer, and they reside at Huntington. Sallie, born December 28, 1869, married and removed with her husband, William Slagle, to Lafayette, Indiana, where her death occurred October 21, 1892. Wade Hampton, born December 12, 1873, is a member of the firm of Kirtley & Company, and resides at Hurricane and has active charge of the firm's drilling operations, the firm as contractors having developed a very extensive business. He is also manager of the Sovereign Gas Company and vice president of the Hurricane National Bank. Mary Alva, born in 1874, the wife of Thomas H. Garrett, died at Huntington, December 13, 1921. Her husband is still a resident of this city. John William, born July 14, 1877, of the firm of Kirtley & Company, resides at Huntington and has extensive oil and gas interests. Thomas E., of this review, is the youngest of the children.

In the public schools of Hurricane Thomas E. Kirtley continued his studies until he was eighteen years old, and he then learned telegraphy, which he made a vocation two years in the service of the Coal & Coke Railroad, with headquarters at Charleston. Thereafter he served one year as brakeman and one year as freight conductor with this railroad, and he next passed two years as brakeman and conductor with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad, with headquarters at Dayton, Ohio. He then entered the service of the Kanawha & West Virginia Railroad, and after serving three years as passenger-train conductor he held for two years the position of trainmaster. He was then advanced to the office of superintendent of transportation with the same road, with headquarters at Charleston. He retained this position until October, 1916, when he came to Huntington and assumed his present position as office manager of the firm of Kirtley & Company, of which he had been one of the organizers in 1907. He is a director of the Sovereign Gas Company and also of the Huntington Oklahoma Oil Company, which is operating in the states of Oklahoma and Kentucky. He is a stockholder in the Hurricane National Bank and in several successful oil and gas companies operating in the West Virginia fields.

Mr. Kirtley is a staunch advocate of the principles of the democratic party, and in the Masonic fraternity is affiliated with Clendenin Lodge No. 126, A. F. and A. M., at Clendenin, Kanawha County, and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in the City of Charleston, besides which he is a member of Huntington Lodge No. 313, B. P. O. E. He owns his attractive home property at 21 West Fourth Avenue, as well as other real estate in Huntington.

September 26, 1907, recorded the marriage of Mr. Kirtley and Miss Hazel Della Fitzwater, daughter of Albert Fitzwater, who died at Huntington, where his widow still resides, he having here been a carpenter and contractor. Camelia Eloise, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Kirtley, died at the age of two months.

CHARLES L. ALLEN. No better estimate can be made of a man's character than that afforded by the regard in which he is held by those over whom he is placed in authority, especially during periods of controversy between capital and labor. Judged by this standard Charles L. Allen, president and general manager of the Mordue Colliery Company, is one of nature's noblemen and a real friend to his employees. He is liked by all classes, and has the faculty, because of his squireness, his good judgment and his knowledge of human nature, of smoothing out differences and keeping his men loyal when others, possibly just as sincere, fail to keep operating. It is frequently said that if all operators were like Charles L. Allen there would be no strikes.

W. E. Stathers

Charles L. Allen was born in Botetourt County, Virginia, August, 1878, a son of Robert and Anna (Wilson) Allen, and grandson of John J. Allen, judge of the Supreme Court of Virginia, and an author of note. The grandfather, Robert Allen, was judge of the Circuit Court of Virginia. The Allens are of Scotch descent, but long established in Virginia, where they have taken a commanding part in public affairs. Robert Allen, father of Charles L. Allen, was an attorney in active practice prior to the war of the '60s, in which he served as captain of Company A, Twenty-eighth Virginia Infantry, Pickett's division, and served until the close of the war without being either wounded or captured. Following the close of his conflict he retired to his farm, where he spent the greater part of his life, although he practiced law to a certain extent, and died in 1882. The mother is still living.

Charles L. Allen attended the common schools of his native county, and took the regular course in the Buchanan High School, from which he was graduated in 1895, following which he went to the Virginia Polytechnic, and was graduated therefrom in 1899, with the degree of Civil Engineer. His first position was that of engineer with the Acheson, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, doing construction work at Beaumont, Texas, and he held it for three years, and then came to West Virginia and was in charge of the construction work of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad until 1907. Mr. Allen then went with the New River Coal Company, and had charge of their construction work for one for S. H. Scott & Company, and in 1909 returned to the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad and was in charge of all of their construction work in Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio, and at one time was engaged on location work on their line into Chicago. In 1917 Mr. Allen came to Boone County and organized the Mordue Colliery company, as president and general manager, and has conducted it ever since, having developed his property into a valuable one. During the war he, like all of the coal operators, did all he could to increase his production.

In 1909 Mr. Allen married at Beckley, Raleigh County, West Virginia, Miss Josephine Lewis, a daughter of Joel and Susan (McDowell) Lewis, West Virginians. Mr. and Mrs. Allen have no children. They are Episcopalians. He is a Blue-Lodge Mason and is going on in his fraternity as soon as he can find time to do so. Professionally he belongs to the American Civil Engineers Society and the American Mining & Metallurgy Society. Since he cast his first vote Mr. Allen has been a democrat, and while not a politician, takes a deep interest in the success of his party.

Mr. Allen is not a man of many words. He prefers to express himself in deeds, and to exert his influence in a quiet, sensible way, giving his men a fair deal, and listening to their requests. Experienced in his line of work, he understands its needs, its dangers and its possibilities, and can appreciate the ambitions of the miners, yet at the same time, possessing as he does their confidence, he can show them just how far he can go, and prove to them that is really his limit. The men appreciate his attitude, and are willing to meet him half way in any controversy. Were there more men like him some of the unfortunate episodes in the mining industry would have never occurred. His value to his industry and his community is of great moment, and his example cannot help but prove uplifting to both the operators and miners alike.

WALTER E. STATHERS, M. D. Though little more than a boy at the time Doctor Stathers served a year as a soldier in the Civil war. After the war he completed his medical education, and for thirty years or more was engaged in a busy practice. Since retiring from his profession he has lived at Buckhannon and has used his capital chiefly in the oil industry.

Doctor Stathers was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, June 6, 1848, son of Robert and Nancy (Hill) Stathers and grandson of John and Mary (Jennings) Stathers, who were born and married in England and came to the United States in 1823, settling in Washington County, Pennsylvania, where they were substantial and prosperous farmers the rest of their lives. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and John Stathers was a whig in politics. Robert Stathers was reared and educated in Washington County, and after his marriage he moved to Tyler County, West Virginia, in 1851. For a few years he engaged in merchandising, and then bought a farm and was engaged in its cultivation the rest of his years. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge, was a republican, and served as a soldier in Company C of the Sixth West Virginia Infantry, the same regiment with which his son, Doctor Stathers, served. Nancy Hill, the mother of Doctor Stathers, was a daughter of Robert Hill, and her grandfather Hill came from County Down, Ireland, and settled in Washington County, Pennsylvania, before the American Revolution, the place of his settlement being afterward known as Hillboro. Robert Hill was in the War of 1812, and his wife's brother lost a leg in the battle of New Orleans.

Dr. Walter E. Stathers was reared near Centerville, West Virginia, being three years of age when the family moved to this state. He attended the old subscription schools, and was sixteen years of age when he went into the army, serving during the last year of the war. After returning home he finished his education, and is a graduate in medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, and from the New York Polyclinic. Doctor Stathers practiced for ten years in Tyler County, and then moved to Wheeling, and in 1897 took charge of the West Virginia Hospital. From 1901 to 1904 he lived in Clarksburg, and in the latter year came to Buckhannon, where he has made no effort to resume medical practice, but has been successfully interested in the oil industry and in looking after his investments.

Doctor Stathers married Mary Smith, a native of Tyler County, West Virginia. She became the mother of James, Silas, Fred and Birk. James was a soldier in the Spanish-American war, and he and his brother Fred are dentists by profession. Silas is a geologist and Birk a lawyer. After the death of the mother of these children Doctor Stathers married Virginia Whiteside, and they have two sons, William and Hugh, the former an attorney at Clarksburg and the latter a student of law in West Virginia University at Morgantown. Mrs. Stathers is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Doctor Stathers is a Knights Templar Mason and Shriner, a member of Nemesis Temple, and five of his sons are members of the same Shrine Temple. Birk S. Stathers being a past potentate. Dr. Stathers is a republican in politics.

ENSOR R. DUNSFORD, superintendent of the Buffalo-Thacker Coal Company at Ottawa, Boone County, is a graduate mining engineer and has had an extensive experience in practical mining operations in different parts of the world.

He was born at Lindsay, Ontario, Canada, August 21, 1887, son of John Landon and Margaret (Clark) Dunsford. The Dunsford family came from Devonshire, England. His parents were natives of Canada, and in 1890 moved to Columbus, Ohio, where John L. Dunsford was for many years in the real estate business. He is now living retired in Florida. He is a Mason and for a number of years was superintendent of the Sunday school of the Episcopal Church.

Ensor R. Dunsford was educated in the grammar and high schools of Columbus, and in 1911 graduated with the degree of Mining Engineer from Ohio State University. During the following year he was with the Sunday Creek Coal Company at Long Acre and the Darby Coal Mining Company at Darby, Virginia. For three years he traveled all over the United States, Canada and South Africa, as representative of the Myers-Whaley Company of Knoxville, Tennessee, manufacturers of loading machines for underground work. Then for two years he had charge of the Gypsum mines of the Victoria Gypsum Mining and Manufacturing Company at Saint Ann, Nova Scotia. On returning to the United States in 1917 Mr. Dunsford became superintendent at Ottawa, West Virginia, for the Monte Coal Company, and when that business was sold to the Buffalo-Thacker Coal Company he continued as superintendent for the new owners.

At Columbus, Ohio, in 1912, he married Miss Aline Carder, daughter of Thomas H. and Caroline (Zimmerman) Carder, natives of Ohio. They have two children, Ellis Aline and Ruth Helen Dunsford. Mr. Dunsford is a Presbyterian, is a Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner and a member of the Knights of Pythias.

JOHN WALLACE BISCHOFF. A long connection with and extensive experience in the coal industry have made John Wallace Bischoff, general manager of the West Virginia Coal and Coke Company, one of the best-informed men in the industry in West Virginia. Mr. Bischoff, who has been a resident of Elkins since 1908, was still a lad when he received his introduction to the business, and since then has risen steadily through the various departments and positions, his experience having been of a practical character and covering a number of states.

Mr. Bischoff was born at Westernport, Maryland, January 4, 1877, a son of John and Ellen Catherine (Heckert) Bischoff. His great-grandfather was John Bischoff, a native of Pennsylvania, where the family was well known for a number of years. His grandfather, also named John Bischoff, was born in Maryland, and married Eunice Twombly, they subsequently removing to what is now Preston County, West Virginia. Samson Heckert, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Bischoff, was born in Preston County, West Virginia, and married a Miss Sell. The Bischoffs and Heckerts are both of German lineage.

John Bischoff, the father of John Wallace Bischoff, was born in Preston County, West Virginia, where he was reared and educated, and married Ellen Catherine Heckert, a native of the same community. Later they removed to Maryland and for a time lived at Westernport, but in the spring of 1882 returned to West Virginia and located at Elk Garden, which was their home until 1904, in which year they went to Springfield, Ohio. There the father died when seventy-seven years of age, being survived by his widow, who is a resident of Cumberland, Maryland. When still a young man John Bischoff served in the State Militia, with the rank of colonel, and his title always remained with him. As a youth he had learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for a number of years, but about 1876 turned his attention to coal mining, which vocation occupied him during the remainder of his active years. He and his wife were the parents of eight children, of whom John Wallace is the fifth in order of birth.

John Wallace Bischoff was but five years of age when his parents located at Elk Garden, West Virginia, and there he attended the public schools. At the age of twelve years he began working in the coal mines during the summer months, but did not neglect his education, as he attended school during the winter terms. In 1894 he entered the Ohio State University, where he pursued a course in mining engineering, and was graduated with his accredited degree with the class of 1899. For one year thereafter he was a civil engineer for a coal mining concern at Thomas, West Virginia, and afterward held a like position for a short period at Clarksburg. He was then employed in a similar manner in the coal fields of Kentucky and later in Montana, and in December, 1908, came to Elkins and became assistant chief engineer of the West Virginia Coal and Coke Company. He was later made general superintendent of this concern, and in 1919 was promoted to his present post as general manager. He is accounted one of the experts in his line and his labors have been prolific of results.

In 1903 Mr. Bischoff was united in marriage with Miss Bess Sapp, of Preston County, West Virginia, and they have one daughter, Margaret Ellen, who is being given excellent educational advantages. Mr. Bischoff is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, a Knight Templar and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine, and also holds membership in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He lends his support to all worthy community movements and has a well-established reputation as a reliable, constructive and public-spirited citizen.

ROBERT LEE HUNTER, M. D. Not only has Dr. Robert Lee Hunter lived up to the highest ideals of his profession in his private practice, but when this country was at war he offered his services, responded to the call and, leaving his large practice, went into the army and remained with it until he was honorably discharged. While he is at present carrying on a general practice, he has given much attention to children's diseases and skin troubles in his post-graduate work, and is planning to soon devote all of his time to these special branches. During all of his practice he has been located at Jarrolds Valley, which is the oldest settlement in this part of the state, having been in existence long before the development of the mining interests in this locality.

Doctor Hunter was born at Dry Creek, Raleigh County, West Virginia, June 13, 1881, a son of Lewis and Arminta (Honaker) Hunter, natives of West Virginia and Tazewell County, West Virginia, respectively. Lewis Hunter was a teacher and farmer, and one of the leading men of Raleigh County. For two terms he served the county as deputy sheriff, and for one term held the office of sheriff. His death occurred some years ago.

The preliminary training of Doctor Hunter was acquired in the common schools of Raleigh County, and he was prepared for teaching at Beckley. After securing his certificate he engaged in teaching for a short time, but found the work was not congenial, and so took up the study of medicine, and, going to Louisville, became a student of the University of Louisville, from which he was graduated in 1907, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. After a preliminary experience of about a year with Doctor Pettry at Dorothy, West Virginia, and ten months in Martin County, Kentucky, Doctor Hunter established himself permanently at Jarrolds Valley. When the mines were opened here he became their physician, and so continued until the expansion of his private practice made it impossible for him to attend the cases other than as a part of his own clientele. In 1917 Doctor Hunter took post-graduate work at Atlanta, Georgia, at the Emory University, and in 1920 at the Southern Post-Graduate Medical Department of the University of California. During the late war Doctor Hunter entered the medical department, was called to the service in October, 1918, and went to Base Hospital at Camp Sevier, South Carolina, as a first lieutenant, and remained there until December 14, 1918, when he was honorably discharged and returned home on December 20. He is still a first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps.

In 1908 Doctor Hunter married at Jarrolds Valley Lula May Jarrell, a daughter of G. M. and Mollie (Farley) Jarrell, both natives of West Virginia, and farming people. Doctor and Mrs. Hunter have one daughter, Triscilla. Doctor Hunter belongs to the Presbyterian Church. He is a Chapter Mason, and is going on in his fraternity. Politically he gives his support to the candidates of the democratic party. An earnest, resourceful and carefully-trained practitioner, he has been eminently successful, and there is no doubt but that when his plans are carried out, will achieve distinction in the special branches to which he has given so much thought and study. His personal following is large, and his patients hold him in grateful regard, for to them he is more than simply their medical man, he is a friend and a tower of strength in times of great trouble.

ALBERT FRANKLIN BLACK. Back of every industrial and commercial enterprise of each community, standing as a bulwark of strength to safeguard the community's finances, are the banks of the country. As long as they are solvent a general bankruptcy is impossible. Therefore it is eminently important that the men placed at the heads of these institutions should be possessed of unusual character and strength of purpose, for upon them, their sound judgment and wise management the very life and prosperity of the whole nation depend. The directors of the banks of Lincoln County have borne these facts in view and made a careful selection of their officials, and one who belongs in the foremost ranks of astute and conservative financiers is Albert Franklin Black, president of the Farmers & Merchants Bank at Hamlin.

J. W. Bischoff

Albert Franklin Black is a young man for his responsible position, for he is not much over forty, having been born at Myra Post Office, Lincoln County, June 18, 1880, and he is a son of William Fletcher and Adeline (Ashford) Black, both natives of West Virginia, of Virginia stock. William Fletcher Black for a number of years played a dominant part in Lincoln county affairs, being in business as a merchant, real-estate dealer and extensive operator in timber, saw-milling and lumbering. Later he became president of the County Court, and at all times he was very active in church work, serving on the board of the local Methodist Episcopal Church, and as a class leader for a long period.

Leaving school at the age of eighteen years, Albert Franklin Black began to be self-supporting, working for a lumber corporation on Aarons Creek, in a clerical position, later becoming manager of the store of Smith & Black of that region, and eighteen months later buying into this firm. Subsequently he became a member of the firm of W. F. Black & Sons of Myra Post Office, and was manager of its general store until 1915. In 1908 he became interested in the development of the oil and gas field near Myra, and, securing leases on the property, is now a stockholder of the Octo Oil Company of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, formerly Elkins & Swisher, whom he served for three years as manager during the time this firm was putting in wells and developing the property. In 1916 Mr. Black acquired other lease holdings, and organized the Laurel Development Company, in which he still has large interests, and is its secretary. This last named concern is a very good-paying company. In 1919 Mr. Black organized the Phoenix Oil and Gas Company and acquired some excellent properties. Finding that this company was not big enough to handle the business, he re-organized it under the name of the United Oil & Gas Company, both West Virginia corporations. In 1921 the United Oil & Gas Company sold to the Superior Oil & Gas Company of Huntington, West Virginia, and Mr. Black is treasurer of the last named corporation, which same office he held with all of the other companies mentioned. When he began the organization and promotion of these companies he publicly stated it was with the intention of developing the natural resources and promoting the interests of Lincoln County, and during the years which have intervened has succeeded way beyond his original expectations. Mr. Black, however, has not confined his efforts to the oil field, for the first company organized by him was the Lincoln County Telephone Company, which built lines between Sheridan in the Guyan Valley through the Myra and Griffiths oil fields, and this company is still in operation. In 1919 Mr. Black organized the Farmers & Merchants Bank at Hamlin, and opened its doors for business June 23, 1919.

Not alone as a promoter of industrial and commercial interests does Mr. Black serve his community, for he is very much interested in Sunday School work and was president of the Lincoln County Sunday School Board during the period between 1912 to 1916, inclusive. He is a very zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Fraternally he maintains membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias.

On Thanksgiving Day, 1907, Mr. Black was united in marriage with Miss June Adkins, of Lincoln County, a daughter of Edward Adkins, a native of West Virginia, who was a farmer and was also extensively engaged in logging operations in the timber. Mr. and Mrs. Black have five children, namely: Ruby Gladys, Janice Marie, Albert Jennings, Alta Lee and William Edward. Mr. Black is a man of great initiative and foresight, and possesses the courage of his convictions. However, he feels that the secret of his remarkable success may lie in the fact that in all of his undertakings he has had at heart the betterment of his native county and the material advancement of its people, and that his own prosperity has come because of his determination to render in all of his work a real service to his fellows. His standing is of the highest, his motives are unquestioned, and he stands today as one of the most public-spirited and successful men of his time and locality.

HON. HARRY C. WOODYARD, whose service in Congress as representative of the Fourth West Virginia District has at once been characterized by repeated re-election and by extreme fidelity to the duties and responsibilities of his office, is a resident of Spencer, where for many years he was active in business affairs.

He was born at Spencer, November 13, 1867, son of William and Isabelle Woodyard. William Woodyard was born in West Virginia, spent the greater part of his life as a merchant at Spencer, was a Union soldier at the time of the Civil war, and died at Paris, Illinois, in 1896. His wife, Isabelle Chapman, was born at Great Barrington, Massachusetts, and died at Detroit, Michigan. Her father, Henry Chapman, was in his time a well known physician and surgeon at Spencer.

Harry Chapman Woodyard was reared and married at Spencer, and early took up a railroad career as a telegraph operator with the Ravenswood, Spencer and Glenville, now a part of the Baltimore & Ohio system. While in this service he was station agent at Spencer several years. Following that he was in the wholesale grocery and lumber business at Spencer, became vice president of the Roane County Bank, and has had other extensive interests in this section. He has long been an influential figure in republican politics of the state. He was elected and served four years, 1896-1900, as a member of the State Senate from the Fourth Senatorial District. He was candidate for the 57th Congress in 1900 and treasurer of the State Committee of West Virginia that year. In 1902 he was elected to represent the Fourth West Virginia District in the 58th Congress, and served consecutively eight years, through the 59th, 60th and 61st Congresses. In 1910 he was defeated as a candidate for re-election by John M. Hamilton. Then, in 1916, he was chosen to fill the unexpired term of Judge Hunter H. Moss, Jr., in the 64th Congress, and is a member of the 65th Congress and has been re-elected in 1918 and again in 1920. Some of his most important work in Congress has been as a member of the committee on post offices and post roads.

Harry C. Woodyard married Emma Douglas, who was born near Clarksburg in Harrison County in 1870. They have three sons. Edward Douglas, born October 13, 1896, was in the ordnance department of the military establishment at Washington during the World war, and is now associated with his brother, William, in the management of the Spencer Times-Record. The youngest son is Henry C., Jr., born June 6, 1899, manager of the Simmons Woodyard Automobile Company at Spencer.

WILLIAM WOODYARD, business manager of The Times-Record at Spencer, is a son of Congressman Harry C. Woodyard.

William Woodyard was born at Spencer September 13, 1894, and was liberally educated, graduated in 1911 from the military school, Nazareth Hall, in Pennsylvania, and also attended the University of West Virginia four years. On June 7, 1917, he was commissioned a Lieutenant in the Ordnance Corps, and for one year was in service at Iliion, New York, and another year in Chicago. He was promoted to captain, and received his honorable discharge in October, 1919.

In January, 1920, Captain Woodyard became business manager of The Times-Record. This paper was founded in 1888 by E. H. Flynn, under the name the Roane County Record. Later S. A. Simmons established The Spencer Times, and the two were consolidated in 1911 as The Times-Record. At the consolidation Congressman Woodyard acquired a half interest in the paper, and since January 1, 1920, has been sole proprietor, but while in Congress turns over the business and editorial management to his sons, Edward D. Woodward, acting as editor and William as business manager. It is a republican newspaper, one of the leading journals in influence in this section of the state, and has a large circulation over Roane and surrounding counties.

William Woodyard, who is unmarried, is a republican, a member of the Presbyterian Church, Maria Lodge No. 38, F. and A. M., at Spencer, Spencer Chapter No. 42, R. A. M., West Virginia Consistory No. 1 of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, and Nemesis Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Parkersburg, and the Rotary Club of Spencer. He lives at the Woodyard suburban home a mile northwest of Spencer.

HENRY GILMER was the able and honored dean of the bar of Greenbrier County at the time of his death, which occurred at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland, on the 1st of April, 1922. He honored his profession and his native state by his sterling personal character and his large and worthy achievement, and he was numbered among the distinguished lawyers and influential citizens of his native county at the time when his life came to its end.

Mr. Gilmer was born on a farm near Lewisburg, judicial center of Greenbrier County, August 8, 1858, and was a son of Samuel A. B. and Sallie E. (Callison) Gilmer, the latter having been a daughter of Colonel Elisha Callison, who came from Tennessee and settled in Greenbrier County in 1802. He became one of the leading pioneer citizens of this section of the present state of West Virginia, and served as a representative in the Virginia Legislature. Samuel A. B. Gilmer came to Lewisburg about the year 1850, as a young man, and here he became editor and publisher of the old Lewisburg Chronicle. Older residents of the county recall him as a man of exceptional ability and sterling character. His sympathies and convictions led him ardently to espouse the cause of the Confederate States, and when the Civil war began he became a lieutenant in the Greenbrier Rifles. This fine organization became a part of the brigade commanded by Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, and he continued in active service until he suffered an attack of typhoid fever, to which he succumbed in January, 1862, his widow having survived him a number of years and Henry Gilmer, of this review, having been the last survivor of their family of three sons.

Henry Gilmer was reared at Lewisburg to the age of seventeen years, and then removed to the farm owned by his mother near this place. In the meanwhile he had profited fully by the advantages afforded in the local schools, and he early determined to prepare himself for the legal profession, his study of law having been initiated when he was but sixteen years old. At Lewisburg he continued his studies under the able preceptorship of Judge H. A. Holt and Judge Adam C. Snyder, and in 1884, after passing examination with high ranking, he was admitted to the bar of his native state. Thereafter he continued in the active practice of his profession at Lewisburg until the close of his life. From an appreciative estimate that appeared in a Lewisburg newspaper at the time of his death are taken the following extracts:

"Mr. Gilmer was always a democrat in politics and took an active and forceful part in his party's councils and campaigns. He was recognized as one of the most forceful and logical speakers in the state, whether on the stump, before a jury, or in an Appellate Court. As prosecuting attorney of Greenbrier County he served two terms, and in 1904 he was the nominee of his party for judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals. He was later the democratic nominee for circuit judge of the Greenbrier-Pocahontas Circuit, in 1912, but met defeat with the rest of the party ticket. Thereafter he devoted his entire time to his large and varied legal practice in the State and Federal courts. Just prior to his death there developed a strong call for him to become a candidate for Congress in the Sixth District, against Congressman Echols.

"Mr. Gilmer was a man of much ability and unique of character. Few men in West Virginia were better known or more admired."

On the 5th of December, 1895, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Gilmer and Miss Bettie Gabbert, daughter of Charles and Martha (Sammons) Gabbert, of Greenbrier County. Mrs. Gilmer survives her honored husband, as do also two sons and three daughters: Ileta, Stella (wife of Dr. R. B. Whittaker, of North Carolina), Samuel A. Harry and Bessie. Samuel A., who is now a resident of Huntington, this state, served in the World war as a lieutenant in the Fifty-sixth United States Infantry, and was with his command in active service in France some what more than one year, he having escaped injury save that he was slightly gassed.

ALEXANDER H. GOAD. Fitted by genius as well as by experience for the business of merchandising, Alexander H. Goad has handled successful enterprises in several localities and for the past six years has been an active figure in the grocery and real estate business at Charleston.

Mr. Goad was born and reared in Clay County, West Virginia, and his parents were natives of the same county. His grandfather, Alexander H. Goad, Sr., came from old Virginia to Clay County in 1851. He served as high sheriff of that county, and is one of the best known citizens there. He died at the age of eighty-eight. Jeremiah Goad, father of the Charleston merchant, spent many years as a timber man, getting out logs for lumber companies, and he is now living retired there. He married Mary Walker, who died in 1894.

Alexander H. Goad for one year was a merchant in the coal mining town of Cooper's Creek in Kanawha County and then conducted a store at Pinch, an oil town. Success attended both of these propositions, but in 1916 he moved to a larger field in Charleston, and in six years time has built up a flourishing business as a grocery merchant at 1422 Crescent Road. This is a business demanding five employees. He has also handled real estate, both on a commission basis and for himself. He began dealing in realty as a young man. He is a member of the Charleston Real Estate Board.

In 1900 he married Miss Donna Precious, of Clay County. They have two children, Arthur Herman, attending the Lincoln High School, and Mary Josephine, born in 1917. Mr. Goad is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Moose, and the Junior Order United American Mechanics.

GEORGE R. KREBS has gained prestige as one of the able and successful civil and mining engineers in his native state of West Virginia, and maintains his home and professional headquarters in the City of Charleston.

Mr. Krebs was born at New Martinsville, Wetzel County, this state, on the 5th of March, 1872, and there he acquired his early education. In preparation for his chosen profession he entered the University of West Virginia, in which he completed a scientific course that included thorough instruction in civil and mining engineering, he having graduated as a member of the class of 1899, with the degree of B. S. He forthwith became associated with railroad construction service, and in 1899-1900 was resident engineer for the White Oak Railroad, a branch of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad extending from Glen Jean to Oakwood. In 1901-2 he was identified with the construction of the "Rand's Scenic Railroad," this work being one of the most difficult ever attempted in railroad construction to afford facilities for coal-mining operations in West Virginia. For two years Mr. Krebs was superintendent of mines for the New River Coal Company, for which he had charge of the construction of shafts, drifts, tipples, etc. In 1910 he became junior member of the firm of Clark & Krebs, which has developed a large and important professional and constructive business in the domain of mining engineering. In its operations the firm at times finds it essential to employ numerous assistants, entailing a payroll output of fully $8,000 a month.

Mr. Krebs is a member of the Alumni Association of the University of West Virginia, in which institution he became affiliated with the Sigma Chi fraternity, and he is an active member of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce, as well as of the Lions Club of this city. In the Masonic fraternity he has received the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite and is a noble of the Mystic Shrine. His wife, whose maiden name was Lettie Carr, is a daughter of the ate Dr. C. Carr, of Clay, Clay County. Mr. and Mrs. Krebs have four children: Grenville R., Donnie, Mary Dean and Helen. In the World war period Grenville R. Krebs was in the aviation service of the United States Navy for a period of three years. Mr. and Mrs. Krebs are affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, being members of the Humphreys Memorial Church. Mrs. Krebs is an active worker in the Order of the Eastern Star. She has served as secretary for the past eight years of that order. He is also an active worker in her church and its various organizations.

Henry Linder

ALBA VERN JOHNSON. South Charleston, one of the youngest and most vigorous industrial towns in the state, has had its big growth during the last five or six years. Several of the large industries have plants there, and the city is a distinct municipality from Charleston. In this community A. V. Johnson located in 1918 as a druggist, has built up a very profitable business in that line, and has become a leader in town affairs.

Mr. Johnson was born in Meigs County, Ohio, and since an early age has been making his own way in the world. He graduated in 1902 from the College of Pharmacy at Cincinatti, Ohio. He first came to West Virginia in 1906, and for a year was a pharmacist with the Fields Pharmacy. He was then absent from the state until 1917, and ten years of that time he conducted a drug business in Western Texas, in Reeves County. Shortly after returning to West Virginia in 1917, he opened a well stocked and attractive drug store in South Charleston. He is also the principal owner of the Dillingham Lumber Company, operating a saw mill on Blue Creek, West Virginia. This plant has a capacity of 150,000 feet of lumber per month, and the lumber is manufactured from timber owned by the company and is sold at wholesale. Mr. Johnson has also been a director since the organization of the First National Bank of South Charleston, of which Quince Jones is president.

He is a member of the City Council, and was recently elected to that body. He is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, also a York Rite Mason and Shriner, being affiliated with the various bodies at Charleston.

In his native county Mr. Johnson married Miss Ethel Wright. They have had the following children: Elsworth, Frederick Wright, deceased, A. V., Jr., Theodore and Geraldine.

CHARLES A. GATES. An acute, cool-headed man of business may command respect because of his great capacity for managing vast enterprises and his power to change circumstances and conditions to suit his will, and may have chosen associates others of like caliber and similar power and interests; but in order to secure the confidence and esteem of his fellowmen he must have other qualities of a sturdier fiber. This applies particularly to Charles A. Gates, of Charleston, who for so long a time was prominently identified with affairs of the most vital business interests in the city. In control of important concerns for years, he proved his business sagacity and foresight beyond question, and at the same time his interest in everything calculated to advance the general welfare was such as to gain him unqualified respect and friendship.

Mr. Gates was born April 21, 1858, in Ohio, and came to Charleston in 1883. Here he founded a retail grocery business of which he was the head for twenty-eight and one-half years, during which time he built it up to be the leader of its kind in the city. The C. A. Gates Grocery Company, Incorporated, was located at 110 Capitol Street, in the Gates Building, which he had purchased, and he continued as its active head until 1910, in which year he sold out and turned his attention to the production of oil and dealing in real estate. In company with John Davidson he organized companies conducting development operations in Ohio and West Virginia, especially on Blue Creek in the latter state, and dealt extensively in real estate properties. He is still interested in oil production, is the owner of the Gates Building at Charleston and is a director in the Citizens National Bank, but makes his winter home at Fort Pierce, Florida, and is busily engaged in managing his 160-acre orange grove. Mr. Gates has always been a supporter of all worthy movements of a civic, commercial and educational character, and is an active member of the Kanawha Presbyterian Church, in which he served as treasurer and member of the Board of Trustees for many years.

At Wheeling, West Virginia, Mr. Gates married Miss Clara I. Cole, who was reared at Wheeling, and they became the parents of two children: Mabel L., who is the wife of Mason Crickard, assistant cashier of the Union Trust Company of Charleston; and Charles B., both born at Charleston.

Charles B. Gates attended the public schools of Charleston, following which he pursued a special law course at Washington and Lee University, then becoming associated with his father in his various interests. He is accounted one of the energetic and capable business men of his city. During the World war he was commissioned a first lieutenant of field artillery in the First Officers' Training Camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Indiana, but did not see overseas duty, his service being confined to various camps in this country, including Camp Jackson, South Carolina. Mr. Gates married Miss Harriet K. Hostetter, of Hanover, Pennsylvania, and they have one son, Charles B., Jr.

S. C. GROSE taught his first term of school twenty-three years ago. While teaching he completed his own educational program in the University, and since 1915 has been superintendent of the schools of Parsons, where his work has been of a quality that has brought forth many expressions of praise.

Mr. Grose was born on a farm in Meade District of Upshur County, November 19, 1880, and comes of a family of agricultural people, he and one brother being the only representatives in the educational profession. His grandfather, Samuel Grose, was a native of Pennsylvania, and after his marriage to Miss Ateman, moved to Warm Springs, Virginia. Their children were: William, who died before the Civil war; John A.; Jacob, who died young; George, a resident of Lorentz, West Virginia; Catherine, who married James Brake; Anna, who became the wife of John L. Loudin; Paulina, who married Charles Thorpe; and Mrs. Sarah Potts.

John A. Grose, father of the Parsons school superintendent, was born at Warm Springs, Virginia, in 1838. While he had a meager education himself, he was much concerned in the proper education of his own children. At the opening of the Civil war he entered the Union Army as a member of the Tenth West Virginia Infantry, and served under both General Custer and General Sheridan. He took part in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Spottsylvania, Fisher's Hill, the Shenandoah campaign, involving the battles of Winchester and Cedar Creek, and was in the concluding phases of the war under General Grant around Richmond. He was a private soldier and was slightly wounded a few hours before the close of the struggle, at Appomattox. After the war he devoted himself to his farm in Upshur County, where he lived until his death. In 1876, in that county, he married Nancy Jane Allman, who was born there in 1852, daughter of Abram and Barbara (Cutright) Allman. She had a brother, Isaac Allman, and a sister, Mrs. Phoebe Grose. John A. Grose and wife had the following children: Edward R., a teacher of science in the Glenville State Normal School of West Virginia; S. C. Grose; Arthur, a farmer at Sago in Upshur County; Wilbur, also a farmer at Sago; and Anna, wife of Charles Cutright, of Sago.

S. C. Grose spent the first nineteen years of his life on his father's farm in Upshur County, and he had an increasing share in the labors of the field and only such advantages as were supplied by the local schools. At nineteen he began teaching, and after two terms of rural school work entered college, in the Preparatory Department of the University, and while attending there taught two more terms of country school and following his course another term of rural school. Following that he was principal of the schools of Cairo, West Virginia, for six years, but each summer he returned to the University of Morgantown and in 1911 he enrolled in the University for continued work until he finished his course and received his A. B. degree in 1913. The next two years he was principal of the High School at Flemington, and in 1915 he was called to be superintendent of the Parsons School as successor to S. B. Hatton.

While at Parsons Mr. Grose has made some distinctive additions to the school course and the general elevation of the school system there. He has introduced courses in teachers training, commercial, vocational agriculture and manual training, and Parsons now has a High School with a four year course. Two classes had been graduated from the high school before Mr. Grose became superintendent. The graduates are now qualified to enter any school or college in the state without examination, and it is also on the list of accredited high schools, a graduation there being recognized by all the Universities and Colleges of the country. Since Mr. Grose became superintendent many graduates have continued their higher education for teaching and other professions.

Mr. Grose is deeply interested in every subject connected with the proper training of youth for the serious duties of life, not only in school, but in connection with rural life and sociology and is an active member of several educational associations, being president of the Tucker County Teachers Association. During the World war he took an active part in contributing to the success of the Red Cross and Liberty Loan drives, doing much speaking in behalf of these patriotic causes. For several summers his time has been occupied with teachers institutes, and in the summer of 1922 he had charge of the approved summer school work for teachers at Parsons.

At Harrisville, West Virginia, June 21, 1913, Mr. Grose married Miss Nelle Fowler, who was born at Harrisville, daughter of Jasper N. and Florence (Hayhurst) Fowler. Her father is still living at his home farm near Harrisville. Mrs. Grose is a graduate of the rural schools, spent two years in the Glenville State Normal and also took summer work in West Virginia University. She began teaching at the age of seventeen, and her last school was in the grades at Harrisville. Mr. and Mrs. Grose have three children: John Andrew, born in 1915; Rosa Nelle, born in 1918; and Florence Margaret, born in 1920.

Mr. Grose is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Junior Order United American Mechanics, and Mrs. Grose is a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. He became a stockholder at the organization of the Philippi Blanket Mill at Parsons in 1922.

ROBERT SUMMERS NEELY, D. D. S., is engaged in the successful practice of his profession at Hinton, judicial center of Summers County, and he is one of the progressive and influential young men of his native county, where the year 1922 finds him in active service as chairman of the republican county committee.

Doctor Neely was born at Pipestem, this county, May 22, 1890, and is a son of Levi Matteson Neely and Alice Virginia (Martin) Neely, both likewise natives of Summers County, where the respective families were founded many years ago. William R. Neely, paternal grandfather of the doctor, was born in Indiana and became one of the successful pioneer farmers of Summers County, West Virginia. Richard Martin, maternal grandfather of Doctor Neely, was a loyal soldier of the Union in the Civil war, and is now one of the venerable and honored citizens of Hinton. Levi M. Neely was reared and educated in Summers County, and has long been numbered among the successful exponents of farm industry in Pipestem District. He is a stalwart republican, and his religious faith is that of the Baptist Church. His first wife, Alice V., died in 1901, at the age of thirty-five years, and later he was united in marriage with Mrs. Willie Neely, a widow. Of his eight children six are living: William Clyde and Richard Claude are twins, and they are associated in the clothing business at Hinton, individual mention of them being made on other pages of this volume; Dr. Robert S., of this review, was the next in order of birth; Zina Carl is a business man in Hinton; Mabel is the wife of William C. Eubanks, of Huntington; Dewey G. is a clerk in the clothing store of his brothers; Luther F., who died in 1906, at the age of twenty-three years, was at the time engaged in the contracting business at Kansas City, Missouri; and Herbert L., who died at the age of thirty-five years, was superintendent for a prominent firm of contractors in the City of Washington, D. C.

After having attended the public schools of Hinton Dr. Robert S. Neely was for some time a student in the Concord State Normal School, and in preparation for his chosen profession he entered the dental department of the University of Cincinnati, Ohio. He later transferred to the Ohio College of Dental Surgery, and in this institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1914. Upon thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery he forthwith opened an office at Hinton, where he has since continued his successful professional work as one of the representative dentists of his native county. He has insistently kept in touch with the great advances made in both operative and laboratory dentistry, and in this connection it should be noted that he has taken effective post-graduate courses in leading dental colleges and clinic in Philadelphia, Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston. In his large and important practice he has had as his professional coadjutor since 1919 Dr. D. B. Keaton, under the firm name of Neely & Keaton. While still a boy Doctor Neely became associated with his brothers Claude and Clyde in the retail grocery business, and when he finally sold his interest in this business he utilized the money thus received to defer the expenses of his course in dental college. He is a member of the Greenbrier Valley Dental Society, the West Virginia State Dental Society and the National Dental Society. From his early youth he has been an ardent worker in the ranks of the republican party, and after service as a member of the city republican committee of Hinton he became a member of the county committee, of which latter he is now chairman, an office in which he has shown much finesse in maneuvering political forces at his command. The doctor is one of the vigorous members of the Hinton Chamber of Commerce, is a charter member of the local Rotary Club, is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and in the Masonic fraternity he is affiliated with both York and Scottish Rite bodies, including the Commandery of Knights Templars at Hinton, the Consistory, A. A. S. R., at Wheeling, and also the Temple of the Mystic Shrine in that city. He holds membership in the Presbyterian Church, and his wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The year 1915 recorded the marriage of Doctor Neely and Miss Nell McDowell, daughter of J. W. McDowell, who resides in Monroe County and who is serving as deputy collector of internal revenue. Dr. and Mrs. Neely have two sons, Robert S., Jr., and William Edward.

B. F. DUNKLE for fifteen years has been a resident of Parkersburg, and has here given evidence of his superior talents as a thorough business man and is one of the city's capable merchants and public spirited citizens.

He was born at Bedford, Pennsylvania, May 24, 1863, son of William and Mary Margaret (Franks) Dunkle, also natives of Pennsylvania. The record of the Dunkle family runs back in Pennsylvania to earliest colonial times, the family having been established there from Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. For many generations they lived and flourished around Lancaster and Bedford, where some of the name are still found. William Dunkle was a Pennsylvania farmer, and at the time of the Civil war volunteered in the Union Army and served until honorably discharged on account of disability. He died in 1905, at the age of eighty-one, and his widow died two years later, at seventy-nine. Of their six children four are now living.

Benjamin F. Dunkle grew up on his father's farm, attended the common schools and the public schools of Bedford Springs, and at the age of eighteen became a cigar maker. He operated an establishment for the making of cigars at Bedford Springs for about fifteen years. He then made a change of business and for six years managed a steam laundry at Pittsburg. From Pittsburg in November, 1907, he removed to Parkersburg, and for ten years was in the livery business. This business suffered severe su le an bi l s

Robert S. Newy

Br
re
Me t gr mi bi l
Hi
W na
of Ch
Me re re to we th
th in an di ty or a lit ti of se
C m
A in w w
M a d a w h
w
C
Y o n
t
M a r
l t e t y r
l
t

competition on account of the growing use of the automobile, and in 1915 he began developing a new line as a dealer and jobber in flour and feed, and that has now become his chief business.

Mr. Dunkle is a member of the Board of Commerce, and a Presbyterian. May 30, 1883, he married Belinda B. Ridgman, of Bedford Springs, Pennsylvania. They have four children, Charles W., Percy K., John H. and Starline LeMiller. Percy married Eliza Lucretia Buckley.

WALTER COLLINS, of Bruceton Mills, represents a family group in Preston County that has long been noted for its quiet and unobtrusive citizenship, containing people of un doubted patriotism, industry and personal worth.

Mr. Collins was born near Bruceton Mills March 13, 1861. His father, Andrew Collins, was born in Marion County, West Virginia, July 22, 1811. The Collins family was established in this state from Pennsylvania, and the father of Andrew Collins was buried at Brandonville in Preston County. His children were Ezekiel, James, Frank, Andrew, Mary and two other daughters, all of whom are now deceased. Andrew Collins became a blacksmith by trade, and followed that occupation until too old for such strenuous work and devoted the remaining years of his life to his farm. He began with limited circumstances, but managed his affairs so as to live well and supply the comforts for his family. He was a sheep and cattle raiser, always kept in abundance of stock, and left a modest estate when he died. In his old age he was liberal, and delighted in gratifying some need of his children, having none of the penuriousness frequently associated with old age. He had only a limited education, but had an active mind which retained its vigor until his death. He was strong in democratic policies, but had no desire for public service, and was a member of the Baptist Church. He married at Petersburg, Somerset County, Pennsylvania, November 23, 1841, Olivia McClain. They were married by Rev. Mr. Sawhill, the ceremony being performed in the presence of William and Almira Reynolds. Olivia McClain was a daughter of William and Eliza (Brown) McClain. Andrew Collins and his wife had the following children: Florence, who became the wife of Marshall Wolfe and died near Bruceton; Martha, who was married to John Dietrich and is buried at Point Marion, within the State of West Virginia; Thomas Collins, a Baptist minister at Spokane, Washington; Caroline, who died in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, as Mrs. Clark Flanagan; Luther, of Terra Alta; Emily, who died in young womanhood; Mary, wife of Jehu King, resident of Bruceton; Marshall, of Uniontown, Pennsylvania; Eliza Jane, who became the wife of James Boland and died in Fayette County, Pennsylvania; Walter; Clara, wife of John W. Yeast, of Valentine, Nebraska; Ashbel M., who occupies the old Collins homestead; and Albert, who was killed in a coal mine in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, survived by a family.

Walter Collins attended school in the Hopewell locality near Bruceton, and he lived at home with his parents until he was twenty-eight, taking care of the homestead as long as his father and mother lived. He early became a stockman and farmer, and for some years was one of the largest and growers of this region. It was frequently the case that he drove out for market from 1,500 to 2,000 lambs every fall. He also butchered for the benefit of the Bruceton locality.

Mr. Collins began housekeeping in the same community where he was reared, but in April, 1909, he moved to the William Yeast farm a mile from Bruceton. Besides his activities as a farmer and stockman Mr. Collins has developed and opened a coal mine on his land, and has marketed some of the product in the community. He is interested in banks and has been a director of the Bruceton Bank for a decade or more.

In politics Mr. Collins has not adhered strictly to the party faith of his family, and has cast his ballot for the republican ticket when its policies and candidates suited him. He has never been tempted into politics for the sake of official service, is a Baptist, while Mrs. Collins has been a dutiful member of the Methodist Church since she was thirteen years of age.

In Preston County November 28, 1888, on Thanksgiving day, Mr. Collins married Emma A. Yeast, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Mr. Applegate. Mrs. Collins was born at the home where she is now living July 3, 1869, daughter of William and Catherine J. (Ross) Yeast. Her father was born in the Clifton locality of Preston County September 25, 1828, was educated in Maryland and in the Crawford School of Preston County, and grew up in the home of Hamilton Crawford. During the Civil war he was a teamster for about two years and then, about three weeks after his marriage, he enlisted in Captain Hyde's Company, which was assigned to duty on the Indian frontier of Kansas. There he suffered so from hunger and exposure that he took leave of his command without permission, returning home, and was never given an honorable discharge. William Yeast located near Bruceton, living at the three corners of the states of Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, then for three years lived in the Hazelton community, and the year Mrs. Collins was born established his home where Mr. and Mrs. Collins now reside. He died May 26, 1907. Mr. Yeast was a republican. His widow, still living, was born July 30, 1841. William Yeast's first wife was Martha Dean, and they had two children, John W., born in December, 1852, a resident of Valentine, Nebraska; and Jennie, born March 9, 1860, wife of J. C. McNair, of Woodlake, Nebraska. William Yeast by his marriage to Catherine Ross had the following children: Joseph H., of Wheatland, Wyoming; Mrs. Collins; Aminta, born August 27, 1873, wife of J. B. Everly; James Albert, born April 2, 1878, a resident of Atlanta, Georgia; Agnes, born September 8, 1880, wife of Albert Collins; and Elsie, born February 6, 1883 wife of Edward Cunningham.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Collins had the following children: Fred H., born July 23, 1890; Ethel, wife of Jesse Benson, of Hopewell Church settlement, and has two children, Edward and Beryl; Mabel Beatrice, born May 15, 1903; and Donald Glen, born September 30, 1911. The soldier representative in the family during the World war was Fred, who was in camp at Vancouver Barracks, Washington, and was assigned to duty in the timber, getting out aeroplane material. His command was designated as the Fourth Company Air Service Supply Corps.

RAYMOND W. JOHNSON, of Philippi, has a genius for business. That is demonstrated in the remarkable success he has made from a start from nothing to an independent fortune when in years he is just about where most men are getting fairly settled into their vocations. He educated himself commercially as experience demanded knowledge, planned his career and worked to the plan.

He is a native of Barbour County, and a representative of one of the older families here. His great-grandfather, the first of the name in Barbour County, came from Ireland and was one of the eleven brothers who settled in different portions of West Virginia, one locating in Harrison County, another at Cove in Taylor County, one near Morgantown and some in the Valley of Virginia. The grandfather of the Philippi business man was John G. Johnson, who was born in Glade District of Barbour County and spent all his life there. His was a career of usefulness and good citizenship. He owned a farm and also owned and operated a water mill at the head of Teters Creek on Mill Run. In connection with the grist milling machinery he installed carting machines, the only ones in this region. The old grist mill is still being operated, but the carting machinery has long since disappeared. John G. Johnson was a staunch democrat and Methodist. He married Kate Parsons, daughter of Job Parsons. The town of Parsons was named in honor of this family. Their children were: Richard M., Levi, who is one of the old farmer residents of Glade District, where he was born; Robert F., who lives on the old homestead and runs the mill there; William Worth, who moved to the State of Idaho and died there; Eliza, who married Jacob V. Wilmoth and spent her life in Barbour County; Caroline, who died at the old family home, the wife of Arthur Hudkins; Emily, who married George Skidmore and lived and died near Elkins; and Lucinda, who was the wife of James Elliott and died in Barbours County.

Richard M. Johnson, father of Raymond W. Johnson, was born in Glade District May 10, 1840, and devoted his career to farming and the manufacture of lumber. He acquired a fair education, was a very ardent democrat, but never went into public life. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and with his wife resides at Parsons, Tucker County, West Virginia. His wife was Nancy Gainer, a native of Barbour County, born November 14, 1841, a daughter of Samuel P. Gainer. She is a member of the same church as her husband. Their children were: Orville D., who died unmarried; Orlando, associated with his brother Raymond at Philippi; James, a farmer in Glade District; William Worth, a garage man at Buckhannon; Troy, a farmer in Randolph County; Johnny G., who died unmarried; and Raymond W.

Raymond W. Johnson was born in Glade District May 15, 1887. He was a farmer's son and lived on the farm until he was sixteen. When he left home he had only the education supplied by the country schools. For three years he worked in the lumber woods. He had been accustomed to hard labor from early youth, and the strenuous work of the field and the woods was the school in which his destiny was shaped. He drove team and sawed timber, and after leaving the woods he engaged in the livery and dray business at Parsons. This was the enterprise which supplied him with the capital he brought to Philippi in 1910 and turned to account in the livery business. Five years later he sold out in response to the demands of the farm and engaged in the garage business. With N. S. Parks as a partner he built at the entrance of the old historic bridge of the city a brick garage 50x150 feet, with a two story front. For the first two years he had the local agency for the Chevrolet car, and since then has been the authorized Ford agent for this locality. This business is known as the City Garage, of which he is active manager.

His business interests have been accumulating rapidly in recent years. In 1920 he resumed the lumber business as a manufacturer. He operates his mill on Laurel Mountain and ships the product in the rough. He still continues his farming operations in Glade District and has another farm in New Interest District of Randolph County. At times he has bought and sold real estate and has improved much property in Philippi.

On June 4, 1907, at Cambridge, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, Mr. Johnson married Cecelia May. Her father, Salathiel May, married Miss Arbelle Wolf, both natives of Preston County, West Virginia. Mrs. Johnson, who was born October 26, 1884, had the following brothers and sisters: Miss Isis May; Lenora, wife of Albert Harper; Cyrus, who lives on the Eastern Shore; Ella, wife of Clay Scott and a resident of Philippi; Mrs. Annie Hoddonott, of Cambridge, Maryland; Percy May; and Lloyd, who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have two sons, Johnny Lester, born September 19, 1908, and James Vance, born June 17, 1912.

Mr. Johnson is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and Modern Woodmen of America. While his ancestors were all democrats, he has been a republican since casting his first ballot for president.

RALPH O. NEWCOMB. In the modern home building era in and around Charleston Ralph O. Newcomb has figured conspicuously as a contractor and builder, and also as an independent capitalist. His technical reputation and his long business experience have enabled him to launch building programs which are directly and vitally associated with the improvement of the beautiful Kanawha Valley.

Mr. Newcomb was born at Parkman in Geauga County, Ohio, in 1876, and was educated and passed his early business career in Ohio. He attended the public schools of his home town, Hiram College of Ohio, from which he graduated A. B., attended the Ohio State University at Columbus, and is a law graduate of the University of Cincinnati. Mr. Newcomb did not take up the practice of law, being diverted therefrom by active associations with the building business at Cincinnati, beginning about 1905. He conducted a growing business as an architect and builder at Cincinnati, and in the spring of 1918 came to Charleston on a special mission to direct the construction of a number of residences for the Libby-Owens Glass Company at Kanawha City, one of the prosperous industrial suburbs of Charleston. After completing this contract, being deeply impressed by the solid and substantial character of Charleston as a city and the possibilities of its future growth and development, he determined to remain and take a part in the building up of the city and the contiguous Kanawha Valley.

The beautiful and extremely picturesque locations for home building afforded along the river appealed strongly to the lover of beautiful homes, and Mr. Newcomb set about the development of Kanawha City as a residential center. Here he has invested a large amount of capital in the building of modern and handsome homes, most of them on large tracts of land he purchased for this purpose. Most of these residences are sold to home owners on moderate terms.

While this has been the scene of his principal operations since coming to Charleston, Mr. Newcomb as an architect and builder has erected a number of costly and modern residences in Charleston itself. Among these may be mentioned, as indicating the character of his work, the Joshua Davis home, Mrs. Cyrus Hall's home, the S. B. Henshaw home, also the attractive homes of W. E. Connell and A. J. Humphreys.

Mr. Newcomb is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, was one of the founders of the Kanawha Country Club of Charleston, a member and ex-president of the Kiwanis Club, and a director of the Charleston Chapter of the American Red Cross. He married Miss Phonsie Weinheimer, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and has a son, Randal Newcomb, now attending Hiram College.

ARTHUR W. GROVE. During his youth and early manhood Arthur W. Grove was in the West Virginia timber and lumber industry, but for a number of years has been settled down to the permanent vocation of farming. He owns one of the good farms in Upshur County, near Rock Cave.

Mr. Grove was born on Pleasant Creek in Barbour County, May 9, 1875, son of J. B. and Cynthia (Woodford) Grove. His father was born in Upshur County, July 3, 1947, while his mother was born on Pleasant Creek in Barbour County. J. B. Grove was reared on a farm and as a young man moved to Barbour County, where he married and settled down to farming there. His wife died in Barbour County in 1879, and about 1883 he moved back to Upshur County and settled on Middle Fork, where he is still living, at the age of seventy-five. He is a democrat in politics and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His three children by his marriage to Cynthia Woodford are: Arthur W., Ida, wife of M. L. Osburn, of Elkins, and Bassil, a teacher in the public schools. The second wife of J. B. Grove was Mrs. Laura (Phillips) Sharp.

Arthur W. Grove was four years old when his mother died, and after that he grew up in the home of his grandparents. He had a public school education, and at the age of seventeen went into the woods and did the arduous work of a timberman and lumberman for seven years.

In 1897 Mr. Grove married Miss Mattie Hull. After his marriage he began farming, and for a number of years has owned his place of 160 acres near Rock Cave, where he has instituted many improvements and has placed himself among the prosperous men of this rich agricultural country.

Mr. and Mrs. Grove have two sons: Creed, born December 13, 1897, was well educated, taught school one term and is now with his father on the farm; and Hulbert, born May 26, 1904, attending high school at Buckhannon. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Mr. Grove being on the official board and active in the work of the Sunday school. He casts his vote as a republican.

SUMMERS R. HILL with his wife conducts the leading mercantile establishment at Gaston, West Virginia, and they are also owners of a farm in Lewis County. They are progressive business people who have made excellent use of ir opportunities, limited largely to their own achieving as they started out for themselves with limited means. Mr. Hill was born in Greenbrier County, West Virginia, no 22, 1886, son of W. B. and Alice (Snedgar) Hill. His father was born in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, in 1857 and his mother in Greenbrier County in 1857. W. B. Hill spent his active life as a farmer and had a place of 100 acres in Pocahontas County. He is still living, a republican, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was three times married and had eleven children. His second wife, Alice Snedgar, died in 1894, and the five children of this union are: Irena M., wife of G. B. Hill; Emma R.; Lerna S., wife of Frank Clark; Mrs. Lessie I. Lip; and Flossie M., wife of Roy H. Mace. Summers R. Hill was eight years old when his mother died. He continued to live at home until he was fourteen and during that time he completed the work of the common schools. Since then he has been doing for himself, and through his early efforts he paid for a higher course of training in Valparaiso University in Indiana. Since then he has been giving his time and energies to farming and merchandising. He and his wife own 267 acres in one farm in Lewis County, and have other farming interests. He has been in business as a merchant at Gaston since 1913. Mr. Hill is a republican, and is a past noble grand of Golden Lodge No. 139, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and also member of the Rebekahs. In Masonry he has attained the thirty-second degree in the Scottish Rite and is affiliated with Weston Lodge No. 10, A. F. and A. M., and also the Royal Arch Chapter and Knight Templar Commandery. He and Mrs. Hill are members of the Methodist Protestant Church. He married September 6, 1911, Bertha M. Mace, who was born in Webster County, West Virginia, in 1876. He was a teacher before her marriage and postmistress at Rocker Valley for more than ten years, having been appointed in 1898. For ten years she was a partner with her father, F. H. Mace, in merchandising.

J. D. Hewcomby

WILLIS GUY TETRICK was one of the founders and for the past seven years has been active manager of the Clarksburg Exponent, one of the most successful newspaper enterprises and influential organs of opinion in this part of the state.

Though an active business man, Mr. Tetrick has been a student of genealogy, and has done much to preserve the records of his own and connected families, and his researches have proved a valuable source of information in compiling several of the important family sketches found in these volumes. The first of the name to appear in Harrison County were George Tetrick and Jacob Tetrick, both of whom had records as soldiers in the Revolutionary war. Another, and the direct ancestor of W. G. Tetrick, was Henry Tetrick, Sr., a name that is found in the Pennsylvania archives of the Pennsylvania soldiers of the Revolutionary war as a member of the Lancaster County Militia for the years 1780-81-82-83. Henry Tetrick, Sr., is mentioned in the official records of Monongalia County, Virginia, in 1783, and Harrison County in August, 1793.

Henry Tetrick, Jr., probably a son of Henry, Sr., was said to have been born in Loudoun County, Virginia, probably about 1768 or 1770. He married Catherine Davis in Harrison County, and died near Shinnston in Harrison County about 1845. His three children were: Josiah born August 4, 1800, Joseph, born October 24, 1803, and Mary, born June 19, 1807, all born on Tetrick Ridge in Harrison County.

Joseph Tetrick, just mentioned, was a farmer and stockman, and accumulated large tracts of land. He died at his residence near Shinnston, April 26, 1861. He married Lucy Jones, daughter of Joshua and Mary (Sech) Jones. He was born in Harrison County, May 13, 1804, and died near Shinnston, June 1, 1890. Their children were: Harrison, George, Alfred, Ozias, Ruhama Ann, Commodore Barnett, Mary Ellen, Henry Marshall, Martha Jane and John Blackburn.

Of these Ozias Tetrick was born near Shinnston, February 28, 1831, and likewise spent his active life in farming and stock raising. He was a democrat, but never held a public office and was one of the thoroughly substantial and honorable men of his community. He died near Enterprise, West Virginia, May 24, 1895. On December 21, 1854, he married Amy Ann Short, who was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, October 23, 1834, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Everson) Short. She died near Enterprise, February 11, 1874, the mother of seven children: Luther Blackburn, Willis Emory, Lucius Elmer, Charles M., Lulu E., Ida Myrtle and Daisy Ann. On October 12, 1875, Ozias Tetrick married Nancy Davis, who was born in Marion County, October 24, 1851, daughter of James and Mary (Hobbs) Davis. To this union were born three children, Lela Taey, Everal Thomas and Arch Ward.

Lucius Elmer Tetrick, representing the fifth generation of the family in Harrison County, beginning with Henry Tetrick, Sr., was born near Enterprise, June 9, 1861, and died August 18, 1901. In a brief lifetime of forty years he prosecuted a successful business as a farmer and in other affairs, and was one of the organizers and for many years an official of the Farmers Bank at Shinnston. He was influential in democratic politics, was a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Lucius Elmer Tetrick married Sarah Florence McIntire, and her name introduces another pioneer family of Harrison County. According to the land survey records Charles McIntire made two improvements in what is now Harrison County in the year 1773. His former home was probably either in Harford County, Maryland, or just across the line in the State of Pennsylvania. On account of Indian hostility he probably did not occupy the land in Harrison County, and it was after his death that his wife and children moved to the land. His son John was killed by the Indians near Enterprise in May, 1791.

His son James spent his life on the land improved by his father, Charles, just above the Town of Enterprise, where he died and was buried. He married Rebecca James, daughter of Enoch James. Their children were: Enoch, Isaac, Presley, Delila, Sarah, Senneth, Elias and Allison. Their son Enoch was born at the old McIntire homestead, September 1, 1800, and spent his life there as a farmer and stockman. He died February 28, 1852. In 1822 he married Sarah Ann McIntire, his first cousin, who was born near the old McIntire place, March 10, 1800, and died near Enterprise, January 30, 1887, a daughter of Charles and Hannah (Hall) McIntire. Their children were: Edith, Cena, Hannah, James, Thomas Jefferson, Charles, James Allison, Van Buren and Jesse. Charles, who was born October 19, 1836, served as a Confederate soldier in the Nineteenth Virginia Cavalry, coming home after the war to find that all his property had been confiscated and sold to pay the claims of Union sympathizers, and none of it was ever recovered. He started anew, followed farming and stock raising, and had accumulated a substantial portion, including a good farm, part of the old McIntire homestead, before his death, which occurred June 12, 1899. Charles McIntire on January 10, 1861, married Rachel Rose Anderson, who was born August 4, 1841, a daughter of John and Cassandra (Jones) Anderson, and she died at Enterprise, May 3, 1912. Their children were: Sarah F., Charles J. and James F. The oldest of their children was Sarah F., who was born October 4, 1861, and died August 6, 1901. On March 23, 1882, she became the wife of Lucius Elmer Tetrick, and their four children were: Willis Guy Tetrick, Georgia Pearl, Mabel Grace and Amy Rachel. Georgia Pearl and Mabel Grace were twins, both having died young, the former at sixteen years and the other at the age of two months. Amy Rachel Tetrick became the wife of F. Ridley Anderson, and they have one son, Thomas Ridley.

Willis Guy Tetrick was born on his father's farm near the Village of Enterprise in Harrison County, January 3, 1883, and acquired his early education in the public schools. He lived at home until he was eighteen, but farming did not appeal to him as a permanent vocation. It is easy to understand that a young man who made such rapid strides forward when given the opportunity should have early felt the urge toward the larger life that a wider field of effort afforded. He became bookkeeper and clerk in the planing mill and feed store of his uncle, James F. McIntire, at Enterprise, in the meanwhile taking an active interest in general affairs, and on June 1, 1903, he came to Clarksburg as deputy county clerk, in which position he served with so much efficiency that when the county clerk was removed by death he was appointed, March 1, 1907, to fill out the unexpired term. In 1908 he was elected county clerk of Harrison County, for a term of six years, which terminated January 1, 1915. Always a loyal supporter of the principles of the democratic party, his leadership has been many times recognized, and in 1914 he was his party's candidate for mayor of Clarksburg, failing of election only because of his party being in the minority. At different times he has served as a member of city, county and state democratic executive committees.

In 1910 Mr. Tetrick assisted in the organization of the company that established the Clarksburg Exponent, a newspaper widely circulated since it was founded, and one that in the last six years has taken its place as a daily issue with the best patronized journals of Harrison County. On July 10, 1915, Mr. Tetrick became manager of the Exponent, and has made it a paying property. His business acumen has been manifested in other lines and enterprises. He was one of the organizers of the Clarksburg Trust Company, and since that time has been a member of its board of directors and on the finance committee.

On February 9, 1910, Mr. Tetrick married Miss Virginia Ann Heavner, who is a daughter of Homer M. and Lorena Bird (Sexton) Heavner. (See sketch on other pages.) Mr. and Mrs. Tetrick have four children: Willis Guy, born August 23, 1911; Catherine Virginia, born February 16, 1914; Margaret Ann, born June 17, 1915; and James Elmer, born February 22, 1918. All are natives of Clarksburg.

The family home is at Clarksburg, but membership is maintained in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Enterprise. For a number of years Mr. Tetrick has been identified fraternally with the Odd Fellows and the Elks, and belongs also to some social bodies, although a busy life like his does not afford a large amount of leisure. In journalistic circles he is known all over the state. He has been president of the West Virginia Newspaper Publishers' Association, and vice president of the West Virginia Editorial Association, and now is serving as vice president of the West Virginia Publishers and Employing Printers Association.

HOMER M. HEAVNER. The interesting history of the Heavner family during the first three generations in America has been told in connection with the career of Capt. Jacob W. Heavner of Buckhannon. As noted there, one of the sons of the fourth generation was Jacob Heavner, who was born in Pendleton County, West Virginia, February 7, 1801. On January 15, 1823, he married Mary Martin, daughter of Stephen and Catherine (Reger) Martin. Their children, all natives of Upshur County, were: Nathan, born April 8, 1824; Levina, born April 8, 1826; Edith, born November 8, 1829; Mary Etta, born May 7, 1832; Daniel D., born September 15, 1834; Sallie Ann, born June 19, 1836; Gideon Martin, whose record follows; John Props, born October 3, 1841; Jacob William, born January 13, 1844; Elias Marion, born January 9, 1846; and Stephen Osten, born September 26, 1848. Jacob Heavner, the father of these children, married for his second wife Lydia Ann Foster on September 13, 1860, and their children were: Charles Thomas, born November 21, 1862; Nicholas F., born July 1, 1864; and Philip Gay, born August 4, 1865. The third wife of Jacob Heavner was Sarah Brine, but there were no children by that union.

Gideon Martin Heavner was born in Upshur County, April 12, 1839, and on February 15, 1858, married Barbara Ann Neff, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Brew) Neff. Their children were: Jacob LeRoy, born at Buckhannon, January 10, 1859; Homer Milroy, whose life history follows; Bertha Blanche, born July 31, 1873; and James G. G., born December 23, 1875.

Homer M. Heavner was born in Upshur County, October 19, 1860, was educated in public schools at Buckhannon, and learned from his father the trade of blacksmith. On leaving home in December, 1880, he worked at McKeesport, Pennsylvania, with several industries, but in February, 1881, began work as a blacksmith with the construction force of the Grafton and Greenbrier Railroad, between Grafton and Philippi. From September of that year until August, 1881, he was a clerk in a drug store at Buckhannon, West Virginia, then went to Hancock, Illinois, and worked on his uncle's farm, and in April, 1886, went to San Francisco, California. For several years following he had an interesting experience in the far West, most of the time engaged at his trade, and for several years was located at different points in Wyoming, and for a time was the blacksmith employed in keeping the horses shod for the Northwest Stage Company. In August, 1889, he returned to Buckhannon, married there, and in April, 1890, took his bride to the Northwest and located at Helena, Montana. He remained in Montana, following his trade as blacksmith for some mining and irrigation companies and also for the Great Northern Railroad, until September, 1892, when he rejoined his wife at Buckhannon. He continued to live in that city for six or seven years, and in 1899 identified himself with the newly opened oil field at Wolf Summit, West Virginia. In December, 1902, he bought a hotel business at Clarksburg, and for over fifteen years operated a hotel that had been serving the public of that city from 1845. The hotel permanently closed June 3, 1918, and since the Homer M. Heavner has been in the real estate, coal, oil and gas land business. He is a Methodist and a republican.

He married Lorena Bird Sexton, daughter of George A. and Virginia L. (McNulty) Sexton, of Buckhannon. Their children were: Virginia Anne, who was born while her parents were living at Helena, Montana, December 1, 1890, and is now the wife of W. Guy Tetrick, of Clarksburg; James Homer, born May 24, 1892; and Mary Edith, born September 1, 1895, the two younger children, both born in Buckhannon, now residing in Clarksburg, West Virginia.

WILLIAM T. WILLIAMSON. The subject of the telephone, its early history and the remarkable extent of the service facilities and great capitalization involved in the modern telephone industry in the state, receives special attention on other pages of this history. The division manager for the Bell Telephone System in West Virginia, where the company is known as the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company of West Virginia, is William T. Williamson, who has spent practically all his adult life in the business of transportation or communication, and for twenty-one years has been connected with the telephone company during which time his headquarters have been at Charleston. He was born at Marietta, Ohio, in 1871, son of Rev. Thomas W. and Lydia (Sayre) Williamson, his mother a native of West Virginia. Both parents are deceased. Thomas W. Williamson spent a life of service and real distinction in the ministry of the Methodist Church. He served churches in the West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio conferences.

About 1875, when William T. Williamson, was four years of age, his parents moved from Marietta to Volcano, West Virginia, where he first attended school. Later they moved to Huntington, where he finished the high school course following which he was a student in the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware. For some twelve or thirteen years Mr. Williamson was in the service of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, in various capacities, and at different points in this state, being agent at White Sulphur Springs, agent at Montgomery, claim agent, with headquarters at Huntington, and passenger and ticket agent at Charleston. He resigned the latter office in 1901 to become manager of the Charleston Exchange of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, which company later sold its property in West Virginia to the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company.

Since then his abilities have brought him successive promotions with the Telephone company. He was superintendent of the commercial, traffic and plant departments, and is now division manager of the company, his division embracing the entire State of West Virginia. He is also a member of the Board of Directors of the company. Mr. Williamson has not only done effective work in improving and building up the facilities of the company in the state, but is widely known for his generous attitude toward the public and his ability to encourage cooperation between the people and the company, resulting in the general betterment of the service.

W. H. Williamson

Mr. Williamson is a member of the Board of Trustees of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, superintendent of the Sunday School, and is a York and Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner, being a past potentate of Beni-Kedem Temple and has several times represented the temple in the Imperial Council. He married Miss Elizabeth S. Slack, a native of Charleston, and daughter of John Slack. They have one daughter, Mrs. Harriet W. Barrett.

SAMUEL GROVER SMITH. As a young civil and construction engineer Samuel Grover Smith came to West Virginia nearly twenty years ago. He helped build and manage some of the important industrial railroads in the southern part of the state, but in recent years has turned his time and attention chiefly to the business of coal production, being twice president and treasurer of the Indian Run Coal Company, treasurer of the Indian Run Collieries Company, and a director in several other companies.

Mr. Smith, who is well known in social as well as in business circles at Charleston, was born at Philadelphia, August 9, 1884. Most of his youth was spent at Selinsgrove, Pennsylvania, where he attended public schools, and for two years he was a student in a college at Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. At the age of eighteen he entered the engineering department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and in 1904, at the age of twenty, came to Charleston in the employ of the Coal & Coke Railway while they had under construction more than a hundred miles of new road. From 1906 to 1916 he was officially connected with the developing of the mining properties of the Blue Creek Coal & Land Company and the building and operating of the Kanawha and West Virginia Railroad, and in 1916 he handled the negotiations by which the Kanawha and West Virginia Railroad was sold to the New York Central.

For the following three years he was general manager of the Blue Creek Coal and Land Company, and since August, 1919, has been vice president and treasurer of the Indian Run Coal Company of Charleston, West Virginia, one of the largest coal wholesale concerns in Southern West Virginia. He is interested in several other producing companies.

Mr. Smith is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and was vice chairman of the recent Billy Sunday revival campaign in Charleston. He is a Knight Templar, thirty-second degree Mason, and Shriner, a member of the Rotary Club and a director of the Charleston Y. M. C. A. In 1907 Mr. Smith married Miss Mabel Hickel, of Charleston. They have a son, Grover Smith, Jr., born in 1910.

ISAAC I. RILEY has been a resident of South Carolina since 1914. He was one of the local men of enterprise who have done most to influence capital and industrial developments in this section. He has employed a great deal of capital of his own in building and other development work. He is a merchant by long experience, and still conducts a business at South Charleston, where most of his work has been in the field of real estate for some years.

He was born in Roane County, West Virginia, December 22, 1857, son of William and Marianne (Jones) Riley, the father born in Lewis County, West Virginia and the mother in Hardy County. William Riley, with his brother George W., settled in Roane County at an early day. They purchased large tracts of land. The boyhood of Isaac I. Riley was spent in a farm, and he equipped himself for life in the public schools and at the age of eighteen began teaching. He taught for several terms in rural districts, and following that was a farmer and also became a merchant at Flat Fork in Roane County. In 1891 he moved to Walton, in the same county, where he conducted a general store for ten years. In the meantime, in 1896, he began taking an active part in local politics and was appointed deputy sheriff of Roane County under Sheriff M. B. Mathews, and in order to devote more time to this office, he moved to the county seat at Spencer in 1901. He was also in business there, and in 1910 was made postmaster at Spencer, under President Taft's administration. He served until the Wilson administration, and in 1914 he located at South Charleston. He did not immediately engage in business there, but instead opened a store at West Charleston. With a keen foresight as to possible development of the industrial site of South Charleston, he joined with others in building up the town and has constructed several business buildings as well as residences. He built one business block, with a frontage of six stores, also a hotel and apartment building, and has improved some of the desirable residence sections of the town. Some time since he closed out his store at West Charleston, but recently opened a grocery store in South Charleston.

Mr. Riley has continued to take an active part and leadership in republican politics. He attended a number of state and district conventions while in Roane County.

In Roane County he married Mary Louise Goodwin, daughter of Hiram Goodwin. Mr. and Mrs. Riley are proud of their large family of children, eight of whom are living. One son, Oral F., was a successful merchant at West Charleston, and died at the age of thirty-five. The living children are: Oma, wife of Reece Kent, of Greensboro, North Carolina; Belva, Mrs. Roy Murray, of Akron, Ohio; Grace, wife of R. L. Hayes, of Spencer, West Virginia; Ruth, Mrs. Roscoe Carden, of Hinton, West Virginia; Mabel, wife of W. G. Moore, of South Charleston; Anna and Mary Louise, both at home; and Charles D., who is now in office work and is an ex-service man. He served as a first lieutenant in the border troubles and later in France with the Expeditionary Forces.

LEMUEL R. CUTRIGHT, of Upshur County, is in his seventy-second year, and is probably the youngest Grand Army man in West Virginia. He was in service only the latter months of the great struggle, but four of his older brothers were in the service practically from the beginning of the war. The Cutrights have been a prominent family in Upshur County since pioneer days, and the name has always been associated with stalwart Americanism.

Lemuel R. Cutright, who is still living on his farm on the French Creek Pike, a half mile north of Adrian, was born in Upshur County, February 3, 1850, son of Elmore and Nancy A. (Wolfe) Cutright. His father was born near Hampton, West Virginia, December 31, 1820, and his mother on Middle Fork in Upshur County, January 10, 1823. After their marriage they settled on a farm near Hampton, and in October, 1870, moved to another farm in Rowan County, where they lived out their lives. They were devout Methodists in religion, and the father always upheld the principles of the republican party. In their family were twelve children, a brief record of whom follows: Mifflin, born April 9, 1841, who was one of the soldiers of the family in the Civil war; Granville S., born October 29, 1842, who also had a military record; Abraham, born March 23, 1844, who died while in the army; Mary E., born November 14, 1845, now deceased; Jacob E., born July 6, 1847, who was a soldier and is still living; Lemuel R.; Asa, born August 6, 1851; James A., born July 5, 1853, deceased; Alonzo, born December 13, 1854; Columbus, born May 6, 1856; Indiana, born December 27, 1857; and Derwinda J., born May 18, 1859.

Lemuel R. Cutright grew up on a farm, was educated in the common schools, and in 1865, at the age of fifteen, was mustered into Company I of the Third West Virginia Cavalry. He was with that command during the concluding phases of the Civil war, and then came home and went to work on the farm. Farming has been his steady occupation during all subsequent years, and he still lives on his place of fifty-seven acres. He is one of the directors of the Bank of Adrian, is a member of the Grand Army Post at Buckhannon and has staunchly upheld the republican party in many successive campaigns.

On November 14, 1867, Mr. Cutright married Salina Brady. Her death on March 31, 1917, occurred only a few months before they should have celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. To their marriage were born eleven children: Aura M., born October 16, 1870, at home; Allen B., born January 2, 1873, deputy sheriff of Upshur County; Elva, born June 3, 1875, wife of Charles Hyre; James E., born June 10, 1877; Bertha, born June 2, 1879, deceased; Holly, born May 27, 1881; Carl, born June 13, 1883; Maude, born October 5, 1885, wife of Mack Cutright; Lora, born September 2, 1888, wife of G. C. Marsh; and two other children that died in infancy.

RALPH M. COWL is proprietor of one of the largest fruit farms in Hancock County, an orchard developed by his father, the late Rev. John Cowl. This place is at Cowl Station, at the mouth of Tomlinson's Run, three miles north of New Cumberland.

Rev. John Cowl was born in Cornwall, England, in 1818, and at the age of three was brought to the United States, his father, John Cowl, locating at Maryland and some years later coming to Wheeling, where he followed his trade as a shoemaker. John, the son, was first bound out to learn the trade of making sandpaper. The second time he was bound out to a blacksmith, and had a six years apprenticeship. He educated himself, and having early committed himself to the ministry he diligently studied Latin and Greek and other subjects in the intervals of his hard working days, and at the age of twenty-eight entered the ministry of the Methodist Protestant Church. He filled pastorates at Wheeling and other places in the Pittsburgh Conference, and about 1856 preached at Nessly Chapel, his home being at Fairview. He continued to carry the burdens of serving a circuit of several churches until past sixty, and even after retiring was frequently called to preach funerals. About 1866 he bought land at the mouth of Tomlinson's Run, and kept up his plantings on the 150 acres until about half of it was in bearing fruit. On this farm he spent his remaining years and died in 1898. Rev. John Cowl was a man of tremendous vigor and enthusiasm, gave himself heart and soul to every undertaking, and was a thoroughly positive character. He was a republican in politics.

Rev. John Cowl married Elizabeth Hunter, of Washington County, Pennsylvania, and she died at the age of eighty-four. They had seven children: William R., who became a minister after serving as a soldier in the Civil war; John, who went to Oklahoma and acquired a large farm; Waterman, who was in the grain and coal business in Iowa when he died; Sumner, who became a minister of the Methodist Protestant Church and died during the first year of his pastorate; Ralph M.; Sadie, living in California, widow of J. O. Miller; and Mary, wife of George Brenneman.

Ralph M. Cowl was born in Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, October 7, 1860, but since he was six years of age has lived at the old homestead in Hancock County. He married Kate Stewart, daughter of Samuel Stewart. They have three sons. John S. was in service in France from September, 1918, to July, 1919, with the S. O. S. Department, and after returning home spent one year in the Carnegie Steel Company's plant at Clairton, Pennsylvania. He graduated from Washington and Jefferson College in 1918. Ralph H., the second son, was a member of the Students' Army Training Corps during the war while at the university at Morgantown. Stewart, the youngest son, is in his first year at Washington and Jefferson College.

WILLIAM OSBORNE. To the credit of William Osborne stands the record of two terms as United States marshal for the Southern District of West Virginia and a long service as a county official and educator.

Mr. Osborne, who as United States marshal had his home in Charleston, was born in Pike County, Kentucky, January 9, 1872, son of A. M. and Arminia Osborne, natives of the same state and both of Scotch-Irish ancestry.

William Osborne grew up on a farm and lived with his parents until he was sixteen. He then moved to West Virginia to live with an uncle, whose home was on Mud River in Boone County. Possessing a good education and lofty ideals, he soon qualified as a teacher, and taught sixteen different schools in Boone County. In 1898 Mr. Osborne was elected county superintendent of schools for that county, and for four years was the efficient head of the school administration there. Following that for some years he was a trader and dealer in lumber and timber. Then, in 1908, he was elected county clerk of Boone County, an office he filled six years.

Mr. Osborne was appointed United States marshal for the Southern District of West Virginia, February 18, 1914, by President Wilson, and began his duties in February of that year. His district embraced twenty-four counties. In 1918 he was re-appointed for another term of four years, and served until May 1, 1922. For one who so long has been in official life Mr. Osborne's record is an exceptional one in its integrity and continuous efficiency. As United States marshal he discharged his duties fearlessly, and he had the handling of many complicated situations in his district.

Mr. Osborne is a staunch democrat, and is a York and Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner. He married Miss Josephine Workman, of Boone County, and they are the parents of a daughter, Miss Pearl Osborne.

ALDINE S. POLING is a veteran editor and newspaper man of West Virginia, being founder and proprietor of the Barbour Democrat at Philippi. He was a successful teacher, later studied and qualified for the bar, but instead found his vocation and life-work in "the fourth estate."

Mr. Poling was born in Glade District, Barbour County, January 14, 1867. His grandfather, James Poling, came to this section of West Virginia in pioneer times from old Virginia and spent his life as a farmer in Glade District. He had a large family, his sons being Elam, Nathaniel, Perry, Brown, Isaac, Salathiel, Emery and Tazewell, while his daughters were Annie, who married Marshall Stal-maker; Rebecca, whose first husband was Mortimer Johnson and the second, C. K. Rymer; Luverna, who was the only one of the family who remained unmarried; and Virginia, who became the wife of Wesley Bean. These children not only married, but most of them had many descendants, and as many of these remained in Barbour County Aldine S. Poling probably has more relatives in the region than any other man.

The father of Aldine S. Poling was Isaac Poling, who was born in Barbour County and who married Elfanziue Corder, a native of Warren County, Virginia. Her only child was Aldine S., but the latter has a half brother, Wade Poling, of Glade District, and half sister named Mrs. Etta Hudkins, Mrs. Matrona Wilmoth, Mrs. Bertie Wilson and Mrs. Rebecca Elliott.

Aldine S. Poling was reared in the home of an aunt in Pleasant District of Barbour County, and lived with her until he began his university career. He attended the rural schools, summer normals, began teaching at the age of sixteen, and for ten years his program was teaching a term or two and then attending school himself. In this way he secured the money to complete his legal education and was graduated LL. B. from West Virginia University in 1892.

Before he could secure a clientele as a lawyer his old friend with whom he had first studied law induced him to start a democratic paper at Philippi. Thus he became the founder of the Barbour Democrat in 1893, the first issue of which appeared July 6, 1893. It has probably never missed an issue in nearly thirty years, and there have hardly been more than a half dozen issues of the paper run off the press without the editor's presence in the office. Mr. Poling is a man of ideals in the newspaper business. With the usual enthusiasm of youth he thought it necessary in early years to be strongly partisan, and he attacked his political opponents as vigorously as he boosted the interests of his own party in political or civic matters. Gradually experience and increasing years softened this part of his character, so that generosity and liberality have characterized his treatment of men and measures through his paper. He made the Barbour Democrat one of the first papers in the state actively to advocate and fight the battle of temperance and prohibition. From the first he has believed that he had a duty to perform in editing and conducting a home newspaper, one free from sensation and the lurid presentation of crimes and scandals.

Wm Osbourne

In addition to his service as an editor Mr. Poling has been a notary public for a number of years, largely a gratuitous service, has been secretary and a member of the Board of Education of the Philippi Independent District, and has been a trustee of Broadus College since it was established here. He was one of the active leaders in securing this educational institution for Philippi, and he has seen it grow to be a larger institution than the State University was when he was a student there. In politics Mr. Poling inherits democratic sentiments from both sides of the family. Fraternally he has been a Mason and Odd Fellow since reaching his majority, and is also a member of the Knights of the Maccabees and the Junior Order United American Mechanics. He has sat in the Masonic Grand Lodge. For thirty-five years he has been a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, was superintendent of the Sunday school ten years and represented the church in the Northern Baptist Convention at Boston, and has attended many of the general associations in the state.

At Philippi in December, 1893, Mr. Poling married Miss Lizzie W. Grant, daughter of Edward F. and Lydia (Skidmore) Grant, an old time family of Barbour County. Her father was a cabinet maker and undertaker, and for many years served as postmaster at Philippi. He was a republican, and he died during the childhood of Mrs. Poling. Mrs. Poling has a half brother, Charles Grant. Mrs. Poling went to work in one of the local banks at Philippi at the age of seventeen, is still an employee of the Citizens National Bank, and is credited with more banking experience than any of the bankers in the city. Mr. and Mrs. Poling have two sons, Forrest Blanchard and Lawrence Edward. Forrest Blanchard, who graduated A. B. from West Virginia University and is now in the University Law School, is an ex-service man, and spent twenty-two months at Camp Shelby, reaching the rank of top sergeant. The second son is a graduate of Broadus College of Philippi, and is now continuing his studies in the Ohio State University. He volunteered as a member of the Students' Army Training Corps in the naval contingent, and was at Morgantown during a portion of the war.

ODELL SCOTT TENNANT graduated from the Law School of West Virginia University, qualified for the bar, but found more attractive opportunities in the business field, and for the past fifteen years has been a leading figure in commercial affairs at Morgantown.

Mr. Tennant was born on a farm in Clay District, near Cassville, Monongalia County, January 8, 1885, son of Jefferson and Phoebe A. (Chesney) Tennant. His father was born on a farm near Penrith in Clay District, February 9, 1845, son of Abraham and Mary (Rich) Tennant. Abraham Tennant was born August 15, 1810, in Monongalia County, son of William Tennant, founder of the name in this section of West Virginia. Richard Tennant, the father of William, was born in Glasgow Scotland, in 1744, served as a drummer boy in the Continental army during the Revolution, and was a pioneer settler in West Virginia. William Tennant, who was born August 12, 1778, married Catherine Brown. Abraham Tennant married Mary Rich, who was born in 1817. The mother of Odell S. Tennant, Phoebe A. Chesney, was born August 20, 1851, on the same farm as her son in Clay District, daughter of William and Mary (Hess) Chesney, representing two other pioneer families of Monongalia County. Jefferson and Phoebe Tennant had the following children: Ida, wife of Shelby Aaron Barker, of Morgantown; Miss Harriet, who lives at home with her father; Etta, wife of G. H. F. Holy, who is connected with the Westinghouse Company at Pittsburgh; Willie Ritch, deceased; Iris C., wife of William C. Gist, a farmer near Wellsburg, West Virginia; Abraham W., who died June 10, 1921, survived by his widow, Mary (Smith) Tennant; and Odell S.

Odell Scott Tennant was six years of age when his father left the farm in 1891 and moved to Morgantown. The object of this change of residence was to give the children better educational advantages. Jefferson Tennant founded the Morgantown Roller Flour Mills in the year 1893, and he continued their successful operation until 1914, when he retired from active business. Odell S. Tennant acquired all his education in Morgantown, graduating from the high school in 1903, and receiving his law degree at the University in 1906. He was admitted to the bar the same year, but instead of taking up practice joined his father in the flour mills in September, 1906, being a one-third partner. When his father retired in 1914 Odell Tennant sold his interest to his brother Abraham W. and entered the hardware and roofing business. He continued in this line until 1921, and still does a large business in hardware and roofing, though at the same time he was interested in the flour, feed and grain business which was established in 1893 and is the oldest enterprise of its kind at Morgantown. Mr. Tennant since 1919 has also been a manufacturer of cement blocks, and these various interests place a heavy demand upon his time and energies. He owns one-sixth of 750 acres of coal land in the Scott Run District.

Mr. Tennant is identified by membership with a number of representative organizations. These include Morgantown Union Lodge No. 4, F. and A. M., the Royal Arch Chapter, Knight Templar Commandery and Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine; Morgantown Lodge No. 411, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis Club and the First Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a member of the Business Men's Class in Sunday school, and for fifteen years was secretary of the Sunday school and for thirty years has had an unusual record of faithful attendance at Sunday school, his absences not averaging more than five Sundays in each year.

On September 18, 1908, Mr. Tennant married Eva E. Townsend. She was born July 2, 1886, in Caro, Michigan, daughter of Samuel and Emily Townsend. Mr. and Mrs. Tennant have two children: Leland Chesney, born November 7, 1909; and Paul Scott, born June 26, 1917. Mr. Tennant resides at 82 South Main Street and his business is at 178 Clay Street.

OLIVER NELSON KOEN. A native of Mannington, while some of his years and some of his interests have been elsewhere, Mr. Koen has been and is primarily concerned with the life and enterprise of his home community, and in a very important sense he has been one of the constructive influences in the development of that thriving little city of Marion County.

Mr. Koen was born at Mannington, October 28, 1845, son of Samuel H. and Mary (Nay) Koen. His parents were also born in what is now Marion County, both of them within three miles of Mannington. Samuel H. Koen, who died at the age of sixty-seven, was of English ancestry, was a successful farmer and merchant, and at one time owned land upon which the central part of Mannington is built. His general merchandise store on his land originated the community known as Koen's Corner, Koen being the former style of spelling the family name. Oliver Nay, the maternal grandfather of Oliver N. Koen, was also a large land owner in this vicinity, and some of his land is included in the western portion of Mannington.

Oliver Nelson Koen had a common school education. In 1861, before he was sixteen years of age, he enlisted in Company B of the Sixth West Virginia Infantry in the Union Army. He was in service three years, until receiving his honorable discharge in August, 1864. He shared in the interesting record of that regiment, and when he had thus discharged his debt to the country he returned home and became a merchant. Mr. Koen sold goods at Mannington for nineteen years, and on leaving that business he became a landlord, conducting the Commercial Hotel for fourteen years. The old Commercial is now part of the Bartlett Hotel, being the same section which fronts on Main Street. Mr. Koen after retiring from the hotel business moved to Colorado and spent two years developing some land for irrigation. He now owns thirty-five hundred acres near La Mar in that state. On returning from Colorado he again engaged in the hotel business at Mannington, in his old home, changing the name to the Koen Hotel. Very soon after his return the oil boom struck Mannington, and he was one of the first to invest his capital in the development operations, and has been exceptionally successful in that line.

In 1898 Mr. Koen and his brother T. F. Koen engaged in the house furnishing business at Wheeling, under the name of the Palace Furniture Company. This enterprise was a prosperous one and was conducted by them jointly until the death of his brother in 1904. Soon afterward Mr. Koen disposed of his interest in the business and for several years past his investments have been largely concentrated in the immediate vicinity of Mannington.

In 1869 Mr. Koen married Miss Florida B. Knotts, daughter of John and Rebecca (Kidwell) Knotts, of Fairmont. Her father was a West Virginia merchant. Mr. and Mrs. Koen had three children, their son Harry dying at the age of eight years, another child dying in infancy, while the only survivor is Daisy Leonore, wife of Glover Beardsley. Mr. Beardsley is a graduate of Yale University, and is now manager for the Otis Elevator Company in the New York City zone. Mr. and Mrs. Beardsley had two children, Annette and Nelson Porter. Mr. and Mrs. Koen, who are among the most highly respected residents of Mannington, are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is one of the trustees of the society.

JEHU KING. A native son of Preston County, born here more than three score and ten years ago, Jehu King has been faithful and loyal to the locality where he grew up and to its substantial interests. During his active career he followed farming, and is now enjoying the comforts of a retired home at Bruceton Mills.

He is one of the numerous descendants in this section of West Virginia of the pioneer James King, who with several brothers settled on Laurel Run more than a century ago. Thomas King, a son of James, the pioneer, was the grandfather of Jehu King. He was one of the very successful farmers on the Big Sand, and he married Jane Brandon, a member of the well-known Brandon family of Brandonville. Albert King, a son of Thomas, and father of Jehu, was born at Laurel Run, and left his family to enter the service of the Union Army. After more than three years he was captured, and with his brother William sent to Andersonville Prison, where as a result of hardships and starvation both died. Albert King married Hester Ann Jenkins, daughter of Evan Jenkins. Jehu was one of the several sons born to that union and who remained behind with their mother when the father went to war and did their part in helping cultivate the homestead.

Jehu King, who was born December 19, 1851, was about ten years of age when his father went to war, and his education was acquired in local schools. He had no liking for school routine or the studies of books, and he left school as soon as the opportunity presented itself. He proved a dutiful son to his widowed mother, and left the farm only after his marriage, but remained in the same locality. For forty-two years Mr. King conducted a farm now owned by the Metheny brothers. He was primarily a grain grower, keeping only sufficient stock for use and for food, and out of his efforts he accumulated the competency which enabled him to spend his declining years in comfort.

Mr. King left the farm and the old home locality in May, 1919, after disposing of his personal property by public sale, and since then he and his small family have lived in Bruceton Mills. His home is the old John Spindler property, a place built for Mrs. Hyde, a sister of Spindler. While Mr. King came to town as a retired farmer, he has sought some means of employing his energies, and as a matter of fact puts in many working days, though not so strenuously as on the farm.

Mr. King has been a man of conviction in politics and religion. He is a republican, and has supported the party ticket since voting for General Grant for president in 1872. He was reared by a mother who was an earnest Christian, and he himself joined the Baptist Church in 1876, just before his marriage, and helped build the Union Church at Laurel Run and the church at Hopewell.

January 1, 1877, Mr. King married at Smithfield, Pennsylvania, Miss Mary Collins, daughter of Andrew Collins and sister of Walter Collins, one of the leading farmers and stockmen in the vicinity of Bruceton Mills. Mrs. King was born at the old Collins farm near Bruceton Mills July 25, 1855, and was educated in the district schools. Mr. and Mrs. King have three children: Laura is the wife of George Steward, a carpenter living at Point Marion, Pennsylvania, and they have a daughter, Virginia. Charles King is a farmer near Bruceton Mills, and by his marriage to Eva Worman has a son, Harold. Miss Pearl King lives at home with her parents. The Kings have willingly assumed a share of community burdens, making their contribution to church and other causes, and were active with all their means and influence in behalf of the various campaigns during the war period.

SOLOMON GRANVILLE MOORE, M. D. It is impossible for the conscientious physician to arrive at a state of mind where he is satisfied with what he has accomplished, no matter how much it may be, for with an understanding of what is awaiting the man of science, the many doors yet unopened which will lead to new realms in the amelioration of the ills of mankind, and the constant yearning to add to his store of knowledge, he, of necessity, keeps on striving for perfection as long as life remains. It is true that in no other profession or calling is so much constantly demanded of its members as that of medicine, and those who have adopted it for their life work often find but little leisure and are frequently kept in active service both day and night. One of the men who has accomplished much of value in the medical profession in Randolph County is Dr. Solomon Granville Moore of Elkins.

Doctor Moore was born in Bellington, Barbour County, West Virginia, December 1, 1877, a son of Alpheus and Lucinda (Yoak) Moore, both of whom were born in Barbour County, the father, July 15, 1844, and the mother, April 10, 1842. The paternal grandfather, William Randolph Moore, married a Miss Price, and they came from the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia to Barbour County, West Virginia, at an early day. William Randolph Moore was a son of Samuel Moore, a native of Virginia. The Moore family is one of the oldest in Virginia, and its original settlement was in the vicinity of Winchester. The Moores are of Scotch-Irish stock and have always been protestant in their religious belief. The Yoak family is also an old Virginia one, prominent in Rockingham County. Jeremiah Yoak, the maternal grandfather of Doctor Moore, married a Miss Jones.

Alpheus Moore has been a farmer, and still resides in Barbour County, where he is held in high respect. The Moore family was one of those who remained loyal to the Union during the war between the states, William Randolph Moore and his eldest son, Silas Moore, serving in the Federal army as soldiers. Therefore it was quite consistent that Alpheus Moore should be a life-long republican, as the principles of this party are in accord with the teachings he received in his boyhood and youth. He and his wife joined the Baptist Church in early life and have continued to give it a generous support and to carry into their every-day lives the Christian virtues they have so long professed. They reared nine children to useful maturity, giving them the benefit of a real home atmosphere, and inculcated from the beginning of their understanding lessons of right living, and taught them habits of industry and thrift which will remain with them throughout their lives. Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of early teaching. As a child is taught, so will the mature man act, and Doctor Moore and his brothers and sisters realize that they must attribute much of their present prosperity and standing in their communities to the watchful care and earnest efforts of their noble Christian parents.

The boyhood and youth of Doctor Moore was passed in a normal manner, for he was reared on the farm, attended the local schools, and as soon as he could obtain a teacher's certificate he began teaching school, and continued that work for three years. He then matriculated in the University of West Virginia, and was graduated therefrom in

S. G. Moore

904, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. In 1906 he obtained his degree of Doctor of Medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore, Maryland. For the subsequent three years he was engaged in a general practice at Coalton, West Virginia, and in March, 1910, he located permanently at Elkins, where he has since remained. In 1914 he took up post-graduate work in the Harvard Medical School and in 1921 at the New York Post-Graduate School of Medicine. Together with a general practice doctor Moore specializes somewhat with internal medicine. He is a member of the Tri-County Medical Society, the West Virginia Medical Society and the American Medical Association. From 1910 to 1915 he was professor of chemistry at the Davis & Elkins College at Elkins. He is a member of the staff of physicians and surgeons of the Davis Memorial Hospital, and physician for the West Virginia Odd Fellows Home at Elkins. During the late war he served as a member of the Medical Advisory Board. He is a republican and a Baptist. Fraternally he maintains membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and he is a thirty-second degree and Knight Templar Mason and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine.

In 1903 Doctor Moore married Miss Perie Miller, of Greene County, Pennsylvania, and they have two children: Elizabeth and Virginia. Holding to high ideals in his professional work, his service has always been characterized by a devotion to duty, and with an appreciation of the responsibilities resting upon him. He is a man of broad information, and in his profession he ranks among the leaders. Doctor Moore is interested in all that pertains to modern progress and improvements along material, intellectual and moral lines, and his charities assist many worthy enterprises and people.

W. MERLE WATKINS was born at Grafton, Taylor County, West Virginia, on December 21, 1881, and has continued to reside in Grafton to the present time. Trained to studious habits by his parents, he rapidly passed through the public schools of Grafton and finished the high school course in 1898. He immediately entered West Virginia University, where he ranked high as a student and specialized in mathematics and was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts at the age of twenty. He taught one year in the country schools and three years in the Grafton High School, where he was the first athletic coach of that institution and handled the first regular teams that represented the school. He declined the high school principalship in order to enter law school, and in the fall of 1905 matriculated in the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, where he received his degree of LL. B. For the past twelve years Mr. Watkins has been doing a general law practice in his home town, except for temporary interruptions in the performance of public duties for his community, appearing in the local courts, the State Supreme Court of Appeals, the Federal Courts and as general counsellor.

In 1912 Grafton citizens, becoming disgusted with lawlessness, particularly open gambling, in the city, persuaded Mr. Watkins to accept the position of mayor and clean up the town. Upon coming into office he fulfilled expectations in this respect so well that he was defeated for re-election by the campaign cry that the city was too tightly closed. However, when a few years later he became a candidate for prosecuting attorney of the county, his record was well remembered and better considered, and he had no difficulty in being elected, and four years later, re-elected to the term he is now filling. His administration has been notable for the vigorous prosecution of the wreckers of the Grafton Bank against the strongest opposition by national, state, and local politicians of both parties, business pressure and other influences, making the fight practically alone against some of the ablest trial lawyers in the state. This prosecution was terminated only by the death of the principal defendant and the seeking of an asylum in a neighboring state of the other main instrumentality in the bank looting. Political and other influences brought to bear caused the governor of that state to refuse to honor requisition secured from the governor of West Virginia. Numerous homicidal and other grave crimes were prosecuted, and Jacob Lutz, assassin of J. E. B. Phillips, Grafton's chief of police, was convicted of murder and hanged for his crime after two trials carried through the various Appellate Courts of the state, being the first man ever executed from Taylor County.

Mr. Watkins is a republican of strong progressive tendencies. He was a staunch supporter of Theodore Roosevelt in all his campaigns. He is a past master of Mystic Lodge No. 75, A. F. and A. M., as was his father before him, past high priest of Copstone Chapter No. 12, R. A. M., eminent commander of DeMolay Commandery No. 11, Knights Templar, a member of Osiris Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Grafton Lodge No. 308, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, member of the County and State Bar associations, charter member of Grafton Rotary Club, director of Grafton Chamber of Commerce, Grafton Y. M. C. A. and Boy Scout Council. During the World War Mr. Watkins was barred for the first few months by official duties and later by the minimum age limit, but acted as government appeal agent for the County Draft Board, was a Four Minute Speaker, and volunteer worker in the various drives. When the age restriction was removed his application to the Artillery Officers Training Camp was accepted and he was ordered to report at Fort Taylor, Kentucky, on November 21, 1918, but the signing of the armistice prevented active military service.

Merle Watkins is widely known as an athletic enthusiast and has excelled in many lines of sport. He has never married, and resides at the family home with his mother and two sisters.

The parental grandparents of Mr. Watkins were James Matthew and Mary Anne (Kear) Watkins, who crossed the Atlantic from Blen Avon, Wales, in 1852 and settled at Minersville, Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania, where the grandfather continued his occupation as a coal miner until his death. They reared the following children: Mrs. Anne Wilson, who died at Lykens, Pennsylvania, in 1908, William, father of W. Merle, who died at Grafton, West Virginia, in 1892, James Kear, who died at Mahanoy City, Pennsylvania, in 1885, Miss L. K. Watkins, now living at Mount Carmel, Pennsylvania, and Matthew K., who died in 1917, at Mount Carmel.

William Watkins, father of Merle Watkins, was brought by his parents from Wales when seven years old, and his youthful experiences were gained around the hard coal regions of Eastern Pennsylvania. On reaching maturity he followed mercantile pursuits, and later entered the lumber business at Grafton when that industry was in its first activity. He was one of the community builders of Grafton, promoting many movements to improve local conditions. He was impressed into public service as mayor and president of the County Court. He was a zealous Presbyterian and Mason. In 1876 he married Grace Marie Deppon, daughter of Adam and Sophie (Putt) Deppon, of Berks County, Pennsylvania. Their children are Grace Minette, teacher of English in the Grafton High School and holder of the A. B. degree from Wilson College and West Virginia University and the degree of A. M. from Columbia University Graduate School; W. Merle; Mabel R.; and Blanche E., wife of Lon L. Cokerly, clerk of the Circuit Court of Ritchie County, West Virginia.

WILLIAM E. PATTERSON, who served five years as postmaster of Davis, came to that lumber center thirty years ago, was in the service of two of the leading milling companies that worked up the timber resources of this region, and is still in business and an influential factor in the modern life of the community.

Mr. Patterson was born on Little Capon, Gore District, Hampshire County, West Virginia, July 4, 1871. His father Silas B. Patterson, was born in the same county and in the same locality in April, 1832. He was the son of Silas, who came from Pennsylvania, but he never saw his father, being reared by his widowed mother, who had two sons and two daughters. She was of Irish birth. These children were: James, who spent his life as a farmer in Gore District of Hampshire County; Johanna, who married Silas Stanholtzer and spent her life in the old community; Catherine, who married Silas Burkett and moved to Elmwood, Illinois; and Silas Barton. Silas Barton Patterson was a Confederate soldier during the Civil war. He went into the army practically at the beginning of the war, served in General Imboden's command in West Virginia and Virginia, and was also under the command of Stonewall Jackson. While fighting in the Valley of Virginia he received a slight wound in the leg, but that did not keep him away from active duty. Finally he was captured and confined in the military prison at Fort Delaware until exchanged just before the war ended when he returned home. In his private life he was a man of great industry, and always employed his time usefully at something. He operated a small farm in Hampshire County, and lived there until his death in 1897. He was a democrat and a member of the Baptist Church. His wife was Martha Alkire, oldest of the children born to the marriage of her father, Peter Alkire, to Miss Howard. She was born in Hampshire County in May, 1842, and died in 1915, near the old home where her life had been spent. Her children were: Aleinda, Mrs. Jasper N. Carter, of Mineral County, West Virginia; Sallie, wife of A. N. Pownall, of Hampshire County; Ida, wife of Rev. H. H. Pownall, of Cedar Grove, West Virginia; Alberta, Mrs. R. F. Sanders, of Hampshire County; Nannie, wife of William Peters, of that county; William E.; Charles A., who enlisted in the regular army in 1904, is still in the service with the rank of first lieutenant, and during the World war was assigned to duty in training troops at Camp Grant and Camp Pike; Emma, Mrs. Pearl Strohsnier, of Preston County; Otie, wife of E. N. Patterson, of Elkins; Ellis H., who married Gertie Sanders and lives in Pennsylvania; and Lester Virginia, a resident of Fairmont.

The boyhood and early manhood of William Patterson were spent on the old farm in Hampshire County. He acquired a common school education, and qualified himself to teach, beginning work in the school room as a teacher at the age of seventeen. He followed this vocation for three years, and soon afterward left the old home vicinity and came to Davis, Tucker County.

Davis was then a mining camp without any municipal improvements, but a large population was gathered here employed in the mills and in the timber. Mr. Patterson's first employment was in the saw-mill of the Blackwater Lumber Company. When that mill was burned he went with the Beaver Creek Lumber Company, with which he spent several years, the greater part of the time as a lumber inspector. Subsequently he rejoined the Babcock Lumber Company, successors of the Blackwater Company, and was on duty with that corporation as lumber inspector during summer seasons until he took charge of the post office.

He became postmaster in July, 1916, as successor of J. E. Houston, and his service continued until January 1, 1922. He was appointed postmaster without a contest. Upon civil service examination under the ruling of the republican administration he headed the list for appointment, but political influence turned the office to a republican. Mr. Patterson was elected city recorder of Davis thirteen times, served one term as member of the Board of Education of Davis District, and twice was appointed secretary of the Board of Education. In January, 1922, he was elected mayor without opposition, and as successor of John Raese. As mayor, outside of the routine administration, his chief function has been to handle the strike situation so far as it affected the town of Davis. Mr. Patterson was reared in a democratic household, cast his first vote for Grover Cleveland, and in old convention days attended local conventions and was a delegate to the state convention at Parkersburg and that of Charleston. He was a spectator at the national convention in Baltimore where Woodrow Wilson was first nominated for president.

At Romney, West Virginia, July 5, 1892, Mr. Patterson married Miss Bettie Montgomery, daughter of William and Caroline (Alkire) Montgomery. Her father was born in Allegany County, Maryland, spent his early life as a farmer and then became a shoemaker. He was a Confederate soldier in Company A of the Thirty-third Virginia Regiment, and served four years, two months and thirteen days behalf of the lost cause. William Montgomery died Hampshire County, West Virginia, June 6, 1821, at the age of eighty-three. His wife when he married her was a widow Caroline (Alkire) Bryan. She was a native of Hampshire County, daughter of John Alkire, a farmer and old resident of that section. She died in 1912, at the age of eighty-five. The only child of William Montgomery at wife is Mrs. Patterson, who was born August 22, 1871. Her mother's children by her marriage to Mr. Bryan are James Bryan, of Luke, Maryland; Flora, wife of William Patterson, of Springfield, West Virginia; Doctor Lann Bryan, of Springfield; and John Bryan, of Masonic, California.

Ruth, oldest of the children of William Patterson and wife, is the wife of William Miller, of Davis, and has two children, Billie and Caroline. The two sons of the family are Barton M., a mechanic at Davis, and C. W., an automobile mechanic in the same town. Barton M. who married Alda Olson and has a daughter, Bettie, was volunteer at the time of the World war and served as an instructor in the Students' Army Training Corps at Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson are active members of the Presbyterian Church at Davis. He is a past noble grand of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a past representative to the Grand Lodge, and is a past worthy president and past representative of the fraternal Order of Eagles. He is a stockholder of the National Bank of Davis, and since leaving the post office he has been in the service of the Davis Coal and Coke Company.

CHINAWARE MANUFACTURE IN WEST VIRGINIA. At Newell, the northernmost point in the Northern Panhandle, are located the main plant and executive offices of the Homer Laughlin China Company, the largest pottery plant in the world. In point of time the industry at Newell is a young development of the old pottery center of the United States at East Liverpool, Ohio.

The Homer Laughlin China Company was started in 1871 by Homer Laughlin and his brother, Shakespear Laughlin, at East Liverpool. It was one of the first, if not the first, pottery erected in this country for the making of whiteware. There were only two kilns at the beginning. In 1876 the Laughlin Pottery received the highest award at the Centennial Exposition. After 1878 Homer Laughlin carried on the business alone until 1897, when the present corporation was formed. At that time the business consisted of only four kilns. The company during the next six years increased the number to thirty-two kilns, all located at Liverpool. In 1905 the company purchased a 500-acre tract just across the river from East Liverpool and laid out the present town of Newell. A suspension bridge was built over the Ohio and a trolley line to connect the new with the old pottery center. At Newell the Homer Laughlin China Company built the largest single pottery unit in the world, consisting of thirty kilns under one roof. It is a six-story building, 660 by 450 feet. This plant, together with the other units at East Liverpool brought the total number of kilns up to sixty-two, but as a result of the heavy demand put upon the business through foreign competition during the World war the number of kilns was increased to seventy-eight, and the production rose to two and one half times as great as the next largest pottery in the world. In 1921 the business of this company was nearly eight million dollars, and figured approximately as one tenth of the total pottery production in the world.

The directing and managing head of this great industry is W. E. Wells, the genius of pottery manufacture and the biggest man in the pottery trade of the world. He is secretary and treasurer of the company, but has in reality been everything from office boy to president.

Moreover, he represents an old family of the West Virginia Panhandle. He was born in Brooke County, December 29, 1863. It was in 1776 that Richard Wells received a grant of 640 acres lying along the state line east of Steubenville, part of which is still in the family. He rode on seback from Baltimore, when his son James was a child. Nathaniel, son of James, established and operated the ferry and owned land up and down the river for three miles. The river and one half miles of railroad from the Pennsylvania line to the river bridge at Steubenville was built by him in company with Jesse Edginton in 1849. This was done to get around the state law prohibiting outside capital from making such improvement. Later the law was modified so to permit the sale of this short line to the Pennsylvania Railroad. This four and one half mile stretch crossing the river gave what is still retained as the name of one of the largest divisions of the Pennsylvania system, the Panhandle Division. Nathaniel Wells was a very prominent man not only in business, but in public affairs, was a member of the Virginia Legislature of 1849-50 and attended the first Wheeling Convention. He had been a slave holder in earlier life, but he set his slaves free and was an ardent supporter of the new state. He died in 1884, at the age of seventy-five.

E. W. Talbot

Nathaniel Wells married Mary Atkinson, daughter of William Atkinson, and granddaughter of John Atkinson, who settled in Washington County, Pennsylvania, in 1772. William Atkinson was born in Brooke County in 1791, served as a soldier in the War of 1812, and died in 1873, a part of the farm settled in 1790.

Lewis Wells, father of W. E. Wells, was an infant when his mother died, and he was reared by his maternal grandfather, William Atkinson. He married Rose McCord, of Ellica, New York. In 1884 he removed to Steubenville, and lived there until his death in 1915, at the age of seventy-one.

W. E. Wells attended the public schools, was for several years bookkeeper in a bank and in a wholesale drug house at Steubenville. In 1889 he entered the office of the Laughlin Company and soon after was put in temporary charge of the entire plant, then comparatively small. He was manager of the East Liverpool plant when the corporation was formed in 1897, and he has been the responsible executive head during the great development and expansion of the business since that time.

Mr. Wells has served as chairman of the Republican state Convention, and was a member of the commission for the settlement of the West Virginia-Virginia debt, and one of his suggestions effected a saving to the state of one thousand dollars. He married Elizabeth Mahan, daughter of the late William B. Mahan, of Follansbee. They had three sons, Joseph M., W. E., Jr., and Arthur Atkinson, and also five grandchildren.

Among business men and men of affairs generally Mr. Wells is widely known not only as a great business executive, but as a very fluent speaker and with a wonderful command of language fitted to the expressions of his ideas. His masterpiece is entitled "My Garden," which has been widely quoted and published. The ideas for this gem of literature were derived from the pursuit of his favorite recreation and hobby, working in his garden at his home. His residence stands on an eminence overlooking the town of Newell and commands a view of the Ohio Valley for many miles.

WALTER T. McVICKER controls a prosperous industrial enterprise in the production of chestnut poles for the use of telephone and telegraph companies, and he has his residence in the thriving little city of Belington, Barbour County. He was born on the home farm, in Union District, Barbour County, December 20, 1881, and there he was reared to maturity, his educational advantages having been those of the rural schools. At the age of sixteen he found employment and began to depend upon his own resources, and with money which he saved finally defrayed his expenses of a course in the Mountain State Business College, Parkersburg, West Virginia, finishing his schooling in 1902. In the same year went into the lumber woods of this section of the state as a log scaler, and was thus employed until 1904, when he became a partner in the business conducted by Belington Planing Mill Company, with which he continued his active association until 1908. He was then made eastern representative of the Farrin-Korn Lumber Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, with headquarters in New York City, which position he held for three years. Returning to Belington in 1911 he became connected with Belington Handle & Manufacturing Company, having been actively concerned in the initiation and development of the substantial business of this company. From October, 1917, to May, 1920, he was a successful field representative of the great Western Electric Company, with which he is still affiliated, but in May, 1920, he founded his independent enterprise in the producing and marketing of chestnut poles at Belington, with the Western Electric Company as his principal customer, making shipments of chestnut poles to the various telephone and telegraph companies throughout the eastern and middle western states. His enterprise thus lends stimulus to the commercial activities of West Virginia.

Mr. McVicker is one of the vital and progressive business men of Belington, served in 1921 and 1922 as a member of the City Council, is an influential member of the local Business Men's Club, is affiliated with Belington Lodge No. 125, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, attends and supports in his home city the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Mr. McVicker's father, Granvil G. McVicker, was the son of Levi McVicker, who was one of the early settlers of Taylor County. The descendants of Granvil G. McVicker, the father of Walter T., are as follows: by his first marriage, John Morgan McVicker and Joseph Lee McVicker. By his second marriage, Walter T., of this review; Lonzo C., who served in the employ of the United States Government for a number of years in Philippine Islands, died November 25, 1920, while on board a vessel enroute to a hospital at Zamboanga, Philippine Islands; Otoway S., farmer, in Union District, Barbour County; Hazel, wife of P. H. Fallen, Buckhannon, West Virginia; and Columbus O., who served with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, in Company M, One-hundred and Thirty-second Infantry, Thirty-third Division.

January 24, 1916, recorded the marriage of Mr. McVicker to Miss Chloe Sherman, who was born and reared near Belington, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sherman. Mr. and Mrs. McVicker have two sons: William R. (adopted) and Walter T., Jr.

ELAM DOWDEN TALBOTT. No profession or calling has ever presented such opportunities for the really capable man as that of the law, and from its ranks have come the ablest men of the country. It has always been impossible for any man to rise to distinction in the law without a thorough preparation, even if it be self-earned, and this study and thought naturally develop the reasoning faculties and broaden the brain and character so that other problems are more easily solved as they arise for disposal by every public-spirited citizen. Randolph County is proud of the fact that it has given to West Virginia some very able lawyers, and among them one who has gained a reputation not by any means confined to local lines is Elam Dowden Talbott, of Elkins.

Elam Dowden Talbott is a native son of Barbour County, West Virginia, in which he was born on a farm, near Berryburg, November 8, 1857. His parents were William Woodford and Sarah (Simon) Talbott, both of whom were born and reared in Barbour County, and there they spent their useful lives, the father dying at the advanced age of eighty-five years. The mother was over sixty when she died. By occupation the father was a farmer, and he was successful in it and as a citizen. He and his wife had the following children born to them: Salathiel, Lewis W., Elam Dowden, Abram I., Mary Florence, Fitzhugh Lee, Waitman T., William Floyd, Virginia Belle, Robert D. and Rosa M., all of whom are living but Rosa M. The parents were members of the Baptist Church, in which both were zealous workers, and they reared their children in a Christian home and to habits of industry and right living. The father was a democrat, but did not care for a public life. He was a son of Robert and Polly (Woodford) Talbott, who were also born and reared in Barbour County, where Richard Talbott, the father of Robert Talbott, was a pioneer set-tlar, and the founder of the Barbour County branch of the Talbott family. Richard Talbott came to Barbour County from Fairfax County, Virginia, where he was born and where he was reared. He was a son of William Talbott, an Englishman, who was the progenitor of the Talbott family of Virginia. On the mother's side Elam Dowden Talbott is of English and German lineage.

Elam Dowden Talbott grew to manhood on his father's farm, where he did all of the various work of it, and learned the dignity of labor and the importance of thrift and perseverance, which lessons, then grounded by watchful parents, have remained with him through his professional career and been largely instrumental in securing his success as a lawyer. He gained his early educational training in the free schools, and later taught in them for two terms, following in this respect in the footsteps of many of the illustrious men of the country who, while learning themselves, taught others. For three years he was a student in the West Virginia State University, where he furthered his literary education and also studied law, and he completed his legal studies in the University of Virginia. Subsequent to his graduation Mr. Talbott was admitted to practice at the bar of his native state, in 1883, and established himself in active practice at Beverly, then the county seat of Randolph County, and immediately began to make his influence felt in his profession and as a citizen. When the county seat was removed to Elkins Mr. Talbott followed, and has been a resident of Elkins since January, 1900. He has long enjoyed a large and lucrative practice in both the state and federal courts, and is recognized as one of the ablest and most resourceful men practicing at the bar of West Virginia. He has always been a democrat in politics, but, while he has always been zealous in behalf of his party, he has never sacrificed the interests of his profession to that of politics, nor has he aspired to public honors. Yet, he was a delegate to the democratic convention in 1896, held at Chicago, Illinois, which nominated William Jennings Bryan for the presidency, and accepted the latter's "free and unlimited coinage of silver" doctrine. In 1912 he was elected a member of the West Virginia House of Delegates, in which he served for one term with credit to himself and benefit to the state. It is worthy of note that in young manhood Mr. Talbott, inspired by the suggestion of Horace Greeley, who so often advised the young men of his day to go West and grow up with the country, left West Virginia for Southwestern Missouri, and there spent two years. However, while there he decided that he preferred the surroundings and opportunities of his native state to those of any other section, and returned, continued his studies, and carried out his original plan of entering the profession of the law. His gratifying success in it proves most conclusively the wisdom of his choice, although there is no doubt but that if he had remained in Missouri the same qualities which have advanced him in West Virginia would have made him a man of note there. Following the teachings of his boyhood and youth Mr. Talbott is a Baptist in religious faith. For more than thirty years he has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is also well-known in Masonry, in which he has been advanced to the Knight Templar degree, and he is also a noble of the Mystic Shrine.

In 1886 Mr. Talbott was united in marriage with Miss Lutie Lee Bosworth, and they have five children, namely: Evalyn B., Margarite, Eugenia, Winnifred and William Donald Talbott.

As a man Mr. Talbott has always stood for the highest principles. During a long and very active career he has been the companion and co-worker of those eminent in his profession. His friends are numbered by legions, and are to be found in all ranks of life, those of long years standing and even strangers feeling the genial personality of the man. An incalculable influence, a wonderful life lived to its fullest attainment in the service of others, is an inspiration and appeal to every young man to do his best. Mr. Talbott has never been content to rest upon the work of the past when good judgment and counsel have been such a power for good, but his interests continue keenly alive to current happenings and the needs and ambitions of his fellow citizens. His various acts in connection with his civic responsibilities are characteristic of him and but serve to cement the bonds of affection and gratitude in which he is held by the entire community, and extend the scope of his influence throughout the state.

MORTON VAN VOORHIS. Though vice president of the Federal Trust & Savings Company at Morgantown, and a officer in several industrious corporations, Morton Van Voorhis has always lived in the country and has kept it close touch with agricultural interests. He is one of Monongalia County's most substantial citizens, and is a member of a family that has participated in the progressive activities of this part of the Monongahela Valley for several generations.

The family originated in three brothers who came from Holland, one locating in New York, one in the West and one in Washington County, Pennsylvania. Some of the descendants of the old stock spell the name Voorhee. Morton Van Voorhis is a great-grandson of Daniel Van Voorhis. The grandfather, L. G. Van Voorhis, was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, about 1810, but after his marriage lived in Greene County, Pennsylvania, where he died at the age of ninety-six. It was on a farm still owned by his brother Charles in Greene County, Pennsylvania, that Morton Van Voorhis was born October 8, 1868, son of Isaac and Lydia (Ross) Van Voorhis, both natives of that county. Isaac Van Voorhis spent all his life at the old homestead adjoining the West Virginia state line. He was a very substantial citizen, owned large tracts of land much of it underlaid with coal, along the Monongahela River. Van Voorhis Station on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was named for him. He was vice president of the Citizens National and the Federal Savings & Trust Company at Morgantown, but he, too, kept his home on a farm in Greene County, where he died in 1906, at the age of seventy-one. He did a large business grazing cattle and shipping stock to eastern markets, and at one time had track on his farm for the training of horses. Mr. Morton Van Voorhis has always acknowledged a keen interest in good horses. The wife of Isaac Van Voorhis died at the same age as her husband, and their two sons are Morton and Charles.

Morton Van Voorhis grew up on the home farm. As youth he made modest deals in livestock, and as a practical farmer has done a great deal to stimulate improved livestock breeding in his section. For the past twenty-eight years his home has been on his farm eight miles north of Morgantown, in the Cass District, where he owns about 500 acres. He succeeded his father as a director and at once was elected vice president of the Federal Trust & Savings Company of Morgantown, and keeps in close touch with this substantial financial institution. He is also a director in the Morgan Realty Company and one of the owners in the Strand Theater Company. With his two sons he is identified with gas production, their ownership extending to about eighteen wells. He is vice president and director of the Rosedale Coal Company at West Van Voorhis, a company operating two mines, and one of the highly profitable coal operations in this section. As a stockman Mr. Van Voorhis grazes from 200 to 400 steers. He built his attractive home on an elevated site above the river in a fine section of country as the state affords, and there is an improved state highway leading up to his home. Mr. Van Voorhis has always voted as a republican, but has had no desire for public office.

At the age of twenty-three he married Mary L. Evans of Monongalia County, daughter of Lindsay Evans, who died when she was a child. Mr. and Mrs. Van Voorhis have three children, Isaac L., John R. and Jessie Mildred. Isaac was trained at Camp Lee, Virginia, was commissioned second lieutenant and was on duty in France. He went into the army while a senior in the West Virginia State University, and after receiving his discharge resumed his studies and graduated.

JOHN F. REPAIR, former sheriff of Tucker County and one of the representative figures in the business life of the ounty and its judicial center, the City of Parsons, was born at Rowlesburg, Preston County, this state, July 17, 1868, and he was a boy at the time of the family removal to a farm near St. George in Licking District, Tucker County, where he was reared to adult age and where his somewhat limited educational advantages were those of the rural schools. His father, Frank Repair, was drowned in the Cheat River May 1, 1893, and his wife died at Parsons, the remains of both resting in Macedonia Cemetery nearannahsville, this county. Frank Repair was born at Baltimore, Maryland, and was a child at the time of his mother's death. He was sent by his father to kinsfolk in Virginia, and after the father contracted a second marriage he was the only son of the first marriage returned to Baltimore and was placed in a Catholic school. The boy did not like his school and at the age of thirteen years ran away and came to what is now West Virginia. When the Civil war began he entered the Union service as a member of the Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, and after the close of the war he was identified with Indian warfare in the West about two years. Upon his return to West Virginia he married, at Rowlesburg, Miss Annetta Hebb, a daughter of Thornton Hebb, and of their children six sons grew to maturity: John F., William, deceased, George, a resident of Kenton, Ohio, Richard, who lives at Parsons, and Nathan Ellsworth and Thomas, both likewise residents of Parsons. Frank Repair was one of the prosperous farmers of Tucker County at the time of his death, and commanded unqualified popular esteem. He was a man of jovial and generous qualities, was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and he and his wife were members of the Protestant Methodist church.

As a youth of eighteen years John F. Repair began to raft logs down the Cheat River to Rowlesburg, and he continued his active association with the timber industry about five years, in the employ of Dewey & Sons. At the age of twenty-nine years he purchased the old home farm on which he was reared, and also took unto himself a wife, who has been his devoted companion and helpmeet. After leaving his farm he established his residence at Parsons, where for three years he conducted the feed store owned by one of his brothers. In the election of 1908 he was chosen sheriff of the county by a majority of about 500 votes. He assumed office in January, 1909, and prior to the expiration of the term he purchased and remodeled the Pifer Hotel, to the conducting of which he directed his attention after retiring from the office of sheriff. Four years later he was again elected sheriff, and his administration covered the period during which the nation was involved in the World war. His eldest son met his death in the severe epidemic of influenza that prevailed at this time, as did also his chief deputy in the office of sheriff, James Bedford, a fine young man who was his representative on the Draft Board of the county and who had charge of the records of the office. Mr. Stewart, who was supplied by the county auditor to fill the vacancy as clerical assistant in the sheriff's office, succumbed to the influenza within ten days after assuming his duties, he having been succeeded by Paul Dudley, who is still in service, under the administration of Sheriff Close. Mr. Repair continued the successful operation of his hotel and farm, and in the summer of 1922 he resumed his connection also with the cutting and marketing of timber.

Mr. Repair is a staunch republican, and while on his farm he served six years as president of the School Board of Licking District. He is affiliated with the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias.

August 15, 1897, recorded the marriage of Mr. Repair and Miss Virginia M. Shaffer, who was born and reared in Tucker County, a daughter of Samuel and Angeline (Miller) Shaffer. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Repair the first-born, Dewey Dale, was just approaching manhood at the time of his death, of influenza, as previously noted; Georgia Holdie is a stenographer in the extension department of the University of West Virginia; William F. was graduated from the Parsons High School and is a member of the class of 1922 in the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg; Lena Rivers graduated from the Parsons

High School as a member of the class of 1922; Ruby Annetta graduated from the Parsons High School, class of 1922; and the younger children are Maude Ray, attending high school, Helen Angeline and Frank Fleming.

As a boy and youth Mr. Repair was of normal size and weight, but he now weighs 425 pounds, a record not equalled in Tucker County. He claims the distinction of being the heaviest man who ever served as a sheriff in the State of West Virginia.

OSCAR D. LAMBERT, scholar and educator, is one of the best qualified school men of the state. His practical teaching experience has been largely in his home county of Tucker, where his people have been well known and prominent for many years.

His first American ancestor came from England and settled on a farm in what is now Pendleton County, West Virginia. Agriculture has been the favorite vocation of most of his descendants. One of his sons was James Lambert. The grandson was James H. Lambert, grandfather of the Tucker County educator. James H. Lambert was born in 1832, in Pendleton County, and founded the family in Tucker County about 1860. He was a farmer and stock man, a timber dealer, and served as captain of the Home Guard during the Civil war. He and other members of the family were staunch Union men, and his brother Nathaniel bore arms as a Federal soldier through the war. James H. Lambert had a good education acquired by private study as well as in the country schools. He was a republican, and served several years as a member of the Tucker County Court. His death occurred January 1, 1912, in Randolph County, though his farm which he developed out of the woods was in Dry Fork District of Tucker County. He married America Yoakum, whose death occurred five years before that of her husband. Of their nine children eight grew up: Alfred, who died in Randolph County, leaving four children; James B., mentioned below; Columbus, a farmer in Dry Fork District of Tucker County and a justice of the peace; Lorenzo Dow, a farmer at Rawlings, Maryland; Provy, wife of Warren Swearingen, of Dry Fork District; Nathaniel, a merchant at Canton, Ohio; Ella, wife of Jacob Montony, of Dry Fork District; Floda, who married Doctor G. W. Wyatt, of Randolph County; and Edward, who died just about the time he reached his majority.

James B. Lambert was born December 11, 1852, and was about eight years of age when the family left Pendleton County and settled in Tucker County. He acquired a common school education, taught school about six years, and also acquired a good knowledge of the subject of surveying and did a large amount of work in that field. His home was in Dry Fork District until 1918, and then for three years he lived at Kenton in Hardin County, Ohio. In 1921 he returned to Tucker County, and is now a resident of Parsons. He cast his first presidential vote for Rutherford B. Hayes in 1876, and since that year has not failed to cast a vote at each presidential election and always for the republican candidate. In Tucker County in 1875 James B. Lambert married Alice Bonner, daughter of Solomon and Mary (Bright) Bonner. Her father, a native of Harrison County, was a farmer and a practical civil engineer and surveyor, a profession he followed in connection with farming. He died in 1894 at his home in Dry Fork District. His wife died some years earlier. They had the following children: Seymour, a farmer in Tucker County; Archibald, a farmer in the same county; James, who died in 1912, leaving a family of five children; Rebecca and Mary, who married brothers, Washington and Henry Snider; Mrs. James B. Lambert, who was born in 1856; and Margaret, who married W. A. Ault, of Tucker County.

Oscar D. Lambert, son of James B. and Alice Lambert, was born June 2, 1888, and spent his early life at the old farm in Dry Fork District. He attended country schools there, and at the age of eighteen began teaching in his home district. For several years he taught school and attended school, and in that way he provided his own opportunities for a higher education. After his second term as a teacher he entered the Shepherd College Normal School at Shepherdstown, and remained until graduating in 1911. Following that for two years he was principal of the graded schools at Jenningson, and then entered West Virginia University at Morgantown, where he finished the A. B. course and graduated in 1916.

After leaving the university Mr. Lambert was an instructor in the Elkins High School, then for one year was at Rowlesburg and another year at Jane Lew, and again interrupted his career as a teacher to enter the University of Chicago for advanced work in the department of history. He specialized in American history and government. After a portion of the school year he returned home and served as supervisor of schools in Fairfax District. In the early summer of 1921 he returned for another quarter of graduate work in the University of Chicago, at the end of which he received his Master of Arts degree. The winter of 1921 Mr. Lambert spent at St. Petersburg, Florida, where he devoted much of his time to collecting historical data along certain lines. In the early spring of 1922 he returned to West Virginia, and at this writing lives with his parents at Parsons. He is unmarried. As a teacher he has been identified with the local and State Teachers Associations. While in the University of Chicago he wrote a history of colonial manufactures in Pennsylvania as a thesis contributing toward his Master's degree.

Mr. Lambert is a republican, casting his first vote for Colonel Roosevelt in the progressive campaign of 1912. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and a teacher in the Sunday School. During the war he was registered and was classified in the fifth class. He was a member of the Four Minute Men, and made many speeches in behalf of the Red Cross and Liberty Loan drives.

WALTER WYTHE LAMBERT, present circuit clerk of Tucker County, has been a leader in politics in that county for a number of years, though his regular business is farming and sheep growing. He has a wide reputation as a breeder of some of the finest sheep for wool in this wool growing district.

He is a son of James B. and Alice (Bonner) Lambert, and further reference to this well known family of Tucker County precedes this sketch. He was born in Dry Fork District, on the home farm, March 24, 1883, and his education was provided by the public schools of the same locality. He remained with his parents on the farm until past his majority, but as a youth was earning his living both on the farm and in the lumber woods. He helped get out logs, part of the time under contract, and was in the timber business in this connection more or less for a period of ten years. For twelve months he was on a log train for the Scott Lumber Company, one of the prominent operators in this timber region of Tucker County. After his marriage Mr. Lambert established his home on part of the old homestead, and has been concentrating his attention more and more on the pure bred sheep industry. As a pedigreed sheep breeder he specializes in the famous wool dyeing strain of Rambouillet.

Mr. Lambert's paternal grandfather was a captain of the Home Guard in the Civil war, and the family through several generations have been staunch republicans. He himself cast his first vote for Colonel Roosevelt in 1904, and again supported him as a progressive candidate of 1912. His first public office was as a member of the Board of Education for the Dry Fork District. For four years he was president of this board. While still on the School Board he was appointed deputy under J. T. Darkey, assessor of Tucker County, in January, 1917, and performed the duties until elected circuit clerk. In 1920 he won the republican nomination against one competitor and was elected Circuit Court clerk in November by a majority of 216. He succeeded Lewis Spangler, and began his official duties for a four year term in January, 1921. For four years he was a member of the Republican County Committee.

Mr. Lambert is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Junior Order of American Mechanics. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has been superintendent and teacher in his home Sunday School and for one year was district Sunday School superintendent.

During the World war he was secretary of the committee of Dry Fork District in charge of the sale of War Saving Stamps.

In Tucker County July 31, 1904, Mr. Lambert married Miss Verna S. Waybright, who was born in Pendleton County, October 18, 1885, daughter of Abraham Waybright. As a child she removed to Tucker County with her widowed mother. She is the youngest of five children, and the two other survivors are Mary, wife of John Adamson, of Pendleton County, and Lenora, widow of French Bonner, of Parsons. Mr. and Mrs. Lambert have four children, named Stanley, Ruth, Lenora and Donald.

JOHN H. SQUIRES. A resident of Parsons nearly thirty years, John H. Squires is a retired business man, and for upwards of half a century was in the milling business as manufacturer of flour and feed, operating mills in a number of localities in Preston and Tucker counties.

Mr. Squires was born near Reedsville, Preston County, September 17, 1848. The family has been represented in Preston County for fully a century. His grandfather Samuel Squires, was an early settler in the Reedsville locality, where he owned the Mount Phoebe farm, the highest point of land in all that section. He died during the Civil war, when about seventy-five years of age, and he buried at Bethlehem Church near his own home. His children were: Alexander, who died a few years ago near Piedmont, West Virginia; Samuel Felling, whose record follows; Dudley, who died near Reedsville; James, who died near Independence; and Maria, who married John Shaffer and died on Bird's Creek in the Newburg locality of Preston County.

Samuel P. Squires, father of the Parsons business man, spent his life from birth in Preston County, and died in 1902, when about seventy-four years of age. He was a miller, and for a number of years was proprietor of the old Conley Mill on Decker's Creek and also of the Fortney Mill at Independence in Preston County. He conducted milling in addition to farming. He was never in a public office was a republican in politics, a Methodist, and an active Union man at the time of the war, though he had no sons of military age. He married Ann Conley. Her father John Conley, was a farmer near Reedsville, and is buried on the Conley farm. Mrs. Ann Squires was the mother of the following children: John H.; Lucien, of Independence West Virginia; William S., living in Ohio; Bolton, of Morgantown; and Charles, an Ohio man.

John H. Squires received much of his early education in a subscription school near Reedsville, and he was out of school and engaged in the practical work of life before the first free school was established in Preston County. For many years his home and business activities were in Independence in Preston County. He remained with his parents until reaching his majority, and for a time he operated a stationary engine in the mines and in sawmills in the Newburg and Scotch Hill localities of Preston County. Then after several years of association with his father in the mill business he became an employe of J. R. Smoot in the Smoot Mill, the first mill to be equipped with the "roller process" in all that section. The mill was at Independence, and he continued his business there until he came to Parsons.

At Parsons he became associated with his brother W. F. Squires in the operation of a feed mill, and when that partnership was dissolved three years later he joined George Mayer in connection with another milling enterprise, known as the Parsons Milling and Mercantile Company. When Mr. Mayer retired from this Mr. Squires continued the business and developed the milling property and the other interests of the firm until he was ready to retire from active life. For two or three years after leaving the mill he was a merchant. He is a stockholder in the Tucker County Bank.

Mr. Squires cast his first vote for president in 1872, for General Grant, and has not missed voting the republican ticket at a national election in fifty years. He has never been interested in office holdings, and his time has been quite equally divided between business and home. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias.

J. H. Squires

In Fayette County, Pennsylvania, in 1871, Mr. Squires married Abigail Pickenbaugh. Her father, Reason Pickenbaugh, was a farmer in Monongalia County, West Virginia, where Mrs. Squires was born in 1849. She died at Parsons soon after the family moved here, on October 15, 1895, the mother of the following children: Florence, wife of J. N. Lang, a Baltimore & Ohio engineer living at Newburg; Minnie, wife of Thomas Turnley, of Newburg; Melvin L., a coal miner at Masontown; Gertrude, wife of Hyland Ketzner, of Cumberland, Maryland; Lula, Mrs. Albert Felton, of Parsons, and mother of a son, John Albert; Guy Olin, who married Goldie Peterson, lives at Parsons and has two children; and John D., of Morgantown, who married Frances Imbaugh and has a daughter. John D. Squires is a corporal in charge of the detachment of State Police at Morgantown, West Virginia. Besides the grandchildren mentioned, Mrs. Minnie Turnley has one daughter. Melvin Squires is the father of five children, and Mrs. Ketzner has two daughters and one son.

For his second wife Mr. Squires married Mrs. Burnett Ryan, whose father, Ward Parsons, was the original owner of the townsite of Parsons and one of the very successful farmers and stockmen of Tucker County. It is said that he introduced the first pedigreed live stock into the county, and for many years was a successful cattle man. Mr. Squires lost his second wife by death in August, 1920.

W. F. GRADY. The Purity Baking Company of Charleston is one of the modern and model establishments of its kind in the entire state. The company was organized by W. F. Grady in 1919, with the following officers: O. O. Older, president; Dr. Atlee Mairs, vice president; and W. F. Grady, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Grady, having had the practical training and experience of an engineer, was in a position to render a great service in the supervision of all the details of construction in the plant. This plant, located on Bigley Avenue, is a modern industrial building, built of brick, steel and cement, 75x120 feet, representing an investment of about $80,000. The machinery is entirely automatic and is operated in electrically driven units. The mechanical equipment represents the last word in scientific bread making, and none of the arts and processes as the result of age and long experience in bread manufacture have been omitted here. The management has given this business intensive study and application since its founding, and has built up one of the most important enterprises in Charleston. The products of this sanitary bakery are distributed wholesale over a large part of the normal commercial territory adjacent to Charleston.

Mr. Grady is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Credit Men's Association, and is affiliated with the Elks Lodge.

A. C. BABSON. The West Virginia Water & Electric Company is one of the more important public utilities of the state. Its service primarily is supplying water and electricity for Charleston and suburbs. The present corporation is successor to the former Kanawha Water & Light Company, which in turn represented several consolidations among the water and electric companies of early times. The corporation has expanded its service and facilities in keeping with the great material development of Charleston within recent years, and the assets of the company have been augmented by the introduction of several million dollars of outside capital, so that it has the financial resources to insure a continuance of the adequate service performance of the present. The water department represents a development from small beginnings with increases almost from year to year, until at present, with a modern plant, a population of 50,000 and many industrial plants are supplied. With present normal filter plant capacity of about 12,000,000 gallons of water each 24 hours and about double this in pumping capacity the demand is only about one half of that capacity at present. The water supply is taken from the Elk River, near the city limits, and pumped into a two million gallon basin, after which it is filtered and pumped to a million gallon reservoir and to the city mains. The pumping is by steam pumps direct or by electric motor driven pumps operating with the electric current supplied by the company. All the necessary high pressure water can be pumped by either electricity or steam. Reserve pumping units are always ready to pick up the load in case of emergency or when the regular pumps are shut down for repairs.

While the plant at present is more than adequate to supply the demand, the site is large enough to permit additional growth in facilities.

The electric department likewise represents an interesting development from a small reciprocating engine unit of small capacity to modern steam turbine generators and high pressure boilers, capable of producing 8,750 kilowatts.

Mr. Max Pam, of Chicago, is president of this West Virginia public utility and he, with assistance of his associates in Chicago, New York and elsewhere has been able to arrange for the large financing necessary to develop this public necessity in the capital of the state. Several million dollars of outside capital have thus been brought into Charleston for this important enterprise through Mr. Pam's influence.

The vice president and general manager of the company is Mr. A. C. Babson, an electrical engineer and commercial executive who has had a widely diversified experience and many important responsibilities along the line of public utility operation and management.

He was born at Sacramento, California, graduated Bachelor of Science in Electric Engineering in 1900 from the University of California, and for a number of years was associated as manager for the General Electric Company's interests in the state of Washington, with headquarters at Seattle. Prior to coming to West Virginia Mr. Babson held an executive position in Wisconsin managing some of the gas and electric properties in the Milwaukee District for the Wisconsin Gas & Electric Company, one of the principal public utility concerns of that state. While there Mr. Babson served as vice president of the Wisconsin Public Utilities Association. Mr. Babson took up his duties at Charleston as vice president and general manager of the West Virginia Water & Electric Company, January 1, 1919, and since that time has been actively interested in building up a modern water and electric system for the capital city. He is an active member of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce, and on the executive committee of the West Virginia Public Utilities Association.

CHARLES ARNOLD CABELL. The career of Charles Arnold Cabell of Charleston, one of the foremost coal operators in the state, is a conspicuous instance of the enduring vitality and vigor of an old Colonial family, which in practically every generation has produced men of extraordinary ability in business and the professions and in politics and public affairs.

Charles Arnold Cabell was born in Elk District of Kanawha County in 1870, son of N. B. and Lavina C. (Wood) Cabell. The annals of Virginia contain reference to a dozen or more Cabells of special distinction, including Governor William H. Cabell and also congressmen, judges, educators and others. N. B. Cabell was born in Nelson County, Virginia, and prior to the Civil war came to Kanawha County and settled at Malden, entering the salt business and locating his slaves on the farm of Elk-two-mile in Elk District.

Charles Arnold Cabell was reared on his father's plantation, acquired a public and private school education at Charleston, attending the Kanawha Military Institute under Major Snyder. Practically from the close of his school days Mr. Cabell has been associated with the coal industry, in its practical and technical phases as well as in the financial and business side of the business. He is a well equipped mine manager, and has opened and operated mines and for a number of years he and his associates have comprised one of the largest groups of producers in the state. An honor and responsibility he enjoys is president of the Kanawha Coal Operators Association, one of the largest associations of the kind in the East.

His first active connection with the coal industry was with the Mount Carbon Coal Company, Limited, an English syndicate headed by Evan Powell and operating at Powellton on Armstrong Creek in Fayette County. With this corporation his apprenticeship was served. Subsequently he joined a combination with John L. Dickinson, J. R. Thomas and C. A. Scholz, forming the Superior Coal & Lumber Company. Its mining operations were conducted at the head of Kelly's Creek. Subsequently the same men organized the Carbon Coal Company, opening mines at Carbondale on Smother's Creek, in the extreme western part of Fayette County. Subsequently all their coal interests north of the Kanawha River were sold to the Sunday Creek Coal Company, which was one of the J. P. Morgan interests in New York. At that time Mr. Scholz left the firm, and Doctor Boyd of Charleston together with Messrs. Cabell, Dickinson and Thomas entered a new project on Upper Cabin Creek in Kanawha County. The present Carbon Fuel Company was organized in 1900, and Mr. Cabell personally prospected the present holdings of coal lands during 1900-01. While the beginning of development was on a somewhat small scale, progress was rapid in the opening of mines, so that for a number of years past the Carbon Fuel Company has been one of the most extensive producers of coal in West Virginia. The headquarters of the company are at Carbon, and Mr. Cabell constructed the railroad to that mining center from Leewood. The company mines are grouped around Carbon, there being nine operations in three different seams of coal. One of these is the celebrated Eagle seam, pronounced by authorities the finest by-product coal in the world. Other veins are the Powellton seam, noted for its coke making properties, and the Lewiston and Carbon Split seams, ranking high in special qualities.

The company has the equipment and in normal times can produce an average of a million tons of coal per year. On account of ear shortage and other conditions the company's actual production has run at an average of about 800,000 tons per year. The mining village of Carbon, built and maintained by the company, is a model mining town, the company having erected about four hundred houses for the miners, many of them being of the modern bungalow type, with conveniences and surroundings that tend to promote a contented and wholesome attitude on the part of the operatives.

Mr. Cabell is vice president and active manager of the Carbon Fuel Company. He has a home in Charleston, also one at Carbon, and spends practically all his business time in that mining town. He is a communicant of St. John's Episcopal Church at Charleston. Mr. Cabell married Miss Nellie L. Couch. Their three children are Mary Lavina, Nellie Lynn and Virginia Couch.

WALLACE KNIGHT. The remarkable building era which has almost transformed Charleston within recent years did not have to go abroad for the technical skill and business organization involved in the work. Wallace Knight, who has been located here over twenty-four years, head of the Wallace Knight Construction Company, designers and builders, has supplied a large share of the facilities in this building era.

Wallace Knight is a native of West Virginia, and largely through his individual experience has developed a wide range of knowledge and proficiency as a designer of first-class residences and apartments. He was born at Ravenswood, Jackson County, in 1869, and was a child when his parents moved to Mason County, where he was reared and educated. As a youth he learned the carpenter's trade, worked for several years as a journeyman and in 1897 located at Charleston. From a skilled mechanic he developed his powers largely through private study to a comprehensive knowledge of the wide technique involved in architecture and building construction, and aside from being a competent designer himself has surrounded his individual skill with able assistants, so that his office can supply all the facilities required in any size or type of building contract.

His position as one of the leading builders is asserted by numerous examples all over Charleston District of modern and substantial structures which he has erected and many of which he has designed. Among many business buildings one interesting example is the Virginian Theater. His specialty, however, is modern residence and apartment construction, and more of this type of work has been done by him in Charleston than by any other builder. There has been a notable building era in fine residences and apartment houses in Charleston in recent years, particularly on Quarrier, Virginia and Kanawha streets, in the eastern section of the city. Some of the conspicuous homes and apartments in that section that testify to Mr. Knight's work are the residences of F. K. Homestead, A. P. Silverstein, L. E. McWhorter, Harry Silverstein, W. J. Builtman, M. B. Goldman, E. A. Agnew, W. E. Wright and U. G. Thomas. Mr. Knight is also designer and builder of the Oberlin Building on Quarrier Street, in which his own offices are located.

Mr. Knight is a thoroughly alive and up-to-date citizen, identified with all progressive matters. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Elks. He married Miss Eva Stoglin, of Kanawha County. They have two children, Clarence Knight and Miss Iris Knight.

CORNELIUS R. PARSONS. Representing the fourth generation of a family that has been conspicuous in the affairs of Tucker County from pioneer days, Cornelius R. Parsons has in his own career accomplished something worthy of record. He is a former county superintendent of schools and more recently has been engaged in banking and merchandising at Parsons.

He is the great-grandson of the founder of the family in this section of West Virginia, James Parsons. James Parsons came to what is now Tucker County with his brother Thomas from Baltimore, Maryland. They were Englishmen by birth. On leaving Baltimore they first established themselves at Moorefield, Virginia, and thence came into the Horseshoe country of West Virginia. James Parsons is buried in White Oak Cemetery, on the old home estate. The land of that estate was given by the governor of Virginia for service he rendered Lord Fairfax, but in what capacity cannot now be stated.

His son, James R. Parsons, was born in St. George District of Tucker County about 1812, and during the Civil war moved to Black Fork District, where he died in 1887. His wife, Mahala, survived him and died at the age of eighty-three. They had ten children, all of whom reached mature years: Cornelius, who died in Grant County, leaving a family of children by two marriages; Luther, who died leaving a family in Randolph County; Joshua, who died in Parsons; Robert, only one of the children now living and a large land owner at Mackay, Idaho; Thomas Benton, mentioned below; Nancy, wife of Christopher Schoonover, of San Francisco, California; Marcella, who married Sylvester Channell, and left a large family when she died in Black Fork District; Susann, who died in Tucker County, wife of Coleman Schoonover; Harriett, who married Hamilton Burk, of Columbus, Ohio; and Emma, wife of Sylveus Rennix, of Randolph County.

Thomas B. Parsons, father of Cornelius R., was born in St. George District and lived there until he was eleven years of age, and then moved to Black Fork District, where he was an active farmer until his death in 1916, at the age of sixty-eight.

Cornelius R. Parsons was born in Black Fork District, May 4, 1875, and remained at that locality until he reached his majority. His early training was supplied by the country schools, and with that training he started teaching at the age of twenty. Altogether he devoted fifteen years of his early life to the cause of education. While teaching he was also a student and attended West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon and the University at Morgantown. He was a teacher in his home district when he was elected county superintendent of schools in 1912. He entered the office in January, 1913, as successor of H. S. Shaffer. His service as county superintendent covered a period of eight years, and was notable for progress made in a time of peculiar difficulty for schools here and all over the country.

C. R. Parsons

ome of the outstanding features of progress during his administration included the building of the Parsons High school, the raising of the entrance requirements for the (High School, the encouragement of corn, potato and tomato clubs as a means of stimulating interest in practical agriculture, and the introduction of the Junior High School at Thomas and Davis.

Mr. Parsons retired from office in 1921, and for a short time was active in the banking business with the Tucker County Bank at Parsons. He is still a director. Mr. Parsons holds a life certificate issued to him by the state as a reward for his service in the field of education and granted in 1919.

While he was still superintendent he acquired, in 1919, with H. W. Auvil as a partner, the mercantile business of F. E. Robinson at Parsons, and since severing his active connection with the bank he has devoted himself to the growing business of the firm of Auvil & Parsons. Mr. Parsons also took a leading part in securing the establishment of the Philippi Blanket Mill at Parsons, of which he is a stockholder. He is also interested in farming and was a farm in his native district of the county.

He cast his first vote in 1896, when Mr. Bryan was a candidate for President. He has been a delegate to several congressional and state conventions of his party, and has served on the Democratic Central Committee of the party. During the World war he was registered under the second draft law, and he worked with the home organizations in promoting bond sales and assisting the Red Cross and other organizations. He was one of the Four-Minute Speakers in Tucker County.

At Parsons, June 21, 1905, Mr. Parsons married Mary Elizabeth Dear, daughter of Dr. W. W. and Annie Lee (Hinkle) Dear. Her father was a native of Augusta County, Virginia, and lived for many years in Highland County, Virginia, but died in Parsons in 1922. Mrs. Parsons was the third of four daughters, the others being Miss Gertrude and Miss Ethel, the latter with the law firm of Talbott & Hoover of Elkins; and Mattie, wife of Huntley Hoffman, of Mineral County. Mrs. Parsons, who was born in Highland County, October 14, 1885, supplemented her common school work in the summer normal schools and began teaching at the age of sixteen, and was a teacher for several years after her marriage. She holds the second highest grade granted in the teachers examination in Tucker County. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Parsons are: Thelma Ruth, Marian Dear and Annie Lee.

For a number of years Mr. Parsons has been active in fraternal organizations, being affiliated with the Lodge of Masons, is a past noble grand of the Odd Fellows Lodge and past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias. He joined the Methodist Church when a youth, and has been trustee of the church and superintendent of the Sunday school, acting in both capacities at the present time.

W. S. Mason, founder and president of the Mason School, has through this institution given Charleston rank as a capital of music and fine arts as well as the seat of the state government of West Virginia. Mr. Mason is a native of Charleston, and to this city he returned with the training and honors of a broadly extensive musical education and career, and The Mason School represents his earnest and dignified efforts continued for sixteen years.

He was born at Charleston in 1873, and acquired his early education in the city schools. Later he attended St. Joseph's Academy and St. Xavier's College in Cincinnati, and while in that city began his serious musical training and education in the Cincinnati College of Music. He was a student there four years, and was given a thorough groundwork in theory, harmony and composition. He took up the violin as his special instrument. Subsequently he studied one year in New York City and for three years in Europe, principally at the Royal Academy in Munich and in the Schola Cantorum in Paris. At Paris he was a pupil of one of the greatest modern composers, Vincent d'Indy. While in Europe Mr. Mason specialized in conducting and in composition and theory of music. His musical talents came into evidence when he was a boy, and for eight years he gave his undivided energy and thought to his musical education.

After his return to this country he was a violinist in various orchestras and later an orchestra conductor. Then, in 1906, he founded The Mason School of Music in his native city. From the first he has kept this school on the high plane of his individual ideals, and has broadened his scope only as he could secure talent of similar qualifications and equally high ideals. From a school of music it has added departments until it now embraces instruction in languages, arts and crafts, artistic dancing and dramatic expression. The school is an incorporated institution with Mr. Mason, president, Harrison B. Smith, vice president, and Matilda R. Mason, secretary and treasurer. Primarily The Mason School is an institution for the training of persons of competent talent for professional work in the musical and allied arts, though an increasing number of students have sought the school's advantages as a source of training for general and well rounded culture.

In 1921 this school, with its various departments, occupied a new home, a fine building at 1316 Kanawha Street. This building was remodeled and enlarged to meet the special requirements of the school. For several years Mr. Mason has conducted the Charleston Symphony Orchestra in Charleston. Under his direction this has become a notable musical organization. Its weekly concerts, given on Sunday afternoon, have become a prominent feature of the artistic and musical life of the city.

JOSEPH H. HOGE is founder and president of the Bluefield Produce & Provision Company, Incorporated, a company with established connections radiating all over the southern counties and one of the leading concerns of its kind in the state. Mr. Hoge enjoys an exceptionally high standing in financial and business circles at Bluefield, where, though one of the younger business men in years, he has been identified with commercial affairs throughout the period marking the great forward progress of this city.

Mr. Hoge was born in Hoge Store, Giles County, Virginia, February 27, 1884, son of Samuel S. and Mary (Price) Hoge, natives of Virginia. His father was a farmer and a man of intellectual interests, performing his duty as a good citizen but not mixing in partisan politics. He was a member of the Masonic order.

Joseph H. Hoge acquired a common school education at Hoge Store and spent two years in Roanoke College. He left school at the age of eighteen and soon afterward came to Bluefield and engaged in the produce business, starting with limited capital and gradually extending his trade until in 1904 he incorporated the Bluefield Produce & Provision Company, and has been steadily extending its plant and facilities until the company now does an annual business valued at more than $1,500,000. The company operates on a capital of $160,000.

In December, 1905, in Rappahannock County, Virginia, Mr. Hoge married Miss Eliza Strother. She was a daughter of Judge James and Mary (Botts) Strother. Mrs. Hoge died February 25, 1911, leaving two sons, Strother and Joseph H., Jr. On June 24, 1914, Mr. Hoge married Miss Bessie Ellett, daughter of Dr. R. T. and Sue (French) Ellett. To this marriage have been born two children: William Ellett and Robert Sayers. Mr. Hoge is a member of the Episcopal Church, is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and Shriner, and is an active and influential member of the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club. He plays golf as a member of the Bluefield Country Club.

IRA V. COWGILL has been a member of the Hampshire County bar for sixteen years, is successfully established in general practice at Romney, and is one of the leaders in the democratic party in this section of the state. For some years he was associated with the school interests of the county. He commenced teaching at an early age and followed the profession for some years, being principal, and county superintendent of schools for four years, and still keeps in close touch with educational progress and interests in his home county.

The Cowgill family was established by four brothers who, with their mother, Ellen Cowgill, came from England with the colony of William Penn in 1682, the father having previously died in England. All of them established homes in Pennsylvania, and in later years one branch of the family joined in the pioneer settlement of Kentucky, and others came into Virginia. The great-grandfather of the Romney lawyer was Ewing Cowgill, who came from Pennsylvania to Hampshire County. One of his children was James Alexander Cowgill who made his home near Cold Stream in Hampshire County, and died there at the age of sixty-four, in 1882. He was a pioneer minister of the Church of Christ, both in his home locality and over sections of Western Virginia and Southern West Virginia. He did much organization work for his church, was an eloquent preacher, a thorough Bible scholar, and was largely self educated. He is remembered as a man of very heavy build, of extraordinary mentality, and of sterling integrity. James A. Cowgill also served as chaplain of the One Hundred-and-Fourteenth Virginia Infantry in the Confederate Army under Col. A. Monroe. He married Frances Hiett, daughter of Jeremiah Hiett and a sister of Col. Asa Hiett, a soldier in the Confederate Army, and representative from Hampshire County in the Legislatures of Virginia and West Virginia, and a granddaughter of Evan Hiett, a Quaker minister, who came to this part of Virginia from South Carolina. The Hietts originally were French Huguenots who settled in the Palmetto State as refugees from their persecutors in France. Mrs. James A. Cowgill was born in 1813, survived her husband five years, and was the mother of four sons, Zachary Taylor, John Marshall, Alexander Campbell and Cyrus Barclay. The first and last named died in early infancy.

Alexander Campbell Cowgill was born October 14, 1854, in Hampshire County, West Virginia, on what was formerly the old estate of Jeremiah Hiett, later owned the same and there resided until the spring of 1918, when he removed to West Falls Church in Fairfax County, Virginia. He acquired a public school education in Hampshire County, and his active career has been divided between teaching and farming. He, with his son Grady Ernest Cowgill, has a farm and a profitable orchard at West Falls Church. His wife was Miss Frances Wolford, who was born in Hampshire County, December 11, 1856, daughter of Azariah and Jane (Shanholtzer) Wolford. The Wolfords and Shanholtzers were substantial agricultural people of this region, being of German ancestry. Alexander C. Cowgill and wife had the following named children: Lenore, who died in 1906; Ira Voorhees, of Romney; James Lucas, now of West Falls Church, Virginia, who was educated at Capon Bridge Normal, taught in graded schools, owns and operates a farm at West Falls Church, and is in the service of the United States Government; Ethel Naomi, who was educated at Capon Bridge Normal, was an educator in Hampshire, Mineral and Berkeley counties until her marriage to Mr. Edgar H. Fletcher, who is an official of the United States Weather Bureau in the Yellowstone National Park; Grady Ernest, who has a liberal education, taught in Hampshire and other counties, is joint owner and operator, with his father, of the farm at West Falls Church, is now in the Railway Postal service between Washington and Pittsburgh; Edna Frances, a graduate of the public schools of Hampshire County, and living with her parents.

Ira V. Cowgill studied in the public schools of Hampshire County until he was fifteen. At the age of sixteen, the earliest age then lawful, he earned the first grade certificate. He attended the Capon Bridge Normal, taught school for eleven terms in Hampshire and Mineral counties, and for three years was principal of the Romney Schools. He took his law course in West Virginia University, graduating in 1906, and in the same year was admitted to the bar at Romney. He has been admitted to practice and practices in the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State and in the Federal Courts. During the four years he was county superintendent of Schools the program he emphasized for the constructive improvement of the schools in addition to the routine work of supervision, including the duties of county financial secretary, which office was established during his incumbency, consisted, among other things, of better and more spacious playgrounds for the children, more comfortable and hygienic buildings, and the indirect method of ventilation and unilateral lighting of school buildings.

Since leaving the office of county superintendent Mr. Cowgill has devoted himself to his law practice. He was a member of the law firm of Cornwell and Cowgill from 1916 until the latter part of 1920. Mr. Cowgill was elected chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Hampshire County in 1914, and served in that capacity until 1920, when he was made a member of the Democratic State Executive Committee from the Fifteenth Senatorial District. He was a delegate to the State Democratic Convention in Huntington in 1921, in Parkersburg in 1916, and to the Wheeling State Convention of 1920.

Mr. Cowgill was Federal food administrator for Hampshire County during the World war, was a member of the Legal Advisory Board, and like other lawyers, was drafted to assist the registrants. He was a Four-Minute Speaker, and assisted in all the Red Cross, War Savings Stamps and Liberty Loan drives. Mr. Cowgill is an elder in the Romney Church of Christ.

At Cadiz, Ohio, October 4, 1911, he married Miss Maude Muriel Johnston, who was born near that Ohio town, daughter of Andrew Jackson and Samantha E. (Smith) Johnston. The Johnstons and the Smiths were among the original settlers of Harrison County, Ohio. Mrs. Cowgill was born and reared in sight of Moravian Ridge, over which the Confederate General John Morgan raided during his invasion of Southern Ohio. She was educated in the public schools of Ohio, and won the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy from Bethany College. Her maternal great-grandfather, William P. Smith, was a successful farmer and educator, and built one of the first spacious brick mansions in that section of Ohio. Her grandmother, Mary Jane (Miller) Smith's mother, Margaret Gillespie (Lightner) Miller, was a cousin of James Gillespie Blaine, a speaker of the United States House of Representatives and republican nominee for president in 1884.

To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Cowgill has been born one child, Hannah Mary Cowgill.

WILLIAM GRAY BARNHART, by reason of his four years' service as United States district attorney for the Southern District of West Virginia and as head of one of the busiest law firms at Charleston, achieved a really state wide reputation at the bar of West Virginia.

These achievements were the result of a comparatively brief lifetime. He was born near Buffalo in Putnam County April 15, 1880, and died on Christmas Eve, December 24, 1921. He was a son of Lewis and Isabel (Hartley) Barnhart. His father, also deceased, was a native of Pennsylvania and of Holland ancestry, and for years enjoyed a high place at the bar of Winfield, county seat of Putnam County. A surviving brother of William G. Barnhart is A. J. Barnhart, manager of the Charleston Association of Credit Men. The late Mr. Barnhart was a popular member of the Elks and Knights of Pythias. He married Miss Nettie E. Gillespie, of Braxton County. He was the father of two children, Ruth Frances, by a former marriage, and William Gray, Jr.

Mr. Barnhart well earned the tribute paid him by the Kanawha County Bar Association, whose memorial, now included in the records of the State and Federal Courts of West Virginia, is a concise review of his life and is presented herewith:

"The death of William Gray Barnhart was the fifth among the Kanawha bar in the year 1921, a mortality that is remarkable. Our deceased brother was born April 15, 1880, at Buffalo in Putnam County, and was educated in the local schools of that county and in the University of West Virginia, from which he graduated in 1902. He was admitted to the bar of Putnam County immediately after his graduation, and in the same year was elected to the Legislature from that county, and served in the regular session of 1903 and the extra session of 1904. In 1907 he removed to Charleston, and practiced law in this city, and

w. a. border

n 1913 was appointed United States district attorney for the Southern District of West Virginia, which position he held until 1917, when he resigned to take up private practice. His official record as district attorney was very high. He was prompt, active, energetic, and very able in the prosecution of the pleas of the government. In June, 1920, he entered the law firm of Barnhart, Horan and Pettigrew. He was a hard working, energetic, strong and successful lawyer, and an advocate of very marked powers. He was noted for his fidelity to his clients and the painstaking way in which he prepared and tried his cases. His practice extended throughout Southern West Virginia, and this made his acquaintance with the people very wide. Such a man could not keep out of politics, but his participation in politics was not selfish, and he was more often looking after the political party of which he was a member than his own personal interest. There were few men in the state with greater powers upon the 'stump' and he found it difficult to resist the demands of his friends throughout Southern West Virginia whenever a campaign was on, and often he would yield to these demands to the sacrifice of his own personal interest. Few men had more devoted personal friends. Just before he died he had settled himself down to the practice of law to the exclusion of everything else, and that success was attendant which always comes to a lawyer from application and ability. His death, from our narrow viewpoint, seems untimely. Barely in the prime of life, thoroughly equipped for a professional career, it seemed that he was just fairly beginning as a successful lawyer. His fellow members of the bar deeply regret his untimely death, and feel that this bar has lost a strong arm, and a member who would have added still further luster and honor to our profession."

WILLIAM ALONZO CORDER. In Barbour County the name Corder has come to stand for all those qualities and deeds that are significant of integrity in business and social relationship. William Alonzo Corder, popularly known among his friends as "Lonnie," has steadfastly emulated the virtues of his father and grandfather in this respect, and as stockman, banker and man of affairs his personal judgment is as nearly standardized in current acceptance among his friends and associates as any coin of character can possibly be. Members of the Corder family have lived plain and modest lives, have done well for themselves and have assisted others to the extent of their power—have been useful, honorable and responsible at all times.

The name Corder is of English and Irish ancestry. The founder of the American family was Joseph Corder, who came from England and settled in Virginia about the close of the Revolutionary war. His children consisted of four daughters and four sons, the sons being James, Joseph, William and John. James moved to Ohio and settled at Circleville, John located near Logansport, Indiana, and Joseph crossed the Blue Ridge Mountains in 1838 into Western Virginia.

The other son, William, grandfather of William A. Corder, was born March 29, 1785, in that portion of Frederick County now Fauquier County, Virginia. On September 14, 1811, he married Sarah Cole, of German ancestry and a native of Loudoun County, Virginia. In 1814, with two young children, they crossed the Alleghany Mountains, passing through the wilderness until in December they reached what is now Barbour, then a part of Harrison County. Here William Corder bought fifty acres of land for $450. He bought this from Peter Robinson, and it was located on Hacker, near Philippi. On the land he put up a small cabin of hewn logs, and within its walls started the simple life of the pioneer. From an humble beginning his industry carried him into the ranks of the well-to-do, and eventually he became owner of 1,200 acres. He and his wife had eleven children, named Joseph, William, Joshua, James, John, Edward, Elizabeth, Martha Ann, Mary, Ingaby and Hannah. Edward was a captain in the Confederate army during the Civil war, dying from wounds received while leading his men in action. His last words as he was bleeding to death were: "Go on men, push forward and save the day. I am a dead man."

Of this family James Corder was born on Hacker, near Philippi, January 15, 1824. Pioneer days had not altogether disappeared while he was a boy, and in a new country he had only an education supplied by subscription schools a few weeks each year. He was well prepared for a life of toil and activity when he reached manhood. Remaining under the parental roof until he was thirty-five years of age, he was then given about 200 acres of land by his father. At that time land was cheap and this inheritance represented only an opportunity for hard work and long persevering toil. He paid the price of success on these terms, and at one time his estate was represented by 1,500 acres and much real estate and personal property besides. At his death on March 16, 1905, he was regarded as one of the wealthiest men in the county, and the wealth of esteem paid his character was even greater. He was a conservative and careful business man, and an example of his conservatism is found in the fact that he took nearly ten years to perfect and arrange his will. His old friends still say of him that while he was slow in arriving at a definite conclusion he was always right and he never broke his word. He made money as a farmer and through cattle, and he had few equals as a judge of live stock. He had made considerable progress toward accumulating a moderate portion when the Civil war came on, and before it was over he was down at the bottom of the ladder and had to begin over again. A Southern sympathizer, he suffered the inevitable hostility paid a Southern man, and when the Jones raiders came through Philippi they ran off his cattle and horses and took away much other personal property. He met the men on the road driving off his live stock, and stopping them, he pleaded that they return him the oxen, which were his sole dependents for hauling wood. One of the raiders threatened to shoot him if he did not get out of the way, but he refused to yield and in the end he secured his yoke of oxen. However, the loss of the cattle left him heavily in debt. In that crisis he went to his father for assistance. His father was regarded as a wealthy man, but, without directly refusing the aid asked, felt that it would be a good test of character for a young man still with his best years before him if permitted to depend upon his own resources in this emergency. The young man then borrowed money at 10 per cent interest in order to restock his farm, and he proved equal to the test and before long had recouped his losses and was once more rated as a man of wealth.

James Corder married Mary C. Bond, daughter of Reuben Bond. She was born in Harrison County, August 10, 1830, and died November 27, 1904. The children of this good old couple were: William Alonzo; A. B. Corder, of Taylor County; Icy, who is Mrs. L. D. Woodford, of Philippi; Sarah, who married W. F. Cole, of Barbour County; and Stella, who died when in her teens.

James Corder was not a man to regard his responsibilities ended with looking after his own interests. He was one of the leading members of the Primitive Baptist Church in his community. He and his brother Joshua built what is known as the Mount Olive Church on Hacker, and that house of worship is still standing. He was not a seeker of public office, though asked many times to serve. He gave liberally to church and charitable causes, and was more than willing to come to the assistance of his friends and neighbors in time of need, and he served them in the true spirit of Christian fellowship.

A son of James W. and Mary C. (Bond) Corder, William Alonzo Corder was born on Hacker in Barbour County, October 20, 1862. While he has no recollection of the war itself, his early youth was spent in the period immediately following the war, when the country in general was recovering and while his father was making valiant efforts to re-establish himself as a stock man. He made the best possible use of such educational opportunities as were at hand, and while he realizes now that conditions were rather hard and that he was deprived of many of the advantages given to youth of more modern times, he also feels that his character was really strengthened in this school of hard knocks, and the lessons of thrift he thus gained have been of inestimable value to him in later years. Farming and stock raising have constituted his primary activities, and, like his father, he is a judge of good live stock and has set a high standard in his home county as a business-like farmer. His homestead is frequently pointed out as one of the best examples of progressive agriculture and stock husbandry in that part of the state. His farm, which is known as Meadow Brook Farm, comprises 700 acres, beautifully located about three miles north of Philippi, on the Beverly and Fairmont Pike, and at all seasons of the year it is a model of systematic arrangement and efficient management. Much of the land of the farm is underlaid with coal.

Supplementing his farming activities, William A. Corder has had other business concerns. He was at one time in the mercantile business and was postmaster at Switzers. He became one of the organizers and a director of the People's Bank of Philippi on September 15, 1908, and later was made first vice president of that institution and is also one of the Discount Committee. His talent for business, his wide experience and knowledge of men and conditions made him especially valuable in handling the resources of the bank. For fifteen years he has been one of the men largely responsible for the growth and prosperity of this institution, and gives much of his personal time to the bank. He is also a director of the Laurel Hill Orchard Company. Mr. Corder is not a member of any secret or fraternal order, is a democrat in politics, and is an active member and attends worship at the Mount Olive Primitive Baptist Church, where his father and grandfather worshipped before him.

On June 19, 1884, Mr. Corder married Nannie R. Reynolds, who was born October 28, 1863, daughter of Benjamin S. and Lucy (Pell) Reynolds. Mrs. Corder graduated from the Fairmont State Normal School in 1881. The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Corder is a son, James S. Corder, a brief sketch of whom follows:

JAMES STANLEY CORDER, son of William Alonzo Corder, is a prominent young banker of Philippi. He was born at the home of his parents in Barbour County, October 11, 1887, and was liberally educated, graduating from the public schools and from Broadus College of Philippi, and attended the preparatory school of West Virginia University at Keyser, and West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon. He taught school in Barbour County for two years.

His early ambition was for a medical career, and he had attended college with that in view. However, upon the organization of the People's Bank of Philippi on September 15, 1908, he entered that institution as teller, and served in that capacity until 1914, when he became cashier. He was the youngest teller and also the youngest cashier in the city and the county when he entered upon the respective duties of those positions. The active officers of the bank are Lee J. Sandridge, president; William A. Corder, first vice president; B. E. Snyder, second vice president; J. Stanley Corder, cashier; and Sherman Lindsey, assistant cashier.

J. Stanley Corder married Miss Audrey Dyer, and they have one daughter, Ruth Reynolds Corder. J. Stanley Corder is high in Masonry being a Knight Templar and Shriner.

OWEN DUFFY HILL. Owing to the breadth of interest and wide range of accomplishments that has claimed his attention, and the fine quality of talent he has displayed in his business and expressed along literary and political lines, the subject of this sketch has long since earned a place among the most gifted, as well as among the most influential, far-seeing and successful business, political and literary men of West Virginia.

Owen Duffy Hill was born at Kendalia, Kanawha County, West Virginia, on June 18, 1865, a son of George W. and Rebecca Jane Kendall Hill. Descending as he did from early pioneer ancestry, he was fortunate in inheriting some of the strong individual characteristics that were the common property of those hardy pioneers who conquered the wilderness, builded themselves homes, developed the natural resources and made an advanced civilization in a new country possible. His grandfather, Dr. Moses Mann Hill with his brother John, came from Culpeper County, Virginia, to what is now Nicholas County, West Virginia, purchasing some forty thousand acres of land and settling at what is now Belva at the juncture of Bell Creek and Twenty Mile Creek in said county. His immediate grandfather on his mother's side, Joseph C. Kendall, who was a millwright and pioneer Methodist minister of remarkable oratorical ability and power, came from King George County, Virginia, to what is now Kanawha County, West Virginia, and while building a mill for Jacob Snyder near the mouth of Queen Shoal Creek on Elk River, purchased thirty-nine thousand acres of land in what is known as the Jacob Skyles survey, on Blue Creek and Falling Rock Creek near the 40,000 acres of land which had been purchased by the Hills.

Having been born and reared in the environment of these vast estates it was natural for him to imbibe those principles of freedom, patriotism and love of home, forest and country that go to make a strong and intensive individual citizenship, and naturally develops one's character along free and independent individual lines.

Naturally blessed by inheritance with those able mental and physical characteristics which are common to the pioneer citizens of Virginia and West Virginia, and to which many of the most prominent figures in the nation's history can trace their ancestry, and a parentage which had had all these advantages and the additional advantages of superior education and environment, the subject of this sketch could not have helped but attained at least some prominence in the world under these naturally advantageous inherent environments.

Dr. Moses Mann Hill, the father of George W. Hill, who through the Van Bibber family was a kinsman of Senator John Edward Kinna of Wisconsin and the grandfather of O. D. Hill, married a daughter of Mathias Van Bibber, of Holland Dutch ancestry, and a great granddaughter of Captain John Van Bibber, who was an officer in the American Army, also fought at the battle of Point Pleasant in 1874, and a co-pioneer with Daniel Boone, and one of whose daughters married Daniel Boone's brother Nathan and a few years later located as a pioneer settler in what is now Nicholas County, West Virginia, emigrating from Pennsylvania where he had been granted 50,000 acres of land near Philadelphia in recognition of his services in the Revolutionary war, and upon which he established a manor.

In the public exhibit in the Capitol Annex in the City of Charleston can be found the spinning wheel which Captain Mathias Van Bibber's mother brought from Holland, the metal buttons off of his military coat, and also the old flint lock rifle of immense caliber that was owned by Mathias Van Bibber, the great-great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, and used by him to fight Indians and kill buffalo.

Rebecca Jane Kendall, wife of George W. Hill and mother of Owen D. Hill, was a daughter of Joseph C. Kendall, who came from King George County, Virginia, to Kanawha County, about 1840, and who purchased and settled thirty-nine thousand acres of land in the vicinity of Kendalia, West Virginia, which was named for him. Miss Kendall for a number of years taught school at or near Malden, West Virginia, gained quite a reputation in her day as a portrait painter and artist, and was a woman of strong, forceful character and exceptional business ability, and foresight. The Kendall family are descendants of the Fitzgeralds, the Rows and Randolphs of Virginia, and direct descendants of Edward Kendall, who was postmaster general in Washington's Cabinet. Joseph C. Kendall married a daughter of Captain Edward Burgess, who came here at an early date, bringing 100 colored slaves with him, and who established a plant for the manufacture of salt on Elk River, eight miles north of Charleston, built what is now known as "Big Chimney" on Elk River, but upon drilling a salt well petroleum oil flowed into the well to such an extent that he had to abandon the enterprise. But the big chimney, then erected in connection with his operations, stands upon the north bank of Elk River, near the post office of that name to this day.

Owen Duffy Hill acquired his early political and literary inspiration, patriotic principles, his broad ideas of business and citizenship from his early training within his father's household, and his main business through life, outside of his political, literary and educational labors, has been to maintain, operate, manage and develop large tracts of timber and coal land. At his home at Kendalia he owns large tracts of land, and in New Mexico and South America, and operates lumber mills and farms, and also maintains a home in Charleston for the educational advantages of his children. In 1907 he was appointed postmaster at Kendalia.

Yours truly,
O. D. Hill.

In 1906 he prepared an article which was published in the "Manufacturers' Record" of Baltimore, Maryland, describing the natural resources of the Kanawha, Elk, Blue creek and Gauley River Valley and drew an outline and planned the building of the Kanawha and West Virginia railroad, which attracted the attention of some capitalists at Scranton, Pennsylvania, who later organized the Blue creek Coal and Land Company and purchased 46,000 acres of coal and timber land in that vicinity, making the first purchase of 11,413 acres from Mr. Hill for which they paid $178,000, and built the Kanawha and West Virginia Railroad from Charleston through this region, which opened up and developed numerous coal, timber, oil and other enterprises along this new road, and has been a constant source of improvement and development to these vicinities.

Mr. Hill has not only been a farmer, but has worked in a coal mine, sold fruit trees, taught school, leased oil and gas lands, sold Evangelist Sam Jones' sermons, kept general store, organized Hill Brothers Lumber Company, organized the Northwestern Manufacturing Company, and Clendenin State Bank, and in 1897, through the recommendation of Hon. Henry S. Graves, superintendent of the Division of Forestry of the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Hill was appointed by Messrs. Carter & Ledyard, lawyers of 44 Wall street, New York City, to estimate thirty-four thousand acres of timber land in Webster County, West Virginia, owned by C. F. Pratt, vice-president of the Standard Oil company.

In 1887, long before oil was discovered in Kanawha county, under the recommendation of Col. A. E. Humphreys, now of Mexia, Texas, Mr. Hill was appointed a notary public by Governor E. W. Wilson, of West Virginia, and hereupon leased for Colonel Humphreys all the territory for oil and gas that later developed into the Blue Creek oil fields.

From early manhood he took the same keen interest in political movements, patriotic organizations and organizations for the betterment of farm life and farm and educational work which characterized his father, and he probably has a wider range of acquaintance and association with the older leaders of these movements than any other man now living. He is probably the only man in the United States that was personally acquainted with every man whom he ever voted for president but one.

When the Union Labor party met at Cincinnati for its national convention in 1887, he attended as a Greenback delegate from West Virginia, taking the place of his father, who had received an appointment and could not go. He was the youngest member of that convention, and later was sent as a Union Labor delegate to the convention which formed the people's party. Later he was nominated for state superintendent of free schools by the Union Labor party in West Virginia, and in 1892 for the same office by the People's party, receiving each time a larger number of votes than any other individual on the ticket. He also received the votes of the Union Labor party in the West Virginia Legislature, and later of the People's party for United States senator, being the youngest man ever honored with votes for United States senator in West Virginia.

From the first he espoused the cause of the Greenback and the People's party, and during its life acted in its interests both in the state and in the nation, and since there is now no political organization that represents his ideas as a citizen's patriotic duty to his country he maintains a personal political independence that does not allow him to affiliate and does not permit him to affiliate with any of them, and did not allow him to take any part in the World war. He says "No patriot was ever a partisan and no partisan was ever a patriot."

Mr. Hill is a man of strong individuality, high ideals and sterling character. He is a hard student, a tireless worker and a man of pleasing personality. He became widely known as secretary of the Farmers' National Congress through the influence he wielded toward shaping its policies while connected with this National Farm organization. His connection with that Congress dates from 1905 when the governor of West Virginia appointed him a delegate to the Richmond, Virginia, meeting of said Congress, where he introduced and had passed a resolution against the introduction of foreign immigrants in this country, carrying the convention off its feet with an oratorical effort in support of said resolution, which the Richmond press said "Set the Convention Wild," and won the passage of the resolution over all opposition. At the session in Oklahoma City in 1906 he was elected third assistant secretary of the Congress, and as said assistant secretary introduced in the following reports the biographical sketches of the various officers, and in 1908, at Raleigh, North Carolina, was elected second assistant secretary, in 1909, first assistant secretary, and in 1913, at Plano, Illinois was elected secretary, and was reelected at Fort Worth, Texas, the next year, and served in that capacity for four years.

The committee appointed by the Farmers' National Congress to report on the work of the secretary, at the meeting at Fort Worth, Texas, in 1914, submitted to the Congress the following report:

"Your Committee desires to compliment Secretary Hill on the able manner in which he has met and handled the problems which confronted him in his official capacity. He is a live wire, and has presented the Congress with an intelligent, clear-cut annual report, supplemented by some wholesome suggestions which should claim the attention of this body. We believe that Mr. Hill, by his ability, integrity and efficiency, has met all the obligations of his office and has thereby won the confidence and respect of every member of this organization."

His services, support and influence have been extended to a number of other organizations. He was elected a member of the executive committee of the National Irrigation Congress in 1911; a delegate to the Southern Commercial Congress in 1912; and at a meeting of the Farmers' National Congress held at Nashville, Tennessee, was appointed to serve on the International Monetary Commission, which was sent to Europe to investigate the Raiffaissen and other credit systems of Germany and other countries, but on account of other pressing business engagements declined to serve. Hon. Harvie Jordan, of Georgia, having been sent in his place. In 1913 he was a delegate to the National Good Roads Congress at Detroit, Michigan. He is a member of the American Breeders' Association, West Virginia Live Stock Association, vice-president of the National Monetary League, member of the Anti-trust League, member of the Advisory Committee of the National Civic Federation, member of the Association for the Advancement of Science, a director of the Clendenin State Bank and a member of the Ralston Health Club of Washington, D. C.

During the life of the People's party, Mr. Hill was chairman of the Third Congressional District Executive Committee, edited and published a paper called "Liberty," and was also the publisher of a 400-page book which is entitled "The Church of the Bible and Its Apostasy."

On March 7, 1898, Mr. Hill married Miss Edna L. Black, of Gallatin, Missouri. They have four children, Irene, Helen, Owen Delmas and Francis B.

Although engaged in many other enterprises, Mr. Hill has always lived on the farm and been an admirer and breeder of thoroughbred stock, in the development of which he has taken much personal interest.

Mr. Hill says: Never having had any scholastic advantages, whatever I know of the sciences, medicine, philosophy, History, Astronomy and statesmanship, I owe to the long association with my father, the late G. W. Hill who was a most learned man and thorough scholar, and whatever I happen to know of law and equity and the preparation of legal papers, I learned from Hon. James F. Brown, an able lawyer and a most brilliant man with whom I was associated seventeen years, and whatever knowledge I may possess of theology and religion and whatever I may amount to in the world as a man, I owe largely to Rev. Lyman H. Johnson, late of Boston, Massachusetts, and Rev. Francis G. Merrill, of New Brunswick, New Jersey, both men of exceptional wisdom, piety, religion and scholarship, both of whom had much to do with my earlier training."

Mr. Hill frequently writes for the press along moral, civic, religious, political and patriotic lines. His articles are always carefully prepared, full of original ideas, forceful in character, clear in expression, exhibit a wide range of knowledge and well merit the consideration of an intelligent citizenship.

HOWARD C. SMITH. A casual acquaintance noting the quiet, unassuming, homelike bearing and address of Howard C. Smith of Charleston is surprised to learn his noted record as a criminal catcher, a record that has left no outward marks on him. For many years he has been engaged in the pursuit and capture of criminals, so that he has become recognized as an indispensable asset to the law and order forces of the state.

Mr. Smith was born in 1868 in Putnam County, West Virginia, on a farm located on the Teays Valley road, about two miles from Winfield, county seat. His parents, William M. and Sarah T. (Gary) Smith, were both of pioneer stock in the Kanawha Valley, good old fashioned people whose names are remembered and cherished by all who ever knew them. The mother is living on her farm with her youngest daughter, Mrs. F. H. Hicks. The father died fourteen years ago. He was an exceptionally good farmer and an expert in the raising and breeding of cattle.

From early boyhood Howard C. Smith has had an experience and a fondness for livestock. He left home at the age of sixteen, and working en route paid his way to Indiana, where he was employed on the farm of an uncle, later did farm work in Central Illinois, near Heyworth, in the corn belt. When he returned home at the age of nineteen he brought with him a modest capital accumulation of four hundred dollars. Mr. Smith about 1890 moved to Charleston, and with his brother Norris C. Smith as partner engaged in the retail meat business. This business was seriously affected by the panic of 1893, and Howard C. Smith soon withdrew and accepted appointment as constable of the Charleston district. That was the beginning of his service as a peace officer. At the regular election of 1896, as candidate for constable on the republican ticket, he received more votes from the precinct than were given to President McKinley. It was his splendid record during the four years he was in office that attracted attention and brought him offer of the position of chief of special agents for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway. He took charge of this work, remaining with the railway company four years, which greatly enhanced his reputation as a criminal officer. In 1905 Mr. Smith was appointed deputy United States marshal for the Southern District of West Virginia, and he served in that capacity eight years, under the Roosevelt and Taft administrations. Then, in 1913, he was appointed United States commissioner of Charleston, an office he held four years. Following that Mr. Smith conducted for some years a private detective bureau in Charleston. In December, 1921, the business was reorganized under the name of the Howard C. Smith Detective Bureau, the assistant manager and active head of which is his son, Clyde H. Smith. The primary feature of the bureau is the protection and safeguarding of business houses in the commercial district of Charleston, under contract with the Business Men's Division of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce.

Only a few individual cases can be noted here as typifying Mr. Smith's experience with apprehending and detecting criminals. He has come in contact with some of the most dangerous and notorious characters in the criminal history of the state. Just before he entered the service of the Chesapeake & Ohio, and while constable, he engaged in a running battle with a gang of thieves who were robbing railroad cars, and finally captured seventeen of them, all being sent to the penitentiary. Either as a natural talent or during his experience in the country as a boy, Mr. Smith acquired the faculty of handling and training dogs, and for a number of years he trained and kept a pack of blood hounds as valuable aids in criminal hunts. The most famous of these was the well remembered "Mose". On case in which the hounds were used was the capture of the notorious Joe Taylor of Putnam County, who for twelve years had had an uninterrupted record of criminal action, bootlegging, poisoning stock, burning houses and committing murder. With the aid of his hounds, Mr. Smith located Taylor in the latter's home, known as Taylor's Fort, where he had locked himself in a room, surrounded by guns and ammunition, with a rifle pointed directly at the door, the only entrance. A clever ruse adopted by Mr. Smith led to his capture without bloodshed, and he was sent to the penitentiary, where he died.

The hounds were also called into use when Mr. Smith captured Ezra Peters, a negro who had burned the barn of Charles Pemberton near Proctorsville, Ohio. While Mr. Smith has engaged in pitched battles with desperate criminals, many times he has effected captures without the use of firearms or any display of force. He has been known to go among a bunch of the most desperate men and simply by a kindly or friendly word or two get them to come along without resistance. More than once, the story is told, he has taken a jewsharp out of his pocket, played a tune, the result being that his quarry became entirely tractable and willing to surrender. Mr. Smith's personality is of the "homespun" type and not at all suggestive of the criminal officer. This no doubt is a substantial reason for his success. He has that rare quality of attracting everyone with whom he comes in contact.

His chief pleasure is in his home and in his farm, the latter a beautiful place of a hundred acres on the hill just east of the city, in reality the summer home for his family. He has a modern city residence on Elizabeth Street, in the exclusive east end of the city, and owns other valuable residence property in that section.

Mr. Smith married Miss Rosetta Florence Howell. Her father, the late Augustus T. Howell, was a widely known citizen of Putnam County, possessing a loveable character and all the good qualities that made his death a source of genuine mourning throughout the community. Mr. and Mrs. Smith's two children are Miss Constance and Clyde H. Smith. A grandson Harold Lynn Smith, six years of age, is a son of Clyde H. Smith.

CHARLES P. NASH, M. D. Although a physician by profession, Dr. Charles P. Nash has been known to the citizens of Alderson and the surrounding community for the past fifteen years in connection with important business enterprises, his field of endeavor being the handling of land and cattle. He was born in Putnam County, West Virginia, May 9, 1859, a son of James Monroe Nash.

James Monroe Nash was born at Richmond, Virginia, and in the early days of his career went to Kanawha County, West Virginia, where he engaged in salt production, later following agricultural pursuits near Buffalo, a vocation in which he continued to be occupied until his death. He became locally prominent in civic and legislative affairs and at one time represented Putnam County in the State Legislature. His wife was Missouri Martin, whose people were living in Campbell County, Virginia, and Mr. and Mrs. Nash were the parents of five sons and two daughters. Of these, James H., who died recently, was a prominent attorney of Charleston, while with the exception of Dr. Charles P. Nash, the other children became agriculturists.

Charles P. Nash grew up on the home farm and after securing his preliminary educational training followed the career of a country school teacher for two years. With the money thus obtained he went to a medical school, and in 1884 was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Baltimore, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He took a secondary course at the Post-Graduate Medical School of New York City, and began practice at Buffalo, subsequently spending one year

Robt. Kinstry

Richmond, Virginia. In the meantime he had become interested in land and cattle deals, and after coming to person applied himself to this line of activity, in which he has established a recognized position for himself. He now the owner of 2,000 acres of land in different parts of Greenbrier and Monroe counties, one of his farms being the old Renick property on which is yet standing a stone use built when the country was first invaded by paleface settlement. It is of massive construction, a very thick and key, it requiring two turns of the latter to spring the lock. Evidently this house was built as a refuge during threatened Indian invasions and in all probability served its purpose well in repelling the attacks of the hostile hordes.

Doctor Nash is a democrat and has taken an active interest in local affairs. He was elected to represent Monroe County in the State Legislature of 1913, the last session in which he elected a United States senator, and had a good record of constructive work. He is a Presbyterian in religious belief and fraternally a Royal Arch Mason. In 1893 Doctor Nash married Mary F. Mann, whose grandfather, William T. Mann, was one of the early pioneers of this region and the owner of much of the New River lands. They have had four sons: James Frank, Charles P., Edwin and Ralph Alexander. Of these, Charles P. has had a remarkable career. He was a student at the Virginia Military Institute when the United States entered the world war, and was to have graduated in June, 1917, with a first class, but with six captains of his school was selected for a lieutenancy in the United States Marine Corps, in May, 1917, and he and the others were permitted to graduate before the regular time. Young Nash went overseas to France as a member of the Marine Corps and for a time served as a marine, but was then detached and assigned to the aviation section of the marine service as a pilot of the Ninety-third Aero Squadron. He secured his flying training under the French and developed rapidly into a skilled and fearless pilot. In the great St. Mihiel drive he was some fifteen miles over the enemy's lines, endeavoring to bomb an enemy aerodrome, when he was shot down and severely wounded, his left arm being blown off with an explosive bullet. Although so horribly wounded he managed to make a successful landing and after capture by the Germans was treated in a German hospital and eventually recovered. He was held a prisoner by the enemy until the signing of the armistice, when he rejoined his comrades, and returned among the early troops to the United States. In February, 1919, and was retired with the rank of captain.

W. SHAD PECK, has been for the past ten years the aggressive and successful local agent for the Ford automobiles at Hinton, the judicial center of Summers County, and here, in 1918, he erected his modern garage, with an attractive sales and display room and well equipped repair department, this building occupying the site of the home which Mr. Peck was born, the date of his nativity having been June 1, 1892. He is a son of Dewitt Harry and Anna (Morefield) Peck, who still maintain their residence in this place, the father being sixty-two and the mother sixty-eight years of age at the time of this writing, in the spring of 1922. The Peck family name has been long and worthily identified with the history of this part of West Virginia, and the late Dr. Shannon Peck, brother of Dewitt H., built the first water and electric-light plants at Hinton. Dewitt H. Peck was formerly, and for a long period of years, in service as an engineer on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, and he is now living virtually retired. The public schools of Hinton afforded W. Shad Peck a youthful education, and at the age of eighteen years he here engaged in business, as a dealer in electrical supplies. He owned the first bicycle in Hinton, later the first motorcycle in the town, and finally the second automobile and the first and only aeroplane. His progressiveness has been shown not only in this line but also in his business activities, the scope and importance of which now mark him as one of the substantial and representative young business men of his native city and county. Four of his brothers were in the nation's service in connection with the World War: Dr. Robert S., of Hinton, was a member of the medical corps of the United States Army; Leo M. was in the motor-transport service, as a member of Company B, One Hundred and Sixteenth Supply Train; Dr. Clemmer M. was in the dental corps; and Oliver L. received his military training at Morgantown, this state.

Mr. Peck circulated the subscription list through the medium of which was purchased and paid for the first fire-department truck at Hinton, and he served as chief of the fire department for some time. He is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, is one of the vital members of the local Rotary Club and he is a member of the Presbyterian Church, while his wife belongs to the Baptist Church.

In 1915 Mr. Peck wedded Miss Lucile Settle, whose father was one of the leading members of the bar of Fayette County, where he had given service as prosecuting attorney. Mr. and Mrs. Peck have a fine little son, Billy Shad.

ROBERT KINSTREY. During the past ten years Charleston has been one of the most rapidly growing cities in the country, increasing several fold in population and spreading out over an unprecedented area, with new streets, transportation lines, and the inclusion of industrial and residential subdivisions. All of this means building and construction, and one of the leading men supplying the technical and constructive facilities in this program has been Robert Kinstrey, president of the Mason Contractors Association of Charleston.

Mr. Kinstrey was born at Richmond, Virginia, son of Robert Kinstrey, a native of the Old Dominion. His mother was a daughter of Robert Blount, the contractor who built the first sewer system at Richmond.

Robert Kinstrey was educated in Richmond, learned the brick layer's trade there, and after becoming a journeyman he remained there fifteen years. In all that time he held just two positions, one as superintendent of construction for W. L. Ragland & Company, and the other as superintendent for C. S. Oliver, these being two of the most prominent building contractors in the city. Mr. Kinstrey's work has always been in building construction, and in that field he has mastered all the technique and has shown great ability in assembling men and facilities required for success in prompt and thorough fulfillment of contracts.

When he left Richmond he sought a place where he could go into business independently as a general construction contractor, and in 1914 located at Charleston. Since coming here some of the large contracts he has handled has included the C. U. Young flats, the Sarver flats, the Cassidy flats, the Haywood Building, Black residence on Quarrier Street, and a number of other brick residences, including his own handsome home at 506 Grant Street. He was also awarded the contract and built the Junior High School Building in Charleston, one of the most modern and complete structures of its kind in the state. During the war period he did much construction work for the Government at South Charleston.

Mr. Kinstrey was one of the organizers of the Mason Contractors Association of Charleston, of which he is president. He has been twice married. He is a member of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce and the order of Elks.

JOSEPH V. BELL. Joseph V. Bell of Keyser was for more than a third of a century clerk of the county and circuit courts of Mineral County, also an early member of the legislature, and has the record of having served Mineral County in a public capacity longer than any other man.

He was born near Bunker Hill in Berkeley County, April 10, 1844. His father John Bell was born in Jefferson County, in 1818, spent his life on the farm, and died in the city of Washington in 1893. He was a member of the Masonic Order, was a whig in early life, and a strong opponent of secession. He married Elizabeth Roberts, who was born in Berkeley County in 1822, daughter of Jonathan and Margaret (Ward) Roberts. She died in 1888, the mother of three children: Maggie, who married Edward J. Beverstock and died in Washington City; Joseph Vance; and Rachel R., who married David H. Rhodes and lives at the old Lee residence at Arlington Virginia.

Joseph V. Bell acquired a rather meager education owing to the outbreak of the Civil war. Soon after war began he was put to work in a drug store in Washington, learned the profession of pharmacy in several stores, and was at Washington when the Grand Review of the Union troops was held at the close of the war. Soon afterward he established himself in business at Piedmont, but two years later he sold out and became assistant assessor of internal revenue for Mineral and Grant Counties. After about two years in this work he resigned and engaged in general merchandising at Piedmont until his business was destroyed in a fire on January 1, 1876. In 1879 he became a member of the legislature. He served in the regular session of 1879-81 and in the extra session of 1882. He helped elect Senator Camden for the United States Senate. About 1881 he became clerk and paymaster of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburgh Railway.

Upon the death of Colonel Head he was appointed County and Circuit Clerk of Mineral County on January 15, 1884. He filled the duties of both offices until January 1919, when he resigned as County Clerk, but continued as Circuit Clerk until failing eyesight and deafness compelled him to give up that office also in October, 1919, when he had nearly completed thirty-six years of continuous administration.

Mr. Bell has always been a staunch democrat supporting Mr. Tilden in 1876. His personal popularity and the efficiency of his work brought him reelection on the strength of republican votes, since Mineral County became a republican stronghold long before he left public office.

At Martinsburg, February 26, 1867, he married Virginia Wolff, who was born in Berkeley County in 1842, daughter of John M. Wolff. She died in May 1881, mother of the following children: Lillie Virginia, who died unmarried at Keyser in 1908; John Edwin, who completed his education in Vanderbilt University at Nashville, was in the employ of the Davis Coal and Coke Company, was with the party sent to the Philippines to disinter and prepare and bring home our soldier dead, and subsequently was with the firm Rogers, Brown and Company in Chicago until his health failed and he died in 1903 at Keyser unmarried; Katie, wife of Ernest P. Babb of Keyser; and Myra, wife of A. A. Jordan of Keyser.

Mr. Bell is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South and is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and represented his Lodge in Grand Lodge for some years.

FRANK H. BABB, has been a resident of Keyser over twenty years. His chief business has been real estate and insurance, but he is also a banker, and he served three terms as mayor of Keyser. He represents a family that has been in this section of West Virginia for more than a century.

It was his great-grandfather probably who came from Germany and established the family in Pennsylvania. His grandfather, Peter Babb, was the founder of the family in West Virginia, coming from Luzerne County about 1818. Some of the land owned by the Babbs in that state had been exchanged for land in Western Virginia. The family crossed through Maryland to reach their new home in what is now Grant County. The old homestead thus acquired and developed during succeeding years was maintained by the Babbs until 1919, when Obed Babb, a son of Peter, retired and moved into Keyser, where he has since lived retired. Peter Babb died at the age of fifty-one. His experiences were almost entirely those of the somewhat isolated country community in which he lived, and his time and labor were devoted to his farm. He is buried on the land he owned, the Cherry Lane Stock Farm in Grant County, near the post office of Martin. Peter Babb married Phoebe Scott, who died before him. Their children were: James, who during the Civil war, while attempting to recover some sheep stolen from him, was shot and killed by the thief; Milton, who spent his mature life in Champaign County, Illinois, and who is survived by two sons, one a prominent lawyer in Idaho and the other a banker at Champaign; Catherine, who married Okey Johnson, a farmer and stockman of Grant County, where they spent their lives; Jane, who died in Keyser when nearly ninety years of age, wife of Henry Suit, a cattle man of Grant County; Daniel William, who for many years was associated with his brother Obed in farming and stock raising and who died in Grant County, where his widow still resides; Obed; and Sallie B., who married Thomas E. Carskadon, a great leader in the prohibition party and then candidate on that ticket for the presidency, both he and his wife being now deceased.

Obed Babb, father of Frank H., was born December 21, 1833, and for more than eighty years his home was in the immediate vicinity of his birthplace. He was a youth at a time when subscription schools were the only provision made for the education of children, and he attended a private school near Moorefield. For many years he was associated with his brother Daniel W. in farming and also in the livestock business. They were drovers to the Baltimore Market, and they handled stock on a large scale, cattle, horses and mules. Obed Babb continued to keep in close touch with this business until he was past eighty-seven, and there is probably no man of his years who can surpass him as a judge of live stock. He proved his title to a leading citizen of his locality, where he was active in community affairs. He was prominent in the Methodist Episcopal Church, was an original republican, voting for John C. Fremont in 1856, but has never responded to any of the invitations to become a candidate for office.

Obed Babb married Miss Mary Hennen, of Morgantown, daughter of George and Justina (Shay) Hennen. She was born in Monongalia County in September, 1846. All her life has been devoted to her home and children and the moral and church interests of her community. Her children are: Doctor Walter M., of Keyser; Ernest Peter, a resident of Keyser and officially associated with the West Virginia State Agricultural Department; Frank Hennen; Justina, wife of J. W. Sherr, of Cincinnati, Ohio; and Mabel, who married Clarence H. Vosler and died in Grant County, leaving one son.

Frank H. Babb was born at the old home June 24, 1875. His activities were centered in that locality until he was thirty-six years of age. He attended the common schools and spent two years in an elective course at West Virginia University. On returning home from the university he became associated with his father in the business of handling live stock. After five years he retired and moved to Keyser to take up an entirely different line of business.

On moving to Keyser in 1901 he engaged in the real estate and insurance business. Mr. Babb promoted Lillard's Addition to Keyser, laid off and sold the Reynolds Addition and also the F. H. Babb's Fort Hill Addition. He has one of the standard fire insurance agencies in this section of the state, representing several of the old line companies, and also handles surety bonds and other forms of general insurance. Mr. Babb was one of the original stockholders in the Peoples Bank of Keyser, was soon elected a director, and he became its president as successor to Thomas B. Davis, one of the prominent men of this region, and a brother of the late Henry G. Davis of Elkins.

Mr. Babb has been a republican, casting his first presidential vote for William McKinley. He was assistant clerk of the Senate in 1901, but has not been active in partisan politics. He was elected mayor of Keyser in 1912 and re-elected in 1913. During his second term he took the lead in getting the Legislature to give Keyser a new charter providing for a commission form of government, and as mayor of the old regime he installed this new government and was elected the first commission mayor. At the end of his third term he retired.

Mr. Babb married Miss Gertrude Scherr at Charleston, April 9, 1902. At that time her father, Arnold C. Scherr, was filling the office of state auditor, an office he held from 1901 to 1909. Mrs. Babb was born in Grant County, Feb-

J. G. Rogers

many Alleg ater
Babb
Fetom
High
Dun
Red and of th Libe
J. J.
Whe
Hall
Bom as a stat
E
Dun
Bull act
Soc man memb
WV
Dun
L
WV
E
we v f re
B el re
T
e
S
S
S

uary 16, 1878, and was liberally educated, attending the Allegany County Academy in Cumberland, Maryland, and after Brinary Hall near Poolsville, Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Babb have two children, Mary Catherine, a student in the Potomac State School, and Arnold, attending the Keyser High School.

During the World war Mr. Babb was president of the Red Cross of Mineral County, organizing many chapters and branches and devoting much of his time to the work of that organization. He was also a leader in the various Liberty Loan campaigns, and kept the interests of the government paramount throughout that critical period.

JAMES SLOAN KUYKENDALL. Member of one of the oldest families of Hampshire County, James Sloan Kuykendall has earned creditable distinction as a lawyer of the county bar, and in his profession and as a private citizen a type of man whose work and influence are always associated with the general good.

He was born in the Springfield District of Hampshire County, December 9, 1878. His grandfather, James Kuykendall, was also a native of Hampshire County, spent his active career as a farmer, and was accidentally killed at South Branch on the Baltimore and Ohio Railway. He married Hannah Blue, and their children were: Fannie, who married Isaac Taylor; Susan, who was the wife of William Guthrie; Michael, who married Sallie Johnson; James, who married Ida McGlathery; Isaac, whose wife was Lucy Davis; Thomas, who married Catherine McGill; and William.

William Kuykendall was born in Springfield District of Hampshire County in August, 1851, and his business efforts are confined to the farm, but he became well known in the public affairs of the county, serving two terms as a member of the County Court, and for one term was president of the court. He was a democrat, served as a deacon in the Romney Presbyterian Church, and died at the age of forty-eight years. William Kuykendall married Hannah P. Sloan, who died in 1919, at the age of sixty-nine. Her father was James Sloan, a farmer on Patterson's Creek of Welton district, Mineral County, and the Sloan family were early settled in that region, the founder being the father of James Sloan, who came from Scotland. The children of William Kuykendall and wife were James Sloan; Michael Blue, who died while operating the old homestead farm, and left four children by his marriage were Edith P. Pancake; Richard Sloan, a farmer on the South Branch of the Potomac, who married Virginia Pancake, and they have five children.

James Sloan Kuykendall for the first twenty years of his life lived on the farm and shared in its activities and duties. He attended the country schools, pursued his higher education in Hampden-Sidney College in Virginia, also in Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Virginia, and took his law course in Cumberland University at Lebanon, Tennessee, where he graduated. He received his diploma from Cumberland in 1901, and after a similar course in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill he was examined before the Supreme Court and licensed to practice in the North Carolina courts. His first experience as a practicing lawyer was gained at Greenboro, North Carolina, but after a little more than a year came to West Virginia, and soon established his office and permanent home at Romney. His first case before the Hampshire County Circuit Court was the defense of one Miller charged with petit larceny, and for whom he secured an acquittal, a verdict that did much just at that time to encourage the young attorney. Throughout the steadily growing volume of his criminal practice Mr. Kuykendall has adhered to his rule to take part only on the side of the defense, and he has a merited reputation for skill and ability in that particular field. He has been attorney for the defense in three murder cases, State vs. Petrick, State vs. Averell and State vs. Gardner. He secured an acquittal in the first two, and in the third case his client received a sentence of prison for life. Mr. Kuykendall is the present city attorney of Romney, has served three terms as mayor, and for ten years has been president of the Board of Education, taking a deep interest in the success of schools and public education in general.

He is a democrat in politics, casting his first presidential vote for William J. Bryan in 1900. He has been chairman of the Executive Committee of the Second Congressional District once, three times was chairman of the County Central Committee, and was a delegate to the State Convention at Parkersburg which nominated Governor Cornwell for governor. He is a delegate and chairman of the Congressional Convention that nominated Junior Brown for Congress, and promoted the cause of that statesman in several subsequent elections.

At Romney, April 5, 1905, Mr. Kuykendall married Miss Bertha Williams, who was born in Virginia in August, 1882, daughter of Rev. James P. and Mary S. Williams. At the time of their marriage her father was presiding elder of the Moorfield District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was a confederate veteran, serving in General Mosby's command during the war. Reverend Mr. Williams and wife had four children: Mary, wife of Rev. C. M. Hesser, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Kuykendall; Marvin Williams, of Wisconsin; and Alma, wife of M. T. Strider, an undertaker at Charles Town, West Virginia. Three children constitute the family of Mr. and Mrs. Kuykendall; Alma Elizabeth, born January 6, 1906; James Sloan, Jr., born December 11, 1907; and Mary Ray, born January 15, 1909.

During the World war Mr. Kuykendall was a member of the Legal Advisory Board of Hampshire County, and assisted in making out several hundred questionnaires for the prospective soldiers of the county, and also took part in the Liberty Loan drives and cried some Red Cross sales. His family are Presbyterians, and for five years he was superintendent of the Sunday School.

JACOB WARWICK. Probably the foremost character among the early pioneers of Pocahontas County was Jacob Warwick. His father was a native of Great Britain, an engineer and surveyor, and in Colonial times was employed in surveying and locating land grants in Pocahontas County. It is not definitely known just when he located here, but his period of residence covered many years. He married Elizabeth Dunlap, and they finally returned to England and died there.

Jacob Warwick's life record is clearer. He married Mary Vance, and for a time lived at Dunmore, West Virginia, where all his children were born. He also lived at other places in Pocahontas County at Clover Lick, on Jackson River, and at Bath. His home at Clover Lick was on the direct route of emigration from the East to what were then outposts of civilization, Ohio and Kentucky, and his place was utilized as a stopping and resting point on the way. The Warwick home became famous and widely known, and mention is made of it in every early history.

Jacob Warwick was eminently a brave and just man, and lived at peace with his pioneer neighbors, but he had many fierce encounters with the Indians. His knowledge of the mountain regions far and near was remarkable, and he frequently aided government surveyors in their work. He took part in the expedition to Point Pleasant under Gen. Andrew Lewis, in the march from Lewisburg, a distance of 160 miles, requiring nineteen days. In the sanguinary conflict with the Indians that followed Jacob Warwick bore a valiant part.

Mary Vance Warwick, wife of Jacob Warwick, was in every way calculated to aid him in efforts to build a home in the wilderness. She was a devout Presbyterian, and spent her life in charities and good works, and she organized the first Sunday School in Pocahontas County. She died in 1823, aged eighty years, and is buried at Clover Lick. Jacob Warwick died in 1826, aged eighty-two years, a man of wealth for that time. His descendants are scattered throughout West Virginia, where they have held conspicuous positions in various lines of endeavor.

J. G. ROGERS as a contractor, builder and architect, has been one of the really constructive business men of Charleston for a number of years, and is also well known in that community as a citizen.

Mr. Rogers was born in 1872 on a farm in Mason County, West Virginia, grew up on the farm, attended common schools, and at the age of eighteen left home and went to Pittsburgh. While there he learned the carpenter's trade, followed it as a journeyman, and while doing the practical work of building he was an earnest student of architecture, for about five years keeping up his courses with the International Correspondence School at Scranton. In that way he made architecture and the drawing of plans and specifications a part of his equipment as a builder and contractor.

Mr. Rogers moved to Charleston in 1903. He started here as a building contractor, and being entirely without capital necessarily could handle only small building projects at the beginning. He has demonstrated the ability, the vigor and the reliability that command confidence, patronage and capital, and his business has grown from year to year until the volume for 1921 approximated $200,000.

A large number of the modern structures of Charleston testify to his work as a contractor. There are residences too numerous to mention, and also, a good share of the business and industrial building. Some of his most recent contracts are the Frankenburg & Boyd business block on Summers Street, a store building on the corner of Summers and Kanawha streets, and the Sarver Apartments on Quarrier Street, the Shields double apartment building on the South Side, the Baird hardware store at the corner of Charleston and Ohio streets, and a number of others.

Outside of his business Mr. Rogers finds his chief diversion and inspiration in his church. He is an active member of the Sixth Street Methodist Church, being president of the official board, trustee of the church property, district steward and teacher of its Men's Bible Class, which he has made one of the largest organizations of the kind in the city. Some of the best citizens in every line of business and the professions are represented in the class, and it is a class that exerts a strong influence for good not only within the church but within the community. Mr. Rogers married Miss Mamie Puckett, of Gallia County, Ohio, and they have one son, Rudolph Rogers.

A. G. HUGHES, judge of the Circuit Court of the Eighteenth West Virginia Circuit, has spent all the years of his professional life in Preston County, but prior to that had represented his native county of Jackson in the State Senate.

Judge Hughes was born on a farm near Ravenswood in Jackson County November 2, 1869. His ancestors came from Pennsylvania and old Virginia, and several of these ancestors were Patriot soldiers in the Revolution. Another member of the family was the well-known Indian fighter Jesse Hughes. Grandfather Hughes spent his life as a farmer in Jackson County, and married Elizabeth Kile, of old American and Revolutionary stock. They had two sons and three daughters, the sons being Lewis H. and James.

Lewis H. Hughes, father of Judge Hughes, was born in 1844, and as a youth during the second year of the Civil war enlisted in the Union Army of Company K, Eleventh West Virginia Infantry. He saw service in his own state and also in old Virginia, and was in the final campaigns of the great war, including Appomattox. He served as a private soldier three and a half years, and was never in hospital and never wounded. When he returned home he became a farmer, and continued that occupation in the locality of his birth until his death in 1890. He was a republican, a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and a Methodist. His wife, Mary A. Lane, was a native of Jackson County and died in 1917. Of their family of three sons and two daughters, Judge Hughes is the oldest son.

Alvaroe Glenn Hughes lived in boyhood on the farm, attended country schools, the Wesleyan College at Buchanan, and received his A. B. and LL. B. degrees from West Virginia University at Morgantown. He graduated from the law school in 1902, and in January of the following year located at Kingwood and formed a partnership with Hon. William G. Conley in the firm Hughes & Conley. He tried his first court case before Judge Holt. The firm continued in general practice until Mr. Conley's election as attorney general and removal to Charleston, and after that Judge Hughes practiced alone until he was chosen circuit judge.

He was brought up a republican, casting his first presidential vote for Benjamin Harrison, and has voted at every general election since then. He was quite a young man when his party nominated him for the Senate in Jackson County, for the district including Jackson, Mason and Roane counties. He was elected and began his four year term in the Senate January 1, 1897. The presidents of the Senate during his two sessions were N. P. Whitaker and Oliver Marshall. Judge Hughes was chairman of the committee on education and of several other committees. He voted for N. B. Scott for United States Senator.

Five years after coming to Preston County he was appointed prosecuting attorney to fill an unexpired term, and was then twice elected, serving altogether nine years. Among the many criminal cases he tried, the most noteworthy was the Mattingly prosecution, standing out as one of the most remarkable in the criminal records in the county. Judge Hughes after retiring from the office of prosecuting attorney in 1917 devoted himself to general practice. In August, 1920, he received the nomination in convention for circuit judge, and was elected in November, as the successor of Judge Neil J. Fortney. Prior to going on the bench Judge Hughes took an active part in republican party politics, served on local committees, and has many times been a speaker in behalf of good and honest government.

Judge Hughes took his first degrees in Masonry at Terra Alta, is a member of DeMolay Commandery of Knights Templar at Grafton and the Scottish Rite bodies and Shrine at Wheeling. He is a past chancellor of Kingwood Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and a member of Morgantown Lodge of Elks.

In Preston County September 1, 1909, he married Miss Nellie Jackson, who was born, reared and educated in Kingwood. She is a daughter of Grove and Virginia (Menear) Jackson. Her mother is still living at Kingwood. Mrs. Hughes was one of a family of two daughters and two sons, and was a popular teacher of Kingwood prior to her marriage. Judge and Mrs. Hughes have one daughter, Helen Louise, born in 1913. Judge Hughes has been a member of the Official Board of the Methodist Church at Kingwood.

JAMES J. TURNER is a prosperous and enterprising farmer in the Murphy's Creek neighborhood, three miles southwest of Weston. He has given his time and capabilities to the affairs of rural life for many years, and the honor and esteem he enjoys in the county is well shown by the fact that he is now a member of the County Court.

Mr. Turner was born on a farm on Sand Fork, Lewis County, March 9, 1854, son of Jackson and Margaret (Jarvis) Turner. Jackson Turner learned the trade of brick layer from his father, James Turner, but during the Civil war he was engaged in farming near Edmiston, where he died in 1863. His widow survived him until 1906. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Jackson Turner was a republican. Their children were: William H. was a soldier in the Union Army and was killed in service. John E. enlisted in the Union Army early in the war, was with his command until the end of hostilities and is now living at Rosedale, West Virginia. Mary Jane is the wife of H. L. Gaston. Lucy is the deceased wife of Levi Lockard, who was a Civil war veteran. Marcellus is a farmer at Edmiston.

James J. Turner grew up on a farm, attended country schools and the Weston public schools, and since school days his tasks and responsibilities have been almost entirely concentrated in the agricultural vocation. On April 2, 1885, he married Ida M. Langford, who was reared on the farm where she lives today. Her father, Rev. H. Langford, was a well known Baptist minister in this section of West Virginia. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Turner settled a farm on Polk Creek, where they remained over twenty years. Selling their property in that vicinity they moved in 1906 to Murphy's Creek, where Mr. Turner owns a splendid farm of 140 acres. He and his family are members of Murphy's Creek Baptist Church, of which he is a trustee. He has always been a republican in politics, and in 1918 was elected a member of the County Court and has brought to the questions and problems presented to the court the benefit of long experience and thorough knowledge of conditions and affairs in Lewis County.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner have three children: Madge, wife of D. Q. Lawson, living on a farm in the Murphy's Creek community; Lois, at home; and James J., Jr., a senior in the Weston High School.

THE WELLSBURG NATIONAL BANK is one of the most substantial and important financial institutions of Brooke county and its judicial center, the City of Wellsburg. This storied old institution dates its foundation back to the year 1832, when it instituted operations under the corporate title of Northwestern Bank of Virginia, or as the Wellsburg branch of that pioneer banking corporation, the present institution being the National Bank of Virginia at Wheeling. John C. Campbell, an attorney, became the first president of the Wellsburg bank, and of him mention is made in the general historical department of this publication. In 1863 a reorganization took place, and the institution acquired charter as the First National Bank of Wellsburg. Another reorganization, in 1871, resulted in the adoption of the present corporate title, the Wellsburg National Bank. Mr. Campbell, the first president, eventually moved from Wellsburg to Wheeling and became one of the leading members of the bar of that city. Samuel Jacob, whose son Frank still resides at the old family home-land, was a director of the bank until his death. W. K. Pendleton, president of Bethany College, became president of the bank, and thus served until about 1882, when he became president of the college mentioned. John C. Palmer, who received his personal names in honor of John C. Campbell, the first president of the institution, became president of the bank, and continued its executive head until his death in 1905, when he was succeeded by his son John C., Jr., the present incumbent. J. S. Beall, father of Colonel Beall, was active in the affairs of the bank for many years, as were also his brother, Wilson Beall, and Adam Uhn. Since 1871 the Wellsburg National Bank has based its operations on a capital stock of $100,000. In 1905 its resources were about $300,000, and to-day the resources are in excess of $1,000,000. The bank still occupies the substantial building that was erected for its use in 1836 and which is now one of the venerable landmarks of Brooke county.

JAMES HORNOR DAVIS. A civil engineer by profession, for a number of years an extensive program of business interests has claimed the time and attention of James Hornor Davis, whose home is in Clarksburg and who represents an old family of Harrison County.

This branch of the Davis family originated in Wales, and settled in the State of Maryland prior to the Revolutionary war. Caleb Davis, a grandson of the first American settler, was born in Maryland, March 15, 1769, and died probably in Virginia, April 25, 1834. His wife, Mary, was born November 10, 1774, and died September 2, 1827. They had two sons and five daughters. Only three of the daughters' names are known, Rebecca, Ann and Minerva. The sons were John, born at Woodstock, Virginia, July 11, 1797; and Rezin.

Rezin Davis, born probably at Woodstock, Virginia, on February 13, 1804, died at Clarksburg in March, 1884. He was married at Clarksburg, June 5, 1828, Miss Ann Pollard Britton, daughter of Forbes and Elizabeth (Pindall) Britton. She was born November 10, 1807, and died at Clarksburg May 19, 1877. Their children, all natives of Clarksburg, were: Caleb Forbes, born April 27, 1829, married Carrie Cox; Mary Elizabeth, born September 11, 1830, married William L. Hursey, son of John and Margaret (Laughlin) Hursey; James Pindall, born January 5, 1832, married Lovira Owens, daughter of Washington Owens; Margaret Wilson, born December 13, 1833, married Elmore B. Hursey, son of John and Margaret (Laughlin) Hursey; John Alexander, born May 18, 1836, married Aleinda Jasper, daughter of William Woodson Jasper; Rezin Pollard, born January 4, 1840, married Bettie A. Gambrell, of Elliott Mills, Maryland, and died July 20, 1876; Thomas, born April 24, 1842, died July 3, 1845; Edward, whose record is given in a following paragraph; Catherine, born August 3, 1847, died unmarried January 27, 1901.

Dr. Edward Davis, next to the youngest in the above family, was born July 3, 1844, and died at Clarksburg March 27, 1872. Though only twenty-eight when he died, he had earned success in his profession as a physician. On October 25, 1866, at Clarksburg, he married Almira Louise Hornor, who was born at Lumberport, West Virginia, July 21, 1844, daughter of James Yard Hornor. A complete record of the Hornor family is given in a separate article. After the death of Doctor Davis his widow married Judge Gideon M. Camden, a distinguished citizen of the state, and after his death she became the wife of Judge George Wesley Atkinson, who at the time of their marriage was serving as governor of West Virginia. This aged couple are now residing at Charleston. Dr. Edward Davis was the father of two sons: Edward Rezin, born at Clarksburg, West Virginia, February 11, 1868, married Garnet Hornor, daughter of Charles A. and Mary (Rhoades) Hornor, and James Hornor Davis.

James Hornor Davis was born on a farm near Bristol, formerly Cherry Camp, November 13, 1870, and was brought to Clarksburg by his mother shortly after the death of his father. He attended the public schools, graduating from high school in May, 1888, and then spent two years in West Virginia University at Morgantown, where he trained himself for civil engineering. He still regards that as his active profession, though after ten years of practice other affairs began to take up much of his time. For a time after leaving university he was associated with his brother Edward in the hardware business. Mr. Davis was one of the organizers of the West Virginia, Ohio and Western Railroad, afterward changed to the West Virginia Short Line Railroad. This road was built from Clarksburg to New Martinsville, West Virginia, and Mr. Davis was engineer on location. During 1903-04 he was deputy clerk of the County Court of Harrison County under Charles F. Holden, and resigned to engage in the real estate and insurance business at Clarksburg. Mr. Davis was appointed postmaster of Clarksburg, serving from 1917 to 1921, under the second administration of President Woodrow Wilson. He has served as a member of the city, county and state democratic executive committees, and is an ardent democrat. He is an active member of the First Presbyterian Church at Clarksburg, is a Knight Templar and thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, and is a citizen who has assumed the deepest interest in the civic and business affairs of Clarksburg.

Mr. Davis is a director of the Union National Bank, the largest in Clarksburg, is president of and a large stockholder in The Exponent Company, publishers of the Clarksburg Exponent, and has a number of other business interests in and around Clarksburg. While in West Virginia University he was appointed a Cadet by Peregrin Hays, and had military training throughout his university career. Later he was made second lieutenant of Company K of the First Regiment of the West Virginia National Guard upon its organization about 1893, and some two years later was made captain of the same company.

At Clarksburg, October 19, 1892, Mr. Davis married Edna Holmes, who was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, March 3, 1870, daughter of Matthew Gay and Elizabeth Dawson (McClary) Holmes. Her father was born in Preston County, West Virginia, November 20, 1838, and died at Clarksburg in March, 1907. In August, 1859, at the age of twenty-one, he went to Shanghai, China, and for nine years was in business there. In 1870 President Grant appointed him United States consul at Chefoo, China. He resigned in 1872 and on returning to West Virginia established his home at Clarksburg, where for many years he was in the shoe business. In 1887 he served as a member of the House of Delegates, and in 1888 was elected sheriff of Harrison County. His widow, now living with her daughter, Mrs. Davis, is the daughter of William and Katherine McCleary, her father a resident of Fayette County, Pennsylvania. Of the four children of M. G. Holmes and wife one died in infancy, a daughter, Minnie, died in early youth, the youngest is Mrs. Edna Davis, and her brother, W. Howard Holmes, lives at Oakland, California.

In their home in Clarksburg six children were born to the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Davis: Elizabeth, born August 27, 1893, died the same day. Ewing McCleary, born September 22, 1894, died June 27, 1897. Catherine Louise, twin sister of Ewing, was married October 4, 1916, to Edward Hart, son of John B. and Isabelle (Willis) Hart, and they now live at Charleston, West Virginia. Virginia Horner, born September 26, 1896, was married September 17, 1919, to the late deceased Henry Walker Ruhl, son of John L. and Julia (Walker) Ruhl. James Edward and John Holmes Davis, the surviving sons, both unmarried and now finishing their educations in Princeton University, were born respectively June 4, 1901, and December 26, 1902.

THOMAS L. WOODSON. One of the leading citizens and progressive business men of Alderson is Thomas L. Woodson, active vice president, manager and treasurer of the Woodson-Mahler Grocery Company, wholesale dealers. During a long and active career he has been the architect of his own fortune in building up a solid structure of success, and of more recent years he has come favorably before the people as a champion of modern improvements, particularly those pertaining to good roads.

Mr. Woodson was born on a farm in Monroe County, West Virginia, September 21, 1863. Zacharia Augustus Woodson, his father was a native of old Virginia, and came to what is now Monroe County, West Virginia, where he engaged in farming and operated a flour mill on Wolf Creek. He was a quiet, unassuming man and unobtrusive, and was what might be termed well-read, having an education far above the average. He was a Baptist in religion and a democrat in politics, but was not active in a political way. Mr. Woodson married Sarah Alderson, a daughter of Capt. Jack Alderson, who was a son of the old legislator, George Alderson, or "Kanawha George," as he was more familiarly known, and a grandson of Elder John Alderson, the pioneer, whose name is indelibly impressed upon the history of Southeastern West Virginia. Zacharia A. and Sarah (Alderson) Woodson had a large family of children. The parents are both deceased.

Thomas L. Woodson when a very small lad moved with his parents to a farm in Summers County, on the Greenbrier River. The Town of Talcott is located on a part of this property. Here Thomas L. grew to young manhood, receiving a public school education, and at the age of nineteen years went to Sewell, Fayette County, where he remained for about ten years, first serving as a clerk in the coal commissary of the Longdale Iron Company and later being promoted to the position of buyer of this department. He then became traveling salesman for a Charleston wholesale grocery house, but about two years later resigned and accepted a position as traveling salesman for a wholesale dry goods and furnishing establishment of Baltimore. Some seven years later, in 1910, having married Miss Nadine Worthington Dorsey, of Louisville, Kentucky, he accepted a more remunerative position as manager and buyer for the New River Company, a holding company for several concerns in Fayette County, West Virginia, which community continued to be the home of Mr. and Mrs. Woodson for about ten years. In 1910 he organized the Woodson-Mahler Grocery Company at Alderson, bought out the old jobbing concern known as the Merchants' Grocery Company and also absorbed, some time later, the Thompson Grocery Company, a wholesale enterprise. This consolidation became the Woodson-Mahler Grocery Company, wholesale dealers, with a capitalization of $200,000. July 1, 1922, this concern was recapitalized with a $500,000 capital, under the firm name of Woodson, Prince & Company. This concern has greatly expanded and is beyond question the largest concern of its kind in this entire section, giving employment to some thirty or more people and having very large annual sales. A republican in politics, Mr. Woodson has taken an active interest in public matters and served on year as mayor of Alderson and several years as chairman of the Republican Executive Committee of Greenbrier County. Few men in Southeastern West Virginia have sacrificed as much in time and money for public improvements as has Mr. Woodson, this particularly applying to good roads, a movement which is one of his greatest hobbies. Mr. Woodson is a member of the board of directors of the American Wholesale Grocers Association, whose general offices are located at Jacksonville, Florida. The American Wholesale Grocers Association was formerly the Southern Wholesale Grocers Association.

WILLIAM H. SAWYERS. In the thirtieth consecutive year of his law practice at Hinton William H. Sawyers has accumulated achievements not only in his profession but in business affairs and politics, and is easily one of the most influential men in his section of the state. He was admitted to the bar at Hinton May 6, 1893, by Judge A. N. Campbell and Homer G. Holt of the Supreme Court of Appeals and Judge Frank A. Guthrie of the Kanawha Circuit.

The old Norman French way of spelling the name was Sawtters. In France they were Catholics, but became converted to the protestant faith through the reading of protestant literature, and they suffered exile to England. There is record of John Hacker, age seventeen, William Sawyers, age eighteen, and Robert Sheppard, age twenty who ran away from England and came to America in 1608 in the Ye Hopewell, T. Babb was Master. These useful immigrants settled at "James City" in the Virginia colony, and it is from William Sawyers that the present branch of the family is descended.

Sampson M. Sawyers, great-grandfather of the Hinton lawyer, served seven years in the American Army during the war for independence. He was under General Washington. His half brother, William Sawyers, was a participant in the battle of Point Pleasant on the western side of the Alleghany Mountains in October, 1774. The grandfather of William H. Sawyers was Alexander Sawyers, who was a soldier in the battle of New Orleans under Jackson at the close of the War of 1812.

Joseph A. Sawyers, father of the lawyer, was born in Alleghany County, Virginia, in 1840, and was a soldier in the Confederate Army in the artillery branch under Gen. George Carter. For a time he was under the command of Stonewall Jackson, and was in General Lee's army at Appomattox. He went through thirty-six major engagements and was once slightly wounded. He was a non-commissioned officer. After the war and for many years he was a prosperous farmer in Greenbrier County, West Virginia, always voted for and supported the democratic ticket, and was a member of the Methodist Church. He died December 11, 1916. Joseph A. Sawyers married Cornelia V. Doss, a native of Franklin County, Virginia, and now living at the old Sawyers homestead in Greenbrier County. She was born in 1846, and all her married life has been spent in Greenbrier County. Her three sons are: William H.; Augustus, a farmer at the old homestead in Greenbrier County; and James L., a traveling salesman for Lewis Hubbard & Company of Charleston, living at Alderson.

These sons finished their education in the home schools and in the Concord Normal School at Athens. William H. Sawyers graduated from the Concord Normal on July 2, 1891. Before he became a lawyer he taught seven terms of school, and at one time was principal of the Hinton High School. He completed his law course in West Virginia University at Morgantown in 1894, and he also attended the Columbian University at Washington during 1899-1900, while employed in the Department of the Interior. He also was a student a portion of two years in the International School of Law and Diplomacy, whose an was Oliver W. Needham and whose staff of instructors and lecturers included Associate Justices Harlan, Brewer, May and John W. Foster.

A. Woodson

After his admission to the bar Mr. Sawyers began practice at Hinton, and his law business has brought him before all the courts, including the Local and Circuit courts of his home state, and the Federal Courts of Richmond and Charleston. He has served a number of business interests and corporations as attorney and in other capacities, and has helped organize several banks. He has been secretary and attorney of record for three coal corporations, the Piney Coal & Coke Land Company, the McCreery Central Pocahontas Coal Land Company, and the James McCreery Company.

While a successful attorney without any financial interests in politics, Mr. Sawyers has given much of his time to public duty. He has served as mayor of Hinton, was police judge nine years, president of the Board of Education eight years, and as democratic nominee for the office of attorney general of the state in 1916 he came nearer to being elected than any democratic nominee for a number of years. He has been a delegate to every state convention of his party since 1892, and was a member of the democratic State Executive Committee for twenty-six years. Mr. Sawyers was editor of the Independent Herald of Hinton from 1895 to 1911, and individually owned the newspaper and plant from 1901 to 1911. His editorials, which were widely copied, were models of a fine literary style, and were equally accepted whether in the field of political argument or in humorous comment on affairs.

In 1907 Mr. Sawyers married Josephine McCreery, daughter of J. T. McCreery. They have two children, Frederick W. and Thomas M. Mr. Sawyers is a Presbyterian, a Lodge, Chapter and Knight Templar Mason, a member of the Wheeling Consistory of the Scottish Rite, Beni Kedem temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston and is also affiliated with the Elks and Independent Order of Odd fellows.

HUGH H. FARLEY, M. D., is not only one of the representative physicians and surgeons of the county of Logan, where he is engaged in successful practice in the thriving little city of Logan, the county seat, but here also he is associated with Doctor Steel in the ownership and conducting of a thoroughly modern private hospital, with accommodations for fifty resident patients. Drs. Farley and Steel purchased this hospital, known as the Logan Hospital, in 1908, and have brought the same to a high standard of service. Doctor Farley specializes in the diseases of women and children, and in addition to his general and hospital practice he is retained as official physician for the Aracoma, the Shamrock and the H. T. Wilson Coal companies, prominent mining corporations in this section of the state.

Doctor Farley was born on a farm near the former rural Post Office of Burch, in what is now Mingo County, at then in Logan County, and the date of his nativity was October 15, 1878. The original representative of the Farley family settled in Virginia, and in Giles County, that state, was born the paternal grandfather of the doctor. He became one of the pioneer farmers in what is now Logan County, West Virginia. Doctor Farley is a son of Thomas B. and Nancy B. (Pinson) Farley, the former of whom was born in what is now Logan County and the latter of whom was born in Kentucky. Thomas B. Farley served in the Civil war as a soldier in the Confederate forces commanded by Gen. Jubal A. Early, and after being captured by the enemy he was held six months as a prisoner of war. He became one of the prosperous farmers and representative citizens of Logan County, served as justice of the peace and was for two terms assessor of Logan County prior to the creation of Mingo County. He and his wife became the parents of a fine family of fifteen children, and he was one of the venerable and honored citizens of Logan County at the time of his death, in May, 1920, at the age of eighty-two years.

After an academic course in Marshall College, Doctor

Farley entered the Peabody Medical School of the University of Nashville Tennessee, where he remained one year. Thereafter he was for three years a student in the Hospital College of Central University, Louisville, Kentucky, in which he was graduated in 1904, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. For the ensuing two years he was engaged in practice at Mann, Logan County, during the following two years he maintained his residence and professional headquarters at Holden, this county, and he then, in 1908, removed to Logan, the county seat, where he has since been established in practice. The Doctor is an enthusiast in his profession, with a fine sense of stewardship, and has kept in line with advances made in medical and surgical science. In 1910 he took a post-graduate course in the medical department of the University of Louisville, where his studies were in connection with the diseases of women and children, and in 1918 he completed an effective post-graduate course in the great New York Polyclinic, besides which in 1920 he similarly availed himself of the advantages of New York Post-Graduate School of Medicine. He is actively identified with the Logan County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. The Doctor is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and he and his wife hold membership in the Missionary Baptist Church.

The year 1902 recorded the marriage of Doctor Farley and Miss Myrtle May Prichard, who likewise was born and reared in what is now Mingo County, she being a daughter of James and Victoria Prichard, natives of West Virginia and residents of Burch, this county, where the father is a merchant. Dr. and Mrs. Farley have two children, Erman and Violet.

HUGH B. SHINN, a representative of the historic Shinn family of Harrison County, was one of the founders and has been occupied with the management for twenty years of the Valley Grocery Company of Belington. This is one of the prosperous wholesale concerns that add an imposing volume to the commercial trade centered at this little city. The Valley Grocery Company was founded by L. P. Shinn, G. W. Shipman and Hugh B. Shinn. The company was chartered with an actual capital of $61,000, and with an authorized capital of $100,000. The first officers were G. W. Shipman, president; H. B. Shinn, secretary and treasurer, and L. P. Shinn, vice president. It was in the fall 1902 that the house opened for business, with two traveling salesmen representing the firm in the field. The business has grown steadily, and now serves a large and important section of West Virginia. There are three traveling salesmen on the staff. The company has steadily kept in touch within its original field, handling groceries and feed. Hugh B. Shinn is a member of the State Wholesale Grocers Association.

There is something said on other pages of this publication concerning the historic Shinn family. The Shinn family of West Virginia are descended from a remote Scotch ancestor who came to this country and settled in Pennsylvania before the Revolution. The grandfather of Hugh B. Shinn was Jeremiah Shinn, a substantial farmer in the Shinnston community of Harrison County, where he spent his life and where he is buried. He married Mahala Sturms, and they had two sons and five daughters: Luther P. and Byron Shinn; Mrs. Rose Tetric; Caroline, wife of George F. Andall; Jane, who married Harry F. Randall; Florence, who became Mrs. Bruce W. Boggess; and Allie, who married D. L. Morrow. There were no politicians, ministers or other professional men in this old family, and hardly with an exception the men have been occupied either with farming or some line of commercial endeavor.

Luther P. Shinn, father of Hugh, was born in Harrison County in 1850, acquired a country school education, and has been a business man all his active career. He took up merchandising at the age of twenty-five, and is still in business at Buckhannon. The only office he ever held was as a member of the City Council at Buckhannon. For many years he has been an official in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Luther P. Shinn married Virginia Boggess, daughter ter of John W. Boggess, of Lumberport, Harrison County, an ex-soldier of the Union Army. She died in 1882, leaving the two sons, Hugh B. and Guy. Guy was associated with the wholesale business at Belington until he died in 1906, unmarried.

Hugh B. Shinn was born in Harrison County in December, 1874, but was reared at Buckhannon, Upshur County. He attended the public schools and had a brief course in Wesleyan College. His early life was spent in the atmosphere of his father's retail store, and at the age of eighteen he became an active helper in the business. He is still associated with his father's store at Buckhannon, although his main time and attention are given to the wholesale house at Belington. The management of this business, in which he has been a factor for twenty years, constitutes a man's job, and Mr. Shinn has permitted himself no special share in politics or other affairs. He was brought up a republican, and cast his first national ballot for McKinley in 1896. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Knights of Pythias.

In Upshur County in September, 1897, Mr. Shinn married Miss May Brown, who was born in Delaware County, Ohio, daughter of F. W. Brown, but since childhood she has lived in West Virginia and she finished her education at Wesleyan College. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Shinn are: Sherwood, a member of the class of 1923 in the electrical engineering course at West Virginia University; Francois, of the class of 1925 in the Baltimore Dental College; Virginia, of the class of 1925 at Wesleyan College; Kenneth is a student in the Belington High School; and Frederick, in grammar school.

MAJ. RANDOLPH STALNAKER, a resident of Beverly, West Virginia, served as a youthful soldier of the Confederacy, and for over half a century has had an active and useful career, with many honors of a civilian nature in his home state.

The Stalnakar family is one of the oldest and most numerous in West Virginia. According to a recent estimate it is stated that not less than 25,000 descendants of the pioneers in the state remain here. The name Stalnakar is of Holland Dutch origin, and the first of the family in America settled in old Virginia. The great-grandfather of Randolph Stalnakar was Adam Stalnakar, Sr., a native of Randolph County. His son, Adam Stalnakar, Jr., was born in the same county and was killed by the Indians in frontier times. The father of Major Stalnakar was also named Randolph and was born in Randolph County in 1808 and died in Wirt County in 1885. He was a harness maker and saddler by trade, and much of his life was spent at Lewisburg in Greenbrier County. He was a staunch democrat in politics, and was a member of the Episcopal Church. He married Caroline Erskine Zoll, a member of the Presbyterian Church. The children of Adam Stalnakar, Jr., were: Daniel H., Randolph Maria (who married Isaac Baker) and Ellen. The children of Randolph and Caroline Erskine Stalnakar were: Dr. John William Stalnakar, who served as a surgeon in the Confederate Army; Sarah J., whose first husband was Frank Baugh, and her second husband, Isaac Johnson; Daniel Edwin, who was a soldier in the Stonewall Brigade of the Confederate Army; Caroline Erskine, who married W. Preston Hix; Dr. Albert Gallatin Stalnakar, who was also in the Stonewall Brigade of the Confederate Army; Mamie, who married J. C. Hale; and Henry Erskine Stalnakar, who died in infancy.

Major Randolph Stalnakar spent his early life at Lewisburg in Greenbrier County, acquired a common school education, and was fifteen years of age when the war broke out between the states. He was born in Greenbrier County, June 8, 1845. Toward the close of the war he became a Confederate soldier, and served on the staff of Gen. A. W. Reynolds. His military title of major, however, is due to the commission he received and the active service he rendered as a major of State Militia participating in handling the railroad strike in West Virginia during the late '70s. He was commissioned major by Governor Mathews.

After the war he returned home poor in purse, did farm work and had a struggle for several years to make a living.

From 1868 until 1876 he was a merchant at Lewisburg. In 1877 he became private secretary to Governor H. M. Mathews, and served in that capacity four years. From 1881 to 1885 he held the more responsible office at Wheeling, West Virginia, of secretary of state. Since 1885 Major Stalnakar has been a special agent in the law department of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway. From life's opportunities he has achieved success in a financial and business way, has enjoyed many exceptional political honors, and has gained a wide circle of friends throughout the state. He was formerly active in politics as a democrat, but in recent years has been an independent. He is a member of the Episcopal Church, is a Master Mason and Elk, and a Rotarian. Major Stalnakar in 1918 married Mrs. Mabel Burns (Baker), of Fairmont. Since his marriage his home has been at Beverly in Randolph County, West Virginia.

CARTER SLOCUM FLEMING, M. D., is engaged in the successful practice of his profession in his native city of Fairmont, Marion County, as a specialist in gynecology and obstetrics. He was born at Fairmont on the 1st of April, 1891, and is a son of Joseph Perry Fleming and Cora D. (Fisher) Fleming, the Fleming family having long been one of prominence and influence in Marion County. The doctor is a descendant of John Fleming, who, in company with his three brothers, came from the North of Ireland and settled on the Delaware River in Pennsylvania in 1741. He took up a large tract of land in what is now known as Mispillion Hundred, Kent County, Delaware, and in 1789, with three of his nephews, he came to what is now West Virginia and settled on the Monongahela River. The line of descent to Doctor Fleming is as follows: John, Matthew, Alexander, William B., Francis M., and Joseph Perry. Francis M. Fleming, grandfather of the doctor, was born at Fairmont, in 1821. He learned the shoemaker's trade under the direction of his father, and eventually engaged in the retail boot and shoe business at Fairmont, where he continued a representative citizen and business man until his death, October 28, 1892. His wife, Sarah A., a daughter of Henry and Mary Pugh, of Cumberland, Maryland, survived him by about eight years and passed away in July, 1900. Francis M. Fleming served as a musician in the Sixth West Virginia Volunteer Infantry (Union) in the Civil war, and in later years maintained affiliation with the Grand Army of the Republic. He was a republican, and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Protestant Church.

Joseph Perry Fleming was born at Fairmont in the year 1845, and his death occurred November 11, 1911. As a youth he assisted in his father's shoe store and later he was for ten years independently engaged in the same line of business enterprise at Fairmont. In 1898 he was elected city clerk, his service continuing two years. He then became associated with Charles E. Reed, the firm being for nine years West Virginia state agents for J. M. Guffey of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. In 1910 Mr. Fleming became secretary of the Monongahela Industrial Company, and of this office he continued the incumbent until his death, in the following year. He was affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. On October 23, 1889, he married Cora D. Fisher, who was born at Fairmont, a daughter of Capt. John Fisher, and she still resides in her native city. Doctor Fleming is the only child of this union.

In 1909 Doctor Fleming graduated from the Fairmont High School, and thereafter he was for one year a student in the State Normal School in this city. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the City of Baltimore, Maryland, in which institution he was graduated in 1914. Since receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he has taken post-graduate work each successive year. He has been established in practice at Fairmont since 1914, and has been specially successful in his service as a gynecologist and obstetrician. He is a member of the Marion County and West Virginia State Medical Societies, Southern Medical Association, American Medical Association, and the American Child Hygiene Association. He holds membership in the Kiwanis and Country clubs of irmont, and is affiliated with the Elks, Knights of thias, Ancient Order of United Workmen and Knights of the Maccabees. He and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Protestant Church in their home city.

Carter S. Fleming.

Doctor Fleming married Mary Rolena, daughter of the e James Nuzum, of Fairmont. Mrs. Fleming is a graduate of the Fairmont High School and West Virginia State Normal School at Fairmont. Doctor and Mrs. Fleming have one little son, Joseph Smith Fleming, born June 17, 1920.

HERBERT EDWIN FIELD, one of the prominent men in the industrial affairs of the Wheeling District, has been a successful executive, but his early training and experience for the most part were on the technical side of the iron and steel industry. He is probably one of the highest qualified metallurgical engineers in the state.

He was born at Worcester, Massachusetts, November 4, 1872, son of Edwin H. and Emma (Smith) Field. He was reared and educated in his native city, famous for its great school of technology. He graduated from high school there, and in 1895 received the Bachelor of Science degree from the Polytechnic Institute. He specialized in metallurgy, and his first employment was as metallurgist and assistant of the foundry manager of the Builders Iron Foundry at Providence, Rhode Island. Following this he was metallurgist and assistant to the foundry manager of the Farrel Foundry and Machinery Company of Ansonia, Connecticut, and then went to Pittsburgh, where he was foundry manager of the Mackintosh-Hemphill Company and later of the Seaton-Sleath Company. Since coming to Wheeling Mr. Field has been president and general manager of the Wheeling Cold & Foundry Company, one of the large and important industries of the Wheeling District. He is also a director of the Dollar Savings & Trust Company of Wheeling.

During the World War Mr. Field served as a member of the War Industries Board. He is a republican in politics, member of the Congregational Church, and has many connections with social, civic and technical organizations, including the Engineers Club of New York, Duquesne Club, Pittsburgh Athletic Association and Fellows Club of Pittsburgh, the Edgeworth Club of Sewickley, Pennsylvania, the Port Henry Club and Wheeling Country Club of Wheeling, and the Nemaquin Country Club of Beallsville, Pennsylvania.

In 1900, at Hartford, Connecticut, Mr. Field married Miss Sara Chaney, daughter of Albert M. and Etta Field Chaney. Mr. Field is a member of the American Iron & Steel Institute, American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, American Institute of Mechanical Engineers, American Chemical Society, American Society for Testing Materials and American Academy of Political and Social Science.

RALPH G. CUTRIGHT, M. D., has been busily engaged in his work as a physician and surgeon at Rock Cave in Upshur County for the past twenty years. He is member of one of the oldest and most prominent families of Upshur County, and that has furnished good citizens at all times since the most beginning of history here.

He was born at Sago in Upshur County, October 2, 1870, son of Granville H. and Elizabeth J. (Beer) Cutright. Granville Cutright, who was born in Upshur County in 1841, was one of four or five brothers who served as Union soldiers. He enlisted in 1861 in a West Virginia regiment, and was in service until after the close of the war. The regiment was on duty in the West, and he was not mustered out until 1866. He then returned to Upshur County, and on September 29, 1866, married Elizabeth J. Beer, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1844. They then settled on a farm at Sago, and lived out their lives there. The father was an active republican. There were five children: Lyman, deceased, who was graduated at the West Virginia University Law School and was a member of the bar; Ralph G.; Frank, who graduated A. B. from West Virginia University and received his Master of Arts degree from Columbia College, New York and is now superintendent of the public schools at Gassaway; Delos M., a graduate of the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg and is a dairyman at Berlin, Maryland; and Ward S., who died in infancy.

Dr. Ralph G. Cutright grew up on the home farm, acquired his early advantages in the public schools, attended a select high school, and finished his medical education at Lebanon, Ohio. He also took special courses at Louisville, Kentucky, and since 1899 has been a hard working country practitioner at Rock Cave. He is a member in good standing of the various medical societies and has prospered in a business way, having his home and office at Rock Cave and considerable real estate. He is an independent voter and is a trustee of the Methodist Episcopal Church in his home town.

Doctor Cutright married Ella Rohrbough, who died in June, 1909, leaving one child, Ella K., born in September, 1906. Doctor Cutright later married a sister of his first wife, Byrd R. Rohrbough.

W. B. HAUGHT is cashier of the Dunkard Valley Bank at Blacksville, West Virginia. This is one of the prosperous financial institutions of Monongalia County, serving particularly the community of Dunkard Creek and its tributaries, about twenty-two miles west of Morgantown. The bank was organized in 1902, and still retains its capitalization of $25,000. It now has a surplus of $12,500 and has paid regular six per cent dividends. The deposits on June 30, 1921, aggregated approximately $250,000. John W. Scott is president, W. I. Booth, of Clarksburg, vice president, W. B. Haught, cashier. The first cashier of the bank was T. J. Collins, who served four or five years.

Mr. Haught was born in Battelle District of Monongalia County, a few miles west of Blacksville, November 14, 1885, son of J. N. and Nancy C. (Barr) Haught. His parents were also born in this community, and are still living at their old home. The grandfather, Henry Haught, was a native of Germany and was a lad when he came with his parents to America and settled in Battelle District.

W. B. Haught is well educated, attending college at Bridgewater, Virginia, and the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware. He studied law with James A. Meredith at Fairmont, but soon gave up his professional preparation and entered the Peoples Bank at Fairmont. He was promoted to assistant cashier, and remained there until May, 1914, when he was chosen cashier of the Dunkard Valley Bank, and is also one of its directors. Mr. Haught is a republican, and is serving his fourth term as town recorder of Blacksville. He has filled the chairs of the local lodge of Knights of Pythias and is the present keeper of records and seal. Mr. Haught takes an intelligent and active interest in all matters connected with the welfare of the community, and is particularly interested in education. He was a member of the Christian Church of Fairmont, and now works with the local Baptist and Methodist churches.

At Fairmont he married Miss Beryl Crim, of that city. Mrs. Haught assists Mr. Haught in his duties at the bank.

THE BANK OF WADESTOWN is one of the substantial smaller banks of West Virginia, located in an exclusively rural section and performing its service for a local patronage and being a reliable index of the district's prosperity. Wadestown is an inland village six miles from a railroad and thirty miles west of Morgantown. It is situated near the center of Battelle District, Monongalia County, at a point where several runs converge, the Dunkard Creek Valley extending for miles to the northeast. It is a grazing and general agricultural community, and a number of substantial families have been established in that region since pioneer times.

The bank was organized in 1905, being open for business on the 7th of October, with a capital of $25,000. The promoters of the bank were Professor Russell Morris, of the State University, and Mr. Tumlin, of the Federal Trust Company of Morgantown. Nearly all the stock, however, is held locally. The first president was Urias Shriver, who in April, 1918, was succeeded by R. S. Colvis, who is the only one of the original directors and had been vice president from the beginning. The present vice president is Charles V. Garrison and the first cashier was H. L. Plumb, who was succeeded on February 15, 1908, by Alexander White, now cashier. The board of directors consists of R. S. Clovis, Urias Shriver, J. L. Hennen, Henry Shriver, Jeff Shriver, Charles V. Garrison and William G. Kent, all residents of the Battelle District except Mr. Garrison, who lives in Greene County, Pennsylvania. The deposits average $200,000, and the surplus and undivided profits are $34,000, exceeding the capital. The book value of the stock is now over $200. The bank erected and is housed in its own building. This bank did a commendable part in helping the Government finance the war, handling $37,750 of the Third Liberty Loan, $49,900 of the Fourth Loan, $32,000 of the Victory Loan, and $42,500 of War Savings securities.

Alexander White, cashier of the Bank of Wadestown, was born in Battelle District February 15, 1880, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Hennen) White, both now deceased. His mother died in 1897 and his father in 1905. Thomas White was one of the farmers of this section, inheriting most of the old homestead from his father, William White, who was a son of Grafton White, the pioneer.

Alexander White acquired a common school education, and taught school for several years. Soon after the Bank of Wadestown was opened he was offered the position of cashier, and to acquire a technical knowledge of banking he entered the Federal Trust Company of Morgantown, where he remained until entering upon his active duties as cashier. Besides his work at the bank Mr. White superintends the operation of his farm. He is a republican in politics.

In 1911 he married Miss Ada Renner, of Greene County, Pennsylvania. They have three children: Ralph M., Alma and Fred. Mr. and Mrs. White are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. White is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

WASHINGTON IRVING BOOTH. This is a name of genuine prestige in banking circles of West Virginia. Mr. Booth has been and still is identified with several banks, but his main achievement is represented in the Clarksburg Trust Company, which he helped organize and of which he is president.

Mr. Booth is a native of Barbour County, West Virginia, and was born at Belington on June 11, 1882, son of John and Rachael R. (Coyle) Booth. His father, now seventy-six years of age, was born and reared in the same county, and has spent his active life there as a farmer, sawmill operator and building contractor. The great-grandfather of the Clarksburg banker was Gen. Isaac Booth, a Virginian by birth, a soldier in the War of 1812, and for twenty-one years a member of the Virginia Legislature. Payton R. Booth, grandfather of W. I. Booth, was born in Barbour County, was a Confederate soldier, and while a prisoner of war at Chester, Pennsylvania, died in prison. John and Rachael Booth were the parents of three sons and four daughters. The mother (now deceased) was a Baptist and was greatly beloved for the qualities of her heart and mind. The father is a Presbyterian, has always been a staunch democrat, and his life has been one of commendable industry and good citizenship.

Washington Irving Booth during boyhood and youth worked on the farm and in his father's sawmill. This labor gave him habits of industry that no doubt have contributed in no small degree to his success as a financier. He acquired a good common school education, and after graduating in 1903 from a business college at Parkersburg he became associated with the First National Bank at Belington as assistant cashier. In that institution he laid the foundation of his banking experience and knowledge. Resigning in 1908, he became assistant cashier of the Merchants and Mechanics Savings Bank at Grafton. Mr. Booth has gained a high reputation for his success as a bank organizer. He organized the First National Bank at Shinnston, and on July 15, 1909, became cashier of that institution. He was also the organizer of the First National Bank at Fairview, and is still vice president at that point. Acquiring a block of stock in the Dunkard Valley Bank at Blacksville, he has since been vice president of the institution.

Mr. Booth was the prime mover in the organization of the Clarksburg Trust Company, which opened its doors for business September 15, 1914, with him as president. While this is one of the younger banking institutions, in point of resources and strength it is one of the most solid in the state. During the presidency of Mr. Booth it has experienced wonderful growth, now has resources of over $3,000,000, total deposits of more than $2,500,000, and over 14,000 accounts. The bank has a capital of $400,000.

Among other business connections Mr. Booth is president of the Clarksburg Wholesale Company, is treasurer of the Prunty Real Estate Company and secretary-treasurer of the Parr Coal Company. He is a democrat in politics, a member of the Baptist Church and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and Elks.

On January 18, 1911, he married Miss Eleanor M. Trigg, of Grafton, who is of English ancestry. Two children were born to their marriage, but their daughter, Ruth Eleanor, died at the age of seven years. Their son is John Irving Booth.

REZIN W. SINE. While his home and business activities nearly all his life have been on his farm two miles south of Blacksville in Clay District and twenty-two miles west of Morgantown, Rezin W. Sine has exerted a broad and constructive influence in the life and affairs of Monongalia County. For many years he was one of the vigilant members of the County Court, and has always been an influential factor in his home community.

He was born in Clay District November 23, 1856, son of Alpheus and Phebe (Tennant) Sine. His father was born in Monongalia County, January 5, 1827, and died in 1916, at the age of eighty-nine. The mother, a daughter of Adam Tennant, was born in Monongalia County and died at the age of eighty. They lived together more than fifty years. Alpheus Sine was a farmer, a dealer in lumber and one of the first oil wells in this section was drilled on his farm. He and his wife had five children: Prudence wife of Minor Tennant, living at Mount Gilead, Ohio; Rezin W.; Sarah Ann, wife of D. S. Keck, of Waynesburg, Pennsylvania; Delpha C., wife of William Stronsider, of Putnam, Illinois; and Louisa F., who became the wife of Alonzo Lemley and died in middle life.

Rezin W. Sine has lived at his present home since he was six years of age. He was reared and educated in this community, and after reaching his majority acquired eighty-five acres from the old estate. Since then he has added other land from time to time, until he has about 200 acres most of it from the original Sine farm. Mr. Sine as a youth helped to clear this land from its timber. He is a stock and grain farmer, and there are five producing oil wells on his farm, pumping about seventeen barrels per day and the gas wells have given an ample domestic supply for many years.

Mr. Sine has been a member of the Board of Education for his district. He was twice elected and served six years as a county commissioner. Later he was three times appointed to fill vacancies in the County Court, his last term in the court expiring December 31, 1918. Altogether he was a member of the County Court for twelve years. In this capacity he helped buy the present county farm and made the contract for the present county home. He was president of the County Court when the Morgantown and Kingwood Railroad was built, and was influential in promoting that important transportation line for Monongalia County. He was also president of the court at the building of the first bridge over Cheat River, a structure subsequently carried off by ice. He was a member of the court when the old suspension bridge at Morgantown was purchased.

Mr. Sine has always been a republican, and his father was of the same political faith and offered his services to the Union at the time of the Civil War. R. W. Sine has been a delegate to various conventions, has been a district committeeman and is a member of the Methodist Church at Blacksville.

W. Booth

At the age of twenty-five he married Miss Sula M. Sloan. He died three years later, leaving two children: Ottie W., wife of Dr. J. R. Weakley, of Philippi, West Virginia, and William A., an electrician living at St. Louis. The present Mrs. Sine was Louie Kent, of Kents Mills, Pennsylvania. They have three children: H. Kent Sine, now a sophomore at West Virginia University; Hazeline M., who has a high school education and a teacher's training in Normal and West Virginia University, and is a teacher in the home district; and Annie Laurie, a student in the Blacksburg High School.

CHARLES W. TAYLOR was four years old when his father, Union soldier, died in a Southern prison. He early learned to face the serious responsibilities of the world, and in spite of handicaps he has won a substantial success. For a number of years he was a teacher, but the solid basis of his prosperity has been laid as a farmer.

Mr. Taylor, who lives on his farm up the waters of Stone Coal Creek, six miles east of Weston, was born on another farm, three miles nearer Weston, on September 7, 1860, son of Sandy and Augusta C. (Newberger) Taylor. His father was born in Buckingham County, Virginia, in 1835, and moved to West Virginia when about fifteen years of age. He had a limited education, and was married in Lewis County. His wife was born in Baltimore, Maryland, November 28, 1838, and had a public school education. After their marriage they settled on a farm in Lewis County, and Sandy Taylor never got beyond the stage of a renter. When his children were all small he enlisted in Company D of the Fifteenth West Virginia Infantry, and was with his command until wounded at the second battle of Bull Run. He died in 1864, being one of many Northern men who literally starved to death in Southern prisons. He was a republican in politics. His four children were: Frank, who lives on First Street in Weston; C. W.; Celia, deceased; and Sandy, a farmer on Stone Coal Creek.

Charles W. Taylor grew up on a farm, and always made the best possible advantages of his opportunities in the public schools, thus qualifying himself as a teacher. For seven terms he taught in West Virginia and then went out to South Dakota and took up a homestead and farmed there for five years. On his return to West Virginia he taught seven more terms of school and farmed at the same time.

On July 25, 1888, Mr. Taylor married Barbara Danfel, of Bunker Hill, Indiana. She died in November, 1892, the mother of two children, Lillie, wife of O. W. Gum, of Lewis County; and Leslie O., who graduated from the Glenville Normal School, the State University, with the A. B. degree, served in two training camps during the war and is now a student in Chicago. In 1900 Mr. Taylor married Iza Swisher, of Lewis County. Two children were born to this union: Ralph, now deceased, and Clifford, who is a graduate of an automobile school in Detroit. On February 9, 1922, Mr. Taylor married Elizabeth Hindman, of Florence, Alabama.

The well managed and valuable farm of Mr. Taylor contains 184 acres. He is also a stockholder in other enterprises. His political allegiance is with the republican party, and he is a past noble grand of Lodge No. 136, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, is a member of the Encampment, and is affiliated with the Methodist Protestant Church.

H. ROY WAUGH, who is presiding on the bench of the Circuit Court of the Twentieth Judicial District of West Virginia, was elected to this office in November, 1920, and the preferment came as a consistent recognition of his ability as a lawyer and his high standing as a citizen. He maintains his home at Buckhannon, county seat of his native county.

Judge Waugh was born in the southern part of Upshur County, on the 4th of January, 1879, and is a son of Homer M. and Melissa J. (Morrison) Waugh, the former of whom was born May 19, 1854, and the latter August 14, 1858. Homer M. Waugh was born in Pocahontas County, this state, a son of James Waugh, whose father, James Waugh, Sr., immigrated from Scotland to America in 1739 and established his residence in Virginia. His son James married Miss Sarah McGuire, and the son Samuel married Ann McGuire. The son James was a patriot soldier in the War of the Revolution. Jacob Waugh, another of the sons, was born in 1809, married Mary Brown and they became the parents of thirteen children.

Homer M. Waugh was reared in Upshur County, received the advantages of the common schools of the locality and period and became a prosperous farmer and rural merchant. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which Jacob Waugh was a local preacher, besides which he served twenty years as clerk of the Circuit Court for Upshur County. Homer M. and Melissa J. Waugh became the parents of three children who attained to years of maturity, and of the number Judge Waugh of this sketch is the eldest; Ica remains at the parental home; and Jay is engaged in business activities at Clearfield, Pennsylvania.

Like other farmer boys, Judge Waugh had his character founded on the fundamental of life, and his alert mentality has enabled him to supplement most effectively the training given by the realism of the farm. His early education was obtained in the public schools of his native county, and after a period of successful service as a teacher he entered West Virginia Wesleyan College, in which institution he continued his studies until he received therefrom his degree of Bachelor of Arts. Thereafter he attended the law department of the University of West Virginia, in which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, with virtually coincident admission to the bar of his native state. He engaged in the practice of his profession at Buckhannon, and under the administration of President Taft he was appointed United States district attorney for the Northern District of West Virginia, during his four years' incumbency of which office he maintained his residence at Parkersburg. He then returned to Buckhannon, where he continued to give his attention to his substantial and representative law business until his election to the bench of the Circuit Court in November, 1920, his assumption of the duties of this important judicial office having occurred on the 1st of January, 1921. Judge Waugh had previously served four years as prosecuting attorney of his native county, besides which he was for one term a member of the State Legislature, in which he made a characteristically excellent record of loyal and progressive service. His political allegiance is given to the republican party, he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, he is a past master of the local lodge of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, is a past chancellor of the local lodge of the Knights of Pythias, is a member of the Buckhannon Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club, and is a director of the Peoples Bank of Buckhannon.

On the 17th of October, 1905, was solemnized the marriage of Judge Waugh and Miss Louisa P. Newlon, who likewise was born and reared in West Virginia and who was graduated in both the musical and elocutionary departments of Keymeier College. Judge and Mrs. Waugh have three children: Mary, John and Helen.

ALEXANDER MITCHELL was a native son of what is now the State of West Virginia, and he honored the commonwealth by his upright life and large and worthy achievement. From the Wheeling Intelligencer of July 15, 1921, are taken the following extracts: "News that Col. Alexander Mitchell, for many years a foremost figure in banking circles of the city, passed away this morning at the Ohio Valley General Hospital, shortly after midnight, will be received with profound sorrow throughout this community. No man was more greatly admired and respected for many fine qualities of mind and heart. Integrity was synonymous with his name. His life work, the guidance of the Mutual Savings Bank, which he organized in 1887, has been a business achievement to which any man could point with pride. Kindly and unassuming, he counted friends and admirers by the thousands."

Alexander Mitchell was born on the old homestead farm of the family on the Bethany Pike, east of Wheeling, and the date of his nativity was March 19, 1847. He was a son of Zachariah and Ann (Baird) Mitchell, the latter a daughter of George Baird, of Washington, Pennsylvania.

Upon the death of his mother, in 1853, Alexander was taken into the home of his maternal grandfather at Washington, Pennsylvania, his father having removed to the West. He gained his early education in the schools at Washington and in 1867 graduated from Washington and Jefferson College, at Washington, Pennsylvania. In the same year he began the study of medicine in the office of his uncle, Dr. George Baird, at Wheeling, later he held a clerical position with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and in 1872 he became connected with the National Bank of West Virginia. In 1879 he became assistant cashier of the Peoples Bank, and in 1887, assisted by Dr. George Baird, Howard Hazlett and other substantial citizens, he organized the Mutual Savings Bank, of which he was the guiding executive until the time of his death. This was the first savings bank in West Virginia, and under his able administration it became one of the great financial institutions of a great industrial city and state. There is all of consistency in the following estimate: "Alexander Mitchell typified honesty, ability and honor in business, and his personality more than any other factor counted in the bank's wonderful progress." He was the father of the Wheeling Clearing House Association, which was organized in 1900, and he otherwise did much to stabilize and advance the general financial interests of his home city and native state. He was a loyal and ardent supporter of the principles of the republican party, but had no desire for political preferment. His fine civic loyalty was shown, however, in his vigorous and effective service as a member of the city council, to which he was first elected in 1887, his final election having occurred in 1907. He held for several terms the office of West Virginia vice president of the American Bankers Association. He was an earnest member of the Presbyterian Church, as is also his widow. Colonel Mitchell was one of the vital and progressive men who did much for the development of the "Greater Wheeling," his civic liberality being in evidence at all times and his influence and co-operation being given in support of measures and enterprises advanced for the general good of the community.

In 1880 was solemnized the marriage of Colonel Mitchell and Miss Delia G. Harbour, daughter of the late Joseph C. Harbour, of Wheeling. Four children survive the honored husband and father: Baird, who succeeded his father as executive head of the Mutual Savings Bank; Harbour, who is vice president of the American Foundry & Construction Company at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Miss Katharine, who is secretary of the Mutual Savings Bank; and Alexandra, who is the wife of Harry Eckhart, of Fort Worth, Texas.

WILFORD BRUCE SNOGRASS, who was born and has lived most of his life in the Smithfield community of Wetzel County, was a teacher for several years, has been interested in the practical side of farming, and for a number of years has been farm foreman for the South Penn Oil Company.

Mr. Snodgrass was born near the present site of Smithfield on December 5, 1870. He is member of a family that has been in West Virginia for four or five generations. The founder of the family in this country, a native of Holland, came to Virginia in Colonial times and settled in what is now Marion County, West Virginia. He married a native of Ireland. The great-grandfather was John Snodgrass, who spent all his life in Marion County as a farmer. The grandfather was John Dearborn Snodgrass, who was born near Reevesville in Marion County in 1814, and as a young man moved to Wetzel County, married there and followed farming. He died at Smithfield December 10, 1903. His wife was Nancy Hayes, who was born in Wetzel County in 1819, and died at the old homestead in October, 1908.

James T. Snodgrass, father of Wilford B., was born in Grant District of Wetzel County in June, 1847. He was a youthful volunteer on the Union side in the Civil war, enlisting in the Seventh West Virginia Infantry, and serving during portions of the years 1863-64. From 1873 to 1881 he lived in Harrison County, but otherwise his life was spent in Grant District, and he was a very successful farmer and wool buyer. He was a democrat in politics, and he died at his home near Smithfield April 11, 1904. James T. Snodgrass married Eliza J. Moore, who was born in Harrison County February 22, 1850, and died near Smithfield June 9, 1919. These parents had two sons: William Riley and Wilford B. The former is an oil field worker, with home four miles east of Smithfield.

Wilford Bruce Snodgrass was educated in the free schools of Grant District, also attended select schools, and in 1890 began teaching. His service as an educator was rendered at Jacksonburg one term, in the Starkey school four terms, and three terms at Pricetown. Mr. Snodgrass has been in the service of the South Penn Oil Company since 1899, beginning as a roustabout for the Smithfield headquarters of that company. Since 1903 he has been farm foreman. He owns two residences in Smithfield, each one being near the high school, and both are modern residences with all the comforts. He also has a dwelling in Pricetown, a farm near Pricetown, and is interested in the old homestead of 102 acres on Pickenpaw Run in Grant District.

Mr. Snodgrass is a democrat, is affiliated with Wetzel Lodge No. 39, A. F. and A. M., at New Martinsville, Fairmont Chapter No. 9, R. A. M., Fairmont Commandery No. 6, K. T., West Virginia Consistory No. 1 of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Wheeling, and is one of the oldest and most prominent members of Lily Lodge No. 161, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Pricetown, being a past grand, and for the past twenty-five years has been secretary.

Mr. Snodgrass suffered the loss of a son in the World war, and he was one of the leaders in local war activities, being a member of the Legal Advisory Board of the county and assisting personally to promote the success of every drive made in his home district. He married in Wetzel County, West Virginia, in 1894 Miss Hattie L. Nutter, who was born at Worthington, West Virginia, daughter of Lewis and Elizabeth (Nay) Nutter. Her father was a carpenter and died near Fairmont. The mother is now Mrs. Joseph W. Copenhaver, and they live at Pricetown.

The soldier son of Mr. and Mrs. Snodgrass was James Paul, who was born March 5, 1896. He was a graduate of the Fairmont Normal School, a member of Mannington Lodge No. 31, A. F. and A. M., also past vice grand of Lily Lodge No. 161, I. O. O. F. He was an oil field worker when he enlisted May 7, 1918. He was on duty six weeks at Akron, Ohio, was made a sergeant from the ranks while in training at Columbia, South Carolina, and on August 4, 1918, started overseas with Battery C of the Twentieth Field Artillery. During the great Argonne battle on September 5, 1918, he was gassed and wounded, and on the 8th of September he died in Base Hospital No. 31 at Contrexeville, Vosges, France. His body was brought home to the United States and was buried with soldier's and Masonic honors near Smithfield May 30, 1921.

Mr. and Mrs. Snodgrass have four younger children: Harry Alphonso, born September 11, 1899, enlisted and was sent to the Army Training School at Buckhannon, where he remained from September 21, 1918, to December 21, 1918, when he was honorably discharged. He lives with his father, and is an oil field worker and a graduate of the Fairmont State Normal School. He is a member of Mannington Lodge No. 31, A. F. and A. M. The third child, Gypsy Jaqueline, was born October 14, 1901, is a graduate of the Smithfield High School, and is doing advanced work during the summers in the Fairmont State Normal School, while teaching during the regular school year in the public schools of Smithfield. Gladys Daphne, born December 29, 1903, is a junior in the Smithfield High School and Walter B., the youngest child, was born March 24, 1909, and is an eighth grade student in the schools of Smithfield.

JOHN LAFAYETTE EVERLY. Any American community might be proud to claim such a citizen as the venerable John Lafayette Everly of Grant District, Preston County, whose years have been spent in exemplification of the best standards of patriotism, loyalty to his government and his fellow men, and the cardinal virtues of industry and integrity.

He is member of the old family that was introduced into Preston County by his grandfather Henry Everly, who came ere in company with his brothers Peter and Joseph. Joseph had fought as a Revolutionary soldier and they settled in this part of West Virginia soon after the close of the war for independence, probably coming from Delaware. Henry Everly made settlement north of Terra Alta in Portland District. On Muddy Creek he set up his blacksmith shop and continued it in connection with farming. In the late thirties he moved to the Sandy Creek neighborhood near the present town of Hudson, buying the Christopher Cale farm. He lived there until his death about 1852 when about seventy years of age. He was held in high regard as a citizen, one of the early Lutherans and prominent in that church, and possessed some education, since he kept his own accounts and was a studious reader of the Bible and of other current literature. Henry Everly married Miss Lewis. A brief record of their children is as follows: Peter, who spent his life in the Bull Run community of Preston County, where he died at the age of ninety; Lewis; Polly, who was the wife of Joseph Smith and lived in Portland District; Sarah, wife of Jacob Cale, died in Pleasant District at the age of about eighty; Joseph, who was a Union soldier in the West Virginia Infantry and spent his civil life at Terra Alta; Nancy, wife of John T. Smith, lived and died at Hazelton; Julia Ann was the wife of Augustine Wolfe and died in Preston County; William, who moved to Iowa and served from that state in the Civil war; Henry, who as a young man went to Ohio and died in Noble County, that state.

Lewis Everly was born in 1811 in Preston County, and acquired such education as the schools of his day provided. He learned his trade in Portland District and he erected the first mill on Muddy Creek some time in the '30s or even earlier. He operated the mill as long as he lived there, and when he moved over to Big Sandy he built the first mill at Rockville about 1852, and conducted this plant through the period of the Civil war. After he abandoned the mill he applied his energies to the farm and died in 1893. He was a democrat, very active in that party, and a Methodist. Lewis Everly married Eva Zwyer, a native of West Virginia, daughter of Adam Zwyer, of German ancestry. She died in August, 1885. Her children were: John L., whose record follows; Henry, who was a teamster in the Union Army and died in Preston County in 1882; Adam, who was a Union soldier in the Fighting Seventh West Virginia, and spent the rest of his life farming in Pleasants County; William, who was a teamster in the Union Army during the Civil war, later was a farmer, and is now a merchant in Pleasants County; Elizabeth, wife of Robert O'Brien, living in Noble County, Ohio; Sivilla became the wife of Samuel Forman and died in Preston County; Thomas was a farmer and died in 1882; Joseph is still farming in Grant District; Lewis Wesley, a farmer near his brother Joseph in the Laurel Run region; and Sarah J., who married Preston King and died near Aurora, Preston County.

John L. Everly was born January 12, 1837, and the incidents and experiences of his boyhood and youth are largely associated with the old home on Muddy Creek, in the vicinity of his father's pioneer mill and his grandfather's blacksmith shop. He also came to his majority near Rockville. In 1856-57 he taught school at Harmony Grove, Pleasants District and in 1858 at Cole, same district. On July 4, 1861, he entered the Union Army as a member of Company A of the Fighting Seventh West Virginia Infantry under Col. J. H. Lockwood of Moundsville, whose wife presented the regiment with an extra service flag. Mr. Everly after enlisting joined the regiment at Oakland where he was in training about a month and was then sent out on scout duty. The first man killed was Zach Caughron, sheriff of Taylor County, who lost his life not at the hand of the enemy but by members of his own Company A on account of his refusal to surrender for an offense he had committed against the state. The first fighting in which Mr. Everly participated was at Romney, following which came Winchester, Luray, Port Republic, all in the Shenandoah Valley, then at Harpers Ferry, and from there to Richmond, where his command was in the battle of Seven Pines. He was at Antietam September 17, 1862, and the following spring went into the Wilderness campaign with the battle of Spottsylvania, was at Cold Harbor in June, was in the battle of Fredericksburg, at Chancellorsville in May, 1864, and had previously been in the three days' battle of Gettysburg, fighting during the second and third days in front of General Pickett's men when the Confederates made their final charge. He was at Petersburg in the early days of the investment of Richmond, and received his honorable discharge in August, 1864, a month and seven days after the expiration of his enlistment. His service as a soldier was in some of the greatest battles and the most arduous campaigns in the principal theater of the war, yet he escaped wounds, his haversack and canteen only being riddled by bullets. Once a comrade was shot through the head and a piece of his skull struck Mr. Everly in the temple and drew a little blood. With more than three years of fighting he had more than satisfied all his taste for military life, and after his discharge he returned home and resumed his duties on the farm. For a time he remained near Rockville, then established his home near Greenville Furnace where he remained until his heavier responsibilities were concluded. There he cleared up sixty acres in the timber, fenced it, and put up the improvements necessary for home and prosperous agriculture. Among those buildings are two houses and two barns which are still standing. From 1871 to 1877 he was surveyor of roads.

Though the son of a democratic father, Mr. Everly cast his first ballot for Abraham Lincoln in 1860 and again in 1864, and has been a voting member of the republican party for sixty years, casting his sixteenth successive ballot for a national ticket in 1920. He has been interested in community affairs, but the only local offices he has held have been those of road surveyor and trustee of district schools. Mr. Everly has been a faithful church man sixty-five years and is an old fashioned Methodist and one of the trustees of the Laurel Run congregation. He was one of the building committee when the church was constructed, and he holds the deed to the property in the church name. He is a charter member and the oldest brother of Pisgah Lodge, Knights of Pythias.

In March, 1858, Mr. Everly married Miss Hila Liston. They have gone along life's highway hand in hand for almost fifty years when their companionship was severed by her death on February 5, 1918. She was born in Preston County April 2, 1840, daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Smith) Liston. Her father's farm was near Harmony Grove Church in Pleasant District, where Abraham Liston was also reared. Mrs. Everly was a girl of seventeen when she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church and her life was an exemplification of its spirit of Christly service. Mrs. Everly was the mother of the following children: Fletcher Camden; Mintare A.; Serilda Belle, wife of Philip Gribble of Morgantown; John Barton.

Fletcher Camden Everly, the oldest son, was born August 20, 1859, attended the local district schools, and his career has been that of a farmer, though he early learned the trade of carpenter and has built many barns and other farm improvements in his neighborhood. He married Emma Jane Galloway and their children are: Flora, wife of Thurman Wolfe; Mary, wife of Robert Benson; William of Fayette County, Pennsylvania; Ethel, Mrs. Sanford Christopher; Hazel, wife of Frank Cale; and Earl.

Mintare A. Everly, the second son, was born at Rockville March 29, 1864, acquired a common school education, and his career has likewise been taken up with agriculture and he resides on part of his father's old homestead. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He married Mary L. Speelman July 17, 1885. Their children are: Emma, wife of Harry Ryan of Pisgah; Lillie, wife of Jesse Fowler of Morgantown; Dayton, of Fayette County, Pennsylvania; Ray, a farmer near his parents; Goldie, wife of Ellis Fowler of Morgantown; and Miss Annabelle, the only child at home. M. A. Everly is surveyor of roads.

John Barton Everly, born April 11, 1873, grew up on the home farm and acquired a liberal education and as a young man taught school. Since his marriage he has been farming and lives near Clifton Mills. He married Armina Yeast and their children are: Zora, wife of Alva Christopher; Bertie, who married May Sliger; and Elsie, wife of Guy Gibson. John B. Everly was county commissioner for Grant District during 1919-20.

These sons of Mr. Everly have his political faith and also have the earnestness in civic affairs of their father, though they have seldom sought office or any other political distinction.

GARRETT G. MCFERRAN. With the exception of the time which he spent in military service during the Mexican border trouble and the World war, Garrett G. McFerran has been identified with the coal industry ever since entering upon his active career. His present connection is with the West Virginia Coal and Coke Company at Elkins, of which concern he has been auditor since his return from overseas. Mr. McFerran was born September 29, 1881, at Fincastle, Virginia, and is a son of John S. and Nannie (Bryan) McFerran. His father, a native of the same place, belonged to one of the old and honored families of the Old Dominion, and came of Scotch stock. His father, Martin McFerran, was a captain in the Confederate Army during the war between the states. John S. McFerran was a planter by occupation, and passed his life in the vicinity of Fincastle, where he was well known and highly respected. He married Nannie Bryan, who was born at Warm Springs, Virginia, she also being a member of an early family of Virginia, of Irish stock, her father, William H. Bryan, having been a private in the Confederate Army during the struggle between the South and the North. Mrs. McFerran survives her husband as a resident of Virginia. They had six sons and two daughters, all of whom were reared to maturity.

Garrett G. McFerran was given the advantages of instruction in private schools at Fincastle and Roanoke, Virginia, and at the age of eighteen years gave up his studies to become an accountant for a coal mining company in Southwestern Virginia, being thus employed at the time of the outbreak of the trouble between Mexico and the United States on the border. Mr. McFerran enlisted in the Second Virginia Infantry, securing a commission as second lieutenant, and accompanied his organization to the scene of threatened hostilities, where he was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. Soon after his return to West Virginia the United States entered the World war and his regiment was mustered into service. Mr. McFerran was commissioned captain in May, 1917, and was first stationed at Camp McClellan, Alabama, with the Twenty-sixth Division. Subsequently he was transferred to Camp Wadsworth, South Carolina, with others, and became a member of the Fifty-sixth Division of Pioneer Infantry, with which he went overseas for service to France in August, 1918, his regiment arriving in the country of conflict September 1. His contingent immediately got into action, being in the great Argonne drive, and after the signing of the armistice went with the American Army of Occupation into Germany. In July, 1919, he was ordered back to the United States where he was mustered out of the service in October, 1919, at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, receiving an honorable discharge as captain. He is a member of the American Legion. In November, 1919, Captain McFerran accepted his present position as auditor of the West Virginia Coal and Coke Company at Elkins, a community in which he has formed numerous pleasant and profitable connections, and where he is held in high regard by his associates and superiors in the company. Mr. McFerran is a Blue Lodge and Chapter Mason. He has found little time for public affairs, but has been a consistent supporter of worthy movements calculated to be of benefit to Elkins and its people.

In September, 1917, Mr. McFerran married Miss Esther Southard, of Columbus, Ohio.

FRENCH MORGAN. This member of the historic Morgan family of West Virginia has been a resident of Washington for some years, being in the Government service during the war period. He spent the early part of his life at Buckhannon, where he was in business with his father. French Morgan has been an interested student of West Virginia history, particularly of the Morgan family.

His ancestral line, beginning with the first American, the famous Col. Morgan Morgan, is as follows: Col. Morgan Morgan, born November 1, 1688, and died November 17, 1766, married Catherine Garretson; emigrated from Wales and settled near Winchester, Virginia, about 1726. His son David Morgan, the noted Indian fighter, was born May 12, 1721, died May 19, 1813, married Sarah Stephens. The oldest son of David was Morgan or "Mod" Morgan, born December 20, 1746, and died in 1820, married a Prickett. Capt. James Morgan, born December 12, 1778, died February 2, 1860; married Rachel Bunner. Stephen Morgan, born June 10, 1820, died August 28, 1893; married Salome Vangilder. Hezekiah Boyers Morgan, born June 13, 1851, married Minerva Jane Bunner, daughter of Joseph and Eliza (Moran) Bunner, who were born in Marion County, West Virginia, and moved to Randolph County, just prior to the Civil war. Of the children of Hezekiah B. Morgan, the oldest son is French Morgan and the other children are Sylvia, Joseph Jefferson, Nellie, Levi and Mary.

Recent investigation has revealed from official records that substantiate the claim long made that Col. Morgan Morgan was the first white settler to make his home in what is now West Virginia. It was about 1726 that he crossed the Blue Ridge and built his house at Bunker Hill in Berkeley County. Recently there has been located the original patent for 1,000 acres of land granted by King George II to Colonel Morgan in 1735. From certain language used in this document it is evident that Morgan was on the ground prior to 1735, so that the date 1726 is not very, if at all, incorrect.

The Morgans are a long lived and a sturdy people, the energy and vitality of the stock being apparently undiminished in later generations. As a whole they have led clean moral lives and have engaged in wholesome outdoor labors, a fact no doubt contributing to their longevity. From the above record it is noted that Col. Morgan Morgan died at the age of seventy-eight, his son David, at ninety-two, the latter's son Morgan, at seventy-five, Capt. James, at eighty-five, Stephen, at seventy-three, and Hezekiah Boyers is now in his seventy-first year and in rugged health.

Hezekiah Boyers Morgan was born in Marion County, about six miles east of Fairmont, and moved to Palace Valley in Upshur County with his father, Stephen, just after the close of the Civil war. This entire trip was made by wagon, taking six days. Hezekiah Boyers Morgan was assessor of Upshur County four years, deputy sheriff under his brother, Dr. J. J. Morgan, for one term of four years, and deputy county clerk twelve years.

Mr. French Morgan was born at Palace Valley on Buckhannon River, near Buckhannon, August 31, 1880. He graduated from the Buckhannon High School in 1898, then taught school a year, and in 1901 entered West Virginia Conference Seminary at Buckhannon, graduating in the classical course in 1903, and completing the business course the following year.

In 1906 Mr. Morgan married Mary G. daughter of George W. and Hatie (Townsend) Pick, of Buckhannon, and to this union have been born two sons, Norman D., born December 1, 1907, and Arthur Raymond, born April 17, 1913.

For about twelve years after leaving school he was associated with his father and brothers in operating a planing mill at Buckhannon. At the beginning of the World war he disposed of his interest in this enterprise, and, going to Washington, worked one year for the auditor of station accounts for the Southern Railroad. Since then he has been in the Government service as an employee of the general accounting office, Navy Department Division. His home in Washington is 2601 Brentwood Road, N. E.

CATHOLIC CHURCH OF WESTON. Not an inconsiderable factor in the early history and subsequent development of Lewis County and Weston was a sturdy body of Irish and German Catholics and the local Catholic Church. Settlement of these people were made in the western and southwestern part of the county and in and about Weston. They were true pioneers. They attacked the virgin forests, subdued them by hard toil, and finally converted them into fairly prosperous farms. Their children now represent some of the best and most prosperous citizens in the community.

+ Rev. J. J. Swint, D.D.

Probably the first Catholic priest to visit Weston was v. A. F. Grogan in 1845, who rode over on horseback on Greggsville, now known as Tunnelton, Preston County. He attended the place periodically till 1850, gathering the altered people together wherever they might be found, holding services in public halls or private houses.

In 1850 Weston and the surrounding country was put in charge of Rev. B. Stack, who began almost immediately a building of a small brick church. This was the fourth Catholic Church erected in what now comprises West Virginia. In these early days Weston was the religious center of all the scattered Catholics throughout the counties of Lewis, Upshur, Randolph, Barbour, Webster, Braxton, Oddridge and Harrison.

Shortly after the first small church was built a school was started in the basement thereof. This was before the days of the public or state schools. This school played an important part in the life and advancement of the community. It continued its good work till the year 1876, when the old church was abandoned. Many of the most prominent professional men, non-Catholic as well as Catholic, received their primary education in this school.

A second and larger church was built in the year 1876. This did service till 1914, when new ground was purchased, and a splendid stone church, an ample school, a priests' house and sisters' house were erected at a cost of $120,000. The generosity of the Catholic people at this time gave a stimulus to the entire community, with the result that Weston now stands as a city of beautiful churches and other handsome buildings.

This remarkable period of material growth and spiritual prosperity has been coincident with the pastorate of Father J. J. Swint at Weston. Father Swint is a native West Virginian, born in Randolph County, December 15, 1879, son of Peter and Caroline (Winkler) Swint. His father was born in the Duchy of Luxemburg, February 22, 1850, and his mother, in Baden, Germany, June 10, 1850. Peter Swint was reared in his native country to the age of seventeen, required a common school education there and learned the trade of painter and decorator. On coming to America he located at Catskill, New York, where he followed his trade. His wife came to the United States at the age of twenty and after their marriage they lived for several years at Catskill and then removed to Randolph County, West Virginia, locating on a farm, though Peter Swint continued to follow his trade to some extent. He cleared his land, thus improving a good farm. His wife died in 1919. All their nine children are still living.

Father J. J. Swint had the farm as his early environment. He attended the local schools, and with the encouragement of his parents started preparation for the priesthood at the age of fourteen, when he entered college, pursuing his classical course for six years and then spent five years in a theological seminary and had one year of post-graduate study. After being ordained a priest Father Swint was for three years in charge at Hinton, West Virginia. He then performed the arduous responsibilities of looking after a group of mission churches for seven years, with headquarters at Parkersburg. From Parkersburg he came to Weston in 1914, and has been the spiritual and administrative head of the Catholics of Lewis County while they have constructed their new church and other buildings. He now has 150 families in his parish. Father Swint is a member of the Knights of Columbus. On the 22d of February, 1922, he received appointment as Auxiliary Bishop of the Diocese of Wheeling, West Virginia.

JOSEPH FLOYD BURDETTE, has had a career marked by exceptional enterprise. In earlier years he was a timber and coal operator in some of the eastern counties. His home for over twenty years has been in Mason County, where farming, livestock and fruit culture on a commercial scale have occupied his attention. His main orchards as a fruit grower are across the river in Ohio, but his home and his general farming operations are at his country place two miles north of Point Pleasant.

He is of French ancestry, though the first of the name came to this country as long ago as 1740. Joseph Floyd Burdette was born in Putnam County, West Virginia, December 30, 1861. His grandfather Archibald Burdette, was born in 1798, and died in Putnam County in 1860. He had lived at various times in the Kanawha Valley, and was also a resident of Mercer County, but moved to Putnam County during the '50s. Archibald Burdette was a son of William and Sarah (Cornwell) Burdette. Sarah Cornwell was a daughter of Edward Cornwell, who served as a soldier of the Revolution. Archibald Burdette married Rhoda Shumate, who was born in 1797, and died in 1845. Her father Lieut. Daniel Shumate, was a native of Fauquier County, Virginia, and was in the Virginia Militia during the Revolution. He moved to Monroe County, West Virginia, where he died in 1826.

The father of Joseph F. Burdette was Lewis Burdette, who was born in Mercer County, West Virginia, in 1837, and married in Putnam County, Catherine J. Hill, a native of Monroe County, West Virginia, who came to Putnam County with her parents. Lewis Burdette spent his active life as a farmer in Putnam County, near Hurricane, and died in 1905. His widow, now in her eighty-second year, is still living at the old homestead. They had four children: Joseph F.; George L., a fruit grower in Mason County; Virginia Belle, wife of C. W. Cottle, of Putnam County, and Napoleon B., who died at the age of eighteen.

Joseph F. Burdette married in Putnam County, Vatura A. Mynes, who grew up in the same community with him. After his marriage Mr. Burdette engaged in the coal and timber business in Fayette County. He operated saw mills that cut the logs from over 15,000 acres. When he sold out his timber interests he bought coal land and leased a mine, and for four years had a production averaging four hundred tons per day, with 125 men employed. Both these operations were very profitable, and after selling out Mr. Burdette in 1901 came to Mason County and bought 800 acres bordering the Baltimore and Ohio Railway for three quarters of a mile and extending back into the hills. About 200 acres comprised rich bottom land, well suited for general farming, while the rest was pasture land and was sold two years ago to J. O. Shinn. On his farm Mr. Burdette was a Hereford cattle breeder for about nine years. The fine home in which he formerly lived on the farm is now on the property of Mr. Shinn, and he has since constructed a large brick residence at his present home place two miles north of Point Pleasant.

A variety of business enterprises have occupied his time. For about ten years he was manager of the Kanawha Dock at Point Pleasant. During the past ten years he has owned and developed a 175 acre orchard in Gallia County, Ohio, a few miles from Gallipolis. This is a commercial orchard, chiefly apples, with some peaches and plums. His splendid variety of apples are the Rome Beauty, Grimes, Jonathan, Stayman Winesap, Gano and Ben Davis. This fruit orchard has proved a satisfactory venture, and has taken much of Mr. Burdette's personal attention.

Mr. Burdette is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He and his wife have two children, Pearl T. and Gertrude. Pearl, who is connected with the National Contracting Company, building river improvements under the Government, married Carrie Connor, and has three children, Jack Connor, Joseph Floyd, Jr., and Alice Reynolds. The daughter Gertrude, now at home, graduated from Marshall College at Huntington with the class of 1911.

EVERETT F. MILLARD. During a long and active career Everett F. Millard, sole owner of the Millard Sand Works of Berkeley Springs, has worked his own way to a position of prosperity and importance among his fellow men, by whom he is known as a citizen of public spirit and enterprise and a man who has proven his worth and loyalty as a friend. It has been his fortune to have chosen a field of endeavor for which his abilities eminently equipped him, and in the working out of his success he has never found it necessary to take advantage of another or to step from the straight path of legitimate dealing.

Mr. Millard was born on a farm adjoining the Harrisburg and Middletown Turnpike, four miles from the state capital, a son of Michael Millard, who was born in York County, Pennsylvania, in 1832, and a grandson of a native of England, who immigrated to the United States and settled in York County, where he married a lady of Pennsylvania-Dutch birth. The grandparents passed the rest of their days in York County, where they were well-known and very highly respected. Michael Millard after obtaining an ordinary educational training served an apprenticeship to the blacksmith trade, to which vocation he devoted his activities for a time after he acquired its mastery. Later he went to Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, where he was employed in a limestone quarry for a time, and at the breaking out of the war between the states volunteered for service in the Union army, but was rejected by the examining physician. The Government, however, accepted his services as a blacksmith, and for the greater part of the war he was employed in shoeing horses at Washington, D. C. Following the close of the struggle he leased a limestone quarry at the Half Way House, four miles east of Harrisburg, and operated it several years, after which he moved to Steelton, Pennsylvania, where he lived in retirement until his death in his eighty-second year. He married Martha Orth, who was born in Germany and was but four years of age when she was brought to the United States by her parents, who settled in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, and there spent the remainder of their days. Mrs. Millard died at the age of fifty-three years, having reared a family of five children: Jacob F., a resident of Lebanon, Pennsylvania; Everett F., of this notice; Charles and Michael, who are deceased; and Martha, who is the wife of Frank Davies and lives at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Everett F. Millard attended the public schools of his native locality and was reared to habits of industry. At the tender age of eight years he commenced work at the quarry with his father, and continued working with the elder man until he reached the age of twenty-one years, at which time he embarked upon a career of his own. As he had no capital he sought employment and found it at the Pennsylvania Steel Works, where he was employed for five years, then going to Lebanon County, where in the winter season he dealt in coal and during the rest of the year engaged in lime burning for the local market. Thus he accumulated some capital, and in 1898 came to Martinsburg and, with a younger brother, owned and operated the Standard Stone and Lime Company's quarries for two years. His brother at that time went to California for his health, and Mr. Millard continued to conduct the business alone for ten years, after which he founded the Millard Sand Works plant at Berkeley Springs, of which he has been sole proprietor ever since. He has made this a very successful enterprise, and while so doing has established a reputation for integrity and fair dealing that is proverbial.

Mr. Millard was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Crook, who was born in York County, Pennsylvania, and to this union there have been born six children: Elizabeth, who is the wife of Frank C. Dunham, superintendent for the E. F. Millard Sand Works, and has four living children, Everett Millard, Anna Jane, Frank Taylor and Robert L.; Anna, who is the wife of Walter Trout; Frances, who is the wife of C. W. Cline; Jacob F., who married Isabella Dorn and has two children, Elizabeth and an infant; Albert R., who married Portia Salada and has one son, Everett; and S. Margaret, who is unmarried and resides with her parents. Mr. Millard is a member of the First United Brethren Church, and has served many years as a member of the Official Board thereof.

FRANK PORTER MAXWELL, of Buckhannon, has a statewide reputation in live stock circles, and stock farming has constituted his life work.

He is the eldest son of Porter and Columbia Virginia (Post) Maxwell. His grandfather was Franklin Maxwell, of Doddridge County, well known as one of West Virginia's most prosperous farmers. His maternal grandparents were Isaac and Emily Post. Mr. Maxwell was born February 8, 1870, on his father's farm, Point View, in Harrison County West Virginia.

He was reared in his native county, attended the public schools there and also West Virginia University, and this was subsequently followed with a business course at Adrian Michigan. As a youth he found himself strongly attracted to the live stock feature of farming, and as soon as his education was completed he actively associated himself with his father. His business for a number of years has been conducted on a large scale, and he operates several stock farms located in Barbour, Upshur and Randolph counties. Mr. Maxwell's live stock are blooded cattle and horses of the thorough bred Morgan strain of Kentucky. His cattle are Hereford, Pollangus and Shorthorn.

Mr. Maxwell is a director of the Traders National Bank of Buckhannon, is a democrat in politics and is one of the generous, successful business men of the state, supporting freely church and charitable undertakings.

On June 20, 1895, he married Reta B. Heavner, daughter of Capt. Jacob W. and Leah Anna (Reger) Heavner. The history of Captain Heavner and his family is given in the following biography. They have one daughter, Virginia Lee Maxwell.

CAPT. JACOB W. HEAVNER, now past the age of four score, is retired, and though long prominently connected with business affairs at Buckhannon his home is on his farm in Upshur County, in the loop of the Buckhannon River. Captain Heavner has been one of the very valuable men to the community and the enterprise of Buckhannon. He represents one of the oldest families in this section of the state, and the family record is one of sturdy patriotism and of enterprise through all the generations.

The family of Heavner is of German origin, and was spelled Havener, and some times Haveron, but from what section of Germany this particular branch of the family came from is not known. The history of the family herein alluded to in America begins with the arrival from Germany of Nicholas Havener, his wife, two sons, Jacob and Frederick, and two daughters, Catreen and one whose name is not remembered, some time prior to May 20, 1755, the date on which he made his first purchase of land situate on the southernmost branch of the south branch of the Potomac River. The naturalization papers of this Nicholas Havener are still in existence, and plainly show the seal of "Our Sovereign Lord, King George, the third." The date of the instrument is May 18, 1761, which bears also the signature of Fran Farquier, "His Majesty's Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-chief of the Colony and Dominion of Virginia." It is somewhat difficult to determine the correct spelling of the name of the family, for even in the third generation the family seemed to have written almost exclusively in German; however, in the first deeds of conveyance and naturalization papers it was spelled "Havener."

Jacob Havener, eldest son of Nicholas Havener, married Mary Mallow, and it is presumed that she died soon after December 4, 1804, as this is the last date her name appears on any legal instruments made or executed by her husband. There were born to Jacob and Mary (Mallow) Havener eight children, as follows: Nicholas, Adam, Henry Michael, Samuel Peter, Margaret, Mary, Jacob and John.

Nicholas Havener II, son of Jacob and Mary (Mallow) Havener, was born in Pendleton County, West Virginia (then Virginia), and migrated to what is now known as Upshur County, West Virginia, at a point on the Buckhannon River, where he purchased a tract of 400 acres of land from George Jackson, lying partly in Harrison and partly in Randolph counties, including the former site of "Bush Fort," near which the residence was erected. He married Mary Props. Nicholas Havener died August 3, 1843, and his wife, May 19, 1841. Their children were: Catherine, wife of John Dean; Polly, wife of Daniel Post; Sarah, wife of George Radabaugh; Elizabeth, wife of John Mowery; Phoebe, wife of Kinsey Ward; Anna, wife of John B. Shreve; Malinda, wife of Jacob M. Harr; Jane, wife of Washington Caplinger; Jacob, born in Pendleton County, February 7, 1801, married Mary Martin; Elias, J. G. Maxwell.

J. M. Brown

born in Pendleton County, April 9, 1805, married Elizabeth Heaver.

Elias Heaver, younger of the two sons, was the father of Capt. Jacob Heaver. He was born as noted, and died October 10, 1884. He married in 1829 Elizabeth Hyre, who was born February 14, 1809, and died August 2, 1902. After their marriage they settled on the old homestead in Upshur County, and remained there industriously engaged in farming and in the duties of good citizenship. Both were very faithful and active members of the Methodist Church, Elias Heaver being a class leader and trustee, and their home was always open for the entertainment of ministers of the Gospel. Elias Heaver and wife had a family of one daughter and seven sons, and the only sons to survive early childhood were Capt. Jacob W. and Clark W., both of whom were still living at Buckhannon.

Jacob W. Heaver was born January 27, 1841, and during his youth he acquired a subscription school education. About the time the Civil war broke out he was suffering from typhoid fever, and as soon as he recovered he volunteered and was commissioned a second Lieutenant. Just before going into service he and his brother and other recruits were captured in a raid made by General Jenkins at Buckhannon, and he was held a prisoner from August 12, until March, 1863. Jacob Heaver after being exchanged by general order helped organize Company M of the Third West Virginia Cavalry, and was elected a first Lieutenant and was with his regiment for two years, participating in the raid on Lynchburg and in the campaigns in the Shenandoah Valley under Custer and Sheridan. For special gallantry he was promoted to captain, and received a brevet rank of major, conferred by President Andrew Johnson at the close of the war. Captain Heaver was mustered out at Wheeling in July, 1865, and soon returned home to take up the duties of earnest citizenship that has constituted him one of the forceful men of Upshur County for over half a century. He organized and was an active member of G. A. R. Post No. 49 at Buckhannon, and for a number of years was its commander. In 1869 he was appointed by Judge Irving as sheriff of Upshur County, and was twice elected to that office, serving from 1869 to 1876.

He has long been a leader in the republican party in his county, was a delegate to the National Convention of 1884, was an alternate to the convention of 1888, was on the electoral ticket of 1892, was an alternate delegate in 1900, and in 1904 led the electoral ticket of the state. He was a member at large and president of the Board of Equalization of the state in 1900.

Captain Heaver has always had farming interests, and for a number of years he was in the real estate business at Buckhannon and lived in the city for thirteen years, in a home built on the site of the Catholic Hospital. He served as director in two railroad companies, and helped organize some of the banks of the city, was a director of the Buckhannon Bank, a director and vice president of the Traders National Bank up to the time he resigned, and a director of the People's Bank.

On June 1, 1871, Captain Heaver married Leah Anna Reger, who was born at Kingwood, West Virginia, daughter of Rev. John W. and Rebecca Anna (Brown) Reger. Her father was a minister of the Methodist Church and a trustee of West Virginia Wesleyan College. Mrs. Heaver was educated at Morgantown, and died May 5, 1917. She is survived by one daughter, Reta B., who is the wife of Frank Porter Maxwell of Buckhannon, and they have a daughter, Virginia Lee Maxwell.

Captain Heaver and wife were active members of the Methodist Church at Buckhannon, on whose official board he served for many years and labored untriflingly as superintendent of the Sunday school and in promoting the general welfare of the church, constantly assisted by his devoted wife. Captain Heaver and Mrs. Heaver were inseparably linked in their love and devotion to their family, and their love of home broadened into a devotion to all the good interests of the community, loyalty and patriotism being prominent characteristics of their lives.

HARRY L. BEARD, M. D., a representative physician engaged in successful general practice at Lewisburg, the county seat of Greenbrier County, expresses in unostentatious and effective service his professional and personal stewardship. He is a native of this county, his birth having occurred September 7, 1869, and he is a scion of one of the old and honored families of Greenbrier County. Here was born his father, John J. Beard, and also his grandfather, Joseph Beard, whose father, William Beard, was the founder of the family in this section. Joseph Beard, a farmer and stock grower, removed to Pocahontas County just prior to the outbreak of the Civil war, and there he passed the remainder of his life. John J. Beard likewise was a representative of farm industry in the earlier part of his career, and after his removal to Pocahontas County he was there elected clerk of the courts. He served as a soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war, in which he was made lieutenant in a cavalry regiment, and he took part in numerous engagements, in one of which, near Winchester, he was wounded. He was one of the honored and influential citizens of Pocahontas County at the time of his death, in 1898. His wife was Minerva A. Edmiston. Of their three children two are living.

Doctor Beard was reared in Pocahontas County. He advanced his education along academic lines by attending Hillsboro Academy, the University of West Virginia and the historic old University of Virginia. While a student at the last named institution, in 1891, he entered its medical department, and in the same he was graduated as a member of the class of 1893. After thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he entered the United States marine-hospital service at New Orleans, and while there holding the position of interne he gained most valuable clinical experience. In 1895 he returned to Lewisburg, where he has since continued in the active practice of his profession and where, in years of consecutive practice, he now has priority as the next oldest physician of the city. When the nation became involved in the World war Doctor Beard promptly tendered his services by entering the medical corps of the United States Army, his preliminary training having been received at Camp Greenleaf, at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. Thereafter he was stationed in turn at Camps Hill and Stuart. In May, 1918, he entered active service as ship's surgeon on a transport assigned to the conveying of troops from the United States to France, and he continued his service in this important capacity until the close of the war.

Doctor Beard has been a close student of the best standard and periodical literature of his profession, has taken various post-graduate courses and has kept in close touch with the advances made in medical and surgical science. He is a Knight Templar Mason, and as a citizen he is loyal and public-spirited.

JOHN K. HOBAUGH. Prominent among the men whose activities are felt in the coal mining industry of Wyoming County is John K. Hobaugh, superintendent of the Miller Pocahontas Coal Company at Corinne, one mile east of Mullens, on the Winding Gulf branch of the Virginia Railroad. Practically his entire life has been passed in this industry, with all the details of which he is thoroughly familiar. He was born at Sunnyside, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, August 29, 1877, and is a son of David and Nancy (Kelley) Hobaugh.

David Hobaugh spent his life in connection with mining in Pennsylvania, and died in 1914, when sixty-four years of age, his wife having passed away in 1902, at the age of fifty-two years. One of the men of integrity, who had the full confidence of his fellow-citizens, he served capably for a number of years as justice of the peace and wielded an influence for good in his community. He was active in both church and Sunday School work, as was his worthy wife, both being of the Methodist faith. Fraternally Mr. Hobaugh was identified with the Senior Order of United American Mechanics and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. There were four sons and three daughters in the family. One of the sons, H. R. Hobaugh, was for a few years identified with the West Virginia mines, being a foreman in the mines at Mount Hope and also acting in the same capacity on the White Oak branch of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad.

John K. Hobaugh attended the public schools of Sunny-side, Pennsylvania, and later supplemented his education with a course on mining subjects received through the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pennsylvania. When still a boy he began to help his father in the mines, and passed through all the positions in his upward climb, being successively a trapper, coal miner, fire boss, foreman and superintendent in Pennsylvania before he came to West Virginia, in February, 1913. At that time he came to Fayette County and was superintendent of the Summer-Lee and Loehgalley mines, owned by the New River Coal Company, a concern with which he remained for five years, then becoming superintendent of the McKell Company mines for two years. When he left that company it was to join the Miller Pocahontas Coal Company, which is connected with the Deegans interests, and during his superintendency many improvements have been made in the way of equipment and general conditions. Mr. Hobaugh has always been sensible of the value of education, and built the schoolhouse at Corinne and the one at Monticello. Corinne has become, largely through his efforts, a model coal camp, and was recently incorporated with a full set of officers. Mr. Hobaugh is a member of the Senior Order of United American Mechanics, the Knights of Malta and the Loyal Order of Moose. He is a republican in politics, and is progressive in action and in ideas.

In 1917 Mr. Hobaugh married Miss Ada Newman, a daughter of Asa Newman.

PATRICK JOSEPH CROGAN has been a Kingwood lawyer just forty years. He gained his early practice slowly but steadily, and now for many years his reputation as an able lawyer has been widely extended over the state.

The Crogans have been in Preston County since prior to the Civil war, when his parents, James and Rose (Doyle) Crogan, settled here on coming from Mount Savage, Maryland, where they were married. Both were natives of County Roscommon, Ireland. They settled on a farm near Newburg, where James Crogan died in 1858. The widowed mother survived to the ripe old age of eighty. They had four children: John F., who occupies the old farm at Newburg; James C., who was a railroad man and died at Cumberland, Maryland, where he left a family; Hubert A., a railroad man who died unmarried in Texas; and Patrick J.

Patrick J. Crogan was born June 17, 1856, in Preston County, and as a youth lived on the farm with his mother. He acquired a high school education at Newburg, and at the age of seventeen became a country schoolmaster. Later he taught in graded schools, and for the last two years was principal of the Newburg School. While teaching he studied law in the office of the late John W. Mason, of Grafton, West Virginia, and in 1881 was admitted to the bar at Kingwood. His examination committee consisted of three distinguished judges, A. F. Haymond, judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals; C. P. T. Moore, judge of the Supreme Court; and William T. Ice, judge of the Circuit Court of Preston County. Mr. Crogan was just twenty-five years of age when he opened his law office at Kingwood in October, 1881. He was an infant when his father died, and he had early learned self reliance and industry, and these qualities, plus a sound intelligence and good character, brought him to the real work of his profession at a comparatively early age. He practiced alone, and for many years his practice was of a general nature, but in late years he has handled a great deal of work for corporations. Many times he has appeared in defense of men charged with crime. As one of the able lawyers of the state he was elected president of the West Virginia Bar Association in 1897, and is also a member of the American Bar Association.

In addition to his law practice Mr. Crogan is president of the Bank of Kingwood. Unlike many lawyers, he has avoided politics as an incident of his profession, being satisfied to cast his vote intelligently. He first voted for General Hancock as a democratic presidential candidate, and is nominally democratic, though he did not agree with financial policies of Mr. Bryan when he was a candidate.

On September 15, 1886, Mr. Crogan married Miss Ella M. Fawcett. She was born in Preston County, daughter of Charles W. and Margaret (Herndon) Fawcett, also natives of Preston County. Her father was a Kingwood merchant. Besides Mrs. Crogan his children were: Mrs. Mallie F. Parkhurst, of Charleston; Miss Mamie, of Kingwood; Mrs. Bess F. Shaffer, of Kingwood; and J. William, who died at Wheeling and left a family.

Of Mr. Crogan's attainments as a lawyer, one who has watched his course for a quarter of a century estimates him as one of the strong and able men of the Preston County bar, with a high reputation in the State and Federal courts, in which he has enjoyed and still enjoys an extensive practice. Undoubtedly he is one of the ablest lawyers of the state, and has made an enviable reputation both in the criminal and civil branches and by his ability as a corporation lawyer. He is a clear, elegant and convincing debater both orally and by written brief, and his sound and thorough knowledge of the law extends to practically all its branches.

LOCKHART MATHEWS MCCLINTIC. One of the representative men of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, prominent in financial circles, a leader of the bar and influential in political life, is Lockhart Mathews McClintic, president of the First National Bank of Marlinton. In his ancestry he is connected with some of the oldest and most substantial families of the South.

Mr. McClintic was born at Mill Point, Pocahontas County, West Virginia, April 12, 1860. His parents were William H. and Mary A. (Mathews) McClintic, the former of whom was born in Bath County, Virginia, August 8, 1825, and was a son of Moses McClintic, at one time an extensive planter in Bath County. William H. McClintic had educational advantages, and was a well informed, clear-headed man. He remained with his parents until after his marriage, when he and his wife came to Pocahontas County, West Virginia. For a few years they lived at Mill Point, and then settled permanently at Buckeye, where, after distinguished services in the war between the states, he followed farming and stockraising for many years. During the above war he was a member of Capt. J. W. Marshall's company in the Confederate Army. A man of honest purpose and exemplary life, he was much respected. His death occurred at Buckeye on January 20, 1892.

In 1859 William H. McClintic married Mary A. Mathews, who was the only child of Sampson L. and Nancy (Edgar) Mathews. The mother of Sampson L. Mathews was a member of the Warwick family. He was the first surveyor of Pocahontas County, and for a number of years was a member of the County Court. The mother of Mrs. McClintic belonged to the notable Edgar family that at one time owned the land on which now stands Ronceverte in Greenbrier County. To William H. McClintic and his wife five children were born: Lockhart Mathews; Edgar D., who is a resident of Seattle, Washington; Henry Hunter, who is deceased; Withrow, who resides on the old home place at Buckeye; and George W., who is judge of the Southern West Virginia Federal District.

Lockhart Mathews McClintic was primarily educated in the common schools, then entered Roanoke College, at Salem, Virginia, from which institution he was graduated in 1881 and then became a student of law in the University of Virginia. He was admitted to the bar in 1885, and ever since has maintained his home at Marlinton. He served three terms as prosecuting attorney of Pocahontas County, and during this time assisted greatly in having the county seat removed from Huntersville to Marlinton. He has filled other public offices with like efficiency, being a member of the City Council in the difficult days when Marlinton was first incorporated, and more recently has served in the State Legislature. Aside from his profession he has large financial interests in the county, and his high standing in his home city is indicated by his position as president of the First National Bank.

Mr. McClintic married, December 5, 1885, Miss Allie N. Slaven, and they have had four children: Mary Margaret, John H., George L. and Alice J., all surviving except George L., who died at the age of twelve years. Mr. McClintic and his family belong to the Presbyterian Church. He has always been a loyal democrat in politics and a dependable and effective worker for the party. Mr. McClintic is a Knight Templar Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine.

P. J. Cogan

WILLIAM ALEXANDER HESLEP, M. D. The wealthy and cultured community of St. Albans will long cherish the memory of the late Dr. W. A. Heslep for the talents and high character he devoted to his profession as a physician and surgeon there for over twenty years. Undoubtedly he was one of the best known and best loved men in that section of Kanawha County.

Death claimed him while he was still busy with his labors, on July 20, 1919. He was then in his sixty-second year, having been born in Fayetteville, West Virginia, August 31, 1857. His father died during Civil war, and Doctor Heslep stood face to face with serious responsibility when he was still a child. He cared for his mother during her later years. As a youth he learned the carpenter's trade. He married Miss Cora Mahood, of Pearisburg, Giles County, Virginia. Soon after his marriage he took up the study of medicine, entering Vanderbilt University at Nashville, Tennessee, where he graduated in 1892.

Doctor Heslep practiced for several years at Gauley Bridge, West Virginia, and in 1896 removed to St. Albans, where until his death his time and enthusiasm were completely devoted to his professional work. He enjoyed a large and lucrative practice, and was an active member of all the medical societies. While busy with his profession he was interested in civic affairs, and while not a seeker for office he rendered much service that was really for the good of the community. He was a democrat, a Baptist, was taking the Scottish Rite degrees in Masonry at the time of his death, and was also a member of the Knights of Pythias.

His first wife, Mrs. Cora Heslep, died in 1912, the mother of three children: Kenneth, a plumber at St. Albans; Marjorie C., wife of Richard Yarbrough, of Charleston; and Frank W., a pharmacist.

In February, 1915, Doctor Heslep married Ada (Thrasher) Welch. Her first husband, Capt. J. A. Welch, became a well known citizen of St. Albans, a mining engineer and developed some extensive coal fields. He had served as a captain in the Confederate Army, being a member of a company raised at Elk River in Kanawha County. Captain Welch's first wife was Miss Mary Snyder. In 1900 he married Miss Ada Thrasher, of Pearisburg, Virginia, the same town where the first wife of Doctor Heslep lived. Captain Welch died in February, 1902. By his last marriage there were no children, but Mrs. Heslep reared from infancy her nephew, Thomas J. Pearson, who graduated in 1922 from the St. Albans High School. Mrs. Heslep is an active worker in the Baptist Church, and has been a factor in literary and social affairs at her home town. She is a charter member of the St. Albans Chapter of the Eastern Star, is a past worthy matron, is present secretary of the Chapter and has been a delegate to the Grand Chapter.

JOHN WYATT DAWSON. A resident of Charleston nearly forty years, J. W. Dawson has been easily one of the conspicuous figures in coal development, railroad construction and many related fields of industrial activity and development. While most men have the time and many of them similar opportunities, only a few become the source and directing energy of such an astonishing array of achievements as Mr. Dawson.

He is a native of old Virginia, born in Albemarle County in 1863, where the Dawson family has been connected with affairs for several generations. His parents were George W. and Sallie Sidonia (May) Dawson. His father was a member of the Richmond City Guards and a Confederate soldier throughout the war.

J. W. Dawson felt the spur of independent action and achievement at an early age. He left home at the age of fifteen, and his first steady employment was in the construction service on the Loraine Branch of what is now the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, then known as the Richmond & Allegheny. Mr. Dawson was a railroad man for a number of years, and in that time filled every position from a laborer to superintendent of transportation. For several years he was an operator and train dispatcher.

He was still in the ranks of common labor when he came to West Virginia in 1882, at the age of nineteen, beginning his service with the Kanawha & Michigan Railway, now part of the New York Central lines, with headquarters at Charleston. When he resigned from the service he had been for ten years superintendent of transportation.

From the operating side of railroading Mr. Dawson took up railroad building. Most of his service as a railroad builder has been auxiliary to and in connection with the opening of coal mines in West Virginia and old Virginia. He located and bought the lands for and organized the Dawson Coal & Coke Company, with headquarters at Dante on the C. C. & O. Railway. These lands are located in Wise, Dickenson and Russell counties, Virginia. To open these mines he built in 1902 the first nine miles of the C. C. & O. Railway in Virginia. Some years ago he sold his interests in the company, but it still remains one of the most profitable coal operating concerns in the Virginia-West Virginia fields. This is only one of a number of large and successful coal and construction enterprises carried out by Mr. Dawson. In 1896 he was identified with the Boomer Coal & Coke Company at Boomer, Fayette County, West Virginia, now owned by the Hanna interests at Cleveland. Following this he was one of the reorganizers of the Kellys Creek Mining Company at Mammoth in Kanawha County. He then built the plant and operated the mines of the Kellys Creek Colliery Company, and remained at the head of that corporation fifteen years. While in the high tide of his activities Mr. Dawson built a number of short railroads to furnish transportation access to new coal fields which he was opening. A striking fact is that every one of the coal mining and railroad construction enterprises inaugurated and carried out by Mr. Dawson was successful and made money.

When the Government early in the war began selecting men of conspicuous abilities in various lines to organize and direct the industries of the nation on a basis of war time efficiency, Mr. Dawson was naturally invited as an adviser and executive under the Fuel Administration. He served as production manager of West Virginia, and had charge of the production of coal in the state for war purposes. It was a service he rendered wholly without compensation and from a patriotic duty and devotion. Through his ceaseless activities and his influence with both operators and miners in the state he stimulated the production of coal to the utmost. When he responded to the invitation of the Government Mr. Dawson relinquished practically all of his active connection with the coal business. One of his largest investments now is in California, forty miles north of Sacramento, where he and his associates are developing the largest remaining tract of sugar pine forests now remaining in the United States.

Mr. Dawson married Miss Lyda Power. Their two children are Joseph Power Dawson and Catherine May Dawson.

FRANK M. SYDNOR. One of the representative business men of Marlinton, and a member of an old Southern family, is Frank M. Sydnor, who for many years was identified with the C. & O. Railroad before embarking in the insurance and brokerage line. While railroad work has its possible disadvantages, like every other vocation, it does teach methodical business methods, based on punctuality and exactness, methods which are equally indispensable for entire success in any other line of effort. Mr. Sydnor feels that his years of railroad training were a valuable school of experience.

Frank M. Sydnor was born at Brems Bluff, Virginia, August 7, 1881, the only child of his father's first marriage. His parents were William O. and Mollie (Sutherland) Sydnor, the latter of whom died in 1883. William O. Sydnor was born in Dinwiddie County, Virginia, December 13, 1857, and is a son of Robert H. and Mary J. (Barrett) Sydnor, who were of English birth. Before the war between the states Robert H. Sydnor was a planter and slave owner. William O. Sydnor, who is now assistant general freight agent for the C. & O. Railroad, with headquarters at Huntington, West Virginia, has been a railroad man almost his entire life. He began work in 1878, with the Norfolk & Western road, and from there went to the Richmond & Alleghany, but since 1881 has been continuously identified with the C. & O., and is not only one of the best known and highly valued but one of the oldest railroad men in West Virginia.

William O. Sydnor has been thrice married. After the death of his first wife he married Mary Wilson, and they had three children: Leslie, Mary and William O. His third marriage was with Mrs. Mattie Seig. They have no children. Although never active in a political sense, Mr. Sydnor has always been affiliated with the democratic party.

Following the early death of his young mother Frank M. Sydnor was taken by his paternal grandparents, with whom he made his home until he was nineteen years old. His education was secured in the public schools, and in the meanwhile he learned the art of telegraphy. In 1901 he became telegraph operator and station agent for the C. & O. Railroad at Goshen, Virginia, and later at Marlinton, West Virginia, to which place he came in February, 1904, and has maintained his home here ever since. In 1912 he retired from railroad work and engaged in the insurance and brokerage business, the latter including the handling of coal, hay, grain and kindred commodities. He has built up a fine trade, and is named as one of the able and dependable business men of this city.

On October 29, 1902, Mr. Sydnor married Miss Loula Johnson, of Prince George County, Virginia, and they have one daughter, Rebecca. A democrat in politics, he has officiated as mayor and during the World war was chairman of the Home Service Section of the Red Cross.

HARRY EASTWOOD is one of the younger members of the Charleston bar, but in less than a half dozen years has established a substantial practice and a secure reputation in his profession.

He was born at Mount Tell, Jackson County, West Virginia, in 1890, son of W. H. and Margaret A. (Duff) Eastwood. For many years the home of the Eastwood family was at Catlettsburg, Kentucky, where W. H. Eastwood was born, and where his father, Jesse Eastwood, was an honored resident. Jesse Eastwood was a Union soldier in the Civil war, a member of Company A, Twenty-second Kentucky Infantry, and was all through that struggle. In his town he was a man of extensive property interests, owning tracts of land in the vicinity of Catlettsburg. W. H. Eastwood spent some years in Jackson County, West Virginia, but subsequently removed to Poca, Putnam County.

It was on a farm in Putnam County that Harry Eastwood grew to manhood. He acquired most of his education in the schools of Catlettsburg, Kentucky, studied law at home and in the Hamilton College of Law in Chicago, and was admitted to the bar at Charleston in 1917. Since that year he has given attention to the increasing responsibilities of his practice. He is senior member of the law firm of Eastwood, Rowan & Thompson, in the Kanawha National Bank Building. Mr. Eastwood handles the general practice, but has avoided cases in the criminal law, and his time is more and more taken up with legal interests of corporation and commercial and industrial litigation.

Mr. Eastwood is a member of the Central Methodist Church of Charleston. He is a Uniformed Rank Knight of Pythias and D. O. K. K., and is also a member of the Lodge and Encampment of the I. O. O. F.

He married Miss Ella May Bradley, of Louisa, Kentucky. Their two children are Russell H. and Harold P.

NATHAN CLAWSON MCNEIL. No matter what notable achievements a man can justly claim as personal he always cherishes a feeling of pride in those of an honorable ancestral line. Thus Nathan Clawson McNeil, prominent lawyer, state senator and concerned with many leading interests in Pocahontas County, counts as one of his most valued assets his direct descent from Thomas McNeil, that sturdy character of over 150 years ago who was known as the pioneer of Swago.

Thomas McNeil was of Scotch parentage and possibly of Scotch birth. He was one of the earliest of the pioneers to brave the rigors and perils of the frontier west of the Alleghany Mountains. About 1770 he entered 300 acres of land in Pocahontas County, now West Virginia, defended his claim with fearless courage, and was one of the first in his section to improve land and cultivate it profitably. His wife, Mary Ireson McNeil, was of no less rugged a type than himself, and in their pioneer home of primitive construction they reared a family of six children with habits of industry that have been characteristic of the McNeils ever since.

Jonathan McNeil, the eldest of his parents' children, spent his life as a farmer. He married Phoebe Moore, who was a daughter of Moses Moore, and they had four children: John, William, Moore and Preston. Mrs. McNeil was born February 13, 1774, and was thirteen years old at the time of the celebrated raid, which she remembered well. Other occupations carried on by Jonathan McNeil were milling and powder making, while his wife was an expert in weaving and fulling cloth.

William McNeil, son of Jonathan and Phoebe McNeil, and grandfather of Nathan Clawson McNeil, was well and favorably known over what is now Pocahontas County as one of the early and well informed school teachers. He married Nancy Griffey, of Franklin County, Virginia, and they made their home on a part of the old McNeil homestead. They became the parents of seven children: Jonathan, James, Claiborne, Moore, Jane, Elizabeth and Agnes. Claiborne McNeil, of the above family, spent the greater part of his life near Buckeye, in his native county, where he was held in esteem as a man of sterling character. To his marriage with Elizabeth Adkinson the following children were born: Charlotte (Mrs. Joseph Pennell), Joshua B., D. T. and Nathan Clawson.

Nathan Clawson McNeil was born in a log cabin at Buckeye Cove, Pocahontas County, West Virginia, November 7, 1865, the youngest of his parents' four children. He attended the public schools and the high school at Hillsboro, and then entered the law department of the University of West Virginia, from which he was graduated in 1888. Later he took special courses in law under John B. Minor, which was a great privilege, as Professor Minor was one of the most brilliant instructors in the university. Mr. McNeil was admitted to the bar in 1890, and prior to the establishment of the county seat at Marlinton, engaged in practice at Huntersville, the old county seat. He lived at other points in earlier life, having taught school in the county for six years, beginning at the age of seventeen, but has maintained his home at Marlinton since leaving Huntersville.

In Mr. McNeil his fellow citizens found not only an able lawyer but a broad-minded man of affairs, vitally interested in the welfare of county and state, a man who has been very prominent politically and one who has never failed to consider a public office as a public trust. For fourteen years he served as chairman of the Republican County Executive Committee, and was elected a member of the State Senate. He served with honor and efficiency in the sessions of 1907-1909, taking a very active part as chairman of the committee on election and privileges, at a time when it was one of the most important committees in the Legislative branch. He managed the campaign of Hon. Nathan B. Scott for the United States Senate and made the nominating speech. Mr. McNeil was the father of the first state game law.

On November 15, 1904, Mr. McNeil married Miss Ruth Young, a former pupil. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He is a Knight Templar Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine.

JOHN A. PRESTON. While his home was always in his native community, and the place he loved best in all the world, Greenbrier County, the late John A. Preston was in every sense a man of commanding importance and influence through West Virginia. He was a great lawyer, and was the favorite son of his native county. People respected, trusted, admired and loved him because they knew him to be worthy of all and that he was true to his high ideals, ideals that he translated into action and conduct that fully earned him his high place in county and state.

Harry Castwood

His father was David R. Preston, a native of Southwestern Virginia, a minister of the Presbyterian faith, who completed his theological studies in Princeton University. David R. Preston probably came to Greenbrier County from Kentucky in the decade of the '30s. He had a charge at Union in Monroe County, but for many years his home was near Lewisburg in Greenbrier County. He married Jeanette Creigh, who represented one of the oldest and best known families in Greenbrier County. The Creighs were prominent Confederates during the Civil war. Rev. David R. Preston died when a comparatively young man. He and his wife had six children, the late John A. Preston being next to the youngest.

John A. Preston was born at the old Preston homestead, "Tusawilla," March 14, 1847. On April 26, 1917, a few weeks past his seventieth birthday, he left home in Lewisburg to go to Clarksburg and perhaps due to the overexertion of getting to the station he died soon after taking his place in the railroad coach and while still in full view of the old farm and home where he was born. He was reared there and accustomed to the work of the fields when he was a boy. He attended local schools, also the Lewisburg Academy, and in January or February, 1865, before he was eighteen, he enlisted in Company K of the Fourteenth Virginia Cavalry in the Confederate Army. He was in the service until the close of the war the following April. In later years he took a great deal of interest in the history of the Civil war period, and particularly in the survivors of the cause for which he had fought. He was an eloquent orator who was in great demand for memorial and reunion speeches. Sometime after the war he entered Washington College, where he completed his literary education in 1869, and that institution had Gen. Robert E. Lee as its president and in whose honor it is now Washington and Lee University. Mr. Preston began the study of law with Samuel Price, who was lieutenant governor of Virginia during the Civil war. He read in Governor Price's office at Lewisburg, was admitted to the bar and for several years practiced with the former lieutenant governor and later married his daughter, Sallie Lewis Price. Mr. Preston practiced law in Greenbrier and surrounding counties with a degree of success that few of his contemporaries ever obtained. In 1876 he was elected state's attorney for the county, and by successive elections held that post of duty for sixteen years. In 1896 he was again elected to the same office for four years. In 1914, only a few years before his death, he was elected to fill out an unexpired term as county prosecutor. In the prosecution of criminals he made a great reputation for his vigor and fearlessness.

In addition to this long term of public service Mr. Preston was elected and served two terms in the House of Delegates, in both regular and special sessions. In 1910 he was elected to the State Senate, holding that office four years. He was on many of the important committees of both Houses. For a number of years he was on the Board of Directors of the State Asylum for the Insane at Weston. He had served for a number of years, until his death, as one of the trustees of Washington and Lee University. He was an ardent democrat, and was a power in maintaining and building up his party and one of the political speakers most in demand by the state and district committees.

Mr. Preston for many years was a faithful member of the Old Stone Presbyterian Church of Lewisburg, a church founded and built in 1796. He served it as deacon and also as ruling elder.

A concise estimate of the life and character of this great Greenbrier lawyer and citizen is in the following editorial quoted from the Charleston Gazette:

"In the death of Hon. John A. Preston, of Greenbrier, the state has suffered a signal loss. He was not only a great lawyer, but also one of those types of honest, upright citizens whose example and influence, counsel and help can little be spared at this time. He was a link between the men like Governor Price, Governor Mathews, Judges Snyder and Holt through to the present. He saw the old Virginia type and lived and worked with the modern West Virginia. His never failing stand for principle and truth was the crowning glory of his honorable, active and useful life. As prosecuting attorney, senator, lawyer and citizen he was always the courtly gentleman, the unswerving Christian, the courageous but kindly man—trusted, respected and loved; a leader in his profession; a power, always for right and justice; a good father and husband and a useful man, he filled the full measure of every requirement of citizenship. The County of Greenbrier has lost one of its most distinguished men, and this state will miss this able, good man. We extend our sympathy to his family and relatives, and join with his hundreds of friends here in sincere regret and sorrow."

June 6, 1877, John A. Preston married Miss Sallie Price, third daughter of Governor and Mrs. Samuel Price. She died August 1, 1882, leaving two sons—Samuel Price and James Montgomery. On February 4, 1892, Mr. Preston married Miss Lillie Davis, of Clarksburg, daughter of Hon. John J. Davis. She survives her husband, and her two sons are John J. D. Preston and Walter C. Preston. The former attended Washington and Lee University, served as a lieutenant in the World war, and is now a practicing lawyer at Charleston. Walter C. Preston was also a lieutenant in the World war, and is now a student in Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore.

Samuel Price Preston, oldest of the sons of the late John A. Preston, was born July 3, 1879, was educated in local schools, in the Greenbrier Military Academy, the Lee Military Academy, Washington and Lee University, and then took his law course, spending two years in the University of Virginia and one year in the University of Michigan. After qualifying for the profession he was a partner with his father until the latter's death, and continues in the practice at Lewisburg. He married Elizabeth Montgomery Mason, daughter of Silas B. and Elizabeth (Montgomery) Mason, of Lewisburg. The five children of their union are: Silas M., John A., Samuel P., Jr., William M. and James Tate.

James Montgomery Preston, second son of John A. Preston, was born August 3, 1881, was educated in Lewisburg, and later in Virginia attended Locust Dale Academy, Pantop's Academy, Valley High School, and Washington and Lee University. He completed his business education with a course in Sadler's Business College in Baltimore. His home has always been in Lewisburg, where he is prominent in local affairs. He is a Knight Templar Mason. On June 6, 1906, he married Miss Frances Flournoy, daughter of former State Senator Samuel L. Flournoy and Fanny A. (White) Flournoy, of Charleston. The children of their marriage are: James Stuart, Frances Flournoy, Margaret Lynn, James Montgomery, Jr., and Minnie Frazier.

JOHN ANDERSON HUNTER, M. D. A life marked by exalted personal and professional stewardship and by able, generous and kindly service in behalf of his fellow men was that of the honored pioneer physician and surgeon to whom this brief memoir is dedicated and who was a resident of Lewisburg, Greenbrier County, at the time of his death, April 17, 1873.

Doctor Hunter was born in what is now Greenbrier County, West Virginia, and the date of his nativity was April 13, 1818. He was a son of Henry B. and Elizabeth Gratton (Anderson) Hunter, whose marriage was solemnized January 31, 1810, other publications of standard order giving adequate record of the life of Henry B. Hunter and of the family history. Doctor Hunter was of staunch Scotch-Irish ancestry. His maternal grandfather, John Anderson, was one of the first elders in the historic old stone Presbyterian Church at Lewisburg, he having settled on land granted to him, on Greenbrier River, for services rendered as a patriot soldier in the war of the Revolution, in which he won the rank of captain. Captain Anderson wedded Elizabeth Turpin Davis on the 7th of January, 1761, and their daughter Elizabeth Gratton (Mrs. Henry B. Hunter), was born September 11, 1778. Captain John Anderson gave to his daughter, Elizabeth, a part of his fine old estate on the Greenbrier River, and at the death of the daughter the property passed to her sons, John Anderson (subject of this memoir) and Henry Fielding.

Much of the preliminary education of Dr. John A. Hunter was received under the able preceptorship of Doctor McElhenny at the Lewisburg Academy, one of the historic old institutions of what is now West Virginia. Later he received from Washington College (now Washington and Lee University), at Lexington, Virginia, his degree of Bachelor of Arts, and after his return home he read medicine under the direction of Dr. Moorman for three years. He then entered the celebrated old Jefferson Medical College in the City of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and in the same he was graduated, with high honors, on the 26th of March, 1842. After thus receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine he engaged in the practice of his profession at Blue Sulphur Springs, in the present Greenbrier County, West Virginia, that place having been at that time a famous resort for representative people of Virginia and other Southern states. After several years of successful practice at that point Doctor Hunter established his residence and professional headquarters at Lewisburg, where he continued his benignant ministrations in his profession during the remainder of his active career, save for the period of his service in connection with the Civil war.

Doctor Hunter was a loyal and ardent supporter of the policies and attitude of Virginia in the climacteric period leading up to the Civil war, and when secession of the Southern states finally resulted and the war between the North and the South was instituted, he forthwith tendered his services to the Confederate government. He went forth as surgeon with Capt. Robert F. Dennis in the Twenty-eighth has been written: "In the long list of distinguished were his services in connection that he was advanced to the responsible office of medical director of the Army of Virginia. Of his record in this connection the following estimate has been written: "In the long list of distinguished surgeons in the Confederate Army none contributed more indefatigably than he to the improvement and completion of the system of medical and hospital discipline instituted by the surgeon general—a system which for order and symmetry and judicious arrangement has no parallel in the annals of war." Faithful and effective service was given by Doctor Hunter in this connection, and upon the close of the war he accepted with characteristic poise and potent equanimity the changed order of affairs and girded himself for further helpfulness to his home community and state and his loved Southland. He returned to Lewisburg, and here he continued his humane mission in the service of those in affliction and distress, never failing to heed the call of suffering and ever standing ready to give his professional aid to the most lowly as well as to those of high estate. Gentle, tolerant, unselfish, benevolent and kindly, his heart was attuned to that fine chord of sympathy which expresses itself in human helpfulness, and he was guide, counselor and friend in the community, as well as the faithful and efficient physician and surgeon whose stewardship took slight thought of the emolument that might attend his ministrations. The poor found him always ready to aid and succor, and his personal and civic ideals were of the highest. He was the courteous, urbane and dignified gentleman of the fine old Southern regime, was a devout churchman, was affiliated prominently with the Masonic fraternity, and as a citizen was liberal and public-spirited. To him was accorded the affection, regard and the high esteem of the community in which he long lived and wrought to goodly ends, and it is pleasing to offer in this volume a tribute to the memory of this noble man and distinguished physician.

On the 3d of January, 1859, was solemnized the marriage of Doctor Hunter and Miss Rebecca Agnes Dickson, whose old home, near White Sulphur Springs, is known as Mountain Home and is now owned by her brother, Henry Feazier Dickson. Mrs. Hunter long survived her husband and was eighty-seven years of age at the time of her death, which occurred at the home of her son, Henry Feazier Hunter, at Lewisburg, on the 24th of April, 1917, her memory being revered by all who came within the compass of her gentle and gracious influence. Of the four children the eldest, Sarah R., became the wife of Henderson Bell, she being deceased; John C. was the elder son; Bettie G. is the wife of Robert W. Cabell, and they have two children. Henry F., the surviving son, is individually mentioned in appending paragraphs.

HENRY F. HUNTER was born at Lewisburg, Greenbrier County, on the 6th of October, 1862, was reared in a home of distinctive culture and gracious social atmosphere and was afforded the advantages of Greenbrier Academy. He has long been actively identified with banking enterprise in his native city, and is at the present time vice president and cashier of the Bank of Greenbrier, with which he has been actively associated twenty-six years.

November 19, 1896, recorded the marriage of Henry F. Hunter and Mary Teresa Stratton, daughter of James H. Stratton, of Lewisburg. Of this union have been born three children: Rebecca Nelson, Marion (died in infancy) and James Stratton.

THE ALDERSON FAMILY. Among the prominent and distinguished families of Monroe County few can lay claim to a more honorable lineage or to a more splendid record for public-spirited citizenship than that bearing the name of Alderson. This family traces back to John Alderson, the progenitor in the United States of the Aldersons of West Virginia, who came from Yorkshire, England, and first located in New Jersey, where he married Mary Curtis, and for a time was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Later he entered the ministry of the Baptist Church, and followed that calling during the remainder of his life, in Pennsylvania and Maryland. He became the father of three sons and one daughter.

One of the sons of the immigrant John Alderson, "Elder John" Alderson, became historically connected with the early history of the southeastern part of what is now West Virginia. As a Baptist missionary he located in the immediate vicinity of Alderson, West Virginia, in 1774, and until the establishment of a church in 1781 visited around in the sparsely settled country, preaching and exhorting and bringing the Word to the pioneers. He became widely known and universally beloved, and continued as pastor of the church which he had founded until his death. He was born March 5, 1738, and October 31, 1759, married Mary Elizabeth Carroll, their children being: Alice, George, Mary, John (1), Joseph, Thomas, Margaret, Jane and John. These children of "Elder John" Alderson were fine characters and left honored names for their descendants, many of whom yet live in this section. George married a Miss Osborne, Joseph married "Polly" Newman, Margaret married Thomas Smithson, Jane married William McClung and John was married three times, first to Jane Walker, who bore him six children, next to Nancy (Robinson) Mays, who also bore him six children, and next to Millie Mitholland. He died in 1853.

John Alderson, the youngest son of "Elder John," was a farmer of Monroe County, and owned the Alderson ferry across the Greenbrier River. His home was the present site of the hotel. Of all his children but one now survives, he being familiarly known as "Uncle" George Alderson, and he is the "youngest son of the youngest son." "Uncle" George Alderson was born November 13, 1833, "the night the stars fell." He grew up in the immediate vicinity of his birthplace and makes his home on a part of the original farm. Under the legislative grant of 1789 the Alderson ferry was established, but as time passed and others came to live here the name was dropped and ever since the place has been known as Alderson. The original farm of John Alderson was over 200 acres, but the present farm of his son George consists of 175 acres. George Alderson has always followed farming. He enlisted in the Confederate Army in 1862, and during the greater part of his service acted as orderly for Generals Loring and Echols. He was elected a justice of the peace at the first election after the close of the war between the states, when the Confederates were again given the full rights of citizenship, and in 1885 was elected a representative to the last Legislature that was held at Wheeling, during which he was the author of the amendment to the penal law which provided a penalty of from one to two years' confinement for breaking into outbuildings with intent to steal. He has been twice married, first to Mary Jane Hines, who bore him three children: Charles O., who died in infancy; Emma Cornelia, connected with the Alderson Baptist Academy ever since its organization; and Ida, now deceased. Mr. Alderson's second marriage was with Virginia Stevens, and to this union there were born six children: John C., the only survivor; Bernard C.; William; George, who served two terms in the State Legislature; Virginia, who died as the wife of Charles B. Rowe, and Coleman C. Mr. Alderson is a democrat in politics and a Mason fraternally, and since its organization has been a director in the First National Bank. For forty years he has been superintendent of the Baptist Sunday School, and for a longer period has been a deacon in the church.

J. W. La Heslop

On November 13, 1867, Mr. Alderson married Virginia M. Stevens, and their wedded life has covered a period of more than fifty-four years. On their Golden Wedding anniversary, November 13, 1917, which was also Mr. Alderson's eighty-fourth birthday, eighty-five guests gathered at the pleasant home on Sunset Hill, this being the first Golden Wedding celebration ever held in the community. Mrs. Alderson is a daughter of J. W. P. Stevens, of English ancestry, and a native of New Hampshire, who came to Alderson as a young man and married Miriam Gwinn. For nearly a half a century he was a teacher in the surrounding schools. He was a fine penman, and because of his splendid education and beautiful penmanship more of the deeds and official papers, as well as family records, are in his handwriting than all others combined.

George Alderson, another son of Elder John Alderson, moved to Kanawha County, where he was engaged in salt reduction, and while his brothers were interested in the same business with him they maintained their homes in Greenbrier County. He became prominent in Kanawha County, and served as sheriff, and Alderson Street, Charleston, is named in his honor. George Alderson was a man of rugged type and of unusual force. He was elected and served several terms in the Virginia Legislature, where his practical knowledge was invaluable. Many interesting anecdotes are related of this man. It is told that he elected the largest corn cob that he could find, converted it into a pipe, and when his confederates remarked upon its size, replied that it was "merely a 'nubbins.'"

Joseph Alderson, son of Elder John Alderson, was elected sheriff of Monroe County, and after moving to Greenbrier County was a justice of the peace and a member of the Virginia State Legislature. He married "Polly" Newman, a daughter of Jonathan Newman a survivor of the Revolutionary battle of Guilford, and they had a large family. One son, George, known as "Colonel George," lived at DeKalb a Fayette County, and was married twice, first to Jeannette McCleary and then to Eliza Davis, by both of whom he had children, many of whose descendants are now living at and around Alderson, which town was named in honor of the family. John Marshall Alderson, the oldest child of the first marriage, was deputy sheriff and sheriff of Greenbrier County for years, and died in 1861. His wife was Cornelia Coleman, of Amherst County, Virginia, and they had nine children, seven growing to maturity: Sallie, who became the wife of Capt. John G. Lobban; James Powell; Joseph N.; Millie J., who was Mrs. Andrew J. Riffe; John I.; Cornelia M., who became Mrs. Taylor Mann; and Lucy, who became Mrs. E. R. Lewis. The mother of these children died in 1880. Of this family Joseph N. Alderson married Millie Putney, of Kanawha County, and was engaged in railroad work as agent during his early manhood, later followed merchandising at Alderson, and served as postmaster during President Cleveland's first administration, also being otherwise prominent in local affairs. He and his wife had four children: Marshall P., who died in infancy; James M., who also died as an infant; Alethea T.; and Joseph N. The last named married Miss Frances Richardson, of Huntington, West Virginia, and they have two children: Frances and Alice Todd. Mr. Alderson was engaged in banking at Alderson until appointed postmaster in 1914, his term expiring in 1923, he being the third of his name to officiate as such. He is a past master of Alderson Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and is a Presbyterian in religious faith.

John M. Alderson, the only surviving child of John Marshall and Cornelia (Coleman) Alderson, was born at what was then Palestine, Greenbrier County, West Virginia, February 11, 1854, and received only limited educational advantages. He left home at the age of nineteen years to become a telegraph operator and railroad agent, and in 1884 embarked in mercantile pursuits at Alderson, in which he has been engaged to the present. At one time he was the owner of a large number of branch stores, but at the present confines his attention to three establishments. During President Cleveland's second administration he served as postmaster, but he has never cared particularly for public office, preferring merely to exercise his right of franchise as an American citizen. He has been a supporter of democratic principles, in religion is a Baptist, and fraternally is affiliated with the Master Masons.

On February 16, 1893, Mr. Alderson married Miss Florence Hodges, of Mount Sterling, Ohio, and to this union there have been born five children: Gladys Cless, who is unmarried and resides with her parents; Cornelia Coleman, who is the wife of H. L. Smith; Florence Marshall, who is the wife of O. B. Kirby; John Marshall, a member of the Students Reserve Corps at the University of Richmond during the World war, now in business with his father, married Miss Elizabeth Creigh; and Julia Hodges, with her parents.

It goes without saying that the descendants of Elder John Alderson are, for the most part, Baptists in religion, although late generations have accepted other faiths. So far as is known they have been democrats. None have been known to have violated the laws of the land; and, on the other hand, many have held important official positions with credit. On the whole, the Alderson's are recognized as among the solid and substantial people of West Virginia, a credit to the state and nation.

JOHN W. C. HESLOP is proprietor of the Point Pleasant Machine Works, and has made this enterprise one of major industrial importance at Point Pleasant, Mason County, a point specially prominent in connection with navigation interests on the Kanawha and Ohio rivers. The Point Pleasant Machine Works were established in 1888 by Mr. Heslop and David Price, and the business was continued under the firm name of Heslop & Price until 1898, since which year the subject of this review has been sole owner of the business. In earlier days the establishment was given over largely to the manufacturing of steamboat machinery and to the general machine outfitting of river boats. Later was added the manufacturing of mining machinery and the manufacturing and installing of marine engines and mine castings. The plant has been enlarged from time to time to meet the increasing demands placed upon it, and much of the trade is drawn from river-port cities, especially in the supplying of steamboat engines.

Mr. Heslop was born at Bridgeport, Ohio, in 1853, and the schools of his native state afforded him his early education. He learned his trade at Pomeroy, Ohio, which place then had important marine machine shops. He has been concerned actively with machine manufacturing during his entire business career, and his former partner, Mr. Price, was a skilled blacksmith. Prior to engaging independently in business Mr. Heslop had been in the employ of Enos, Hill & Company, which firm controlled a large business in manufacturing and providing marine machinery for river boats, with headquarters at Gallipolis, Ohio, which town is only a short distance down the Ohio River from Point Pleasant, West Virginia. Thus when he initiated his independent enterprise at the latter place Mr. Heslop had to encounter the strong competition of the firm by which he had previously been employed, but excellent service and correct business policies ultimately enabled him to build up a substantial and representative trade. After the destruction of the Gallipolis plant of Enos, Hill & Company both of his former employers worked for Mr. Heslop in his shop at Point Pleasant, he having purchased the patterns which they had saved from the fire that destroyed their plant, and later having obtained also valuable patterns saved from a fire that destroyed the plant of the Gallipolis Foundry & Machine Company. In the Point Pleasant Machine Works are to be found a number of skilled mechanics who have here been employed fully thirty years.

Mr. Heslop has proved one of the liberal and progressive citizens of Point Pleasant, has served as a member of the city council, was for thirteen years a member of the local board of education, his service having included the period in which the present high school building was erected, and his loyal co-operation has been given to movements and enterprises tending to advance the general welfare of his home community. He is a charter member of the local lodge of Knights of Pythias, is prominently affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, including Franklin Commandery No. 19, Knights Templars, and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston.

At Mason City, West Virginia, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Heslop and Miss Aurilla Jarrott, who was born in Kanawha County, this state, a daughter of the late Lemuel Jarrott, who was for a number of years engaged in the manufacturing of salt at Malden, Kanawha County. Martha, oldest of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Heslop, is the wife of Hugo Juhling, of New Haven, this state; Sue is the wife of S. C. Wilhelm, of Point Pleasant, he being secretary of the Marietta Manufacturing Company; Aurilla is the wife of Milton L. Miller, auditor for the same company; Miss Nan remains at the parental home; Lemuel is engaged in the clothing business in the City of Charleston; William is actively identified with the Point Pleasant Machine Works; and Robert J. is the present manager of the plant of this concern. Like his father and brother, Robert J. Heslop is a staunch supporter of the cause of the republican party, and he served four years as chairman of its executive committee in Mason County. He literally grew up in the industrial business conducted by his father, and has succeeded the latter in the active supervision of the plant. He is president of the Progress Building & Loan Association, of which he has been a director from the time of its organization, in 1905, and which has contributed much to the civic and material advancement and prosperity of Point Pleasant. He holds membership in the local Kiwanis and Country clubs, and is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, including the Commandery of Knights Templars and the Mystic Shrine, and is also a member of the Knights of Pythias.

ANDREW S. RUSSELL. The mercantile interests of Alderson, one of the thriving communities of Monroe County, are well and worthily represented by Andrew S. Russell. Mr. Russell belongs to that class of men who have worked their own way to position without the aid of outside influences, and, starting his career as a lad in a humble position in the mines, has become through hard work, intelligently directed, the owner of a flourishing general merchandise store and a popular moving picture theatre.

Mr. Russell was born at Bethel, Pennsylvania, February 5, 1873, and is a son of James Russell. His father, a native of Scotland, grew up in his native land, where he became a mine boss and was united in marriage with Jeannette Simpson. Following the close of the war between the states James Russell immigrated to the United States, with the expectation of establishing a home in this country if he found conditions suitable. After mining for a time in Pennsylvania he returned to Scotland and brought back with him his wife and two children, Elizabeth and John. From Pennsylvania the family moved to the present site of Hansford, Kanawha County, West Virginia, about 1878, Mr. Russell being there the pioneer in opening the coal mines, but after a short time moved to Ansted in Fayette County, also assisting to open the mines in that locality. Still later he went to Hawk's Nest, nearby, and there died in 1894, being survived by his widow, who passed away June 8, 1922. Mr. Russell was a man of medium stature, was cannily thrifty, after the Scotch fashion, and was universally accounted one of the best mining men who ever came to West Virginia. He had worked in every department of the mining industry, and knew its workings from the inside to the very end of coal production. In his later years he gave up mining and followed mercantile pursuits at Hawk's Nest, and gained the reputation of being a capable and fair-dealing business man. He was a Protestant in religion and a republican in his political allegiance. At his death he left six sons and five daughters, and there were three other children who had died before his passing.

Andrew S. Russell had only very limited educational advantages in his youth, and when yet a boy became self-supporting by finding employment in the mines at Stones Cliff. For some four or five years he continued mining, but when his father died he succeeded the elder man in the management of the mercantile establishment at Hawk's Nest, where he carried on the business in a successful manner and made it a paying venture. He continued at that place for some twenty years, and then, in 1914, came to Alderson, where at first he embarked in the moving picture business. He still conducts a family theatre, which enjoys an excellent patronage and at which he presents a clean, moral and high-class entertainment. Later Mr. Russell engaged in merchandising, and this he has also continued to the present, with a gratifying degree of success. His reputation is that of a capable business man of good judgment and integrity, and he is held in confidence by the people of his adopted community.

In 1903, at Hawk's Nest, Mr. Russell was united in marriage with Miss Essie Grisinger, a daughter of J. C. Grisinger, one of the old mining men of West Virginia, and to this union there have been born five children—Glenna May, Drema Lile, Andrew, James (named after his paternal and maternal grandfathers) and Finley. In politics Mr. Russell is a republican, but he has not taken part in political matters nor sought public office. He takes an interest, however, in civic matters that affect the welfare of Alderson and its people, and always supports worthy enterprises and movements.

GEORGE E. BARE. In the family of Bare the traditions of ability, honor and worth left by those who have gone beyond set a worthy precedent which the present generation, and that from which it sprang, have followed, to which they have added a life chapter that must prove an inspiration and a positive incentive to those destined to come after them. Among the worthy exponents of the family's integrity and executive ability of the present generation is George E. Bare, former postmaster of Alderson and ex-sheriff of Monroe County, and a man universally esteemed and respected by his fellow-citizens.

Among the early pioneers of Greenbrier County was Jacob Bare, who came from Augusta County, Virginia about the year 1700, and after living for a time near Lewisburg moved to Monroe County. Not much is definitely known of this early settler, but tradition says he was a worthy man, well calculated to withstand the rigors and hardships of the frontier. During his latter life he kept toll-gate on the Kanawha Turnpike. He and his wife were the parents of John, Samuel, Jacob, Betsey and possibly others. John Bare married Nancy Smith, and of the thirteen children born to them but three, Samuel H., Benson M. and Wilson W., are now living, and these three have children and in some instances grandchildren. Samuel Bare married Polly Smith, a sister of his brother's wife, and their five children were Jacob, Isaac E., John H., Paulina and Virginia, and of these only John H. is now living. Jacob Bare, another son of the pioneer Jacob, never married, but passed his life as a bachelor in the vicinity of his birth place.

The Bares are related by marriage to the Smiths, Ballard, Lynch, Nicholls and other families well known in southeastern West Virginia. As a rule they have been Methodists in religion and republicans in politics, but exceptions are not unusual. During the war between the states they were sympathizers of the Southern cause, and number of the name served gallantly under the flag of the Confederacy. Invariably they have been law-abiding and highly respected people.

Isaac Erskine Bare, a son of Samuel and grandson of Jacob Bare, was born in 1831 and died January 30, 1912. He was twice married, first to Sarah F. Lynch, and afterward to Margaret Surber. For a time he operated a flour mill, and then conducted a shoe repairing shop, while officiating as a magistrate. He was highly respected for his many estimable traits of character, his public-spirited support of enterprising and progressive movements and his loyalty of friendships. He was the father of five sons and no daughter (who died in infancy) by his first marriage: Henry C., George E., Eugene, Chase and Edward; and by his second marriage had a son, who also died in infancy. Henry C. Bare, the eldest of the children of Isaac E., was one of the finest characters who ever lived in this section. For years he was a merchant at Alderson and for a score or more of years was superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School. His life was an inspiration, without blemish.

George E. Bare, the second son of Isaac Erskine Bare, was born September 27, 1858, and received a common school education. As a youth he mastered the art of telegraphy, and for some ten years served as operator for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad and the Norfolk & Western Railroad, but in 1895 gave up this vocation for mercantile pursuits and from then until 1901 was employed as a clerk in the store of his brother, E. Chase, at Alderson. Upon President McKinley's second election to the presidency Mr. Bare was appointed postmaster of Alderson, but before the appointment could be confirmed the president was assassinated. However, Mr. Bare was appointed by President Roosevelt upon his succession to the presidential chair, and by President Taft when he was made chief executive. He acted as postmaster in all for a period of about twelve and one-half years, during which time he discharged his duties in an entirely capable manner and advanced the efficiency of the service. In 1916 he was elected sheriff of Monroe County, an office in which he also established a good record during his four-year term. Since leaving the latter position his life has been one of semi-retirement. He is a republican in politics and a Mason and Odd Fellow fraternally, while his religious connection is with the Methodist Church.

The first wife of Mr. Bare was Mrs. Betty Holmes, the daughter of James Howell, and the widow of John Holmes, by whom she had one daughter, Catherine, the wife of Frank Van Vranken, who resides in Los Angeles. Mr. Bare's second and present wife was formerly Mrs. Dora E. Wilson, the daughter of Allen Ellis and the widow of George Wilson, by whom she had one daughter, Myrtle, the wife of W. E. Altizer, of Huntington, West Virginia.

OTHO PAUL ARGABRITE, M. D. A record of the professional career of Dr. Otho Paul Argabrite of Alderson shows that he has been an honor to his calling and a valuable addition to the ranks of those who take an interest in the affairs of their community with no ulterior motives. A man of broad learning, practical in his suggestions and energetic in carrying them out, he has naturally assumed a leading place among his associates. Since 1907 he has figured prominently in the medical profession of Monroe County, and has maintained throughout his entire career a high standard of ethics and honorable practice.

Doctor Argabrite belongs to one of the old and honored families of Southeastern West Virginia, the early ancestor of which was Jacob Argabrite, who was born in 1760, in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, and removed from that community to Rockingham County, Virginia. In May, 1778, he volunteered for six months' service in the Virginia Militia under Captain Craven, and served at the forts in Tygart's Valley. Later he reenlisted and served under General McIntosh, and in the fall of 1780 again enlisted, for twelve months, in Captain Sullivan's Company, seeing service in the Carolinas and being in the battle of Cowpens. Still later he rendered further patriotic service in a rifle company commanded by Captain Coker, and was present at the surrender of Lord Cornwallis. After the winning of American independence he came to what is now Monroe County, West Virginia, and later moved to Greenbrier County, where he passed the remainder of his life in Muddy Creek.

Col. John Argabrite, a son of Jacob Argabrite, was born February 17, 1797, and died December 10, 1884. His wife was Mary, daughter of Jacob Hockman. Colonel Argabrite was a Union man during the Civil war, and was eligible to be a member of the Board of Supervisors from the Blue Sulphur District. He was a man of unusual ability and prominence, and served with credit in various official positions. His title of Colonel came from having served in the Virginia Militia. The children of Col. John and Mary (Hockman) Argabrite were as follows: Jacob H., born March 20, 1821, died November 30, 1899, unmarried, was in the Confederate Army during the war between the states and saw active service; Susan, born February 8, 1824, married James Johnson and died May 21, 1906; James H., born in 1836, died in 1838; Julia A. C., born August 31, 1838, married Joseph H. Bunker, and became the mother of five daughters; James Madison, of whom more later; Salome B., born January 23, 1842, married Harrison H. Gwinn; Fletcher D., born December 21, 1844, died April 23, 1862; Alice M., born March 2, 1847, married Andrew Jarrett, a grandson of James Jarrett, and died June 23, 1917; and Drunilla, who died in infancy.

James Madison Argabrite, a son of Colonel John and grandson of Jacob Argabrite, was born May 17, 1840, and in 1922 is still living on the farm on which he was born, hale and hearty, honored and respected, past eighty-two years of age. He attended Allegheny College, and February 1, 1864, became a member of Company K, Fourteenth Virginia Cavalry, of the Confederate Army. On May 6 of the same year he was captured by the enemy at Meadow Bluff, Virginia, and for nine months was a prisoner at Camp Chase, this practically concluding his military career. On November 14, 1867, he married Annie C. Anderson, daughter of Alexander H. Anderson, and a member of one of the pioneer families of Greenbrier County. The children born to this union were as follows: Io, born October 5, 1869; John Alexander, born September 13, 1875, died February 12, 1902; Mary Catherine, born August 23, 1877; R. B., born June 17, 1881, died February 23, 1903; and Otho Paul.

Otho Paul Argabrite was born May 13, 1884, and is directly descended from Jacob, the Revolutionary soldier, Col. John and James Madison Argabrite. He had his early training on the home farm, graduated from Allegheny Collegiate Institute, and this he supplemented by attendance at the academic department of the University of Virginia. Having decided upon a career as a physician and surgeon, he then enrolled as a student in the medical department of the University of Maryland, at Baltimore, from which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1907, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In August of the same year he located at Alderson, which has since been his home. Here he has built up one of the best practices enjoyed by any physician and surgeon in the state outside of the large cities. He holds to high ideals in his profession and is constantly seeking to broaden his knowledge that his labors may be more effective, and with discriminating intelligence selects the best methods for the treatment of individual cases, the soundness of his judgment being manifest in the excellent results which follow his labors. He belongs to the various organizations of his calling, and is a Methodist in religious faith and a democrat politically. While the greater part of his time is given to the duties of his profession, he occasionally finds leisure to indulge his favorite recreations of hunting and fishing.

On October 15, 1907, Doctor Argabrite married Miss Mary Johnson Feamster, who died January 4, 1910, the mother of two daughters: Mary Catherine and Lula Virginia, the latter of whom died in infancy. The present wife of Doctor Argabrite was Miss Cella Motteshead, of Charleston, West Virginia, whom he married November 6, 1911.

THOMAS H. DENNIS, for a half a century an active member of the Greenbrier County bar and one of the Confederate veterans in the state, was born in Charlotte County, Virginia, February 20, 1846, representing a family that has been in Charlotte County for many generations. He is a son of William H. and Ann (Morton) Dennis, and grandson of John and Margaret (Elliott) Dennis. Col. William Dennis owned and operated a large plantation on the Staunton River in Charlotte County, and lived in the same neighborhood that had been the home of John Randolph of Roanoke and Patrick Henry. He served many years in the Virginia State Legislature and in the Senate, and at one time was president of the Senate. Six of his sons took up arms in behalf of the Confederate cause. One of them was Robert F. Dennis, who for a long period of years practiced law in Greenbrier and surrounding counties. He located in Greenbrier County in 1848, and was one of the leaders in the democratic party. He raised the first company of men from Greenbrier County for the Confederate army, known as the Greenbrier Rifles, became its captain, and later was captured and spent the last months of the war as prisoner at Camp Chase. He served as prosecuting attorney of Greenbrier, Pocahontas and Payette counties, for eight years was state senator, and was chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. His name was frequently mentioned in connection with nominations for governor, Congress and the United States Senate.

Thomas H. Dennis spent his early life on the home plantation in Charlotte County. In January, 1864, when he was not quite eighteen years of age, he entered the Confederate Army, and saw service in several Virginia battles before the close of the war. He was a member of the Light Squadron of the Fourteenth Virginia Cavalry, Company B, made up mostly of Charlotte County men. Mr. Dennis is now brigadier general of the First Brigade of the United Confederate Veterans, West Virginia Division, and for many years has been active in the organizations of old soldiers.

After the war he graduated, in 1868, from Washington College, now Washington and Lee University, graduated from the law school in the University of Virginia in 1873, and since then has had his home at Lewisburg, where for many years he was associated with his brother Robert in law practice. For thirty-five years he was editor of the Greenbrier Independent, and made that paper a source of power in the community, and his editorials were widely copied. In 1884 he was elected to the West Virginia House of Delegates, and in 1885 was chosen speaker of the House. He served again in the House in 1909, and in the early years of his law practice he was for six years superintendent of schools of Greenbrier County. He served a term as mayor of Lewisburg some years ago, and in January, 1922, was again honored for election to that office. He is a director of the Bank of Lewisburg and is a Presbyterian.

Colonel Dennis married, December 24, 1884, Miss Jennie Johnston, daughter of Andrew H. Johnston, of Union, Monroe County.

FRANK WELLS CLARK, mayor of New Martinsville, is a native of that city, of a family that acquired substantial landed interests here many years ago, and for his part Mr. Clark has practiced law in Wetzel County for a quarter of a century and is one of the most successful business lawyers in this section of the state.

He was born at New Martinsville November 30, 1868. His great-grandfather was Hezekiah Clark and his grandfather was Ebenezer Clark, who was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, in 1798. He settled in Wetzel County about 1836, spent his active life as a farmer and owned a large amount of landed property seven miles east of Martinsville, where he died in 1878. His wife was Harriet Anderson, who also died in Wetzel County.

Joseph Clark, father of the New Martinsville lawyer, was born in Marshall County, West Virginia, March 12, 1835, but from infancy lived in Wetzel County. During the Civil war he was sheriff of Wetzel County, Virginia, and when West Virginia was created a new state he continued to serve in that office for two terms. In 1866 he established a general store at New Martinsville, was successful in business, also handled real estate, both town and country property, and owned a number of farms. After leaving the office of sheriff he served as president of the Wetzel County Court. Josephus Clark was a democrat, a leading member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was a member of the Masonic fraternity. Though his home was at New Martinsville, he died at Wheeling, June 12, 1905. His wife was Lina R. Cox, who was born at New Martinsville, November 17, 1848, and is still living in that city. Frank Wells is the oldest of her five children. Josephus B. was formerly cashier of the New Martinsville Bank, a position he resigned to become assistant treasurer and head bookkeeper of the Winer Oil Company of Sistersville. Minnie is the wife of George P. Umstead, president and manager of the Monroe-Wetzel Dairy Company at New Martinsville. Friend E. is head of the department of chemistry at the University of West Virginia at Morgantown. Ella C. is the wife of Cecil B. Highland, of New Martinsville, who conducts a prosperous real estate business at Clarksburg, and is a leader in politics as a republican.

Frank Wells Clark attended the public schools of New Martinsville, and in the fall of 1886 entered West Virginia University, where he was graduated A. B. in June, 1890, and in 1891 received the LL. B. degree. He was a charter member of the Phi Kappa Psi college fraternity at Morgantown. The two years following Mr. Clark was in the mercantile business at New Martinsville, and in 1893 entered Harvard University Law School, where he completed the course and received the LL. B. degree in 1896. Since that date he has practiced as a member of the New Martinsville bar. Mr. Clark has been a business man as well as a lawyer, and has been associated with the founding and management of several prominent institutions. One of these is the New Martinsville Glass Manufacturing Company, of which he has been president for twenty years. He has been a director since 1905 and since January, 1921, president of the New Martinsville Grocery Company, a wholesale concern. He was also one of the organizers and is a stockholder in the New Martinsville Bank. Mr. Clark is administrator for his father's estate, comprising large parcels of real estate in New Martinsville and vicinity. His home is one of the best modern residences of the city, on Maple Avenue. Mr. Clark is unmarried. He is a republican. He was elected mayor in January, 1921, for a term of three years, and this is the second time he has served as mayor. He is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South and in 1905 he succeeded his father as superintendent of the Sunday school, his father having held that office for thirty-five years. Mr. Clark is deeply interested in Masonry, was for six consecutive years master of Wetzel Lodge, No. 39, F. and A. M., was grand master of the Grand Lodge of the state for the year ending in November 1910, was deputy grand lecturer seven years, and the grand lecturer two years. He is affiliated with West Virginia Consistory No. 1 of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine, Wheeling Chapter No. 1, R. A. M., and Wheeling Commandery, No. 1, K. T. New Martinsville has one of the best Masonic Temples for a town of its size in the state. This distinction is in no small measure due to the energetic efforts of Mr. Clark who started the movement and secured the financial support and interested himself directly in the building of the Temple. He was until recently president of the Wetzel Lodge Masonic Association, which owns the Temple, being succeeded in that office by his brother Josephus B. Mr. Clark is a member of the Kiwanis Club of New Martinsville and the Wetzel County Bar Association. During the war he was a member of the Legal Advisory Board of Wetzel County, and as a speaker and otherwise took an active part in the various local campaigns.

SCOTT C. LOWE, who retired from the bench of the Criminal Court of Marion County on the 1st of January, 1921, has gained place as one of the leading members of the bar his native county and as one of its progressive and public-spirited citizens. He was born on the old home-land farm of the Lowe family in Grant District, Marion county, and the date of his nativity was September 22, 1875. He is a son of the late Robert and Ruhama (Dunham) Lowe, and a lineal descendant of Robert Lowe (I), who was born in England, January 23, 1765, and who came thence to America and first settled in Maryland. In 1808 this ancestor removed to Virginia and established his residence in that part of Harrison County which is now included in Marion County, West Virginia. He married Elizabeth Swearingen on April 17, 1791, and their son Cephas, grandfather of Judge Lowe of this review, was reared in this county, where, as a young man, he married Eleanor, daughter of Thomas and Ann (Moore) Hughes, of the State of New Jersey, and granddaughter of Thomas Hughes, Sr., who as a native of Wales, whence he went to Scotland, from which latter country he came to America long before the revolutionary war, and with his father's family, settled on the present site of Rahway, Union County, New Jersey, where his son Thomas was born in 1768.

Frank M. H. H. H.

Elizabeth Swearingen, wife of Robert Lowe (I), was born near Hagerstown, Maryland, May 29, 1765 or 1766, and died January 6, 1848. She was a daughter of Charles and Hannah (Stull) Swearingen. Charles, born in about 1735, became lieutenant-colonel in the Revolutionary war. He was son of Van Swearingen, who was born in Somerset County, Maryland, in about 1692, and married Elizabeth Walker. He took up land in Washington County, Maryland, afterward found to be covered by a prior grant (Ringgold's Manor). Having made improvements on the land and soiling in his title, he leased the land for life and that of his two sons, and it was thus held for eighty-nine years. He lived to be 109 years of age, having lived in three centuries. He was one of four sons of Thomas Swearingen who was born about 1665, and lived in Somerset County, Maryland, until his death in 1710. Thomas was a son of Garret Van Swearingen, who was born in Beemsterdam, Holland, in 1636. Garret was a younger son of a family belonging to the nobility, and received a liberal education. For the Dutch West Indies Company he was in charge of ship, Prince Maurice, which carried emigrants and supplies, sailing from the port of Amsterdam, December 21, 1656, and arriving at Fort Casimir on the Delaware, April 1, 1657. Fort Casimir, afterward called New Castle, was the home of Garret until about 1665, and he here held many positions of trust and honor. He was married at that place in 1659 to Barbara DeBarrette, a native of Valenciennes, France. New Castle was surrendered to the British in 1664, under Sir Robert Carr, and after the surrender it is said Garret renounced all allegiance to the Dutch authorities.

Robert Lowe, son of Cephas, was born in what is now Taylor County, West Virginia. In middle life he purchased what was known as Knotts farm, on Booth's Creek, Grant District, Marion County, and there he passed the remainder of his life, his death having occurred in June, 1905, as a railroad accident at Watson Station, Marion County. He was a successful farmer, was prominent as a buyer and hipper of live stock, and became the owner of valuable real estate in different parts of Marion County. He was a citizen of influence and served as a member of the West Virginia House of Delegates in 1875-76. He and his wife were earnest members of the Boothsville Baptist Church. Mrs. Lowe, whose death occurred June 3, 1903, likewise was born in Taylor County, and she was a daughter of James Dunham, whose father, Mordecai Dunham, was the pioneer representative of the family in what is now West Virginia.

Judge Lowe was reared on the home farm, and after attending the public schools he continued his studies by entering Salem College, at Salem, Harrison County, in which he prepared for matriculation in the University of West Virginia. In the latter institution he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in its law department he was graduated as a member of the class of 1900, his acceptance of the degree of Bachelor of Laws being virtually coincident with his admission to the bar of his native state. He immediately initiated the practice of his profession by opening an office in the City of Fairmont, and he served as assistant prosecuting attorney of his native county under Charles Powell. In 1904 he was elected prosecuting attorney, and of this office he continued the efficient incumbent until January 1, 1909. In 1914 Judge Lowe was elected to the State Senate, as representative of the Eleventh Senatorial District, comprising Marion, Monongalia and Taylor counties, and his characteristically loyal and effective service in the Senate continued until January 1, 1919. In that year he received appointment, through Governor Cornwell, to the bench of the newly created Criminal Court of Marion County, his commission bearing date of April 24, 1919. As the first incumbent on this bench he continued his able administration until January 1, 1921. He is one of the leading members of the Fairmont bar, commands the high regard of his professional confreres, and the official positions to which he has been elected indicate fully his hold upon popular confidence and esteem. The judge maintains active membership in the Marion County Bar Association and the West Virginia Bar Association, is affiliated with the Phi Kappa Phi college fraternity, and his Masonic affiliations are here noted: Fairmont Lodge No. 9, A. F. and A. M.; Orient Chapter No. 9, R. A. M.; Crusade Commandery No. 6, Knights Templar; and Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine. In May, 1922, he was elected grand commander of the West Virginia Grand Commandery of Knights Templar. Judge Lowe is president of the Local Council of Boy Scouts, and takes lively interest in the work of this organization.

September 17, 1907, recorded the marriage of Judge Lowe and Miss Edna Earl, daughter of Harry and Ida B. (Shifflette) Wertz, of Huntington. Mrs. Lowe graduated from Marshall College, at Huntington, and as a member of the class of 1903 received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from the State University at Morgantown. Judge and Mrs. Lowe have two children: Scott C., Jr., who was born July 7, 1909, and Robert Wertz, who was born September 4, 1911.

JAMES EDWARD ALLEN, A. B. When the history of this generation and the one preceding it are read by posterity certain salient facts will impress thinking men and women. They will realize that this early part of the twentieth century produced men whose lives were productive of results that not only went toward shaping the destinies of associates and the contemporary history of their own communities, but that they were of necessity forceful factors in determining the future of those to come after them. This applies particularly to the field of education, in which one of West Virginia's well-known leaders is James Edward Allen, A. B., president of Davis and Elkins College at Elkins.

Professor Allen was born at Hebron, Dinwiddie County, Virginia, June 13, 1876, a son of Dr. Peter Woodward and Fannie Blunt (Scott) Allen. His grandfather, Dr. Edward Henry Allen, practiced medicine in Dinwiddie County for a period of sixty years, became a leading member of his profession, and died in 1889, at the ripe old age of eighty-four years. He was a native of Amelia County, Virginia, but in young manhood went to Dinwiddie County, that state, where his son, Dr. Peter W., was born in 1840. Dr. Peter W. Allen resided on a farm in his native county, but engaged in the practice of medicine for forty years, his patients residing all over the countryside. During the war between the states he served four years in the Army of the Confederacy, and after the close of that struggle he attended Hampden-Sidney College and later graduated in medicine from the Medical College of Virginia, Richmond. He died in 1906, at the age of sixty-six years. He was a democrat in politics, but not a politician, and his religious faith was that of the Presbyterian Church. Doctor Allen married Fannie Blunt Scott, who was born in Prince Edward County, Virginia, her father, Anderson Scott, having been a prominent planter of Nottoway County, Virginia, for many years. She survives him and is an active and helpful member of the Presbyterian Church. Of their children five grew to maturity: May W.; Rev. Frank Maury, a Presbyterian minister; Lottie; James Edward, of this review; and Lillah Dudley, Mrs. Muhaux Raine.

James Edward Allen was reared on the home farm, and after attending the public schools pursued a course at Hampden-Sidney College, from which he was graduated in 1898. In that year he began teaching in the rural schools of Campbell County, Virginia, and in 1900 and 1901 served as principal of the public schools of Phoebus, Virginia. From 1901 to 1903 he was vice president of the high school at Newport News, that state, and teacher of Latin, and during the summer of 1903 did supplementary work in Latin at the University of Virginia. He was a student at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, from 1903 to 1905, and while there acted as an instructor in Latin at Notre Dame College for Girls. During 1905 and 1906 he was again located at Newport News, this time as principal of the high school, and in the latter year first came to Elkins as professor of Latin and German in Davis and Elkins College. Here he remained until 1909, when he accepted the principalship of the grammar schools of Richmond, Virginia, but in July, 1910, returned to Davis and Elkins College as president, a position which he has since retained. Professor Allen has been very successful in his life work. He has the scholarly touch, the capacity for clear and exact thinking and the faculty of forceful expression. He counts as great factors in his work continued industry and the exercise of good judgment, the kindly feeling for all with whom the relations of life bring him into contact, and the lending of his influence to make both his students and community types of good citizenship.

Professor Allen is a member of the West Virginia Educational Association, the National Educational Association, the American Philological Association, the American Geographical Society and other learned bodies. He is president of the Rotary Club of Elkins and represented the club in the Rotary International Los Angeles Convention, in June, 1922. He is possessed of no small literary talent, and has contributed interesting and authentic articles to various periodicals, particularly on educational topics. In 1910 Professor Allen was united in marriage with Miss Susan H. Garrett, of Frederick, Maryland, and to this union there have been born six children.

GEORGE WADDELL. This and the following article concern primarily the careers and achievements of two brothers, associated together as miners and operators since boyhood, proprietors and executives of the Waddell Coal & Coke Company of Philippi. They are George and Alexander G. Waddell. The articles also contain some interesting and highly important testimony on the subject of industrial relations that prevail in one of the rare and fortunate enterprises where "capital" and "labor" are kept in personal touch and on a plane of mutual understanding and fairness.

George Waddell, the older of the two brothers, is a native of Scotland, born at Glasgow September 13, 1879. His parents, George and Elizabeth (Shanks) Waddell, brought him to the United States when he was eighteen years of age. His mother was a daughter of Richard Shanks, a contractor and builder in Glasgow. George Waddell, Sr., and his wife were also natives of Glasgow, and when they started for America they landed in New York, went on to Pittsburgh, and in that city the father became an employee of the John McLaughlin Steel Works, having a contract to make car couplings. He remained with them two years, then engaged in mining about Pittsburgh for a time, and subsequently was at Madera in Clearfield County. He was a practical miner, a business he had learned in the old country. For a short time he was in Cambria County, and was a foreman in different mines. His last work was done for the Hagarty Brothers in Clearfield County, and he died shortly after retiring, at Myersdale, Pennsylvania, March 12, 1907, at the age of sixty-eight. His widow survived until April 19, 1914, when she was sixty-six. These Scotch parents had a large family of children, a brief record of whom is as follows: Richard, superintendent of Waddell Brothers mine at Philippi; John, who was in the service of the Conamaghd Smokeless Coal and Coke Company, one of the most up-to-date coal companies in Pennsylvania, and was killed in an explosion while superintendent of their plant; Elizabeth, whose husband, George Watson, was killed in the same explosion at Seward, Pennsylvania, Mrs. Watson being now a resident of Dixonville, Pennsylvania; George Waddell; Alexander G., who is the other partner in the Waddell Coal and Coke Company; Jennie, wife of Ed. Campbell, of Philippi; James, mine foreman for the Shoemaker Coal Company at Casander, Pennsylvania; and Isabel, who is a stenographer in the offices of the Waddell Company and the wife of Ashley Hawkins, also in the same office.

George Waddell, Jr., acquired a common school education, and did a great deal of night study to supplement these early advantages. He was only nine when he entered the mines as a trapper-boy, subsequently was pump-man, then an actual coal miner, and received a certificate from the State of Pennsylvania as a practical miner and mine foreman. While with the Citizen Coal Company he was made superintendent at Youngstown, then was superintendent for the Randolph Coal Company, and held similar positions with different mines until he became associated with his brother Alexander as a mine owner and operator at Philippi. Their first real interest in coal mining was with the Dixonville Coal Company at Indiana, Pennsylvania. They acquired the capital to engage in business for themselves by saving from their salaries. George Waddell in addition to being president of the Waddell Coal and Coke Company is a director of the First National Bank of Philippi. The Waddell Company maintains one of the best equipped coal offices in the state, in the Citizens National Bank Building.

The Waddell brothers married sisters. Mrs. George Waddell was formerly Miss Nellie Bartley. They were married at Cumberland, Maryland, in September, 1907, and she was born at Deer Park, Maryland, December 15, 1884. They are the parents of three children: George, Jr., born December 12, 1908; Nina Lee, born August 29, 1911; and Virginia Rose, born April 24, 1919.

Mr. George Waddell is a Blue Lodge Mason at Indiana, Pennsylvania, is affiliated with Philippi Chapter, R. A. M. Grafton Commandery, Knights Templar, Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Wheeling, and is a member of the Elks Lodge of Grafton. He and his daughters and the families are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Waddell Brothers installed a coaling station at the Philippi mine to coal all the passenger and freight train on the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway from Charleston to Grafton, and also on the Elkins branch of the same road. This station is one of the most efficient in existence. It is possible to coal a passenger engine in eighteen seconds. This is the result of the lever appliance they have installed. The introduction of this lever mechanism had much to do with harmonizing the difference between the railroad and its firemen, since it abolished the use of the pick or the hook, which was originally required when the firemen coaled a locomotive.

Reference has been made to the harmonious industrial relations which are perhaps the most conspicuous feature of the Waddell Coal and Coke Company. The company record has not been marred by any strikes or other harassing incidents of serious friction. Its managers and owners, as their record shows, grew up from boys to men in the business of mining, and became familiar with every phase of it. They worked with Union cards and among workers like themselves, and they learned to know intimately how a miner thinks and what he is most likely to think about in his work. They adopted a few principles to govern them in their dealings with those who work for them, among which were to respect all agreements with employees to the letter, to investigate complaints, to remedy them to the satisfaction of the aggrieved parties, to treat the men as co-laborers with themselves, to meet their representatives freely for the adjustment of differences and meet pay-day with the cash to satisfy their minds and hearts and promote the full dinner-pail. The management has done more than this for its men. It has lent encouragement to them to become home owners, to establish bank accounts, has urged the importance of paying obligations promptly, and advised them to beware of making debts beyond their ability to pay. They have taught fairness and being fair themselves, and have impressed upon their co-workers the fact that these things are in turn expected of them as their part of the "fairness" in the game. Even from this very general and brief statement of industrial conditions it is hardly to be wondered that no strikes or labor troubles have occurred in the Waddell mines.

S. R. Reed

ALEXANDER G. WADDELL. The general manager and the secretary-treasurer of the Waddell Coal & Coke Company of Philippi is Alexander G. Waddell. For the splendid efficiency of this business he has been in no small degree responsible, and a brief sketch of his career is linked closely with most of the matters considered in the previous article.

Mr. Waddell was born in Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, April 29, 1881, but spent most of his boyhood in Clearfield County of that state and grew up in the home of a miner. He was educated in the common schools and, like his brother, entered the mines at the age of nine years. He helped his father, then dug coal, was advanced to mine foreman, to superintendent and finally mine owner. He and his brother George were associated as salaried employes in several mines, and finally united their fortunes as proprietors of the business at Philippi.

Alexander Waddell has been a resident of West Virginia since 1902. At that time he located at Bayard, as superintendent of the Buffalo Creek Cumberland Coal Company. Later he was superintendent for the Gatzmer Coal & Coke Company at Dobbin, and then superintendent for the Davis Coal & Coke Company. On leaving that corporation he came to Philippi in 1916, and he and his brother bought the property of the Logan Coal & Coke Company of Philadelphia. Only a beginning had been made in the development of this property, and the production was limited to the loading of one "steel" per day. In a short time under their management the output increased to fifteen "steels" per day. Another property has been developed by the company, adjacent to the old lease, formerly owned by the Hocking Valley Coal Company. This was opened by the brothers, and its output is now about three "steels" per day. Still another producing outfit belonging to and operated by the brothers is the small mine at Berryburg, which they opened and which is now loading about one car a day. The labor employed in the three mines averages about 250 men a day at capacity. Notwithstanding the business depression that set in about 1920 and has worked so much hardship to coal mining interests in general, the Waddell mine, due in large part to the conditions described above, has kept up its production every week.

Waddell Brothers have also established at Philippi a station for the wholesale handling of gasoline. This station is close to the mine, and they handle about thirty-five cars annually of the product of the Standard Oil Company. Alexander Waddell is also financially interested in other business enterprises, and is one of the directors of the Citizens National Bank of Philippi.

He and his brother are republicans in politics. Alexander cast his first presidential vote for Theodore Roosevelt in 1904. Fraternally he is an Elk and a York Rite Mason and a member of the Shrine at Wheeling.

In Bayard, West Virginia, October 25, 1905, Alexander G. Waddell married Laura Bartley, a native of Deer Park, Maryland. Her father was Dr. John Bartley, a veterinary surgeon. Mr. and Mrs. Waddell have five children: John, Ralph, Richard, Lloyd and Louise.

D. ROBERTSON WOOD, who is giving an excellent administration of his official duties as national bank examiner for West Virginia, with residence and headquarters at Martinsburg, Berkeley County, is a native of Virginia, and both he and his wife are representatives of old and distinguished families of that historic commonwealth. He has honored his native state by his character and achievement, and a brief outline of his career is published in the work entitled, "Men of Mark of Virginia," by Tyler.

Mr. Wood was born at Turtle Rock, Floyd County, Virginia, on the 1st of February, 1877, and passed his early years on the home farm of his father, his educational advantages of preliminary order having been those of the local schools. In his native county he took a collegiate preparatory course in Oxford Academy, and he then entered William and Mary College, where he continued his studies. He was later graduated from the National Business College at Roanoke, Virginia, and from 1900 to 1903, inclusive, he was principal of the English department in this institution. In the latter year he became cashier of the Floyd County Bank, at Floyd, Virginia, a position which he retained until 1907, when he came to West Virginia and assumed the office of cashier of the Union Bank & Trust Company in the City of Bluefield. His exceptional ability as a banking official eventually led to his resignation of his position with the institution above mentioned in order to accept the important position of which he is now the incumbent, that of national bank examiner for Northern West Virginia and Western Maryland. He is one of the loyal and progressive citizens of Martinsburg, is a democrat in politics, holds membership in the local Rotary Club, and he and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Martinsburg.

Capt. Richard J. Wood, father of him, whose name initiates this review, was born in Montgomery County, Virginia, in 1828, a son of John Richard Wood, born in 1799, a son of Richard Wood, born in 1769, and whose father, John Wood, born in 1745, removed from Franklin County, Virginia, to Montgomery County, that state, in 1815, he having settled near the Blue Ridge Mountains, in that part of the county that is now included in Floyd County. Henry, a son of John Wood, became a pioneer in the State of Missouri.

Richard Wood, great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was twice married, his first wife, Rachel Cochran, having become the mother of two children, John R. and Annie. The family name of his second wife was Brammer, and they became the parents of six children: Alexander, German, Jeremiah, Edward, Peter and Henry.

John R. Wood married Lucinda DeHart, daughter of James and Ellen (Dennis) DeHart and a granddaughter of Aaron DeHart, who came from his native France and established his home in Virginia. John R. and Lucinda Wood became the parents of seven children: Annie, Stephen H., Mary, Delilah, Richard J., Leah and Rachel. The daughter Annie became the wife of Rev. John Hubbard. Stephen H. Wood married Rachel Thomas, daughter of Joseph and granddaughter of Charles Thomas, the latter of whom came to America from Wales. Mary became the wife of Perry Slusher. Delilah married Richard Hatcher. Richard Johnson wedded Judith Ann Shortt. Leah became the wife of George Slusher, and Rachel married Samuel F. Turner.

Capt. Richard Johnson Wood ambitiously made the best of his rather limited educational advantages in his youth, and took special pride in the fact that one of his teachers was Nathaniel Henry, a son of the distinguished Revolutionary patriot, Patrick Henry. Captain Wood passed his childhood and youth on the home farm and early became a member of the Virginia State Militia, in which he succeeded his uncle, Capt. Alexander Wood, as drillmaster and captain. When the Civil war was precipitated Captain Wood promptly tendered his aid in defense of the Confederacy and enlisted as a private in Company D, Fifty-first Virginia Infantry. He was in active service in the present West Virginia and also in Tennessee, took part in many engagements and nearly lost his life from an attack of fever while in the vicinity of Memphis, Tennessee.

On the 5th of February, 1852, Captain Wood married Judith Ann Shortt, who was born in 1832, a daughter of John Young Shortt and Judith (Thomas) Shortt, her paternal grandparents having been Reuben and Lydia (Clark) Shortt, and her great-grandparents, Obediah and Mary (Bilbo) Shortt. Obediah Shortt was born in Virginia, where his ancestors settled upon coming from Scotland in the early Colonial era. Of the children of Obediah Shortt were Susan, Reuben and Nancy, the last mentioned having become the wife of Isaac Robertson. Reuben Shortt became a clergyman of the Baptist Church. His wife was a daughter of John and Susan (Nix) Clark. Rev.

Reuben and Lydia (Clark) Shortt had the following named children: John Y., Joseph Nix, Calvin, Mary (Polly), Lydia, Susan and Nancy. John Young Shortt, maternal grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was born in 1796, and his wife (Judith Thomas) was born in 1803, a daughter of Pleasant and Mary (Cannaday) Thomas and a granddaughter of Charles and Judith (Ripley) Thomas, the original representatives of the Thomas family in America having come from Wales. Mary (Cannaday) Thomas was a daughter of James Cannaday, who was a patriot soldier in the command of General Greene in the War of the Revolution. The children of John Y. Shortt were: Lydia, Naaman J., Susan, Judith Ann, Martha Elizabeth (Betty), John P., Lucinda, Reuben, Charles and Pleasant. Calvin and Reuben, Jr., sons of Reuben and grandsons of Obadiah, were soldiers in the War of 1812. Reuben died in service at Norfolk, Virginia.

Captain Richard J. and Judith Ann (Shortt) Wood became the parents of seven sons and two daughters, the daughters, Rachel and Susan, having died in infancy. The names of the sons are: Jefferson P., Daniel H., George B., Greenville D., Amos D., Sparrel A. and D. Robertson. Jefferson P. Wood married Malinda, daughter of Jonathan L. and Julina (Burnett) Brammer, and they had six children: Stanton H., Dora, John E., Benjamin Frederick, Gertrude and Ethel. Jefferson P. Wood became a prosperous farmer and served a number of years as justice of the peace. Daniel Hillsman Wood first married Ruth Corn, the children of this union being Susan Della, George C., Katherine and Mai. By the second marriage there have been no children. Daniel Hillsman Wood is a farmer in Patrick County, Virginia, and has been a representative in the State Legislature. George Bunyan Wood married Elizabeth Brammer, sister of the wife of his brother Jefferson, and he is a farmer in Virginia, with prominence in public affairs in his community. Greenville Darius Wood married Melissa, daughter of Andrew and Sonora (Turner) Graham, and she died without issue, his second marriage having been with Lillie Barnard, daughter of John C. and Mary Elizabeth (Turner) Barnard, the children of this union being: Richard Hugh (a physician), Susan Lee, Elizabeth, Greenville D., Jr., and John. Greenville D. Wood is a merchant and farmer. Amos DeRussia Wood married Ann Chapman, daughter of Judge David E. Johnson, of Bluefield, West Virginia, and they became the parents of three children: Sara Pearis, Richard J. and John David. Amos DeRussia Wood is a successful physician at Bluefield. Sparrel Asa Wood married Jessie Seales and after her death wedded India Goodwin, daughter of Judge Goodwin, of Nottawaw, Virginia, the one child of this union being Judith Goodwin. Sparrel Asa Wood is now a teacher of Latin in the public schools of Washington, D. C., he being a graduate of William and Mary College.

February 18, 1908, recorded the marriage of D. Robertson Wood and Miss Gertrude Christian Howard, daughter of Lieutenant Peter and Belle L. Howard, and a granddaughter of Major and Caroline Amanda (Latham) Howard, a great granddaughter of Rev. Peter Howard and a great-great granddaughter of Sir William and Hannah (Psalter) Howard. Sir William Howard was born in the north of England and became a member of the British Army. His wife not being of the nobility, he was disinherited because of their marriage. About 1763 they came, with their two children, to Virginia, where Sir William engaged in the iron business, in Shenandoah County. He manufactured ammunition and guns for the Patriot Army in the Revolution. In the war period he served as auditor of accounts for the Continental forces at Richmond, Virginia. After the war he settled in Montgomery County, Virginia, where he passed the rest of his life. He became a clergyman of the Baptist Church and was otherwise influential in its affairs. He was a man of fine presence, with the bearing of an English gentleman and with a style of apparel that befitted his station. Peter Howard, second son of Sir William, was born September 4, 1762, became a Baptist clergyman, and in the Revolution he served in turn in the Fifth and Third Virginia Regiments, under Colonel Buford. He died in Floyd County, May 9, 1827. His second wife (Sarah Strickland) was born March 12, 1761, and died November 23, 1846.

Major Howard was born in Floyd County, September 8, 1795, and there he died July 26, 1869. His son Peter was born June 3, 1832, and became a merchant at Floyd Court House. He served as first lieutenant in the Fifty-fourth Virginia Infantry in the Civil war, and his death occurred September 16, 1893. His wife, born August 9, 1850, died September 10, 1892. They had eight children: Horatio Seymour, Peter Tazewell, Grover Latham, Hope Chapman, Gertrude Christian (Mrs. D. Robertson Wood), Maudai Ethel, Ola and Annabelle. The lineage of the mother of Mrs. Wood is thus traced: Daughter of Colonel Joseph and Annie Amanda (Smith) Howard; granddaughter of Colonel Ira and Pamela (Lester) Howard; great-granddaughter of Reverend Peter and Sarah Strickland Howard, the former of whom was a son of Sir William Howard, previously mentioned. Col. Joseph L. Howard was born May 21, 1821, and died May 7, 1889, in Floyd County, Virginia, where he had been a merchant. He was a Colonel in the Civil war, and later a member for three terms of the Legislature of Virginia. His wife was born February 3, 1830, and died in December, 1883. Col. Ira Howard was born April 6, 1797, was a farmer and merchant and was for twelve years a member of the Virginia Legislature, his death occurring May 21, 1865. His wife was born in 1798 and died June 25, 1835. The father of Mrs. Wood, a merchant at Floyd Court House, died September 16, 1893. His wife was born in Pittsylvania County, Virginia, a daughter of Col. Joseph Howard, mentioned earlier in this paragraph. Carolina Amanda (Latham) Howard, grandmother of Mrs. Wood, was a daughter of Henry and Mary Ball Latham, the latter a daughter of Robert and Hattie (Ball) Green and a representative of the distinguished Ball and Washington families of Virginia. Mrs. Wood was educated at Oxford Academy, Virginia College at Bristol and the Woman's College in the City of Richmond. She is an active member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Daughters of the Confederacy. Mr. and Mrs. Wood have three children: Dexter Robley, born January 27, 1910, Virginia Hoard, born December 28, 1912 and Catherine Ball, born August 6, 1915.

IRA WADE COFFMAN resigned soon after the beginning of his third consecutive term as clerk of the Circuit Court of Harrison County to become clerk of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Virginia, with headquarters at Elkins. Mr. Coffman has made an exceptional record of public service, and is also one of the most prominent members of the masonic order in the state.

He was born on a farm near the village of Cherry Camp in Harrison County, November 24, 1877. His family has been in Harrison County from pioneer times. His great-grandfather, Henry Coffman, came to this state from his native state of Pennsylvania, and settled in Harrison County, where he married a Miss Robinson. His son, George W. Coffman, was born in Harrison County, and married Sarah Ann McIntyre. Truman James Coffman, father of I. W. Coffman, was born in Harrison County in 1848, and for a number of years lived on a farm near the Village of Cherry Camp. In 1880 he moved to the town of Bristol on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, in the same county and for many years was successfully engaged in merchandising there. He married Emma R. Meredith, and they now reside at Salem, West Virginia.

Ira Wade Coffman was reared at Bristol, attended the public schools there, completed the course at Salem College, and as a young man taught three terms of country school. He then became associated with his father in the mercantile business at Bristol. From 1906 to 1908 he was proprietor and publisher of the Salem Herald, a weekly newspaper. Mr. Coffman early took an active interest in politics in his native county, and in 1908 he was nominated on the republican ticket for clerk of the Circuit Court of Harrison County. He was elected for a term of six years. The efficient manner in which he handled the records and business of the office gave him renomination in 1914 without opposition. In 1920 he was again nominated without opposition and re-elected for a third term of six years. That term began in 1921, but in August of that year he resigned to become clerk of the United States District Court for the Northern District, under appointment from Judge W. E. Baker, who went on the Federal bench in the spring of the same year. Soon after taking charge of this office Mr. Coffman removed, in September, 1921, from Clarksburg to Elkins.

As a young man Mr. Coffman became a Master Mason, and from his initiation into the mysteries of the Blue Lodge he has been an enthusiastic member of the order. He has taken the work of both the Scottish and York rites, is a Knight Templar, and in 1921 the thirty-third, supreme honorary, degree of the Scottish Rite was conferred upon him. He is a member of the Mystic Shrine. After fifteen years of service as deputy lecturer Mr. Coffman was appointed, November 17, 1921, grand lecturer of the Grand Lodge of West Virginia. He is said to be the best authority upon Masonry in the state.

Mr. Coffman is affiliated with the order of Elks and is a Methodist. He married in 1901 Miss Sarah E. Williams, and their four children are Mildred, Myron Truman, Helen Virginia and Clarence Williams Coffman.

CURTIS GLANVILLE JACKSON, senior member of the firm of Jackson & Grow, who conduct a well equipped machine shop at Morgantown, has as his coadjutor in this enterprise Adam Grow, of whom individual mention is made on other pages of this work, together with definite record concerning the prosperous business of the firm. In addition to his alliance with this industrial enterprise Mr. Jackson holds the office of master mechanic of the Morgantown & Wheeling Railroad.

Mr. Jackson was born at Fairview, Frederick County, Virginia, on the 30th of November, 1882. His father, Thomas R. Jackson, who is now a successful contractor and builder at Shinnston, Harrison County, West Virginia, became a resident of Grafton, this state, in 1884, and there engaged in the work of his trade, that of carpenter. He has been active and influential in local politics, and while a resident of Grafton he was at one time candidate for mayor of that city.

Curtis G. Jackson gained his early education in the public schools at Grafton, and there also he served an apprenticeship to the trade of boilermaker in the shops of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, his efficiency early leading to his appointment to the position of boiler inspector in the service of this railroad system. In 1907 he engaged in independent business at Grafton, but two years later he was called to Morgantown to take charge of the boiler department in the shops of the Morgantown & Kingwood Railroad, the line of which is now a part of the Baltimore & Ohio system. In 1917 he became associated with Mr. Grow in the operation of the modest machine and repair shop which they have since developed into one of the substantial and prosperous industrial establishments of Morgantown, and in the same year he accepted also his present position of master mechanic of the Morgantown & Wheeling Railroad, which was just opening the coal fields of the Scotts Run District. In the shops of this road at Morgantown ten men are employed under the supervision of Mr. Jackson, and here all repair work and rebuilding of the engines of the road are done. Mr. Jackson is not only a skilled mechanic and familiar with the various details of practical railroad engineering as touching the rolling stock, but as an executive he is popular with the men under his supervision and gains their loyal co-operation in all work. Mr. Jackson has been a close and appreciative student of the teachings and history of the time-honored Masonic fraternity, is active in the affairs of the various Masonic bodies with which he is affiliated, and is serving, in 1921, as senior warden of Morgantown Union Lodge No. 4, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons.

In 1902 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Jackson and Miss Ella Pearl Garlow, of Grafton, and they have five children: Bondaline (Mrs. C. E. Pierce), Audrey, Curtis Glanville, Jr., June and Bettie.

HOWARD MASON GORE. The pure bred livestock industry of West Virginia recognizes as one of its fountainheads the noted Gore farm near Clarksburg, now owned and under the active management of Gore Brothers, one of whom is Howard Mason Gore.

One of Mr. Gore's ancestors was a settler in Harrison County before the Indians had been driven out of this wilderness. The Gore family for several generations lived in Loudoun County, Virginia. The great-grandparents of Howard M. Gore were Joseph and Susan (Lucas) Gore, of Loudoun County. Their son, Truman Gore, was born in that county April 10, 1794, and married Lydia George, of the same county. They had eleven children: George W., Elizabeth Roena, Susan L., Truman, Tilghman, Artha Malinda, Albert Wilson, Solomon D., Leah Louisa, Alice Jerusha and Lydia Esther. These children were all born in Loudoun County, and in the fall of 1846 most of them, with their mother, rode in a carriage over the Alleghany Mountains to Clarksburg, West Virginia. Truman Gore bought a large farm of 1,100 acres in West Fork River, and much of that property is still owned by his descendants, productive not only as a farming proposition but for its resources of coal, oil and gas. Truman Gore continued to live here, and bore the reputation of a splendid farmer and good citizen, until his death January 15, 1858.

His son Solomon D. Gore was born in Loudoun County, January 2, 1837, and was about ten years of age when the family settled near Clarksburg. He acquired by inheritance and purchase 530 acres of the old homestead. That is the Gore farm mentioned above, and Solomon Gore was the pioneer responsible for making it a center of the pure bred livestock industry. He was a good business man, progressive in his citizenship, and his life was characterized by faithfulness to duty in all its relations. He died at Clarksburg, November 19, 1907. On May 20, 1860, he married Marietta P. Rogers, who was born April 28, 1842, and is still living, in her eightieth year, and has been a life-long member of the Baptist Church. Her parents were Ludwell L. and Harriet P. (Reynolds) Rogers. Her father was born in Loudoun County, October 3, 1793, and was a soldier in the War of 1812. His uncle, William Rogers, was an early sheriff of Harrison County, and because he refused to imprison persons for debt he permitted his own property to be sold for such debts. Harriet P. Reynolds was born in 1805 in Harrison County, where her father, Squire John Reynolds, settled as early as 1789. Solomon D. Gore and wife had four sons: William F. L., one of the proprietors of Gore Farm; Claude W., who became a lawyer; Dr. Truman E., a veterinary and business man; and Howard M.

Howard Mason Gore was born on the old homestead farm three miles north of Clarksburg, October 12, 1877. He had a rural school education, supplemented by attendance at the University of West Virginia at Morgantown, where he graduated A. B. in 1900. For the past twenty years he has devoted his energies and resources to the business and science of agriculture and stock raising as member of the firm Gore Brothers. The Gore farm has produced high grade cattle, horses and sheep, but is now largely a specialty farm for the production of pure bred Jersey cattle and beef cattle. This farm sent out the shipment of cattle which commanded the highest market price on the open market in Chicago. Mr. Gore is a director of the American Federation of Farm Bureaus, a member of the American Livestock Committee of Fifteen engaged in a study and investigation of meat distribution, and during the World war he was a Federal food inspector. He is serving as a member of the West Virginia State Board of Education, having been appointed to that office in 1920 by Governor Cornwall. Mr. Gore is a republican, and is affiliated with the Masonic Order and Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is a member of the Baptist Church.

September 30, 1906, he married Roxie C. Bailey, who was born May 23, 1884, and died March 5, 1907.

SAMUEL A. SHACKELFORD. A half century of labor, constructive labor, the building of homes, schools, churches and places of business, is the achievement that marks out Samuel A. Shackelford of Grafton and confers upon him an unusual distinction. He is still in business, though its heavier burdens are now carried by his son and partner, L. R. Shackelford.

Samuel Andrew Shackelford was born near Morgantown, Monongalia County, June 4, 1851, son of John Alexander and Elizabeth (Kincaid) Shackelford. His mother was a native of Marion County and daughter of Moses Kincaid. John A. Shackelford was born near Alexandria, Virginia, and while a youth acting as overseer of slaves for his uncle conceived a hatred of slavery that caused him to seek the free atmosphere of the West, leading to his settlement in Monongalia County. He cultivated a farm near Morgantown, and also followed the trade of shoemaker. When well advanced in years he moved to Taylor County, and lived out his life at Grafton, where he continued the work of his trade. He was a strong republican and one of the most loyal Union men in the state, furnishing a son to the army and being liberal with his means and the hospitality of his home in entertaining passing soldiers. He and his wife had the following children: Mary Ann, who died in Marion County, wife of Henry Fast; Elizabeth, who died in Preston County as Mrs. Elza Turner; Lucinda, who married William Reed, and died in Grafton; Nancy, deceased wife of Martin Goff, one of the old residents of Grafton; John W., the Union soldier, who was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg and died some days later in Grafton Hospital; and Samuel A., the youngest child.

Samuel A. Shackelford while attending school at Grafton gained a knowledge of the common branches which had to suffice in absence of the more technical training that is now part of the curriculum in most of the better high schools of the state. At the age of eighteen he began his apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade with William Morgan, of Grafton, and while working at the practical side of the business he attended a drawing school at night, and seized every opportunity to perfect himself in the varied arts used in the construction work. Before reaching his majority he took his first contract, and from year to year the scope of his work and its importance have broadened, so that it is a conservative estimate that almost half of Grafton has been built under his direction and supervision. The field of his business has been widely extended, including building construction as far away as Newburg. Business houses, residences and public institutions too numerous to mention comprise his record. Typical among them have been the West Side, the East Side and Fetterman schoolhouses, the Methodist and United Brethren churches, the residences of Judge Holt, Mr. McCormick and Tom Davis.

His energies have been quite fully expended in his business, but he was at one time a member of the council of West Grafton and on the city council after the two municipalities were merged. He has voted his convictions as a republican, and is a Royal Arch Mason.

At Oakland, Maryland, in December, 1872, Mr. Shackelford married Miss Elmyra Jane Miller. She was born in Taylor County, West Virginia, in 1854, oldest of the children of George W. and Mary (Bowers) Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Shackelford have three children. The daughter Bertie is the wife of Neal Heflin, of Fairmont. Mabel May is the wife of John McCafferty, a Grafton business man, and they have a daughter, Lucile.

Lloyd Russell Shackelford, the only son, who has been personally associated with the building business at Grafton for over a quarter of a century, was born in the city August 16, 1875. He attended the public schools, learned his trade under his father, and has put the best of himself into the business. He is now the responsible head of the enterprise.

He is a republican and a member of the Baptist Church. At Grafton in 1902 he married Mamie Gillian. By this marriage he had two daughters, Mary and Madaline. Later he married Anna Guseman, and they have a son, Lloyd, Jr.

MORRIS HARVEY BROWN. In comparison with many whose biographies are in this work, Morris Harvey Brown is still a newcomer into the business world, but though his years of experience have been few, they have been crowded with industry and crowned with success. As a real estate dealer of Huntington he has been the medium through which a number of large and important transactions have been effected, and is also a well-known and active figure in the coal and oil industries. For a young man, he is bearing heavy responsibilities, but all are being discharged by him capably and expeditiously.

Mr. Brown was born June 11, 1893, at Charleston, West Virginia, and is a son of the late William Sherman and Fenton (Morris) Brown, and comes of Revolutionary ancestry. His grandfather, Robert Brown, was born in Pennsylvania, and died in Coal River, in Kanawha County, West Virginia, where he had been a pioneer, coming there when a young man prior to his marriage. He passed the remainder of his life on the same farm and became an extensive landholder and substantial citizen, who had the respect and esteem of his fellow-citizens and the warm regard of a wide circle of friends. During the Civil war he fought as a private soldier in the ranks of the Union forces. His wife, Eliza Brown, was a native of Kanawha County, where her death occurred.

William Sherman Brown, father of Morris Harvey Brown, was born in 1864, near St. Albans, Kanawha County, Virginia, now West Virginia, and died at Tornado, that county, in 1908. He was reared and married in his native locality, where as a young man he adopted farming as a vocation and raised tobacco in order to gain sufficient means with which to complete his education. Later he studied pharmacy and established a drug store at East Bank, followed by similar enterprises at Logan and Huntington, at which last-named place his pharmacy was one of the first in business. He came to Huntington in 1893, but about 1895, on account of ill health, gave up the drug business and returned to Kanawha County. In the meantime he had studied law, was graduated from an Ohio college with the degree of Bachelor of Laws and was admitted to the bar and on his return to Kanawha County engaged in the practice of his profession until his death in 1908. In politics Mr. Brown was a staunch republican. In his younger days he served as justice of the peace in Kanawha County, where he was also county surveyor at one time, and during his incumbency of the latter office made his first map of the county. He was not a member of any church. Mr. Brown married Fenton Morris, who was born in 1871, at East Bank, Kanawha County, and survives him, residing in Atlanta, Georgia. They became the parents of the following children: Carl, connected with the advertising department of a leading newspaper, of Detroit, Michigan, who was the first man to enlist from Huntington in the World's war, was attached to the United States Naval Aviation service, saw eighteen months of overseas service and was honorably discharged and mustered out as a second lieutenant; Opal, the wife of Robert T. McManeus, of Columbia, South Carolina, general manager of a large building and supply company of Greenville, South Carolina, and representative of the H. W. Johns-Manville Company of New York City; Eliza, the wife of Harry L. Bishop, engaged in the bakery business at Atlanta, Georgia; Morris Harvey, of this record; Eliza Jane, who is unmarried and resides with her mother; and Helen, the wife of Keller F. Melton, sole owner and operator of the Melton Construction Company, of Atlanta where his father is a professor at Emory University.

Morris Harvey Brown received his education in the rural schools of Kanawha County and the public school at Huntington, but left school at the age of sixteen years. In the meantime, he had received his introduction to business methods at the early age of eleven years, when he had spent one year at Jacksonville, Florida, with his father, and while there had assisted in keeping the book of the Distilled Aerated Water Company of that city the plant being the property of his father. For a short time the family resided at East Bank, and in 1909 the mother brought her children to Huntington, where Morris H. Brown attended school for about one year. He then became elevator operator for the Deardorff-Sisile Company, a department store concern, but after 1½ year gave up this position to become a messenger boy in the Huntington shops of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway. Du

Wesley H. Jones.

10
 11
 12
 13
 14
 15
 16
 17
 18
 19 20
 21
 22
 23
 24
 25
 26
 27
 28
 29
 30
 31
 32
 33
 34
 35
 36
 37
 38
 39
 40
 41
 42
 43
 44
 45
 46
 47
 48
 49
 50
 51
 52
 53
 54
 55
 56
 57
 58
 59
 60
 61
 62
 63
 64
 65
 66
 67
 68
 69
 70
 71
 72
 73
 74
 75
 76
 77
 78
 79
 80
 81
 82
 83
 84
 85
 86
 87
 88
 89
 90
 91
 92
 93
 94
 95
 96
 97
 98
 99
 100
 101
 102
 103
 104
 105
 106
 107
 108
 109
 110
 111
 112
 113
 114
 115
 116
 117
 118
 119
 120
 121
 122
 123
 124
 125
 126
 127
 128
 129
 130
 131
 132
 133
 134
 135
 136
 137
 138
 139
 140
 141
 142
 143
 144
 145
 146
 147
 148
 149
 150
 151
 152
 153
 154
 155
 156
 157
 158
 159
 160
 161
 162
 163
 164
 165
 166
 167
 168
 169
 170
 171
 172
 173
 174
 175
 176
 177
 178
 179
 180
 181
 182
 183
 184
 185
 186
 187
 188
 189
 190
 191
 192
 193
 194
 195
 196
 197
 198
 199
 200
 201
 202
 203
 204
 205
 206
 207
 208
 209
 210
 211
 212
 213
 214
 215
 216
 217
 218
 219
 220
 221
 222
 223
 224
 225
 226
 227
 228
 229
 230
 231
 232
 233
 234
 235
 236
 237 238
 239
 240
 241
 242
 243
 244
 245
 246
 247
 248
 249
 250
 251
 252
 253
 254
 255
 256
 257
 258
 259
 260
 261
 262
 263
 264
 265
 266
 267
 268
 269
 270
 271
 272
 273
 274
 275
 276
 277
 278
 279
 280
 281
 282
 283
 284
 285
 286
 287
 288
 289
 290
 291
 292
 293
 294
 295
 296
 297
 298
 299
 300
 301
 302
 303
 304
 305
 306
 307
 308
 309
 310
 311
 312
 313
 314
 315
 316
 317
 318
 319
 320
 321
 322
 323
 324
 325
 326
 327
 328
 329
 330
 331
 332
 333
 334
 335
 336
 337
 338
 339
 340
 341
 342
 343
 344
 345
 346
 347
 348
 349
 350
 351
 352
 353
 354
 355
 356
 357
 358
 359
 360
 361
 362
 363
 364 365
 366
 367
 368
 369
 370
 371
 372
 373
 374
 375
 376
 377
 378
 379
 380
 381
 382
 383
 384
 385
 386
 387
 388
 389
 390
 391
 392
 393
 394
 395
 396
 397
 398
 399
 400
 401
 402
 403
 404
 405
 406
 407
 408
 409
 410
 411
 412
 413
 414
 415
 416
 417
 418
 419
 420
 421
 422
 423
 424
 425
 426
 427
 428
 429
 430
 431
 432
 433
 434
 435
 436
 437
 438
 439
 440
 441
 442
 443
 444
 445
 446
 447
 448
 449
 450
 451
 452
 453
 454
 455
 456
 457
 458
 459
 460
 461
 462
 463
 464
 465
 466
 467
 468
 469
 470
 471
 472
 473
 474
 475
 476
 477
 478
 479
 480
 481
 482
 483
 484
 485
 486
 487
 488
 489
 490
 491
 492
 493
 494
 495
 496
 497
 498
 499
 500
 501 502
 503
 504
 505
 506
 507
 508
 509
 510
 511
 512
 513
 514
 515
 516
 517
 518
 519
 520
 521
 522
 523
 524
 525
 526
 527
 528
 529
 530
 531
 532

ing the four years that he remained with this road he worked himself up to be division storekeeper. At this time Mr. Brown became troubled with an illness which was diagnosed as incipient tuberculosis, and he gave up his position and went to Terra Alta, West Virginia, where he was pronounced cured after a stay and treatment of five months. He then returned to the Chesapeake & Ohio for a short time, after which he embarked in the insurance business on his own account. A little later he added real estate operations to his business and since then has been successful in building up a large and flourishing realty clientele, with offices at 429 Ninth Street, Huntington.

Mr. Brown was one of the organizers of the Huntington Real Estate Board, served as its first secretary and treasurer for two years and as a member of the board of directors for a like period. He is a member of the West Virginia Real Estate Association, in the affairs of which he has taken an active and helpful interest. He is likewise first vice president of the Realty Publishing Company, and was one of the originators of the "West Virginia Realtor," a state publication, being also one of the three members assigned to the realtors of West Virginia on the editorial committee thereof. He is president of the Bellevue Land Company of Huntington, of the Brown Development Company, and of the Morris H. Brown Realty Company, is one-half owner of the Bowman-Brown Realty Company, also of this city, and is secretary and treasurer of the West Virginia Standard Coal Company and the Mary Elizabeth Coal Company. He organized an oil company and developed production on the farm of his grandfather, Robert Brown. This proved to be a very successful venture, although it has since been sold. Mr. Brown is an extensive holder of realty in Cabell County, and particularly at Huntington. He belongs to the Chamber of Commerce and the Kiwanis Club, and as a fraternalist is affiliated with Huntington Lodge No. 313, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Politically he is a democrat and his religious faith is that of the Presbyterian Church.

On September 20, 1920, Mr. Brown was united in marriage at Louisville, Kentucky, to Miss Elsie Love Holsenbach, who was born at Somerset, Kentucky, and attended the National Normal School of Ashland, that state.

JOHN L. ELLISON, is one of the progressive and successful merchants of Summers County, his well equipped general store being at Avis, a tributary town to Hinton, the judicial center of the county.

Mr. Ellison was born at the family home at Ellison Post Office, in Jumping Branch District, Summers County, and the date of his nativity was September 23, 1875. He is a son of Lorenzo D. and Mary Jane (Wills) Ellison, and is a descendant of Joseph Ellison, who, in company with a brother, came from England to America about 1780 and became one of the early settlers in what is now Monroe County, West Virginia. He was captured by Indians and taken to Flat Top, but contrived to escape, this capture having been made in one of the last raids made by the Indians in this section. The Ellison family has been actively concerned in social and industrial development and progress in Monroe, Summers and Randolph counties, and the family name has been honored in the annals of West Virginia since the early pioneer period.

Lorenzo D. Ellison was born in Jumping Branch District, Summers County, February 22, 1858, and he is now engaged in the mercantile business at Avis. His father, John F. Ellison, likewise was born and reared in Summers County, where his death occurred July 27, 1899, he having been a gallant soldier of the Union in the Civil war. His father, John Franklin Ellison, was born in 1790, and died in 1877, he having been a son of Joseph, the founder of the family in the frontier wilds of what is now West Virginia. The grandfather of the subject of this review had become a man of substantial wealth prior to the Civil war, but depredations made by Confederate soldiers, combined with other war depressions entailed to him large property and financial losses. Lorenzo D. Ellison conducted for two years a general store in Jumping Branch District, and February 5, 1907, he became associated with his son John L. in the same line of enterprise at Avis, his interest in the business having been sold to his son John L. in 1911, and he later having engaged in business at this place, where he still conducts a general store. He has served as a member of the City Council of Avis, and is one of the influential citizens of this place. The marriage of Lorenzo D. Ellison and Miss Mary Jane Wills, daughter of Lee Wills, was solemnized November 4, 1874, and of the eight sons and two daughters of this union all are living except one son. John L., the immediate subject of this sketch, is the eldest of the number; W. L. is chief clerk for the Loup Creek Coal Company at Page; W. H. is associated with his father in the mercantile business at Avis; C. E. is a resident of Avis and is a carpenter by trade and vocation; R. L. and Edward M. are in the employ of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company, as is also Fred, who is a conductor, his twin brother, Lonnie B., having died at the age of eight years; Viola is the wife of D. L. Lane, of Avis; and Anna is the wife of Clay Shipp, who, like Mr. Lane, is in the service of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad.

John L. Ellison so profited by the advantages of the public schools of his native county that he made himself eligible for pedagogic service. For five years he was numbered among the successful teachers in the rural schools of Summers County, at a salary of twenty-five dollars a month, and in the meanwhile he continued his association with farm enterprise. He gave five years to successful work as a traveling portrait salesman, and he then established himself in the general merchandise business at Avis, where he has built up a substantial and prosperous enterprise, based on fair and honorable dealings and effective service to an appreciative patronage. He has served as a member of the Republican County Committee, a member of the City Council of Avis, and has been influential in the local councils and work of his party since his early youth. In 1920 he was appointed a member of the Board of Equalization for Summers County for a term of six years, and he is serving also as a notary public. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Missionary Baptist Church.

May 27, 1894, recorded the marriage of Mr. Ellison and Miss Rosa E. Lilly, daughter of Samuel and Anna Lilly. She was born November 20, 1875, and her death occurred August 16, 1901. Of this union were born four children: William C., now a conductor on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, with residence at Avis, was for fifteen months in active service with the American Expeditionary Forces in France in the World war, he having been assigned to the medical department of the Sixth Division; Clara Mabel died at the age of ten years; Mina Claire is the wife of Frank A. Spades, a conductor on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, and they reside in the City of Charleston; and Ola likewise is a conductor for that railroad, with residence at Russell, Kentucky.

On the 17th of April, 1912, Mr. Ellison wedded Miss Stella Barker, who was born in Summers County on the 17th of April, 1882. Mrs. Ellison is a daughter of John W. and Mary Malissa (Meadows) Barker. His father, who had been a prosperous farmer and also engaged in the jewelry business, was a resident of Baltimore, Maryland, at the time of his death, March 7, 1911, his widow being now at the old homestead in Summers County. The Barker family was founded in Virginia in the Colonial period, and representatives of the same were pioneers in what is now West Virginia. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Ellison had been for five years a popular teacher in the schools of Summers County. Mr. and Mrs. Ellison have two children, John O. and Mary Pauline, aged respectively eight and six years, in 1922.

HARRY JAMES EDMONDS, is the popular general manager of the Hinton Fruit & Produce Company, which now controls a substantial and prosperous business, with headquarters in a well equipped establishment at Hinton, the county seat of Summers County. The enterprise was initiated by its present manager in the year 1908, and in 1910 the business was incorporated under the present title. All of the stock in the company is held in the possession of the Edmonds family, the other interested principals being Edward T. and George A. B. Edmonds. The Edmonds family was founded on the east coast of Virginia prior to the war of the Revolution, and the family name has been one of prominence in connection with development and progress in what is now West Virginia. The old home was in Accomac County, Virginia, and thence came the representatives in the western part of the Old Dominion, now West Virginia, members of the family having been active in the furtherance of coal-mining industry in the New and Kanawha River Districts of the latter state.

He whose name initiates this review was born October 12, 1877, in Accomac County, Virginia, and he is a son of John W. and Nancy (Burton) Edmonds, the former of whom now resides at Hinton and the latter of whom passed to the life eternal in the year 1920. Harry J. Edmonds is indebted to the schools of his native state for his early education, and in 1900 he took a position in the office of G. M. Surrall, an executive of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, at Norfolk, Virginia, where he remained until 1908, when he came to Hinton and established, on a modest scale, the business of which he is now the manager and which has under his direction expanded to most substantial proportions. The company has a branch house at Norfolk, Virginia, and another at Huntington, West Virginia, where the business is conducted under the title of the Guyan Fruit & Produce Company, under the management of Edward T. Edmonds, the house at Norfolk being conducted under the management of John B. Edmonds.

Mr. Edmonds is a democrat, but has had no desire for the activities of practical politics, as he is essentially and unreservedly a business man. He is liberal and public-spirited in his civic attitude, is actively identified with the Rotary Club at Hinton, and he and his wife are zealous members of the Presbyterian Church in this city, he being an elder in the same and also the teacher of a large class in its Sunday School.

In the year 1909 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Edmonds and Miss Margaret Savage, daughter of J. A. D. Savage, of Accomac County, Virginia, and she is a popular figure in the representative social activities of her home community.

ANTHONY GARRETT LEWELLYN has lived his life in the noted Cheat Neck community, on Cheat River, close to the Pennsylvania-West Virginia state line. His postoffice is Cheat Haven, Pennsylvania, but his farm and home are in Union District of Monongalia County, West Virginia. Mr. Lewellyn is an honored and substantial citizen, honored for his high character and also for the patriotic service he rendered as a Union soldier during the Civil war, a war which enlisted several of his brothers as fighting men.

Mr. Lewellyn was born only a mile distant from his present home, on December 7, 1843. His parents were Jesse and Anna (Ryan) Lewellyn. Jesse Lewellyn was born in the same vicinity, on Morgan's Run, May 2, 1796. The grandfather was Doctor Lewellyn, who was born in the United States, of Welsh parentage, and as a young married man came to the Cheat Neck locality and lived out his life here. He was three times married. Jesse Lewellyn, one of his sons, married in Fayette County, Pennsylvania. His wife, Anna, was a daughter of John Ryan, who came from Ireland. Jesse Lewellyn lived all his married life at Cheat Neck and died at the age of seventy-five, while his wife passed away at the age of eighty. They reared a family of eight children, and of these Anthony G. is the only survivor. Among the other brothers, James O. was a soldier for three years in the First Pennsylvania Cavalry, was a carpenter and steamboat builder in Washington County, Pennsylvania, and died at the age of eighty-three. John R. was a soldier in the Seventeenth Iowa Infantry until the close of the war, and afterward removed to Kansas, where he died at the age of sixty-five. Stephen O., the third soldier brother, was with the Third West Virginia Infantry, which became the Sixth Cavalry, and was all through the war as a sergeant in his company. Still another brother, Asa, lived in Iowa.

Anthony G. Lewellyn was about eighteen years of age when the war came on. He had attended the common schools near home, and soon followed the example of his brothers, by enlisting in Company C of the Sixty-second Pennsylvania. A year later he was transferred to the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania, and toward the close of the war was transferred to Company K of the One Hundred and Ninety-first Pennsylvania Regiment. At the end of three years service he was mustered out at Washington, and received his honorable discharge at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. He was in the Fifth Corps of the Army of the Potomac. His active service began just after the battle of Gettysburg, and he was in some of the greatest battles that followed in Northern Virginia, including the Wilderness, the mine explosion at Petersburg, and at Lee's surrender the flag of truce came to the Federal lines where he was on duty. As a messenger he visited the courthouse at Appomattox where paroles were being made out. Mr. Lewellyn was struck once in the arm with a spent ball, and another time, while aiming his gun, it was shot out of his hand. He also had his canteen strap shot off in the battle of the Wilderness.

After the war Mr. Lewellyn followed charcoal burning for some years, but in the main has been a farmer, and has lived at his present place near the Pennsylvania state line forty-seven years. He has always been a republican, voting his convictions at every election, though never seeking an office for himself. He has preferred the peaceful routine of life, has never had a lawsuit, and for fifty-three years has been an active member of the Calvary Methodist Protestant Church. He joined the Grand Army at its inception, when the ranks of the old soldiers were still well filled, and has seen most of his comrades drop out of the post at Smithfield, Pennsylvania, and is now one of the last survivors of the great war.

A year after the war Mr. Lewellyn married Miss Elizabeth Jarrett, a neighbor girl, daughter of Thomas C. and Elizabeth (Ruble) Jarrett. Their lives were associated in the work and duties of the home for thirty-seven years, until her death in 1903. Of their ten children four sons died in childhood. The six to grow up were: George H., who lives near his father; Jesse L., of Washington County, Pennsylvania; Alexander Clark, who also lives in the home community; William J., a resident of Orange County, California; James O., a carpenter at Morgantown; and Lizzie, Mrs. Frank Ridgeway, who lives with her father and is the mother of two children, George H. and Carl Floyd.

ELMER EVERETT WATSON, M. D. A capable physician and surgeon at Albright, present county health officer of Preston County, Doctor Watson is also a banker and business man, and has found many worthy objects of his enterprise and useful service. He is still a young man, and has practiced at Albright for a dozen years.

He represents an old family of Preston County, and was born at Sinclair Post Office in Reno District, October 8, 1879. The founder of the family in West Virginia was his great-grandfather, who came from Scotland and settled in the neighborhood of Masontown or Reedsville. The grandfather, Scott Watson, was born there, served as a Union soldier in the Civil war, and later was a pensioner. He was twice married. The children of his second wife, Miss Huggins, was William A. Watson, Sr., of Tunnelton; David E., of Tunnelton; Grant, of Masontown; and James, who was killed in an accident at Wheeling while in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway.

William A. Watson, who was born in Valley District of Preston County in 1855, was educated in the community schools and at the age of sixteen began teaching at Howesville. He continued teaching until he entered merchandising at Sinclair, then was in business at Fellowsville, and for the past eight years has been located at Tunnelton. Altogether he has been a merchant in Preston County forty-two consecutive years. William A. Watson married Miss Nancy Jane Sinclair, a native of Preston County. Her father, Robert Sinclair, was born in Scotland, was a cooper by trade, and after settling in Preston County his establishment became the central feature of a village named Sinclair in his honor. William A. Watson and wife had the following children: Dr. Elmer Everett; Ernest W., of Tunnel-ton; Ida Grace, wife of Dr. Walter Bucklew, of Tunnelton; and William A., Jr., associated with his father in business at Tunnelton.

Carlton C. Prince

Elmer Everett Watson spent most of his early life in Fellowsville, and he grew up in the home of a school teacher and a merchant and shared in the duties of his father's store for several years. After the common schools he took the preparatory work in the University at Morgantown, and pursued his regular course in medicine at Cincinnati in the Eclectic Medical College, from which he graduated in 1908. The following year he located at Albright, where he has had a busy practice. He has served as county health officer eight years, and is a member in good standing of the Preston County and West Virginia State Medical associations.

Outside of his profession Doctor Watson was one of the promoters of the First National Bank of Albright, and has been continuously its president since the bank opened for business. In 1919 he supplied the enterprise and capital for the bus line between Albright and Tunnelton, equipping it with two busses. In 1921 the business was incorporated as the Preston County Bus and Garage Company, with a capital of $15,000, and he is president of the company. He sold fifty per cent of the stock to other associates. Doctor Watson was for eight years a member of the Board of Education of the Albright District.

In politics he has been a republican voter since reaching his majority, first voting for President McKinley in 1900. He was a medical member of the Draft Board during the World war and examined all the boys recruiting for service in the county. He was also interested in the Red Cross, and still represents the society in his locality. Doctor Watson is affiliated with Preston Lodge No. 90, F. and A. M., at Kingwood, took the fourteenth degree in the Scottish Rite, Perfection Lodge at Morgantown, finishing his Scottish Rite work in West Virginia Consistory No. 1 at Wheeling, and is also a member of the Shrine at Morgantown. His other fraternity is the Knights of Pythias.

Doctor Watson married Miss Martha Belle Robinson at Fellowsville, West Virginia, where she was born, youngest of the ten children of J. W. and Alice (Strauther) Robinson. Doctor and Mrs. Watson had three children: Lucile, who graduated from the Kingwood High School in 1920 and is now a student in Beaver College at Beaver, Pennsylvania; Mary Elizabeth, who died at the age of eighteen months; and James William, born in 1916.

COL. CARLETON CUSTER PIERCE is a Kingwood lawyer, has enjoyed a growing practice in the law for twenty years, and has numerous substantial interests, reaching out into financial, horticultural and industrial affairs of the state. Mr. Pierce also belongs to one of the oldest families of Preston County.

The Pierces first settled here at Evansville about 1780, more than 140 years ago. The first American ancestor of the name was a native of Ireland, where the family were Orangemen. This ancestor came to America about 1758, joining the Colony of Delaware, and some years later joined the American forces in the Revolutionary war, after which he settled in Virginia. It was the great-grandfather of Carleton C. Pierce, Samuel Pierce, who settled in Preston County in 1780. His son, Wesley Pierce, the great-grandfather, moved from there to Wood County, West Virginia, later moving to Ohio, where he died in 1877. His son, Jefferson Pierce, spent his active career as a farmer on the Kanawha River near Parkersburg, and at the time of the Civil war left his home to enter the Union Army and died while in service. Jefferson Pierce married Ellen Custer, an aunt of the distinguished Gen. George A. Custer, whose name is immortally associated with the Custer massacre of Montana. Jefferson Pierce and wife had three children: James L.; Mary E., wife of Jacob Cornell; and John F., who lost his life at a railroad crossing in Kingwood, West Virginia, on May 20, 1922.

John F. Pierce was born in Wood County, West Virginia, September 5, 1852. He spent his early life on a farm, and in 1872 moved to Preston County, where for nearly a quarter of a century he was in the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway Company. He was yardmaster at Rowlesburg when he left the railroad in 1896, and thereafter until recent years was in the lumber business, representing a Baltimore exporting firm. John F. Pierce married Amanda Elizabeth Moore, representing another old-time family of West Virginia. Her father, George D. Moore, of Newburg, was born in that locality, and had a large number of children by two marriages. The children of John F. Pierce and wife were: Frank R., in the automobile business at Rowlesburg; Carleton Custer; John A. L., who was killed in an automobile accident July 9, 1920, and Edna Estelle, who died at the age of four years.

Carleton C. Pierce was born at Rowlesburg, and there he laid the foundation of his education. He was also a student in Franklin College in Ohio, attended West Virginia University, and at the age of seventeen became a teacher. He taught four years, doing his last work in the grade schools at Rowlesburg. An interruption came to his teaching with the outbreak of the Spanish-American war in the spring of 1898. He joined Company H of the Second West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, under Capt. A. S. Hutson and Col. D. T. E. Casteel. The command trained at Charleston, West Virginia, and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and was at Greenville, South Carolina, when mustered out in the spring of 1899. Mr. Pierce went in as a private, was promoted to sergeant and first sergeant and came out with the rank of first lieutenant. He resumed teaching for a year, and then entered West Virginia University, where he secured his law diploma.

In 1902 Mr. Pierce located at Kingwood, and for a year was in the law office of Hon. W. G. Brown. He then established an office of his own, and in 1904 was elected prosecuting attorney of Preston County. Mr. Pierce resigned as prosecuting attorney in 1907 to accept the appointment from Governor Dawson as adjutant general of the National Guard. As chief officer of the state military organization he had the responsibility of rebuilding and reorganizing that department, and when he left the office he turned over to his successor an organization thoroughly infused with new life. Mr. Pierce then resumed his law practice at Kingwood, and has since been extending his enterprise into several departments of the state's industry. He helped organize the Little Capon Orchard Company and the Levels Orchard Company, and is financially interested in these corporations, owning and growing peaches on a quite extensive scale in Hampshire County. He is also a coal operator, having organized the Carleton Mining and Power Company, and is owner and proprietor of the St. George Lumber Company. Mr. Pierce is a stockholder in the Bank of Kingwood, is one of the directors of the Kingwood Water Company, and a director of the West Virginia and Maryland Power Company.

Mr. Pierce is a republican in politics, and his first presidential vote was cast for William McKinley. Besides the official service already mentioned he was elected in 1914 to the House of Delegates, serving under Speaker Vernon Johnson of Webster Springs. He was made chairman of the committee on agriculture and also a member of the judiciary and other committees. His noteworthy work in the Legislature was in behalf of agriculture, and he wrote and secured the passage of what is known as the "Crop Pest Law," also legislation regulating fertilizers and the pure seed bill. He is now president of the Board of Education of Kingwood District, Preston County, West Virginia.

Mr. Pierce is a past master of Kingwood Lodge of Masons and a member of West Virginia Consistory at Wheeling, and he and his family are Methodists. November 28, 1902, at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, he married Miss Mary Buckner, daughter of Jefferson M. and Jeanette M. (Golden) Buckner, of Rowlesburg, West Virginia. The Buckners are an old Virginia family that settled in Wood County and from there Jefferson M. Buckner settled in Preston County about 1872. A great-great uncle of Mrs. Pierce was Col. John Buckner, of Wood County, who was one of the men selected on the jury to try Aaron Burr for treason. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce have two sons: Carleton Custer, Jr., now in his last year in high school; and Oscar Buckner, also in the high school.

DAVID KENNEDY MASON became a county superintendent of schools for Preston County in 1918. He took to his office a wide experience and ample qualifications for constructive work in his new capacity. From the standpoint of a teacher and pupil he has been connected with Preston County schools for over a quarter of a century, and his enthusiasm, high ideals and his leadership have supplied the elements needed for a general advance along all fronts in the educational progress of the county.

Preston County has eight civil districts, comprising a total area of 684 square miles. In the matter of high schools the county now has facilities available to nearly every locality. There are seven first class and two second class high schools, with a teaching staff of sixty teachers. There are thirty graded schools of two or more rooms, and 125 one-room rural schools. These schools follow the course of study provided by the state and a supplementary course provided by County Superintendent Mason. All rural schools provide for graduation in the eighth grade, and a graduate from these schools is admitted upon his diploma to any high school of the state. In 1921 the scholarship enrollment in Preston County was 8,582, and the total number of teachers employed, 265. Five hundred of the students enrolled are in the high schools. There is but one school for colored children, and that is taught by a colored teacher. The disbursements for schools for all purposes for the year 1920-21 was $260,108. The total valuation of all school property in the county in 1920 was $23,373,178. The average wealth per child enumerated was $3,355.

Since Mr. Mason became county superintendent two new high schools have been established, one in the Union and one in the Grant District. This gives high school facilities for all the districts except Pleasant. School morale has also been greatly improved by the holding of community meetings, where educational topics are discussed between educators and the patrons of the schools, and much has been done to arouse a general interest in educational advancement. As previously mentioned, a county course of study has been prepared by Superintendent Mason.

David Kennedy Mason was born near Cranesville in Preston County, July 12, 1855. The founder of the family in this country was his great-grandfather, who came from England and established his home in Greene County, Pennsylvania. The grandfather was Joseph Mason, a Greene County farmer, who died there at the age of eighty-eight. He married a Miss Gettys, one of whose brothers was founder of the historic Town of Gettysburg, which was named in his honor.

John G. Mason, father of the county superintendent, was born in Greene County in August, 1855, grew up on the farm, attended common schools and Waynesburg Academy, and for about twenty-five years was successfully engaged in educational work. All but three years of this quarter of a century he taught in Preston County, West Virginia, where he located in 1883. After leaving the schoolroom he became a modest farmer, and died at his farm near Cranesville. John G. Mason married Malinda F. Kennedy, who died in February, 1903. She was a daughter of David Kennedy, who married a Miss Fordyce. John G. Mason and wife had only two children, Ella, wife of E. A. Kelly, of Keyser, West Virginia, and David K.

David K. Mason was a farmer's son, and the country schools gave him the foundation of his education. He lived at home, attended school and worked on the farm until sixteen, and then spent a year in the Fairmont State Normal School. He began teaching at sixteen, and was then one of the youngest teachers in Preston County. The following years he taught every winter and attended school in summer, spending two summers in the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg and three summers in the Ohio Northern University at Ada. He then began teaching in summer normal schools, and was an instructor at Egdon, Terra Alta and Kingwood, and thus had a part in the training of teachers for the county schools. Mr. Mason's first principalship was at Albright, where he remained four years, then at Aurora four years, and two years at Reedsville. In 1918 he was elected county superintendent to succeed Willis Fortney. Mr. Mason is a member of the West Virginia State Teachers Association, and in the June meeting of 1920 he presented an outline to the association advocating the advantages of junior high schools.

Another important direction of his influence upon the education of the young is his work in Sunday school. He is secretary and treasurer of the Preston County Sunday School Association. Mr. Mason is a Methodist, and in politics has always been a republican voter.

David K. Mason married in Preston County, June 5, 1913, Miss Virginia E. Auman, daughter of George M. Auman, of Terra Alta. Mrs. Mason for eight years before her marriage was one of the popular teachers of the county. She finished her own education in the Fairmont State Normal and in the University of Morgantown. Mr. and Mrs. Mason have two sons, Robert Kennedy and John William.

GEORGE W. HOGG. Among the personal forces that are energizing and setting new standards in the educational affairs of West Virginia today, it is only giving credit where credit is due to refer especially to George W. Hogg, present superintendent of the Kingwood schools, and whose work as an educator has been done in several counties and communities of the state. He possesses the inspiration of a born teacher, and has been active in school administration for twenty years.

Mr. Hogg was born in Brooke County October 21, 1876, and is a member of a very substantial family in the northern Panhandle. His grandfather was George Hogg, who located in Wheeling in 1819, coming from England with the Snowdens who located in Brownsville, Pennsylvania. He personally had charge of the large Snowden family, while Mr. Snowden himself traveled aboard the vessel as a stowaway, hiding from the officials of the English government which was then trying to prevent the immigration to the United States of manufacturing mechanics. George Hogg and Mr. Snowden were expert wagon makers. George Hogg established what subsequently became the Hogg Wagon Works of Wheeling, and made wagons for the cotton handlers of the South. He also acquired large tracts of land in Brooke County, and used this land for sheep growing, specializing in fine wool production. For a number of years he was one of the leading producers of prize wool in the state. George Hogg died and is buried in that county, at Kadesh Chapel. He married Sallie Stone Richards, of Boston, and they were the parents of three sons and a number of daughters.

One of the sons, George W. Hogg, Sr., was born in Brooke County in 1838, grew up on the farm, finished his education in the West Liberty State Normal School and in the Duff Business College at Pittsburgh. He was a farmer, a wool grower, also owned and operated a flour mill, and in all his activities he set an excellent example in his community. Lameness from boyhood prevented him from taking the field as a soldier during the Civil war, but he served as a member of the Home Guard. He was a republican, acted as deputy sheriff of his county, and was a member of the Methodist Church. George W. Hogg married Mary Amanda Wells, who was born at Beech Bottom in Brooke County, daughter of Jesse Wells. George W. Hogg, Sr., who died in March, 1918, was the father of two children, George W. and Mrs. George H. Crawford of Nunn, Colorado.

Professor George W. Hogg had his father's farm and business interests in Brooke County as his early environment. He attended country schools, graduated from the Wellsburg High School at the age of seventeen, attended Linsly Institute at Wheeling and spent a half year in West Virginia University. He then began teaching, and after three years as a teacher was elected county superintendent of Brooke County, beginning his term in 1903, as successor of Irvin Burge. While at the head of the county school system Mr. Hogg established the first rural school library in the county. His was a highly successful administration of eight years. In that time the expenditure for public education in the county rose from twenty-four thousand dollars to sixty-three thousand dollars annually, much of this being due to the erection of new and modern school buildings.

Clarius Kest

Among these new buildings were a graded school at Colliers, a graded school at Beech Bottom, grade and high school at Follansbee, while all the rural schools were provided with slate blackboards, and three new grade buildings and a new high school were erected in Wellsburg.

While county superintendent Mr. Hogg was a diligent student on his own account, and the year he left office he graduated from Bethany College with the A. B. degree.

Following his service in Brooke County Mr. Hogg was principal of the high school at Cairo in Ritchie County, and while there a bond issue was voted on and carried providing a fine district high school. The following year he became superintendent of schools at Salem, West Virginia, remaining there in 1912-14, and in that time a new school building was completed and domestic science and manual training courses were installed. The following year he was principal of the high school at Parsons, and then for four years was superintendent of schools at Clendenin. During Mr. Hogg's administration the basket ball team of Clendenin twice won the high school championship, the high school was raised to first class, also the additional service of a rural supervisor was secured.

From Clendenin Mr. Hogg came to Kingwood as superintendent in 1919. Early in his administration a new fireproof high school building was planned, and it was completed in 1922, at a cost of approximately a hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. In many respects the educational plant at Kingwood is now one of the very best in the state. The building stands on a nine acre tract of land, affording ample space for athletic field, and plot for agricultural demonstration work. One of the normal training high schools of the state is maintained there. A Smith-Hughes representative is connected with the school to supervise its agricultural work. This school has one of the finest gymnasiums in the state and one of the most commodious and beautiful auditoriums. Other equipment for advanced high school work include three science laboratories, facilities for teaching of household arts, and manual training shops. There is an electric time system all through the building.

Mr. Hogg while gaining a high reputation as a school administrator has never ceased to be a student, has worked privately and in summer sessions, and is a candidate for the Master's degree at the State University. He is a Master Mason, a Methodist, and a republican, having cast his first vote for Major McKinley.

At Ravenswood, West Virginia, September 5, 1907, he married Miss Sena Morgan, daughter of F. A. Morgan and a descendant of the distinguished West Virginia pioneer, Morgan Morgan. F. A. Morgan married Margaret Snodgrass, and their children were: C. R. and F. B. Morgan, of Charleston, the former junior partner in the firm of Darst & Morgan, and the latter a lawyer in the capital city; Mrs. Hogg; and M. F., who is a soil chemist in the Department of Agriculture in Ohio State University. Mr. and Mrs. Hogg have an interesting family: Margaret Amanda, Ralph G., Mary Louise and Frances Morgan Hogg.

SIMON M. LEVINSTEIN has been engaged in business at Buckhannon, Upshur County, since 1899, and from a modest inception has built up one of the large and well appointed retail mercantile establishments of this city. Honorable policies and effective service have gained to him the confidence of the local public, and he has distinct place among the progressive citizens of Buckhannon.

Mr. Levinstein was born in Russia, in May, 1872, and is a son of Lewis and Bertha Levinstein. The early educational advantages of Simon M. Levinstein included those of an excellent private school in his native land, and he was a self-reliant and ambitious youth of sixteen years when he came to the United States and made the City of Baltimore his destination. Like many others who have achieved success in mercantile enterprise, he initiated his activities at this line by engaging in the selling of goods as a peddler, his commodities being carried in a pack on his back. It was in this way that he made his first visit to Upshur County, West Virginia, and he continued his activities as a peddler for five years. He then opened a small store at Hyattsville, Maryland, a village six miles distant from Washington, D.C., and five years later he sold his stock and business at that place and, in September, 1899, opened a modest stock of goods in a small store room at Buckhannon, West Virginia. With the gradual expansion of his trade he removed to larger quarters, which still later required the addition of an adjoining room, and after there continuing his prosperous enterprise eleven years he removed to his present modern and well equipped establishment, in which he utilizes four sales and stock rooms and conducts a large business in the sale of ready-to-wear apparel for men and women. Mr. Levinstein has become one of the substantial business men of the city and is a stockholder in the Buckhannon Bank, besides having other capitalistic interests of local order. He is owner of one-half interest in the building adjacent to that in which his business is established, and has other real estate, both in Buckhannon and at Gassaway.

Mr. Levinstein is a valued member of the Buckhannon Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club, besides holding membership in the local County Club. He is a republican in politics, and he and his wife retain membership in one of the leading Jewish synagogues in the City of Baltimore, Maryland. He is affiliated with the B'nai B'rith; with Franklin Lodge No. 7, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Upshur Chapter of Royal Arch Masons; and with the local organizations of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, and Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 22d of February, 1903, Mr. Levinstein wedded Miss Ida Rappeport, and they have four children: Morton, Leon, Eli and Bernice. The two older sons are, in 1921, students in the Buckhannon High School.

OLANDUS WEST. A native of Harrison County, it is the score of years since he established his home in Clarksburg that mark Olandus West as one of the men of achievement in this section of West Virginia. In that time he has been permanently identified with the production of oil and natural gas, is an official in several coal companies, and his name is connected in a vital way with the business and civic progress and prosperity of his home city and county.

He was born November 28, 1871, and was reared at the old homestead farm near McWhorter in Harrison County. His parents, William Marshall West and Hannah A. (Davis) West, were born and reared in the same county and spent all their lives there, the father dying at the age of sixty-nine and the mother at fifty-five. William M. West was a son of Eli R. and Malinda West, while Hannah A. (Davis) was a daughter of Isaac and Frances Davis. Both these families were early settlers in Harrison County. The four children of William M. West and wife were Araminta L., Mary F., Owen A. and Olandus.

Olandus West acquired a public school education, finishing in West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, of which college he is now a trustee. He spent some years as a teacher in the schools of his native district. He also served as president of the board of education for a term of four years. From teaching he went into the insurance and real estate business, and in 1902 located at Clarksburg.

Soon afterward he became interested in the development of oil and gas, and soon became recognized as one of the most successful independent operators in his part of the state. He was the founder of the Vesper Oil and Gas Company and its president until he and his associates sold the corporation in 1920. He is also head of several other successful oil and gas corporations, and is still an operator on his own account.

In the coal industry his active connections are as president of the Peacock Coal Company and vice president of the Fairmont Big Vein Coal Company. Other important business enterprises that have sought his co-operation are the Clarksburg Trust Company, the Clarksburg Wholesale Company, The Eagle Convex Glass Specialty Company, in all of which he is vice president, and he is a director in the Le-Flore Glass Company and the Jackson Stone Company.

The political convictions of Mr. West have found expression in effective service in behalf of the cause of the democratic party. He has been chairman of the Harrison County Democratic Committee, and served as chairman of the Harrison County Chapter of the American Red Cross, of which he still continues a director. He is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In 1906 Mr. West married Miss Alma McWhorter, daughter of John McWhorter, a well known citizen of Harrison County. Mr. and Mrs. West have no children.

C. K. McCALLY is secretary, treasurer and general manager of the Outright-Sharps Company, which has built up a prosperous industrial enterprise in the manufacturing of window-shade rollers and similar products, its modern plant being established in the City of Buckhannon, Upshur County.

Mr. McCally was born in Shelby County, Ohio, August 29, 1869, and is a son of William C. and Margery (McKercher) McCally, both natives of Auglaize County, that state, where the former was born November 19, 1844, and the latter on the 12th of March of the same year. The father was reared on the home farm of his parents, received the advantages of the common schools of the locality and period, and was but sixteen years old when his youthful patriotism led him to enlist in Company B, Twentieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, with which he served until the close of the Civil war. Mr. McCally was twice wounded, and was held as a Confederate prisoner of war in the odious Andersonville Prison for five months. After the war he returned to his native county, and later engaged in farming and road contracting in Shelby County. Both he and his wife are zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His political support has been given to the republican party, and he served as commander of his post of the Grand Army of the Republic. Of the four children born to Mr. and Mrs. McCally the subject of this sketch is the second in order of birth; E. D. is associated with the Kansas Oil Well Supply Company of Fort Worth, Texas, in the capacity of field manager; Effie A., who became the wife of William A. Mardrie, is deceased; and Olive G., of Sidney, Ohio.

C. K. McCally passed his childhood and early youth on the old home farm in Shelby County, Ohio, and continued his studies in the public schools until his graduation in the high school. Thereafter he completed a course in the Tri-State College at Angola, Indiana, in which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then returned to his native county and engaged in teaching in the public schools, his continued pedagogic service having included his tenure of the position of principal of the high school at Wapakoneta, Ohio, one year, and two years' incumbency of the position of superintendent of the public schools of Fremont, Indiana. Thereafter he was engaged in teaching in Ohio until he came to West Virginia, where for seventeen years he was traveling salesman for the Ruhl-Kohleg Company, with which corporation he later became associated. For ten years Mr. McCally was engaged in the general merchandise business at Pickens, Randolph County, and he has been actively identified with the coal and lumber industries in this state, in which his operations have been signally prosperous. His varied business experience and his executive ability have come effectively into play in the developing of the important manufacturing enterprise with which he is now identified at Buckhannon.

Mr. McCally is a republican, is affiliated with the Masonic Fraternity, both he and his sons being members of Franklin Lodge No. 7, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Buckhannon, and he and his wife are members of the Methodist Church.

August 15, 1895, recorded the marriage of Mr. McCally and Miss Carrie C. Cole, of Steuben County, Indiana. Mrs. McCally is a graduate of DePauw University at Greencastle, Indiana, and prior to her marriage had been a successful teacher at Angola, that state. Her father, Major William H. Cole, enlisted as a private in an Indiana regiment at the inception of the Civil war and rose to the rank of major. Mr. and Mrs. McCally have one son, William C., who was born December 27, 1898, and who graduated from West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, he being now (1921) a junior in the Western Reserve Medical College in the City of Cleveland, Ohio. He was a leader in athletic affairs at the West Virginia Wesleyan College, and is popular and prominent in the student circles of the medical school. He was for five months in service in the United States Army in the World war period, gained the rank of second lieutenant, and for a time was an instructor in military tactics.

DANIEL L. LARUE has been a vigorous factor in the commercial enterprise of Grafton for the past twenty years. In that time he has improved his opportunity and advanced himself from driver for an express company to the proprietorship of the Excelsior Mantel Company, owns a fine plant for the manufacture of sash, doors and interior finish, and is a wholesaler and retailer of lumber and builders' supplies.

He was born on a Taylor County farm, but close to the line of Preston County, April 26, 1884. His grandfather was William Larue, a first cousin of Rolando and Hiram Larue, venerable business men of Kingwood and Independence, respectively. Scott Larue, father of the Grafton business man, was a native of Preston County, and for many years conducted his farm five miles east of Independence and also carried on coal mining. He died in 1903, at the age of fifty-six. His wife, Lutitia Wolfe, represented one of the oldest families of Preston County, being a daughter of Eugenius Wolfe. She is still living on a farm near Newburg. Of her eleven children mention is made as follows: Ida, now deceased; Annie, wife of Clarence Chidester, of Newburg; Daniel Lyman; Gilbert, of Newburg; William E., Oscar, Leland and a twin sister; Lora, of Fellowsville; Mrs. Cora McDaniel, of Newburg; and Effie.

Daniel L. Larue grew up on Maple Run in Taylor County and was a farm boy until past his eighteenth birthday. He was educated in the public schools, and after coming to Grafton in 1902 he spent a year in the service of the express company as delivery man. He then transferred to the service of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, first as shipping clerk, and then as M. & W. storekeeper. During the eight years he was in the railroad company's service he saved his wages, paid for a home, and accumulated a very modest capital to start him in business for himself. This was the buying and selling of wood mantels. At the start he rented a space 15 by 40 feet from the Grafton Feed and Storage Company, but in time he took over an entire four-story building, 80 by 100 feet, on Latrobe Street. In this was installed the machinery for the manufacture of mantels, sash and doors interior finish and others builders' supplies. Five years later he moved to his present quarters at 8 Latrobe Street where he occupies a five-story building with thirty-five thousand square feet of space. At 914 Main and 930 Main he also has lumberyards, and his facilities are now adequate for all branches of his manufacturing, wholesale and retail business. He carries everything needed for the construction of a building from foundation to gable, including paints and Reznor stoves. Among important contracts for which he has furnished materials were those for the erection of the Newburg High School, the J. N. Building at Fairmont and high schools at Baricksville and Bridgeport, the fair ground at Clarksburg, the Adamsen High School, and the Jacksonville, Smithfield, Littleton and Middlebourne High Schools. At the start Mr. Larue had only three employees. In January, 1922, perhaps the lowest point in a dull period, his force of helpers numbered twenty-four.

Mr. Larue is also a stockholder and director in the Southern Window Glass Company of Grafton, and has an interest in a similar industry at Wheeling. He is an influential member of the Chamber of Commerce, is a republican, and outside of home and business has cultivated few interests. In Taylor County, October 6, 1906, he married Miss Fonda Ford, daughter of W. P. and Jane (Smith) Ford. She was born at West Union, West Virginia, and finished her education in the college at Salem, this state. Mr. and Mrs. Larue have two sons, Ralph and Donald.

STANLEY B. WILSON is one of the prominent young attorneys of the Wheeling bar, where since the close of the great war he has succeeded in building up a fine practice and a clientele representative of some of the best interests in that city and vicinity. Mr. Wilson is an ex-service man.

Ashton Hill

and went into the army shortly after he was admitted to the bar.

He was born at Glendale, West Virginia, March 8, 1890. His father is Isaac B. Wilson, who was born in 1859 at Glen Easton, West Virginia, was reared there, was married, and has since resided at Moundsville, where for many years he has conducted a successful musical merchandise store. He is a republican in politics, is a trustee and supporting member of the Episcopal Church and is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Isaac B. Wilson married Lilly Newman, who was born at Glendale, West Virginia, in 1865 and died at Moundsville in 1897. Her father, Lewis Newman, was born in Virginia in 1825, as a young man removed to Glendale, and conducted his farming operations on an extensive scale. He died at Glendale in 1912. He was the leading democrat in his section of the state. Lewis Newman married Clementine Pickett, who was born in 1830 and died at Glendale in 1912. Mrs. Isaac B. Wilson was one of their nine children.

Only child of his parents, Stanley B. Wilson grew up at Moundsville, attended public school there, and after graduating from the high school in 1909 entered West Virginia University, receiving his A. B. degree in 1914 and graduating at the head of his law class in 1916. He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi college fraternity and belonged to several of the honorary societies at the university. Mr. Wilson practiced law at Moundsville with J. Howard Holt from 1916 until he entered the First Officers' Training Camp in May, 1917, at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis. He was commissioned a second lieutenant, and in August, 1917, was transferred to Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio, where he was made a first lieutenant and later promoted to captain. In June, 1918, Captain Wilson went overseas with the 13rd Division, and was on duty in the Argonne sector and he operations in the Meuse. After the armistice he was transferred to the Thirty-second Division with the Army of Occupation, and was in Germany from November, 1918, until April, 1919. He returned home and was mustered out at Camp Sherman in June, 1919.

Soon afterward Captain Wilson established his law offices at Wheeling, and engaged in a general civil practice. His offices are in the Wheeling Steel Corporation Building. Captain Wilson, who is unmarried, is a member of the Episcopal Church, is affiliated with Moundsville Lodge No. 282 Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, is a member of the County and State Bar Associations, and belongs to the Fort Henry Club, the Wheeling Club and the University Club of Wheeling.

ASHTON FILE. As a strong and active member of the Beckley bar during the last twenty years, Ashton File yields no influence in his community that only men of marked strength of character and ability can exercise in a progressive community where competitive genius points the way and sets the mark of progress. He has been a witness to and participated in the rapid development of this great coal mining section of the state where he is justly looked upon as a leading citizen and lawyer.

Mr. File is the fourth child in a family of nine children and was born on a farm in Buckingham County, Virginia January 3rd, 1879, and is a son of Ashton and Elvira (Tucker) File. Ashton File, Sr., is a son of William and Sarah (West) File and was born at Barham, County Kent, England, in 1846 and came to America in 1869, locating in Prince Edward County, Virginia, where his wife was born December 1, 1848. They were married December 26th, 1871, and in 1872 removed to Buckingham County, where they have since resided with the exception of about four years spent in Chesterfield County. Mrs. File is a daughter of Henry Tucker and Louisa A. (McGehee) Tucker. Henry Tucker is a son of Joseph and Christiana Tucker and was born in Prince Edward County, Virginia, September 10, 1797.

Ashton File received his early education in the public schools of Virginia and worked on his father's farm until twenty years of age, when he came to West Virginia and entered the office of his uncle, Henry J. Tucker, of Mount Hope, Fayette County, who was then a lawyer, but who, previous to entering the legal profession, had had a wide experience as a civil and mining engineer and had been state mine inspector during governor Wilson's administration. There Mr. File learned land surveying and read law, following which he attended the law school at West Virginia University, from which department he graduated as a member of the class of June, 1901, and was admitted to the bar in Fayette County, in September, following. For the first few years following his admission to the bar, the greater part of his time was spent in land surveying and in that way accumulated a sufficient competence to establish and maintain a moderate law office and keep the wolf from the door during the first years of his practice. In the spring of 1902 he removed to Beckley and formed a law partnership with Thomas K. Laing, who had been his class mate. This partnership was dissolved in 1907, and Mr. File formed a partnership with his brother William H. File, which continued for ten years and was dissolved, and since that time he has followed his profession independently.

In recent years Mr. File has devoted himself to land and corporation law, in which he has a large and lucrative practice. He is a member of the Raleigh County Bar Association, the West Virginia Bar Association, and the American Bar Association. He is a democrat and a member of the Presbyterian church—Mason and Elk.

On June 14th, 1911, Mr. File was united in marriage with Miss Frances Nancy Wiggin, daughter of Henry Dwight and Mary (Strutevant) Wiggin, of West Newton, Massachusetts. They have two children, Dwight Ashton and Mary Frances.

ERWYN ALBERT SMITH for a quarter of a century has had increasing responsibilities in the management of the primary industry at Hartford, the Liverpool Salt & Coal Company, Incorporated, of which he is now general manager. This is one of the industries contributing to West Virginia's large production of salt.

The owner of the industry is Albert Edward Smith of Cincinnati. He was born at Sunderland, Massachusetts, September 2, 1843, but from early childhood has lived at Cincinnati. He graduated from Oberlin College of Ohio, and for a number of years was a Cincinnati pork packer. His interests subsequently took a wide range, and for some years he was a commission broker in handling salt. In 1880 he began the manufacture of salt at both Hartford and Mason City, West Virginia, but a number of years later sold the latter plant. The Hartford business is the Liverpool Salt and Coal Company, Incorporated, and the plant is in Valley City, a portion of Hartford. About 125 persons find employment in this local industry. The salt brine is pumped from the ground and refined, the plant having a capacity of 300 barrels per day. The corporation also owns and conducts a coal mine, and Albert E. Smith is president of the Jackson Coal Mining Company of Hartford. He is one of the big business men of Cincinnati, where he owns a large amount of real estate. In politics he is a republican, and is a member of the Baptist Church and the Masonic fraternity. Albert Edward Smith married at Cincinnati Harriet L. Ferris, who was born in that city September 20, 1847. Their family consists of the following children: Fannie, wife of George B. Goodhart, an attorney at Cincinnati; Horace F., secretary and treasurer of the Liverpool Salt & Coal Company, living at Hartford, West Virginia; Clara May, who died at Cincinnati in 1898, wife of Dr. C. Davis, a physician and surgeon; Erwyn Albert; H. Raymond, who is in the insurance business at Cincinnati.

Erwyn Albert Smith was born in Cincinnati February 26, 1876. He graduated from the Cincinnati High School in 1896, and soon afterward came to Hartford, West Virginia, and has been continuously identified in some capacity or other with the Liverpool Salt & Coal Company. For a number of years he has been general manager of this corporation, and has full direction of its affairs.

Mr. Smith regards himself as a permanent fixture in this section of West Virginia, and has interested himself in local affairs. For several terms he was a member of the Hartford School Board, has a modern home in Hartford, is a republican, a past master of Clifton Lodge No. 23, F. and A. M., at Mason City, a member of Point Pleasant Chapter No.

7, R. A. M., a charter member of Point Pleasant Commandery No. 17, K. T., a member of Beni-Kedem Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston, West Virginia Consistory No. 1 of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling, a past chancellor of Banner Lodge No. 22, Knights of Pythias, at Hartford, and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. During the war he was deeply interested in the success of all local drives for the sale of Liberty Loan bonds and the Red Cross and other causes.

In 1899, at Cincinnati, Mr. Smith married Miss Bettie Smith, daughter of L. H. and Alice (Marsh) Smith. Mrs. Smith is a graduate of the Kentucky College of Music and art at Newport, and is a skilled elocutionist. Three children were born to their marriage: Albert Donald, born September 9, 1900, is a junior in the Ohio State University at Columbus and is also taking military training there. Dorothy Marsh, born November 22, 1901, is in the first year at Dennison University at Greenville, Ohio. Ferris, born November 26, 1903, is in the senior class of the Pomeroy High School.

J. CRAIG MILLER, president of the Miller Supply Company, one of the important concerns lending to the industrial and commercial precedence of the City of Huntington, was born in the City of Minneapolis, Minnesota, August 24, 1858, a date that indicates conclusively that he is a representative of a pioneer family of that commonwealth. His paternal grandfather, Gen. Thomas Craig Miller, was born near Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, and was one of the old-time ironmasters of the Keystone State, where he was concerned in the operation of charcoal furnaces, besides which he was the owner of fine farm property near Gettysburg, where he was residing at the time of his death, he having been a man of wealth and influence and his having been gallant service as a soldier and officer in the Mexican war, in which he was a general in the command of Gen. Winfield Scott. His wife, whose maiden name was Margaret MacGinley, was a representative of another of the old and influential families of Pennsylvania, in which state she passed her entire life. General Miller was a son of William Miller, who passed his entire life in the vicinity of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, the Village of Millerstown, now known as Fairfield, having been named in honor of this pioneer family. William Miller served as an officer in the Patriot Army in the War of the Revolution. A stone wall on his old homestead farm was the stage of the historic charge made by the forces of General Pickett in the battle of Gettysburg, one of the greatest in the Civil war.

Capt. Matthew A. Miller, father of him whose name introduces this review, was born on the old homestead near Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, December 16, 1832, and his death occurred at Richmond, Virginia, December 16, 1906, on his seventy-fourth birthday anniversary. As a skilled civil engineer his activities were carried on in many different parts of the United States prior to the Civil war, and in connection with that conflict he served in support of the cause of the Confederacy as a member of an engineering corps. He laid out the fortifications at Shiloh, but the most of his service was west of the Mississippi River. After the close of the war he established his residence at Staunton, Virginia, and became a real-estate or right-of-way representative of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. Later he settled on his farm in Albemarle County, that state, adjacent to the City of Richmond, and there his death occurred. For sixteen years, as a civil and mining engineer, he was engaged in buying coal lands for what is now the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company. He was a democrat, was an elder in the Presbyterian Church, of which his wife likewise was a devoted member, and he completed the circle of the York Rite in the Masonic fraternity. Captain Miller married Miss Matilda Fechtig, who was born at Hagerstown, Maryland, in 1833, and who died at Bramwell, West Virginia, in 1903. Of their children the eldest is Fannie, who now resides on the old homestead of her parents near Richmond, Virginia, she being the widow of William R. Vawter, who was a farmer in Monroe County, that state; J. Craig, of this review, was the next in order of birth;

William H., a civil engineer, died at Bramwell, West Virginia, in 1901.

J. Craig Miller was a child at the time when the family home was established at Staunton, Virginia, and there he attended the public schools, his studies having later been continued in the city schools of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. On the 4th of July, 1880, he graduated from the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, with the degree of Civil Engineer. For a year thereafter he was identified with construction work on the line of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, between Richmond and Newport News, Virginia. He next became a civil engineer in the service of the Denver, Rio Grande & Western Railroad, with headquarters at Salt Lake City, and in this connection he also did original exploration in the Grand Canyon of Arizona. For one year he was in the office of the city engineer of Denver, and the next year found him again with the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, with headquarters at Richmond, Virginia. Thereafter he was associated with his father in the buying and surveying of coal lands for the present Norfolk & Western Railroad until January 1, 1890, when he became chief engineer and general superintendent of the Guyandot Coal Land Association, with headquarters first at Huntington, West Virginia, and later at Louisville, Kentucky. After the building of the Norfolk & Western Railroad line into the coal fields of West Virginia he had charge of 200,000 acres of coal land, with headquarters at Dunlow, Wayne County. He retained this position until March 1, 1897, when he established the Miller Supply Company, of which he has since continued the president. The functions of this corporation are in the distributing, as jobbers, of mining, mill and electrical supplies, contractors' equipment, etc., as representatives of large manufacturing concerns, the trade of the company extending throughout the coal districts of West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky and Southern Ohio. The offices and warehouse in the City of Huntington are at 742 Third Avenue, J. Craig Miller, Jr., being vice president of the company and William J. Harvey, its secretary and treasurer. Under the vigorous and able management of Mr. Miller the business has been developed into the largest of its kind between Pittsburgh and New Orleans. Mr. Miller is also chairman of the Board of Directors of the Bluefield Supply Company, and is a stockholder in several coal-mining companies, besides being the individual owner of valuable coal lands in West Virginia and Kentucky. He is independent in politics, has been for twenty-five years a deacon in the Presbyterian Church, is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and the Elks, is a charter member of the Guyandot Club and a member of the Guyan Country Club, and at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifteenth Street he owns and occupies one of the fine residences of Huntington.

December 18, 1889, recorded, at Picquenoeque, Virginia, the marriage of Mr. Miller and Miss Sallie Rutherford Tinsley, daughter of James G. and Pattie (Jones) Tinsley both now deceased, Mr. Tinsley having been one of the incorporators of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have three children: Pattie is the wife of Charles S. Porter, of Huntington, who is connected with the Miller Supply Company; Sallie R. is the wife of John R. Bennett who is in the credit department of the Miller Supply Company and who was in active service in France one year in connection with the World war. J. Craig, Jr., who is vice-president of the Miller Supply Company and who also has coal-mining interests, graduated in his father's alma mater, the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, in 1916. When the nation became involved in the World war he entered the First Officers Training Camp, thereafter passing two terms in the engineering corps at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he was commissioned a second lieutenant of engineers. He passed one year in France, as second lieutenant of Company E, Second Division, American Expeditionary Forces, and took part in the major engagements at Verdun and Chateau Thierry. For his gallant exploit in entering woods under heavy fire and rescuing two wounded members of his platoon he was awarded the distinguished-service cross.

HENRY CREED FERGUSON, who recently retired from eight years service as prosecuting attorney of Roane County has been a member of the West Virginia bar over twenty years, carries on an extensive practice at Spencer, and is one of the men of real leadership in that section of the State.

Creed Ferguson was born at Ripley in Jackson County, West Virginia, June 21, 1874. His grandfather Joseph Ferguson was born near Belfast, County Antrim, Ireland, in 1820, and as a youth came to America. He went back to Ireland, married, and then brought his bride across the ocean and settled in New York state. He was a stone mason by trade. For a short time he followed his trade at Cleveland, Ohio, and about 1850 came to Jackson County, West Virginia, where he bought a farm and followed agriculture as his main occupation the rest of his days. He died near Ripley in 1890. In later years he voted the republican ticket and though reared a Presbyterian, in the absence of a church of that denomination in Jackson County he worshipped with the United Brethren people. His first wife Miss Cameron was born in County Antrim and her two children were born in New York state. She died in Cleveland. Her children were: James; and Isabelle who died in Jackson County, wife of Andrew Hamilton Boone, who served as a Union soldier the last two years of the Civil war and is now a retired farmer in Mason County, West Virginia. Joseph Ferguson married for his second wife, Grace Vauden a native of Exeter, England, who died near Ripley, West Virginia. The children of this union were: Mary, wife of Sylvester Barnhart of East Liverpool, Ohio; Alexander, a farmer who died near Ripley; William, a retired farmer at Columbus, Ohio; Elizabeth who died near Ripley, wife of George W. Stone, a farmer in that section; Agnes, wife of Joseph Mahon; John; and Armour, assistant cashier of the Peoples Bank at Ripley.

James Ferguson, father of Creed Ferguson, was born in New York state May 8, 1847, and from about three years of age was reared in Jackson County, West Virginia, where during his active life he conducted a farm on a successful scale. He was a leader in his community, a republican, was justice of the peace of Union District two terms, and two terms president of the Board of Education of Union District. He was affiliated with the United Brethren Church and a member of the Odd Fellows. He died near Cottageville in Jackson County in 1901. In that county he married Virginia Price, who was born in Roane County November 10, 1855, and is now living in Clay County, West Virginia. Creed Ferguson is the oldest of her children; Joseph H. is a physician and surgeon at Middlebourne, Tyler County; Dorma is the wife of Melvin McIntyre, a farmer and oil field worker living near Angerona, Jackson County; Rhoda is the wife of Howard Keith, a locomotive engineer living in Clay County; Clara is the wife of Theodore Holcomb a farmer living in Clay County; Lawrence John, volunteered in July, 1917, was commissioned a first lieutenant, saw service in the various encampments in the United States, for a time was personnel officer at Fort Benjamin Harrison, and subsequently has been with the regular United States army as military instructor of officers training camps in the educational institutions and is now assistant professor in military tactics at the University of California at Berkeley, with the rank of first lieutenant. Jessie is the wife of Lockney Keith, a conductor with the Short Line Railroad living in Clay County, West Virginia; Marshall lives with his mother in Clay County and is now a student in the Charleston Commercial College.

Creed Ferguson grew up on a farm, attended the rural schools of Jackson County and select schools at Ripley, spent one semester during 1892 in the Fairmont State Normal School, and at the age of seventeen began teaching. For eight years altogether he was a teacher in the rural district of Jackson County, and for two years was a teacher in the public schools of Ripley and four years in the schools of Fairmont. In the meantime he was studying law in the University of West Virginia where he graduated LL. B. in 1898. Mr. Ferguson located at Spencer in 1908, and since then so far as his official duties have permitted has carried on an extensive general civil and criminal practice, his offices being on Church Street. While a resident of Jackson County he served one year as County Surveyor. From January 1, 1909, to January 1, 1913, he was assistant prosecuting attorney of Roane County and was then elected and served as prosecuting attorney two terms, from January 1, 1913, to January 1, 1921. He is a republican and has a number of interests of a civic and business nature. He is secretary of the Spencer City Oil Company. He is a member of the State Bar Association, is a trustee and president of the official board of the Methodist Episcopal Church and for two years was secretary of Union Lodge No. 128 Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Cottageville. During the war he was a member of the Legal Advisory Board of Roane County, one of the Four Minute Speakers Bureau, and went all over the county building up patriotic sentiment and gaining support for the various loans and other drives.

In 1904 near Ripley he married Miss Anna Staats, daughter of George W. and Diana (Waugh) Staats, the latter now deceased. Her father is a retired farmer at Parkersburg. The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, George, died at the age of one year, eight months.

WALTER D. DAVIDSON. In a thriving and prosperous city where many interests meet and clash and supremacy at the best of times is maintained only through the exercise of unusual business ability, importance attaches to those whose foresight and good judgment, supplemented by experienced trade knowledge, enable them to guide safely great enterprises through the shoals when there are unsettled commercial conditions of unusual gravity. By no means all of the business ventures entered into at Huntington during recent years can be located at the present time, although many started with far better prospects than did the Walter D. Davidson Furniture Company, but the modest beginning of the latter concern was substantially developed and carefully nurtured and has become one of the city's business enterprises of solidity and permanence.

Walter D. Davidson, the president of this concern, who also holds the controlling interest therein, was born at South Point, Lawrence County, Ohio, January 21, 1883, and is a son of Emanuel and Emma (Lackey) Davidson. The Davidson family had its origin in the neighborhood of Edinburg, Scotland, whence it was transplanted to America in Colonial times, the first immigrant of this branch of the name locating in Pennsylvania. In that state was born the grandfather of Walter D. Davidson, Joseph Davidson, who became a pioneer into South Point, Ohio, a large landholder and boat owner, and one of the first steamboat men. He died at South Point, where his wife passed away in 1889. She had been Miss Jane Bryson, born in the State of Kentucky in 1804.

Emanuel Davidson was born October 8, 1832, at South Point, Ohio, and there passed his entire life, dying April 4, 1912. He was a leading merchant at that place and an influential republican. During the Civil war he served in the capacity of postmaster, and also owned and operated a ferry running between West Virginia Point, West Virginia, Catlettsburg, Kentucky, and South Point, Ohio, which was utilized during the struggle between the North and the South in ferrying Union troops. Mr. Davidson was a devout churchman and a strong supporter of the Baptist Church. He held membership over fifty years in the Masonic Order. Mr. Davidson married Miss Emma Lackey, who was born December 2, 1845, in Nicholas County, Kentucky, and now survives him as a resident of South Point, Ohio. They became the parents of five children, namely: Albert H., who is a merchandise broker of Huntington; Vernon, a buyer and director for Anderson Brothers Company department store of Portsmouth, Ohio; Virginia Lee, the wife of Howard A. Lawrence, who is engaged in the insurance business at Huntington; Leslie H., manager for the Steinway Piano Company at Dayton, Ohio; and Walter D., of this record.

Walter D. Davidson attended the public schools of South Point and Portsmouth, Ohio, until he was eighteen years of age, at which time he became a traveling salesman for the Ypsilanti Furniture Company of Ionia, Michigan, covering every large city in the United States. He spent the period from 1910 to 1919 in New York City as the eastern manager of this concern, and with this experience came to Huntington in January, 1919, and bought out the wholesale and retail furniture business of J. C. Carter & Company, which had been established in 1890 and which is now the oldest and leading furniture enterprise at Huntington, being situated at 922-24 Fourth Avenue. The company is incorporated under the name of the Walter D. Davidson Furniture Company, Mr. Davidson being president and holding the controlling interest. He has built up not only a large and prosperous enterprise but a reputation for integrity and honorable dealing that gives him the full confidence of his associates in the business world.

Mr. Davidson is president of the Huntington Business Men's Association. A vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, a member of the executive committee of the United States Retail Furniture Association, and a director in the Tri-State Fair Association, in addition to which he belongs to the Kiwanis Club, the Guyardot Club and the Guyan Country Club. He owns a modern residence at 201 Fifth Avenue, a comfortable home in a desirable residential district. During the World war, Mr. Davidson supervised the making of aeroplane seats while in New York City, and his company handled large contracts from the Wright Brothers and others.

In 1912, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, Mr. Davidson was united in marriage with Miss Agnes Marion Pitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Pitch, the latter deceased and the former a furniture man of Grand Rapids. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson are the parents of one child; Emily Josephine, who was born at New York City, August 12, 1917.

JAMES A. HUGHES. Life seems to shower upon some men distinction of magnitude, and yet it is but seldom that such honors come to the undeserving. An individual must be worthy before he is singled out from his associates for advancement, and he is required to maintain that same high standard to retain what he has already gained. Especially is this true with reference to the promotions in public life, where real ability secured its rewards and a lack of it is readily recognizable. In the case of James A. Hughes, one of Huntington's foremost citizens, while the awards have been numerous, all have been deserved. Mr. Hughes has been the architect of his own fortunes, for he has been compelled to tread the hard, self-made pathway to success, and his career as business man and public servant has been one warranting the high confidence and esteem in which he is universally held.

Mr. Hughes was born at Corunna, Canada, February 27, 1861, a son of James W. and Ellen (McNulty) Hughes. His father, born in County Mayo, Ireland, September 10, 1833, was reared and married in his native land, where he was a teacher in the rural schools, and in 1852 came to America, settling first at Corunna, province of Ontario, Canada, where he became a general merchant. In 1871 he came to the United States, settling in Wayne County, West Virginia, where he farmed one year, and then went to Ashland, Kentucky, where he was general railroad agent for the Ashland Coal and Railway Company for three years. His next location was Star Furnace, Kentucky, where he continued ten years as general superintendent of large coal operations, and in 1894 came to Huntington and embarked in the flour milling business for a time. He received the appointment as postmaster of Huntington, and after serving in that capacity for fourteen years retired from active life and lived quietly until going to his final rest, June 10, 1920. He was a republican, and held offices in both Canada and the United States. He belonged to the Episcopal Church, of which he was a strong and generous supporter. Mr. Hughes married Miss Ellen McNulty, who was born in 1839, in County Mayo, Ireland, and died at Huntington in 1913. They were the parents of seven children, as follows: Will, a telegraph operator, who died at the age of twenty-two years at Bellaire, Ohio; Louise, who died at the age of twenty-one years; John, who is secretary of the Ashland Steel Company at Ashland, Kentucky; Ed, who was county court clerk of Boyd County, Kentucky, and died at Catlettsburg, that state, aged forty-two years; Arthur M., a wholesale grocer of Louise, Kentucky; and Douglas E., who was secretary to his brother James A. when the latter was a member of Congress, and who died at Winfield, West Virginia, aged thirty-five years.

James A. Hughes attended the public schools of Corunna, Ontario, Canada, for two terms of three months each, that being the limit of his instruction received in an institution of learning. However, he has acquired an excellent education through study, much reading, close observation and mingling with people of education and culture, and is today a well-informed man on all practical subjects. When he was but ten years of age he entered the Ashland National Bank of Ashland, Kentucky, as an errand boy, a position which he filled for three years, and then secured employment in a country store at Geigerville, Kentucky, remaining seven years. Mr. Hughes was then attracted to railroading, and obtained first the post of conductor and later that of trainmaster on the Ashland Coal and Iron Railway, where he remained two years, his next experience being gained as a traveling salesman, work which he followed a like period. In 1884 he went to Louisa, Kentucky, where he was engaged in a general mercantile and lumber business until 1890, at that time removing to Ceredo, West Virginia, remaining in the lumber business, while next he followed a wholesale business for ten years. He then came to Huntington and engaged in a general contracting and timber business until elected a member of Congress.

Mr. Hughes' career as a public man had commenced in 1888, when he was elected to the State Legislature in Kentucky, serving two years and representing Boyd and Lawrence counties. In 1894 he was elected to the State Senate of West Virginia, representing Wayne, Cabell and Putnam counties, and served in the sessions of 1894 and 1896. In 1897 he was made postmaster of Huntington, an office which he filled until 1900, when he was sent to the National Congress, where he remained from March 4, 1900, to March 4, 1915, representing the Huntington District of twelve Counties, viz: Cabell, Mason, Putnam, Lincoln, Logan, Mingo, McDowell, Mercer, Raleigh, Wyoming, Boone and Wayne. His record in Congress was one of meritorious service, in which he labored constructively, faithfully and effectively for his district and for the best interests of the country at large. In 1915 he returned to Huntington and engaged in the real estate business and general contracting, in which he has continued to be active to the present time, his offices being situated at 1125 Fourth Avenue. Mr. Hughes is a staunch republican in his political allegiance. He has numerous important business connections, and is president of the Pence Springs Water Company of Huntington and Pence Springs, West Virginia. He owns a modern residence at 1140 Fifth Avenue, one of the fine homes of his adopted city. During the World war Mr. Hughes took an active part in all war activities, and made speeches throughout West Virginia in behalf of the cause.

On December 28, 1885, Mr. Hughes was united in marriage at Ceredo, Wayne County, West Virginia, with Miss Belle Vinson, a graduate of the Young Ladies Seminary of Harrodsburg, Kentucky, and a daughter of Samuel S. and Mary (Damron) Vinson, both of whom are now deceased. Mr. Vinson having formerly been engaged in the timber business in Wayne and Raleigh counties, West Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes have two children: Mary Eloise and Tudell. Mary Eloise married Lucian P. Smith, who was lost in the sinking of the "Titanic" when they were returning from their wedding trip spent in Europe. Tudell Hughes, who is engaged in the wholesale lumber business at Ashland, Kentucky, married Harold H. Van Sant. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes have three grandchildren, Lucian P. Smith, Jr., Vinson and Jean Van Sant.

WALTER A. WINDSOR. Point Pleasant, an important little city and Ohio River port, at the mouth of the Kanawha River, claims as the most extensive and important of its industrial enterprises that conducted by The Marietta Manufacturing Company, of which Mr. Windsor is the president. Under the title of W. F. Robertson and Company, this business had its inception in 1852, when river navigation was an enterprise of major civic and economic importance. In 1887 The Marietta Manufacturing Company, successor of the original concern, was incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000, but it was not until the year 1915 that the factory and headquarters of the company were transferred from Marietta, Ohio, to Point Pleasant, West Virginia, a charter being granted to the company by the latter state and the capital of the corporation later being increased to $200,000. J. S. Spencer, one of the most liberal and influential citizens of Point Pleasant, is one of the principals in the company, as is also Judge George Poffenbarger, who is serving on the bench of the West Virginia Supreme Court. Walter A. Windsor became president of the company in 1912, under the Ohio charter, and he has continued the executive head of the West Virginia corporation. C. O. Weissenburger is vice-president and treasurer, and S. C. Wilhelm is the secretary. The manufacturing plant of the company at Point Pleasant was erected in 1916. It consists of substantial, modern mill buildings, giving an aggregate floor space of 100,000 square feet. The plant has excellent frontage on the Ohio River, with the best of launching facilities. The concern is one of the foremost in the manufacturing of steamboats, barges and smaller water craft to be found on the course of any of the navigable rivers of the United States, and the plant has facilities for the full equipping of vessels, as builders of engines, boilers and all requisite accessories, with a general foundry and machine shop and provisions for the effective handling of structural steel work of all kinds, so that the province of operations is thus greatly broadened. The company retains an average force of 600 employees, and in the manufacturing of tow boats of the best grade the company has developed an appreciable export trade. In 1921 three such vessels from this important plant were shipped to the Madalena River, Columbia, South America. Here are manufactured the most powerful types of tow boats, both stern and side wheel, as well as screw propellers, built on inland rivers, and provided with wonderful triple-expansion engines. Here are manufactured also the most powerful types of tandem compound engines for use on inland rivers, no other builders in the Union turning out such engines of as great power. The plant is the largest of its kind on western rivers, and here also splendid constructive service was given in connection with the nation's activities in the great World war. Here were at that period produced 20,000 horse-power in marine engines for ocean vessels and also 10 batteries of water-tube boilers. The plant of the company was officially enlisted in the Government service as Class A, No. 1, and no man needed in the operations of the plant was permitted to enlist in the army or navy. This vigorous and progressive West Virginia corporation has handled the largest and most important of contracts in its special field of production, and the great importance of such an industry in connection with civic and material prosperity and progress at Point Pleasant may be readily recognized.

Walter A. Windsor was born at Marietta, Ohio, in the year 1888, and is a son of A. Windsor, who was identified with marine manufacturing interests in Ohio throughout his active career, as was also his father, A. Windsor, Sr., the latter having established his residence at Marietta, that state, in an early day. Walter A. Windsor gained practical experience in the shops and yards of the Marietta Manufacturing Company while its plant was still maintained in his native city, and his technical and academic education is of advanced order, as evidenced by the fact that he has received the degrees of B. A., LL. B., M. E., S. N. A. and M. E.—one or more of these from Marietta College and the others from Harvard University. He also attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the city of Boston. He is a member of the bar in the State of Ohio. In his home city of Point Pleasant Mr. Windsor is an active member of the Kiwanis Club and the Business Men's Club, and here he is a communicant of Christ Church, Protestant Episcopal. He is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity. In his vigorous business policies, his cultural influence and his pleasing personality Mr. Windsor has become a most popular factor in the business and social life of Point Pleasant, and his name still appears on the roster of eligible young bachelors in this place. He is a trustee of Marietta College in his native city, and through his collegiate associations maintains affiliation with the Delta Upsilon and the Theta Epsilon fraternities.

CHARLES H. NELSON. While he is yet numbered among the young men of Boone County, Charles H. Nelson, county clerk and good business man, has already had a wide and varied experience and brought to his office habits of industry, accuracy and dependability which are enabling him to give a service that is receiving high commendation from all who do business with his office. He is a native son of the county, having been born at Drody Creek, Boone County, January 2, 1891. His father, J. G. Nelson, was born in West Virginia, but his father was a North Carolinian, of English descent. J. G. Nelson is a farmer and one of the important men in his business and for years has been a member of the Knights of Pythias. The mother of Charles H. Nelson, Mrs. Frances (McCormick) Nelson, was born in West Virginia. She was the daughter of James and Eliza Harless McCormick.

Charles H. Nelson attended the common schools of Boone County, and then acquired the fundamentals of business by taking a course in the Capital City Commercial College in 1912. He then began his timber operations, logging on Hughes Creek, Kanawha County, but after nine months in that locality went to Indian Creek, Boone County, and was there engaged in logging timber for about a year. For the subsequent three months he acted as clerk in a general store at Indian Creek, when he was made manager of the store and pay roll clerk for the Hickory Ash Coal Company, with which he remained for four years, his connection with this concern only terminating when the business was sold to the Sterling Collieries Company. Mr. Nelson remained with the last-named corporation for three and one-half years, and with the new owners until the Sterling Collieries Company sold to the Kanawha Consolidated Corporation. Two months later, however, he resigned in order to take charge of his campaign for the office of county clerk as the republican nominee, to which he was elected in November, 1920, and on January 1, 1921, he entered upon the duties of the office. During the war he was held with the coal company in charge of the store and pay roll.

On November 20, 1912, Mr. Nelson married at Peytona, Boone County, Miss Jessie Javins, a daughter of S. M. and Minnie (Elkins) Javins, all of whom were born in West Virginia. Mr. Javins is in the timber business. The Elkins family is an old and noted one in West Virginian history. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have one daughter, Helen E. They are zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Well-known in Masonry, Mr. Nelson has been advanced in his fraternity to the eighteenth Scottish Rite. He also belongs to the Knights of Pythias. The record of Mr. Nelson's life shows that he has won his successive advancements because he has earned them, and not on account of outside influence. He was named by his party as its choice for county clerk on account of his reputation for fidelity and painstaking ability. The people of the county elected him because they had faith in his pre-election promises, and he has already proven that he is going to live up to the spirit as well as the letter of them. As above stated, Mr. Nelson is still a young man, and many years stretch out before him, and, judging the future by the light of the past, he has not yet reached his goal, but may be confidently expected to win much higher honors from his constituents.

E. G. PIERSON is one of the leading members of the bar of Clay County, where he is engaged in the practice of his profession at Clay, the county seat, and aside from his professional activities, which have included service in public office, he has given effective service as a member of the State Senate.

Mr. Pierson was born on a farm near Elkhurst, Clay County, and is a son of William D. and Nancy (Hall) Pierson, the former of whom was born in Nicholas County and the latter in Roane County, Virginia, now West Virginia, both having been children at the time of the removal of the respective families to Clay County. The venerable parents still reside in Clay County, they having there established themselves shortly after their marriage, and both being honored citizens who have contributed their part to civic and industrial prosperity in Clay County. They are zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics, with well fortified views, the father is a stalwart republican. Of their eight children all except one are living at the time of this writing, in 1922: D. D. is a prosperous farmer in Clay County; E. G., of this sketch, was next in order of birth; Samantha J. is the wife of J. J. Daugherty; Webster H. is associated with productive activities in the oil fields of the state; Alice B. is the wife of P. S. Hart; Anna V. is the wife of John Grass; and Russell remains in the parental home.

Mr. Pierson passed his childhood and earlier youth on the home farm, and after profiting by the advantages of the public schools he pursued higher studies in Marshall College and in the West Virginia Wesleyan College. While successfully engaged in teaching in the schools of his native state he began the study of law, and in 1896 was admitted to the bar and established himself in practice at Clay, judicial center of his native county. In 1896 he was elected representative of the Ninth District in the State Senate, where he made an excellent record during his term of four years. When war was declared against Spain he enlisted as a private in Company H, Second West Virginia U. S. Volunteer Infantry, in which he was promoted to the rank of second lieutenant, the regiment having been held in reserve and not having been called to the stage of active conflict. After the close of the war Mr. Pierson engaged in the practice of law at Fayetteville, Fayette County, where he remained until 1910 and where he served out an unexpired term on the bench of the Criminal Court of the county, besides having been prosecuting attorney of the county for one term. In 1910 he was appointed state pardon attorney by Governor William E. Glascock, was reappointed by Governor Henry D. Hatfield, and held this position until the election of Governor Jno. J. Cornwell in 1916. After retiring from the office of pardon attorney he opened a law office in the City of Charleston, and maintained the same until he was elected prosecuting attorney of Clay County in 1920. He is known as a versatile and resourceful trial lawyer and well fortified counselor, and his practice is of broad scope and representative order. He is a stalwart republican and is influential in the local councils and campaign activities of his party.

Mr. Pierson was united in marriage to Miss Nannie P. Johnson, who graduated from Baldwin University, at Berea, Ohio, and who is supervisor of music and art in the Clay County High School, she being an exceptionally talented musician and being a valued factor in the cultural life of her home community, as well as in its social affairs. Mr. and Mrs. Pierson have two daughters: Margaret E. and Dorothy A.

DANIEL D. RILEY as superintendent is directing the educational program of St. Albans, where good schools and high-minded educators have been the rule for more than half a century. In a brief sketch it would not be possible to do justice to the history of the schools and their teachers, but some of them should be recalled.

Private schools have been maintained at St. Albans from early in the last century. One of the best remembered was that conducted by an Episcopal clergyman, whose academy is still standing on an elevation overlooking the village. As early as 1832 a school was conducted in what is now called Fairview. C. V. Hansford was teaching there as early as 1868, and continued at his post until his death.

The first free school was opened in 1868, Arthur Fox teaching that school. Another early teacher was Dr. George P. Thompson, and still another was Mrs. M. M. Thompson, who was killed in an elevator accident in the Capitol Building at Charleston. Doctor Thompson had taught fourteen years, beginning in 1877. Miss Salie Hansford was a teacher in 1878, while former United States Senator W. E. Chilton was principal. Mrs. S. L. Cato excelled as a primary teacher, and was with the school for thirty years. High school work was begun under W. W. Trent as principal, he being followed by L. A. Edwards and the latter by C. P. Guice. Miss Bashaba White, principal of the Central graded school has taught in the grades for ten years. Miss Laura Wood began teaching in 1877, and after a service in the Kanawha Valley of more than forty years is still active and has been connected with the schools at St. Albans for a quarter of a century. Her present pupils comprise sons whose parents and grandparents received their early instructions from her.

Daniel D. Riley has been in school work since early manhood. He was born in Jackson County, and several other members of the family were teachers, including his mother. His grandfather, Elder Robert Hughes, was at one time county superintendent of schools, and was widely known as a Methodist minister. P. M. Riley, father of D. D. Riley, is now retired and has been a figure in public affairs, serving as surveyor and justice of the peace. D. D. Riley began teaching at the age of eighteen. In 1916 he took charge of the grade work in the St. Albans school, and his connection with the schools has been continuous except for nearly a year while he was absent on military duty. In 1921 he became superintendent of the St. Albans schools. The present enrollment is 810, including forty in the colored school and 130 in high school. There are twenty-seven teachers, six of them being high school instructors. Athletics has been much encouraged by Mr. Riley, and the St. Albans High School foot ball team has won an enviable record, being defeated only once, during the season of 1921.

Mr. Riley is a lieutenant in Company B of the One Hundred Fiftieth Infantry, National Guard. During the World war he was in Coast Artillery and Ammunition Train. He is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and Junior Order United American Mechanics and is a charter member of the Rotary Club of St. Albans. Mr. Riley married Miss Essie Hollandsworth, a former music teacher at St. Albans. Their two children are D. D., Jr., and John Matson.

PARKS J. SMITH, the general superintendent of the Stone Mountain Coal Corporation, maintains his executive headquarters at Matewan, Mingo County. He was born on a farm near Moravian Falls, Wilkes County, North Carolina, August 30, 1879, a son of John and Frances (Kilby) Smith, both likewise natives of Wilkes County, where the former was born in 1842 and the latter in 1852. The father, now venerable in years, was closely identified with farm enterprise throughout his entire active career, and still gives a general supervision to his farm property. His wife died in 1911. He was ready for service in the Confederate Army in the closing period of the Civil war, but on account of his youth was not called to the front. He is now a republican in politics, was a member of the Farmers Alliance when that organization was one of importance, and he is an active member of the Freewill Baptist Church, as was also his wife. Of their nine children three sons and three daughters are living. The Smith family was founded in Wilkes County, North Carolina, many years ago.

Parks J. Smith attended the public schools of his native county until he was sixteen years of age, and he has since broadened his mental outlook through well directed private study and reading. He remained on the home farm until he attained to his legal majority, and then found employment in the coal mines at LaFollette, Campbell County, Tennessee. In his two years' service as a miner he became exceptionally expert in the cutting of coal, and after the expiration of that period he became a traveling demonstrator for the Ingersoll Machinery Company and the Harrison Machinery Company, manufacturers of mining machinery. He continued in this service four years, and then became foreman for the Burnell Coal Company at Sprigg, West Virginia. One year later, in 1913, he became contractor at the mine of the Stone Mountain Coal Corporation at Matewan, and April 14, 1919, he was chosen general superintendent for this company, in which important executive position he has since continued his effective service. In the World war period he made valuable contribution to the cause by bending his energies to producing and moving the maximum output of coal from the mines under his supervision. He is a staunch supporter of the cause of the republican party, and he and his wife are earnest members of the Apostolic Holiness Church, their Christian faith being exemplified in their daily lives.

September 29, 1906, recorded the marriage of Mr. Smith and Miss Della Hall, daughter of J. H. Hall, of Ironton, Ohio, and the two children of this union are Mary and Paul.

JOHN STARKEY superintendent at Spencer for the South Penn Oil Company, has been continuously in the service of that corporation in various West Virginia fields for a quarter of a century. His knowledge of oil production and his ability to handle men have been the chief factors in his business success, and he has likewise endeavored to carry his full share of civic burdens in his home community.

Mr. Starkey was born at what is now Seven Pines in Marion County, West Virginia, October 2, 1867. The Starkeys are of Scotch-Irish ancestry and the family first settled in New Jersey. Levi Starkey, grandfather of John Starkey, was born at Slainsville, Ohio, in 1802, and as a young man moved to Wetzel County, West Virginia, where he became an extensive land owner and farmer. His reputation for being a man of considerable wealth caused three robbers, Carl Cartwright, John Freeland and Jack Reynolds, to attack and murder him at his farm near what is now Robinson's Mill in Wetzel County in March, 1874. His assailants did not succeed in obtaining his money. Levi Starkey married a Miss Price, who died in Wetzel County. Their son Levi W. Starkey was born in Wetzel County December 9, 1829, was reared in that county and as a young man went to Marion County where he married. His life's active energies were devoted to farming and he kept in close touch with agricultural affairs all his life. In 1889 he removed to Steubenville, Ohio, where he died on December 20, 1906. For eight years he was associated with ex-Governor Fleming of Fairmont and Alf Pritchard of Mannington in the timber business in Wetzel County. Levi W. Starkey was a veteran of the Civil war, enlisting in the Seventh West Virginia Infantry and served two enlistments in that Union regiment and had two honorable discharges. He was at the battle of the Wilderness and at the battle of Spotsylvania Court House was shot through both hips, a wound that eventually caused his death. He was a republican in politics and an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. While living in Marion County he served as a school commissioner. Levi W. Starkey married Eliza J. White who was born near Worthington in Marion County in 1823 and died near Steubenville, Ohio, March 20, 1903. John Starkey was the oldest of her three children. Robert is a business man at Lumberport, Harrison County. William B. operates the old homestead farm near Steubenville.

John Starkey up to the age of twenty-six was more or less actively associated with his father's farm in Marion County, in the meantime obtaining his education in the rural schools. On September 16, 1893, he entered the service of the South Penn Oil Company, beginning as a roustabout at Mannington. Four years later he was transferred to Smithfield, where for two years he was a helper in cleaning tools. He was then foreman two years, was transferred to Garnersville in Wetzel County as foreman two years, and active in a similar capacity at Middlebourne in Tyler County. April 1, 1903, he was promoted to the duties and responsibilities of superintendent, and since 1912 has been superintendent of the Spencer District, where he has 100 employes under his supervision. His offices are in the First National Bank Building.

Mr. Starkey is owner of a modern home on Center Street in Spencer. He is a republican, an elder in the Presbyterian Church, and fraternally is affiliated with Mannington Lodge No. 31 F. and A. M., Fairmont Chapter No. 9 R. A. M., Mountain State Commandery No. 14 K. T. at Sistersville, Virginia Consistory of the Scottish Rite at Wheeling and Nemesis Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Parkersburg. He also belongs to Sistersville Lodge No. 333 Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. During the war Mr. Starkey devoted his personal means and his influence to promoting the success of all the Liberty Loan and other drives in his section.

In February, 1906, at Centerville in Marion County he married Miss Lillie B. Estlack, daughter of Thomas J. and Helen (Corbley) Estlack. Her father died in November, 1919, on his farm near Centerville where her mother is still living. Mr. and Mrs. Starkey have one son, Arthur, and in his education and proper training for a life of responsibility they have their main interests concentrated. He is now a student in the noted military school at Lewisburg, West Virginia. Mr. Starkey has accumulated perhaps the best private library in Roane County and the well selected books have been chosen chiefly for this son.

ANDREW BRYSON RAWN. Because of the extent and importance of his interests and the manner in which he has contributed to the development of some of the leading enterprises of his community, Andrew Bryson Rawn is justly accounted a captain of finance and industry at Huntington and has built up a substantial reputation for sound business ability and integrity. He was born at Hartford, Connecticut, April 3, 1882, and is a son of John Calvin and Georgiana Kate (VanNess) Rawn.

The Rawn family is of Bavarian origin, having come from the Palatinate on the Rhine. The immigrant to America was Carl Rahn (as it was then spelled), who settled with his wife, Barbara, at what is now Washington, D. C., in 1703. Charles Coatesworth Rawn, the grandfather of Andrew Bryson Rawn, was born at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, where he spent his entire life in the practice of law and died before the birth of his grandson. He married Frances Clendennin, who was born in 1800, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and died there in 1882, and whose ancestors had been pioneers of the community of West Virginia which is named in their honor.

John Calvin Rawn was born July 5, 1846, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, where he was reared and educated, and in 1864 enlisted in the Union army for service during the war between the states, continuing as a soldier until the close of the struggle. Shortly thereafter he went to Tariffville, Connecticut, where he was married and where he acted as resident civil engineer for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Realizing the need for an education of a more extensive character, Mr. Rawn then enrolled as a student at Princeton College (now Princeton University), where he pursued a full course, and from which he was duly graduated. Following his graduation he removed to the community of Bluefield, West Virginia, in 1887, and there became chief engineer of the Clinch Valley extension of the old Norfolk & Western Railroad. In this capacity he remained for about three years, then receiving further advancement when, in 1890, he went to Roanoke, Virginia, and became general manager of the Roanoke Gas and Water Company, a position with which he was identified until 1902. In that year he removed to Bramwell, West Virginia, and became chief engineer of the Pocahontas Coal and Coke Company, continuing to act in that capacity until 1907. Mr. Rawn next accepted a position with the Solvay Collieries Company, in the capacity of general manager, and was later promoted to the important post of consulting engineer, in which he has continued to the present time, with headquarters at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, where he is the owner of a pleasant, modern home. Mr. Rawn is one of the best known men in his field of work, an expert of acknowledged ability and understanding of his calling, and an authority who is frequently called upon by his associates for advice, counsel and leadership where matters of importance arise. He is a republican in his political convictions, although not a politician, and has many important civic, business and social connections. His religious identification is with the Episcopal Church. Mr. Rawn was united in marriage with Miss Georgiana Kate VanNess, who was born in 1855, at Saratoga Springs, New York, and died at Marytown, West Virginia, in 1909, a woman of many splendid qualities. They became the parents of two children: Edward VanNess, an operator of fluor spar mines at Hopkinsville, Kentucky; and Andrew Bryson.

Andrew Bryson Rawn attended private schools at Roanoke, Virginia, and the Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington, from which he was graduated with the class of 1902, with the degree of Civil Engineer. During his college career he joined the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Greek letter college fraternity, in which he still retains membership. In 1902 Mr. Rawn became a member of an engineering party for the United States Coal and Coke Company, at Gary, West Virginia, where he remained six months, and then spent a like period with Bert Paddock, a contracting engineer at North Fork, West Virginia. He was then made chief of party land surveys for the Pocahontas Coal and Coke Company, in Mercer county, West Virginia, and remained one year, then succeeding to the position of mining engineer for the Wenonah Coal and Coke Company; the Hiawatha Coal and Coke Company and the Smokeless Coal and Coke Company, all of Mercer County, West Virginia, and remained until 1905. In that year he was made resident engineer for the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railway Company, at Alta Pass, North Carolina, and in October, 1906, was appointed superintendent of the American Coal Company, with headquarters at Pinnacle, West Virginia. In 1907 he was made superintendent of the Majestic Collieries, in Pike County, Kentucky, remaining in that capacity until January, 1910, when he became superintendent of the Solvay Collieries Company, with headquarters at Kingston, West Virginia, until 1914, when he became general manager, with headquarters at Kingston, until February, 1917. He then came to Huntington in the same position, which he retained until August, 1920, when he became vice president of the same company, a position which he holds at this time. The company is incorporated and the other officers are: P. K. Malin, president, Syracuse, New York; and F. L. Lancaster, secretary and treasurer, Syracuse. The company has an $8,000,000 capitalization, and operates extensively, its fields being in the Kanawha, Pocahontas, Tug River and Thacker districts.

Mr. Rawn is vice president of the Carryon Coal Company and of the Black Gem Coal Company, both of Pike County, in the Thacker district; a director of the Huntington National Bank; a director of the West Virginia Insurance Agency; a director of the Kanawha Operators' Association and the Williamson Operators' Association, and president and a director of the Tug River Coal Operators' Association. His offices are situated at 501-510 Robson-Pritchard Building. In politics Mr. Rawn is a republican, and his religious connection is with the Episcopal Church. He is a member of the Guyan Country Club, the Guyandot Club of Huntington and the Huntington Chamber of Commerce. He owns a modern residence at 1313 Eighth Street, one of the fine homes of Huntington.

In December, 1909, at Bramwell, West Virginia, Mr. Rawn was united in marriage with Miss Elsa Brown, daughter of Henry S. and Hattie (Khuen) Brown, residents of Bramwell, where Mr. Brown is president of the National Carbide Company. Mrs. Rawn is a woman of numerous graces and attainments and a graduate of Anne Brown Seminary, Park Hill, New York. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rawn: Andrew Bryson, Jr., born September 14, 1910; and Anne Brown, born February 1, 1918.

HUGH LEONADUS CARTER, M. D., familiarly known as Dr. H. Lon Carter, is admittedly the leading citizen, as well as physician and surgeon, of Boone County, his public spirit and bighearted generosity drawing all classes to him, and his popularity is as great at Madison as it is in Danville, where he maintains his residence. He was born at Union, Monroe County, West Virginia, August 21, 1866, a son of William L. and Maggie (Keadle) Carter. His grandfather on the paternal side was a Baptist minister, and his wife belonged to the Wilson family, one of the most prominent in state affairs of West Virginia. The Carters are of Scotch-Irish origin. William L. Carter was born in West Virginia, and his wife was also a native of this state. A machinist by trade, he also worked as a millwright, and was one of the pioneer saw-mill men of the state. As such he moved about considerably, for his services were in great demand by all of the big mill operators. When war broke out between the two sections of the country he espoused the cause of the South, entered the Confederate Army and served during the four years of the conflict as a captain, under Capt. Leonadus Love. His death occurred at Barbersville, West Virginia. Both as a Baptist and a Mason he lived up to the highest ideals of Christian manhood, and was most highly respected by all who knew him.

Doctor Carter attended the common schools of Union until he was twelve years old, then was sent to the Anderson Presbyterian School for two terms, and next, when only thirteen years old, began working in a brick yard, where he was engaged in operating a steam engine. This yard made the bricks used in the construction of the Big Bee Tunnel. Here he continued to work during two summers, attending school in the winters in Cabell County, on the Guyan River, where his father was then employed. During the winter he was fifteen he attended the normal school at Milton, West Virginia, and after that, notwithstanding his youth, he taught school for the three succeeding winters, the first two winters the schools lasting four months and the last one was a six-months school. During the summers he worked in saw-mills, keeping fully occupied all of the time. In 1889 Doctor Carter began railroading, and was a brakeman for eleven months, then was made baggagemaster on trains, and held that position for one year. He was then made a conductor, and served as such until February, 1893, when he was able to realize an ambition he had long held—the study of medicine. He and his wife had between them saved enough by this time to enable him to take the course at the Kentucky School of Medicine at Louisville, Kentucky, which is now a part of the University of Kentucky, and he was graduated therefrom in 1895, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

Immediately following his graduation Doctor Carter established himself in a general practice at Danville, where he has since remained, and from the start he has been very successful. In 1897 he went to the New York Polyclinic and took up post-graduate work; also did post-graduate work in 1905 at the University of Louisville; and in 1918, at the Polyclinic of New Orleans, Louisiana. He devotes most of his time to surgery, although the demand for his services is so great that he is still compelled to carry on a general practice. It is his desire, however, to specialize on surgery. In December, 1920, Doctor Carter organized the Danville Hospital Corporation, under the laws of West Virginia, which is the best-equipped hospital in the state outside of Charleston. Doctor Carter is president of the corporation; Dr. J. O. Williams is resident doctor of medicine; Dr. E. W. Smith is assistant resident physician, and all of the physicians and surgeons of Madison are members of the visiting staff.

Doctor Carter has rendered a valuable public service in many ways. During the late war he was a member of the Board of Medical Examiners, and devoted much of his time to the work of this board. He was president of all of the local committees on the selling of the Liberty Bonds, and in every other way possible did everything in his power to assist the administration to carry out its policies. During 1899 and 1901 he served in the West Virginia Legislature, and during his terms in that body gave his active support to many important measures which have since become laws. A natural machinist, he set up the first moving machine in this county, as well as the first two reapers and binders, and has never lost his liking for mechanical work.

In 1892 Doctor Carter married at Madison Miss May E. Hopkins, a daughter of Henry and Julia Hopkins, both of whom were born and reared in West Virginia. Mrs. Carter is a highly-educated lady, and prior to her marriage was a school teacher. She entered fully into her husband's aspirations toward a professional life, and not only encouraged him, but gave him material assistance as well, and he feels that much of his present success is primarily due to her and her unselfish efforts in his behalf. Doctor and Mrs. Carter became the parents of three children, namely: Carr C., Lyle H. and Frank, but the last named died in 1918, aged thirteen years. The two older sons served during the World war.

The Baptist Church holds the membership of Doctor

Carter and his family, and they are all zealous church workers. He is a Knight Templar Mason, and was the first worshipful master of Odell Lodge No. 115, A. F. and A. M. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and was one of those to sign the petition for the Danville lodge. It is safe to say that no measure of importance has come before the people of the county since he became a resident of it that has not received careful and conscientious attention from Doctor Carter, and it is equally true that few have been carried to successful completion without his approval, for his fellow citizens have implicit trust in his good faith and sound judgment, and realize that if he decides against anything he has very good reasons for doing so. They are just as determined to follow his lead when he advises action of a favorable character, and he is the father of some of the most constructive movements in this part of the state.

JAMES H. FORD finished his education after he had been recruited in the service of West Virginia's greatest industry, coal mining. His experience began at the bottom, and from an employee he has promoted himself into the ranks of the operators. He is general manager and treasurer of the Buffalo Eagle Collieries Company at Braeholm in Logan County.

The president of this company is P. J. Riley of Barboursville. Operations were started in 1914, and since then the mines have been opened and the company has installed its own power plant. It is the only mine in the Logan field similarly equipped. Around the mines the company has built an ideal town, with schools and churches and attractive homes for mine workers. The railroad station is Becco, a name made up of the initials of the company.

Mr. Ford was born on his father's farm at Maplewood in Fayette County, June 18, 1881, a son of W. A. and Georgia A. Ford, who are still living on their farm at the ages of seventy-eight. Their family consisted of four sons and two daughters.

James H. Ford acquired his early education in the schools of Fayette County, and taught three terms of school. He finished his education with a two year course in college at Richmond, Virginia. In 1905 Mr. Ford became a coal loader for the Pincey Mining Company on Loop Creek, and was employed there about a year before he went away to college. After returning he was in the service of the New River and Pocahontas Coal Company at Layland as script clerk, later as bookkeeper, and remained with them three years. For a time he had his headquarters at Charleston, as auditor for the West Virginia properties of the corporation. He left there in 1914 and came to the Logan field, and has been here from the beginning of the development work for the Buffalo Eagle Collieries Company to the present time.

In September, 1915, he married Theresa Riley, daughter of P. J. Riley, of Barboursville, who is president of the coal company. Mr. and Mrs. Ford have two children, James H., Jr., and Joseph Martin. Mrs. Ford is a member of the Catholic Church. Mr. Ford is affiliated with Laurel Lodge, F. and A. M., at Fayette, the Elks, belongs to the Royal Arch Chapter of Masonry at Hinton, Huntington Commandery of Knights Templars and the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. He is a democrat in politics.

RALPH R. HAMILTON is one of the prominent mine superintendents of Logan County, being superintendent of the Merrill Coal Mines, Incorporated, at Henlawson. These mines are operated by a Virginia corporation which was organized in the summer of 1920. The company did a great deal of development work preparatory to the opening and operating of the mines. This work included the erection of the steel bridge across the Guyandotte River, also three miles of railroad and over a mile of tramroad. Modern equipment was installed for the operation of the mines. The first coal was shipped in February, 1921, and in spite of the general depression there has not been a single interruption to the work of the mines except on days when the electric power was off or a supply of cars could not be obtained. The daily output is now a trainload.

Mr. Hamilton, the superintendent, was born April 6, 1890, on his father's farm in Nicholas County, West Virginia, son of Andrew A. and Emma (Miller) Hamilton. His father has been a farmer, and the parents still live at the old homestead, Andrew at the age of sixty and his wife, at fifty. He had few opportunities during his youth but has educated himself and is well read. He is a trustee of the Baptist Church. In this family were five sons and two daughters. The sons are: Edgar, now in California, Owen, Ralph R., Ray and Lee. All of them and three cousins of the same name are members of Summerville Lodge No. 76 of the Masonic Order.

Ralph R. Hamilton attended school at Summerville, and at the age of nineteen became a teacher. He soon left that occupation and at twenty was pay roll clerk for the Standard Island Creek Coal Company at Cora in Logan County. During the eight years he remained with that corporation he was advanced to the larger responsibilities, being promoted from pay roll clerk to superintendent. For a short time he was superintendent of the Daisy Mine for the same company, just before taking charge of the Merrill Mine. Mr. Hamilton has done more than follow the routine of a practical miner and mine superintendent. He has studied the technical part of the business, has taken courses with the International Correspondence Schools, and is thoroughly informed on the technical side of the mining industry.

In September, 1921, he married Miss Louise Akers, daughter of P. H. and Sidney Akers. She was a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Hamilton is affiliated with Logan Chapter, R. A. M., Huntington Commandery, K. T., the Rose Croix and Lodge of Perfection, degrees of the Scottish Rite at Huntington and the Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Charleston. In politics he is a democrat.

LATHROP RUSSELL CHARTER, M. D. A professional service of over sixty years and the relationship of a kindly and helpful citizen explain the grateful memory in which the late Doctor Charter is held in the community of West Union and Doddridge County. It is significant in his case and that of other similarly useful men that no long biography can be presented, since his life was a long succession of the acts of kindness incident to a working routine that varied only in detail, not in general character.

Doctor Charter, was born at Springfield, Massachusetts, October 10, 1816 of an old Connecticut family. His grandfather, John Charter, Jr., married Sarah Russell in 1777, and both were listed in the first census of the United States made in 1790. John Charter, Jr., served in a Lexington Alarm Regiment at the beginning of the Revolutionary war. He and his wife were the parents of nine children. The father of Doctor Charter was Lemuel Charter, who was born at Ellington, Tolland County, Connecticut, May 7, 1784, and died at Elwood, Illinois, October 20, 1862. The mother, Elizabeth Allen, was born at East Windsor, Connecticut, November 8, 1789, and died at Elwood, Illinois, February 11, 1870.

Lathrop Russell Charter lived at Springfield until he was eighteen years of age and then for one year was employed at Hartford, Connecticut. In the meantime his parents removed to Otsego County, New York, and when he rejoined his parents he engaged in teaching. He was liberally educated for his time and generation. He taught nine terms of school and in the meantime read medicine with Doctors Curtis and Johnson of Cooperstown, New York. One of his cherished memories of this period of his life was the friendship he formed with James Fenimore Cooper, the American novelist. During 1840-41 Doctor Charter attended medical lectures at Albany, New York, and then at Woodstock, Vermont, where he was graduated in 1841. One of the signers of his diploma of graduation from the College of Medicine at Woodstock was H. H. Childs, at that time president of the college and later a governor of Massachusetts. Doctor Charter subsequently took a medical course at Pittsfield, Massachusetts.

In the Fall of 1841 he began the practice of medicine at Guilford, New York, and two years later removed to Alleghany County of the same state. In the fall of 1845 he came to West Union, West Virginia, and a few months later went back to bring his family, making these three trips in a buggy. Through his liberal education and high attainment, soon after locating at West Union, he had all the work he could do as a physician and surgeon over a wide expanse of country around that town.

He performed his professional labors at a time when none of the modern facilities were available, such as good roads, the telephone, the corner drug store, but he was a very conscientious doctor and many a time when called out to attend the sick drove miles over the hardest kind of roads and in inclement weather, never giving the matter of remuneration a thought. The manner in which he endured the hardships of his work and his true loyalty to all professional obligations indicated that he drew heavily from those inner resources of manhood that are the foundation of religion. He was one of the founders of the Methodist Episcopal Church at West Union and for many years was a generous supporter of the church and its program of activities. In politics he was a democrat.

He was the third superintendent of schools in Doddridge County. He also officiated as mayor of West Union, as magistrate, United States Commissioner and for fifteen years was United States Pension Examiner. He was eminently successful as a physician, and became a charter member of the West Virginia Medical Society and a member of the American Medical Association. At the time of his death he was the oldest member of each of these bodies.

Doctor Charter died September 28, 1909, in his ninety-third year. His was a long life, and his usefulness continued almost until the hour of his death.

Doctor Charter was twice married. In New York on October 12, 1843, he married Miss Lucia M. Hale, who died February 9, 1867. Six children were born to this union, the four surviving the father being A. J. Charter, Dr. J. H. Charter, Mrs. Joseph Brown and C. A. Charter. On November 10, 1870, Doctor Charter married Elizabeth Fraser, who survives him at the age of seventy-seven. She became the mother of six children, five now living: Florence, unmarried; Lucia, wife of G. W. Bland and the mother of two children: Elizabeth B., wife of Ray Staley, and Russell C. Bland; Lathrop R., Jr.; Tula, unmarried; and James G., also unmarried.

LATHROP RUSSELL CHARTER, JR., son of the late Dr. Lathrop R. and Elizabeth (Fraser) Charter, was born at West Union, January 11, 1875. He acquired a liberal education in the public schools and in West Virginia University, where he graduated A. B. in 1900.

For over twenty years he has been identified with banking in Doddridge County. He became cashier of the newly organized Doddridge County Bank at West Union, and has been in the service of that institution, of which he is now president. Mr. Charter is a republican in politics, and has been a loyal citizen in every phase of the development of West Union.

In 1910 he married Miss Mabel Taylor, who died in 1913.

WILLIAM E. MOHLER. A pioneer lumber operator in Kanawha County, William E. Mohler's name has become associated with a varied and remarkable program of industrial and financial enterprise at St. Albans, his home town, and throughout this region.

Mr. Mohler was born in Augusta County, Virginia, July 14, 1852, son of D. F. and Ellen E. (Silling) Mohler. His father was born in Augusta County about 1832, and died at the age of sixty-seven. He was a wagon contractor for the Confederate Government during the first two years of the Civil war. He was connected with iron manufacture, and he owned the second sawmill in Augusta County. His wife, Ellen, was a daughter of William Silling.

The oldest of nine children, William E. Mohler attended school in Virginia and became associated with his father in the lumber industry. At the age of twenty-one he began operating for himself at Alderson in Monroe County, West Virginia. March 28, 1882, just forty years ago, Mr. Mohler located at St. Albans in Kanawha County, and with his two brothers started the lumbering business which grew to be one of the largest in this section of the state. Their mills for a number of years were supplied by logs from Boone, Raleigh and Logan counties. In 1888, with his father and brothers, he built a saw mill at Lock Seven in Kanawha County. It was the chief property of the Mohler Lumber Company, of which Mr. Mohler is president, though he has been retired from its active management since May 1, 1918. In addition to his lumber mills he has had a part in nearly every industrial movement in his community. He erected several properties at St. Albans. He was one of the incorporators of the St. Albans Glass Company in 1914, and has since been its president. He helped organize the Bank of St. Albans, of which he is vice president and director. He is a director in the Virginian Joint Stock Land Bank and in the West Virginia Mortgage and Discount Corporation at Charleston. The Mohler Realty Company, a subsidiary of the Mohler Lumber Company, has developed a high class sub-division of West Charleston, the property thoroughly improved with sidewalks, sewers and water lines before it was put on the market. The Mohler Lumber Company still owns 7,000 acres on Coal River, and this land is now being operated by six producing coal companies. The Coal River Railroad, running four miles through the property makes this property accessible for the product of coal mines now producing and under construction. The land now being developed for coal was the last property lumbered off by the Mohler Company. Mr. Mohler is a stockholder in the Boone County Bank at Madison, also in the Kanawha National Bank at Charleston, and was president and general manager of the St. Albans Light and Water Company and president of the McGregor Manufacturing Company. He has also been a director in the South Side Foundry and Machine Company at Charleston, president of the St. Albans Building Company, director of the Herald Publishing Company of St. Albans and stockholder of the Pinquo Mines Company in old Mexico and the Mexico Mill and Transportation Company.

Mr. Mohler has been active in local affairs, serving on the City Council. He is a republican. He married Jennie A. Reeves, of Augusta County, Virginia. She died in 1905. Her three children were: Reba R., wife of Don Hereford, of Oklahoma City; Daniel N., the well known attorney at Charleston, whose career is given elsewhere; and Ruth E., now the wife of Capt. Walter C. Phillips, of the U. S. Army. In 1908 W. E. Mohler married Mary E. Alexander, sister of Judge Alexander of Putnam County. Mr. Mohler is an elder in the Presbyterian Church of St. Albans.

MERRITT WILSON has devoted all the active years of his experience to the lumber industry, and the scene of his operations as a timber and saw mill operator has been in West Virginia for a number of years. Mr. Wilson has his home at Elkins and is active head of several large lumber companies.

He was born near Wilson in Allegany County, Maryland, December 7, 1866. The village of Wilson is now in Garrett County. His paternal ancestors have been in America nearly two centuries. The founder of the family was Thomas Wilson who came from the North of Ireland about 1732 to Nova Scotia and subsequently settled in Frederick County, Maryland. He married Elizabeth Riley. Their son, Thomas, born in 1741, lived near Cresaptown in Allegany County, Maryland, and participated as a soldier in a number of the border wars. He married Mary Hayes. Their son, also named Thomas, was born in 1777, and lived at what is now Kitzmiller, Garrett County, Maryland. He was owner and operator of a mill, was also a practical surveyor, and was a noted hunter. He married Susan Bowman. Their son, James, became a farmer, living near the present site of Kitzmiller, and married Lucinda Junkins.

George W. Wilson, father of Merritt Wilson, was a son of James and Lucinda (Junkins) Wilson, and during the Civil war served as a first lieutenant in the Third West Virginia Cavalry in the Union Army. After leaving the army he became interested in farming and also was a lumber manufacturer at Wilson, Maryland. This career also took him into public affairs, and he served three terms in the Maryland Legislature. His wife was Eliza Harvey.

RESIDENCE OF W. E. MOHLER, "HILL GROVE," ST. ALBANS, WEST VIRGINIA

W E Mohler

卷之三

Merritt Wilson completed a common school education in Garrett County, had a business course in Bridgewater College in Virginia, and at the age of twenty-three entered his father's store and office at Wilson, and had a varied routine as bookkeeper, clerk and also handling the railroad office work for West Virginia Central Railway. His father died in December 1894, leaving the business to the family. His training and experience well qualified him to become president and general manager of the Wilson Lumber Company which the family organized to conduct and continue the business. In 1900 the manufacturing plant was moved from Wilson to Fairfax, and in 1903 the Wildell Lumber Company was organized, and a large tract of timber was purchased in Pocahontas County, West Virginia.

In the fall of 1903 Mr. Wilson removed to Wildell, the industrial town established by the company, and he took personal charge of the enterprise. He continued to manage the business there until the timber was exhausted in 1916, and since then his home has been in Elkins.

Mr. Wilson is president of the Wilson Lumber Company, the Wildell Lumber Company and the Ruthbell Lumber Company, and is also president of the Inter-Mountain Coal and Lumber Company, an organization owning and controlling a large coal and lumber property in Kentucky. He is a director in the Marlin Lumber Company, a director in the Bank of Mill Creek, the Peoples National Bank, Elkins, and has extensive interests in farming and live stock. He is president of the Central West Virginia Fire Protective Association, an association organized for the purpose of protecting the forests of that part of the state from fire and reforesting the cutover lands.

As was true of his father, Mr. Wilson has always combined an intelligent interest in public affairs with his business. He served as a presidential elector in the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland the first time McKinley ran for President. He has always been a republican, and in 1899 was elected a member of the Maryland Legislature, serving in the session of 1900 and the extra session of 1901. Mr. Wilson is a member of the Elkins Rotary Club and Country Club.

October 29, 1895, he married Miss Forest D. Wolfe, daughter of Francis S. and Jennie Wolfe, of McArthur, Ohio. Their three children are, Frank E., Curtis R., and Merritt Wilson, Jr.

EDWARD GRANDISON SMITH. In the practice of law, it has been said, many men seek to find the necessary stepping stone to other vocations, but the true lover of his profession starts out with no such object in view. He finds in it an inspiration, and a congenial, satisfying situation that is sufficiently useful, honorable, responsible and remunerative. Such, perhaps, may be the attitude of Edward J. Smith, recognized as one of the ablest members of the Clarksburg bar who, for almost thirty years has devoted himself exclusively to the practice of law at Clarksburg, many times during this interval declining public honors and turning aside tentative offers of change.

Mr. Smith is a native of West Virginia and of old Harrison County stock. He was born on Horse Run, Harrison County, April 8, 1868, and is a son of Thomas Marion and Amy Minerva (Hoff) Smith, and a namesake nephew of Capt. Edward Grandison Smith, who served in the 17th Virginia cavalry in the war between the states. Thomas Marion Smith was born in Harrison County, February 24, 1845, a son of Charles and Mary (Grant) Smith. Charles Smith was born November 3, 1796, the first white child born on Duck Creek, Harrison County, and was a son of Watters and Elizabeth (Davison) Smith, the former of whom was born in New Jersey, July 15, 1767. He married in 1793 and in 1796 came to Harrison County and settled on Duck Creek, where he bought a farm from John Prunty. His parents were Thomas and Sarah (Green) Smith, the former of whom was born in England, May 23, 1743, and came to America in 1760, married the second child of Joseph Green, son of William Green, in 1764, and settled near Prenton, New Jersey. He served as a soldier in the Revolutionary war, later was a farmer and died October 17, 1799. His son Watters was also a farmer and a man of sterling character. He was one of the founders of the Broad Run Baptist Church in 1804, and survived until 1849, dying in his eighty-second year.

Three children were born to Thomas Marion Smith and his wife: Edward Grandison, Harvey Faris and Ella Earle. During his active years he was a farmer, grazer and miller, but he and wife now live retired at West Milford, where they are well known and highly esteemed. Mr. Smith has reached his seventy-sixth year and Mrs. Smith has passed her seventy-first birthday.

Edward Grandison Smith was reared on his father's farm and attended the public schools of West Milford. Later he spent four years in the University of West Virginia and from that institution received his degree of LL.B., in 1889, and in 1892 the same degree from the Washington & Lee University, which institution he represented in the Southern Intercollegiate Contest in oratory, in 1892 at Vanderbilt University, winning the medal. Admitted to the bar in the above year, Mr. Smith entered into practice at Clarksburg, and has won high honors at the bar, during his long period of practice taking part in some of the most important cases of litigation coming before the Harrison County bar.

In October, 1899, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Jessie Blackshere, who is a daughter of John Blackshere, of Mannington, West Virginia, and they have two children, a son and daughter: John B. (Jack) and Gill.

Mr. Smith belongs to the Masonic fraternity. In his political preference he is a democrat. In 1912 he was put forward as his party's choice for the office of judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals, but otherwise has not consented to the use of his name in connection with public office. He is one of Clarksburg's representative citizens, honored in his profession and respected as a private citizen.

WALTER FRENCH BOGESS who has practiced law at Ripley for fourteen years, is former prosecuting attorney of Jackson County and is one of the prominent citizens as well as leading lawyers in that section of the State.

The name Bogess is of English origin. People of that name were early settlers in Old Virginia. Mr. Bogess' grandfather, George Bogess, was born in 1837 and was a Confederate soldier in the Civil war, participating in Gettysburg and other engagements. He was a farmer in Jackson County, West Virginia, for many years and died there in 1917. His wife Martha Smith died at their home near Meadowdale in 1914. Perry A. Bogess, father of the Ripley lawyer, was born in Jackson County in 1857, and is still living on his farm near Millwood in Jackson County. In former years he conducted farming on an extensive scale, but has now limited his activities commensurate with his advancing years. He is a republican. Perry A. Bogess married Ida Hartley who was born near Liverpool, Jackson County in 1852. Their family consists of three children: Ona, wife of Otho C. Williams, a teacher and farmer living at Millwood; Walter F.; Rubie, wife of Frank Spicer, a farmer and assistant county assessor of Jackson County, living at Leroy.

Walter French Bogess was born near Liverpool in Jackson County, March 25, 1886. While a farm boy he showed a strong inclination for study and partly through his own efforts and earnings acquired a liberal education. He attended rural schools and at the age of seventeen began teaching and made a commendable record during the five years he was connected with the rural school work of Jackson County. In the meantime he attended Marshall College at Huntington one year, spent one year in the Preparatory School of West Virginia University, and in June, 1908, graduated from the University Law School at Morgantown.

Mr. Bogess was admitted to the bar June 3, 1908, and in the same year began practice at Ripley. He is an able attorney in both the civil and criminal branches of his profession. His law offices are in the Starcher Hardware Building on Main Street.

Mr. Bogess is one of the leading republicans of Jackson County. He was secretary of the County Committee from 1912 to 1916. He was elected prosecuting attorney in November, 1916, and held that office from January 1, 1917, to January 1, 1921. Since retiring from office he has been chairman of the Republican Committee of the county. Mr. Boggess is a Past Grand of Ripley Lodge No. 30 Independent Order of Odd Fellows, is a member of Ripley Camp Modern Woodmen of America. During the World war he was Government Appeal Agent for Jackson County, and through his profession and as a private citizen exerted himself to the extent of his needs and abilities in securing the successful outcome of every local campaign.

September 26, 1906, at Duncan in Jackson County he married Miss Lillian Ice. Her parents Rev. David M. and Amy (Sturm) Ice live on their farm at Buffalo in Putnam County. Her father is a farmer, a teacher and a minister of the Christian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Boggess have two daughters, Marie, born March 25, 1908, and Pearl, born March 25, 1909.

FRANK ENSLOW. The name Enslow has been prominently associated with the upbuilding of the city of Huntington practically from the beginning. The late Frank B. Enslow was one of Huntington's well known bankers, and coal, oil and gas operators. His son Frank Enslow is a lawyer by profession, but his largest interests are as a coal operator.

The late Frank B. Enslow was born at Wheelersburg, Ohio, son of Andrew Jackson Enslow who was born near Richmond, Virginia, and settled at Huntington about 1871. He was a railroad contractor and helped build the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. His last days were spent in California. Frank B. Enslow grew up in Huntington, where he married and where early in life he entered the profession of the law. His extensive interests brought him many business interests. He built the gas lines from Macon County, West Virginia, to Cincinnati and owned extensive productions of oil and gas. He helped organize and was president of the Huntington National Bank for a number of years. Frank B. Enslow who died at Huntington in 1917 was a leader in the democratic party though never as an office seeker, was a vestryman of the Episcopal Church and at all times had the welfare of his community completely at heart. He married Mrs. Julia (Garland) Buffington, who was born in Richmond County, Virginia, and died at Huntington in 1897. Their only child is Frank Enslow who was born at Huntington September 24, 1882. Her first husband was Dr. John Buffington, a prominent physician and surgeon, and by that union one child survives, Florence Buffington, whose first husband was the late Will Stanton, a Charleston business man, and she is now the wife of Rev. R. H. Merrill, a Presbyterian minister at Charleston. Frank B. Enslow's second wife was Mrs. Juliette (Buffington) Baldwin, still living at Huntington and the mother of a daughter, Dorothy Enslow.

Frank Enslow was educated in the public schools of Huntington, spent two years in Marshall College and two years in the University of West Virginia at Morgantown. He graduated LL.B. in 1902 and is a member of the Sigma Chi college fraternity and the Delta Chi legal fraternity. In 1902 on graduating he entered his father's law office and was admitted to the bar in 1903 upon attaining his majority. He remained with his father for six years, and for three years was a member of the law firm of Simms, Enslow & Staker. In later years he has used his profession as an adjunct to his own business affairs. Mr. Enslow is president of the Twin States Fuel Company of Huntington, and is a partner in the firm of Cunningham, Miller & Enslow, owners of extensive and valuable coal properties in the Cabell Creek district and the Logan district of West Virginia. Mr. Enslow is also affiliated with many subsidiary companies and does a large business in real estate. His offices are in the First National Bank Building of Huntington.

During the World war he was a member of the committees for the sale of Liberty Bonds, was chairman of the Red Cross drives in the city and county. He is a democrat, a member of Huntington Lodge No. 313, B. P. O. E., the Guyan Country Club, and Guyandotte Club.

In 1909 at Huntington he married Miss Mary Winters, daughter of E. E. and Gabriella Winters, residents of Huntington. Her father is chief railroad inspector for the Public Service Commission of West Virginia. Mrs. Enslow is a graduate of the Huntington High School. They have one child, Frank, born July 2, 1910.

ROBERT TAYLOR BAIR. One of the most prominent of the building agencies in the development of the city of Beckley has been the firm of Bair Brothers, Inc., dealers in lumber, building material and kindred supplies, owners of the Bair Building and agents for Ford, Buick and Lincoln automobiles and Republe trucks. The secretary and treasurer of this concern is Robert Taylor Bair, who has been a resident of this city since 1899 and whose rise in the business world has been truly typical of real American enterprise, industry and perseverance.

Mr. Bair was born on a farm near Washington College, Washington County, Tennessee, September 10, 1880, a son of George W. and Mary (Beard) Bair, and was named in honor of the famous Tennessee chief executive Governor Robert Taylor, whose family home was in the same community. George W. Bair was born in Floyd County, Virginia, and followed farming until his death in 1887 at the age of forty-eight years, or when his son, Robert T., was only seven years of age. He was a democrat in politics. Mrs. Bair was born in Washington County, Tennessee, and died in 1891, aged fifty-three years. Like her husband, she was a member of the Presbyterian Church. They were the parents of eight children, of whom seven grew to maturity, and of these three now live at Beckley: George W. and Robert T., of the firm of Bair Brothers, and Mrs. J. C. Maples.

Robert Taylor Bair attended the public school at Washington College, and after the death of his parents lived at the home of his sister, Mrs. Maples, in the meantime being employed on the farm, in the timber and at sawmills at several points. Mr. Bair came to Beckley in 1899 with his brother Sydney. They had very little money to pay railroad fare, but this did not affect their case, as there was no railroad at that time over which to travel and they consequently made the journey afoot. Sydney Bair was the owner of a sawmill and Robert worked for him for about a year, following which he and his brother, George W., bought a worn-out mill that was regarded as useless for the sum of $250, on credit. By making some ingenious changes they managed to get the old mill working and on making a little money bought a better structure and began purchasing boundaries of timber, which they converted into lumber. Still later they established a planing mill and from that time to the present, their growth and development has been consistent. They have furnished the lumber and other building material for many of the mines in this district, used in building mine structures, tipple store buildings and miners' homes and also the building material utilized in the erection of many of the leading structures of Beckley and other towns in this territory. They have prospered exceedingly and their prosperity is well merited.

From 1907 to 1912 Robert T. Bair was superintendent of the United Lumber Company, at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, this company being owned by the Palmer Seaman interests. He has seen all the mines opened up in this locality, has witnessed the building of the railroads and has seen Beckley grow from a sparsely-settled hamlet into a full-fledged city of importance in its part of the state. He has contributed materially to this development and the Bair Building, erected by him and his brother in 1921, is one of the substantial structures of the city. He has been active in civic affairs and holds membership in the Beckley Chamber of Commerce and the Beckley Kiwanis Club, and as a fraternalist is affiliated with the Blue Lodge and Chapter of Masonry.

In 1899 Mr. Bair was united in marriage with Miss Mabel Kent, daughter of S. H. Kent, of Beckley, and to this union there have been born two sons: Adolph who is attending Blacksburg Military Institute, is the eldest child; and Ruth, one of six daughters, is the second eldest and a student at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

JAMES JORDAN DOTSON, for ten years has been editor and manager of the Nicholas Republican, one of the two newspapers published in Nicholas County and established in 1903. It is the official organ of the republican party in the county, but its editor and manager is not a politician. Mr. Dotson for a number of years has been a teacher, and the object of his highest ambition has been achievement in the field of educational affairs. He is credited with being one of the most active men responsible for the building in Nicholas County of one of the finest school buildings and gymnasiums in the State. Through his personal effort and his newspaper he has been constant and untiring in his labors for the cause of education and better schools. For the past eight years he has served as a member of the school board of Richwood.

Mr. Dotson was born at Clendenin in Kanawha County, West Virginia, January 7, 1874, son of Jacob L. and Susan E. (Hart) Dotson. His parents were natives of West Virginia. His father served as a Union soldier in the Civil war, was a carpenter by trade, and died near Summersville in Nicholas County in 1907. The widowed mother passed away at the home of her son James J., in Richwood, in 1921. These parents had ten children, five still living, James Jordan, being next to the youngest.

When he was about eight years of age his parents moved to the vicinity of Summersville in Nicholas County and there he grew up attending the common schools and in 1894 graduated from the Summersville Normal. He at once took up his career as a teacher, and for several years was active in school work in the vicinity of Summersville. From 1908 to 1912 he conducted a normal school for teachers near Summersville.

Mr. Dotson moved to Richwood in 1912, and became financially interested in the Nicholas News Company, publishers of the Nicholas Republican, and has since become owner, editor and manager of the newspaper. He has a modern and thoroughly equipped newspaper and job printing establishment. Mr. Dotson also carries on a fire insurance and real estate business.

In 1895 he married Ledona S. O'Dell, daughter of Jacob W. and Margaret O'Dell of a well known family near Summersville. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Dotson, three sons and four daughters, all of them having been carefully educated and all are still in school except the oldest Zela, wife of James M. Dobbins, manager of the Nicholas Republican at Richwood. The second child Gertrude is a student in West Virginia University, is editor-in-chief of the Antheneum, the student publication, and was the first young woman honored with that position since the paper was established nearly a quarter of a century ago. The other children are: James Kyle, a student and assistant to his father in the newspaper office; Nola Susan and Boyd, both attending the Richwood High School; Leo and Willa Lee, pupils in the grammar school.

Mr. Dotson is an elder in the Richwood Presbyterian Church and superintendent of its Sunday school. He is prominent in Masonry, being affiliated with Richwood Lodge No. 122, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Richwood Chapter Royal Arch Masons, Sutton Commandery No. 16, Knights Templar and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Modern Woodmen of America.

FRANK C. HEATH, M. D. During the past twenty years Doctor Heath has had a busy professional career in West Virginia, has been established in several localities, was at one time a mine and railway surgeon, but since 1904 his practice and home has been in the city of Weston in Lewis County.

He was born May 4, 1868, at Laurel in Prince Georges County, Maryland, member of an old and distinguished family of that state. His parents were Col. S. P. and Margaret (Smith) Heath. His grandfather S. P. Heath was a machinist, a man of great ingenuity, and was the originator of a loom for weaving cotton. Col. S. P. Heath was born in Prince Georges County, April 3, 1835, was a college graduate, and for many years was superintendent of a cotton factory at Guilford, Maryland. He was also employed for a time in the Navy Yards at Washington, and was superintendent of a cotton mill in Baltimore. He was affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and was a member of the Episcopal Church. His wife, who died in 1871, was born in Pennsylvania. She was of Holland-Dutch ancestry. Doctor Heath has one sister, Miss Carrie A., living in Baltimore.

Frank C. Heath spent his early youth at Guilford, Maryland, attended public school there, and for several years lived at Washington where he graduated from Wood's Commercial College June 5, 1894, and subsequently entered the Medical Department of Columbian now George Washington University, where he did three years of his medical preparatory work. He was graduated M. D., from the University of Maryland at Baltimore May 2, 1901. In the same month he was granted a license to practice by the Maryland Board of Medical Examiners. He was licensed by the West Virginia State Medical Board June 15th, and by the State Board of California July 22, 1901. His first practical duties as a physician were performed in association with Dr. E. H. Johnston at Berkeley Springs, West Virginia, during August-September, 1901. In October and November, 1901, he practiced with Doctor West at Hancock, Maryland. In December, 1901, he located at Great Cacapon, West Virginia, where he remained a year and in 1902 moved to Blaine, this state. He acted as surgeon for the West Virginia and Pittsburg Railroad, as mining physician for the Blaine Mining Company, the Smith mines at Blaine and the Dodson mines at Dodson.

September 5, 1904, Doctor Heath moved to Weston, where he has found most congenial associations in a civic and social way and also a profitable professional practice. He is a member of the County, State and American Medical associations.

Doctor Heath married Ama Bland Carper, daughter of Wirt D. Carper, and a granddaughter of the late John B. Brannon. Mrs. Heath was born in the same house where her mother was born and she and Doctor Heath now occupy that house as their home. She is a graduate of the Bishop Strachan School in Toronto, Canada. Doctor and Mrs. Heath have one son, Frank C. Jr., born August 30, 1913, in the same house as his mother and grandmother. He is now attending the public schools. Doctor Heath is affiliated with Weston Lodge No. 10, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, with the Modern Woodmen of America, the Royal Neighbors, and is independent in politics.

WILLIAM H. DOWER is general superintendent of the Proctor Eagle Coal Company at Robinette, the Proctor Coal Company at Amherstdale and the Maude Coal Company at Robinette, whose operations are all in the Buffalo valley of Logan County. These mines were opened during 1915-16, and the executive officials of the operating and owning companies are A. J. Dalton, president; J. A. Kelley, vice president; and former Governor Hatfield, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Dower is one of the most competent mining officials in this district. He has been through all phases of mine work, and for a number of years has been an expert electrician in everything of that nature pertaining to mines.

Mr. Dower was born at Logan, Clearfield County, Pennsylvania, March 11, 1877, son of William and Anna (Seymour) Dower. Her father was a native of Cornwall, England, came to the United States at the age of sixteen, after having had some experience in the mines of Wales, and for a time he lived in Nova Scotia, was then in the Iron Mine District of Lake Superior, in the Iron Mines of New York State, entered the Pennsylvania coal field at Wilkesbarre, and later at Logan and Clearfield County.

His wife was born at Cardiff, Wales, and was seven years of age when her parents came to America. From Pennsylvania the Dower family moved to West Virginia in 1879, and William Dower Sr., was a pioneer in the coal development of this state, opening mines at Caperton for William Beury, the Gaymont Mine for the English Manufacturing Company and other operations as well. He died January 4, 1897 at the age of forty-nine. His widow is now living at Turkey Knob on Loup Creek, Fayette County, West Virginia, at the age of sixty-seven. Of their thirteen children, four sons and two daughters are living, and all the sons are practical coal men, Richard, being a resident of Turkey Knob, in Fayette County, John, mine foreman for the Cadle Ridge Coal Company in Fayette County, and Edward, at McDonald on Loup Creek.

William H. Dower was two years old when the family came to West Virginia, and he acquired his education in the public schools of Fayette County. In 1898, he began the study of electrical engineering with the International Correspondence School, and since then has kept in constant touch with electrical and other technical problems pertaining to the mine engineer's profession. This advanced education came long after he had learned the practical start of mining. At the age of nine he was a trapper boy in the mines, later a mule driver and from one thing to another was promoted until at the age of eighteen he was a mine foreman under his father, then superintendent of a mining property. For a time he was the electrician in the J. L. Beury Mine in the New River field. His services as an expert in the electrical equipment of a mine have been given to a number of corporations including the Chapman Coal and Iron Company, the Goodman Manufacturing Company of Chicago, manufacturers of mining machinery, and for a time he was in New Mexico and at Clarksville that state installed the mining machinery for some properties owned by Senator Clarke. For eight months he was electrician for the Chapman Coal and Iron Company at Elverton in Fayette County, later mine foreman for the same property, was electrician and superintendent for J. L. Beury at Elmo, and he installed a power plant for the Standard Splint and Gas Coal Company on Paint Creek, and installed a power plant for the Cherokee Coal Company on Cabin Creek. He served as electrician for the Winnefrede Coal Company at Winnefrede, chief electrician for the Imperial Colliery Company on Paint Creek, and as electrician for the Cabin Creek Consolidated Coal Company. From November, 1909 to September, 1910, he was assistant chief electrician for Westinghouse, Church Kerr Company at the Chesapeake and Ohio Shops in Huntington. From that time until 1914 he was assistant chief electrician at Kayford on Cabin Creek for the Cabin Creek Consolidated Coal Company.

Mr. Dower came to the Logan field for the Main Island Creek Coal Company as chief electrician, and was in their service for six years until he accepted his present duties. In the course of his wide experience he has witnessed and taken a technical part in the coal mine development and the railroad and transportation development of a number of the important West Virginia fields.

Mr. Dower in 1902 married Mattie White, daughter of Charles White of Hurricane, Putnam County. Their three children are: Edith, Thelma and William O. Mr. Dower is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

JAMES H. HALL, sheriff of Gilmer County, is giving a vigorous and effective administration that is fully justifying his election to this office, the holding of which implies his residence at Glenville, the county seat. He was born in Lewis County, this state, January 29, 1873, and is a son of William H. and Mary E. (Erwin) Hall, both of whom likewise were born in Lewis County, where the mother passed her entire life and where the father still resides, at Weston, the county seat. Of the six children of William H. and Mary E. Hall, five are living:

James H., of this review; A. F., a farmer near Auburn, Ritchie County; M. R., a merchant at Hurst, Lewis County; Guy L., a resident of Ritchie County; and Cora S., wife of A. D. Dent, of Gilmer County. E. L., the fourth in order of birth, is deceased.

James H. Hall was reared on a farm in Lewis County, attended the schools of the locality and continued his association with the home farm of his father until the time of his marriage. He then settled on a farm which he rented, in Gilmer County, and later he purchased this property, to which he has since added until he is now the owner of a valuable farm estate of 285 acres. He gave his undivided attention to the management of his farm, as one of the progressive exponents of agricultural and live-stock industry in Gilmer County until he was elected sheriff of the county. He has the distinction of being the first republican to be elected to this office in the county, which has a normal democratic majority of somewhat more than 600 votes and which he carried by a majority of 182 votes. Sheriff Hall is a stockholder in the Glenville Bank & Trust Company, is a leader in the local councils of the republican party, is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and with Gilmer County Lodge, No. 118, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and he and his wife hold membership in the United Brethren Church.

The marriage of Mr. Hall to Miss Myra Dent was solemnized October 7, 1896, and they have six children: Gypsy L.; Mamie (wife of E. J. Bush); Virginia, a student in the State Normal School at Glenville; Dolly, likewise attending the normal school; and Jennie and Belle (twins), the twin daughters being twelve years of age at the time of this writing.

JAMES MORTON CALLAHAN, PH. D., professor of history and political science at West Virginia University since 1902, and also Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, is author and editor of the volume of West Virginia history now published, and the publishers take this opportunity to afford the readers a brief sketch of his life and at the same time express appreciation for his faithful co-operation in carrying out the original plans. His historical scholarship assured from the beginning the success of the work as a history of West Virginia, and he proved a valuable advisor to the publishers in connection with many problems outside his capacity as historian.

Doctor Callahan was born at Bedford, Indiana, November 4, 1864, and represents pioneer families identified with Virginia and New York. His great-grandfather, Henry Callahan, came from Ireland near the close of the Revolutionary war and settled at Martinsburg, in what is now the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia. His great-grandfather, Thomas Callahan, born November 2, 1777, and who married Betsy Martin, of Martinsburg, in 1798, was a frontier school teacher in Western Virginia, Ohio and Indiana. His grandfather, Isaac Callahan, born December 14, 1805, married in 1825, in Kentucky, Virginia Jane Boyd (born at Martinsburg, Virginia), and by 1828 settled in Southern Indiana (near Bedford), where he died in 1883. His father, Martin Isaac Callahan, had a long service as a teacher near Bedford, Indiana.

Doctor Callahan's mother was Sophia Oregon Tannehill, who was born January 10, 1846, and died January 14, 1876. Her father, William Tannehill, Jr., born October 8, 1807, at Genesee, New York, came into the Ohio Valley at an early age and for a time was a proofreader on what subsequently became the Louisville Courier Journal. Later he was publisher of a newspaper at Salem, Indiana. Here, on November 21, 1828, he married Emily Texas Hamersly, who was born in Ontario County, New York, in 1810. Martin I. Callahan and Sophia Tannehill were married September 14, 1862.

James attended the public schools, graduated in 1886 from the Southern Indiana Normal School, from the National Business College in 1887, and was a teacher in public schools from 1883 until 1890. He had early inclinations toward the studies of natural science and medicine. Some experience in journalism gradually developed in him a permanent preference for the scientific study of history, and his life has been largely devoted to teaching. He acted as special correspondent for several city dailies, devoting nearly all his time to that work during the presidential campaign of 1892. From 1890 to 1892 he was an instructor in the Southern Indiana Normal School. In 1892 he entered the University of Indiana, where he graduated A. B. in 1894 and A. M. in 1895. He was a graduate student in the University of Chicago in the summer of 1894. In October of the same year he entered Johns Hopkins University, where he soon won distinction in the study of history, jurisprudence and politics. In 1895-97 he served as assistant and Fellow. At Johns Hopkins the two men who did most to influence his ideals and methods of historical scholarship were Herbert Baxter Adams and Woodrow Wilson. In 1897 he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Johns Hopkins. During the following year he was acting professor of American history and constitutional law at Hamilton College. For four years, 1898 to 1902, he was lecturer in diplomatic history before graduate students at Johns Hopkins. At the same time he was engaged in historical research in the Department of State at Washington. From his interesting work in Johns Hopkins and at Washington he was called to West Virginia University in 1902 as head professor of history and political science. Since 1916 he has also been Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Doctor Callahan was a pioneer in the field of diplomatic history. His studies during 1895-98 helped to awaken an interest in that subject, which resulted in the establishment of the Albert Shaw lectureship in diplomatic history at Johns Hopkins in 1898. Several of his studies in international politics and diplomacy, which were published by the Johns Hopkins University press, made him a recognized authority in that branch of historical investigation. He has long favored a close co-operation between England and America as the most powerful instrument in the preservation of the peace of the world. By his researches and publications on Anglo-American relations, he won the distinction of a place in the English "Who's Who," published at London. He participated in the Lake Mohonk Conferences on International Arbitration, co-operated in the movement to secure the establishment of a league to enforce peace, has been connected with the work of the National Security League, has been interested in Latin American problems and politics, and during the World war aided the Government by historical service in connection with the problems of this country's foreign policy. At other universities he has delivered lectures under the auspices of the American Association for International Conciliation.

Doctor Callahan is author of "The Neutrality of the American Lakes and Anglo-American Relations," published in 1898; "Cuba and International Relations," published in 1899; "American Relations in the Pacific and the Far East," published in 1901; "The Diplomatic History of the Southern Confederacy," published in 1901;

"The Evolution of Seward's Mexican Policy," published in 1909; "Semi-Centennial History of West Virginia," published in 1913; "Interpretations and Applications of the Monroe Doctrine, 1845-70," published in 1914. For his book on Cuba he was awarded the John Marshall prize. This book, and his other studies on American relations with Spanish-American countries, attracted wide attention in Mexico and in South America. He has written a large number of monographs, reviews and special articles for magazines and encyclopedias, particularly for the Cyclopedia of American Government and Encyclopedia Americana, and prepared a series of sketches of great leaders and heroes for the Success Library. For several years he edited the West Virginia University studies in American History.

Although he has had little time for business affairs, he has always taken an active part in public affairs. He was a delegate to the International Deep Waterways Association in 1895, to the National Conservation Congress in 1911, and was an honorary member of the Second Pan-American Scientific Congress at Washington in 1915-16. In 1912-14 he was historian of the West Virginia Semi-Centennial Commission. In 1921 he was chosen as a director of the Bank of Morgantown.

Doctor Callahan is a member of the Phi Beta Kappa and several learned societies, including the American Historical Association, the American Political Science Association and the American Society of International Law. He was president of the Ohio Valley Historical Association in 1913-14. From about 1888 to 1893 he successively held all the offices from the local Lodge in the Knights of Pythias to representative to the Grand Lodge.

Doctor Callahan does not allow his own prestige as a historian and educator to obscure the distinctive scholarship of Mrs. Callahan, who while performing the duties of the head of the Callahan household at Morgantown has also done some notable work in history. Mrs. Callahan was married to Doctor Callahan at Vinita, Oklahoma, on September 4, 1907. Her maiden name was Maud Louise Fulcher. She was born at Thamesville, Ontario, Canada, November 20, 1883. Her father, Rev. George Alfred Fulcher (born September 13, 1857, at St. Marys, Ontario), was for many years engaged in the Presbyterian ministry in the United States. Her mother was Joan Antoinette Palmer (born at Whitby, Ontario, March 15, 1854). Her parents were married August 2, 1876. Mrs. Callahan graduated from the Cumberland Valley State Normal School at Shippensburg, Pennsylvania, in 1903. After teaching for three years she entered West Virginia University, where she won her A. B. degree in 1908 and Master of Arts in 1909. She is author of a monograph "Evolution of the Constitution of West Virginia," published in 1909. She served as district president of the West Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs in 1916-18. Dr. and Mrs. Callahan have two daughters, Kathleen and Jean Louise.

INDEX

- Aberdeen Angus cattle, I, 529
 Abbitt, Wyatt A., III, 452
 Abbott, Amanda, III, 103
 Abbott, George S., II, 606
 Abbott, John M., III, 519
 Abney, William O., II, 55
 Academies and seminaries, I, 291-296
 Academies, old-time, I, 629
 Academy, first, west of the Blue Ridge, I, 110
 Adams, Arthur H., II, 32
 Adams, David E., II, 199
 Adams, Pearson B., III, 287
 Adams, Robert F., III, 167
 Adams, Russell U., III, 159
 Adams, William H., II, 151
 Addleman, Robert M., II, 47
 Adkins, Hezekiah, II, 474
 Agee, James B., II, 234
 Agnew, Frank, III, 174
 Agricultural and household implements, I, 223, 228
 Agricultural paper, first west of the Blue Ridge, I, 300
 Agricultural statistics (1850), I, 254
 Agriculture; status of farming in 1920, I, 524; before the Civil war, 526; apple producing counties, 527; corn and other standard crops, 528; livestock, 528, 529, 530; farm machinery improvements and agricultural education, 531; State agricultural institutions, 531-534; farms and livestock (1900-1920), 536; acreage and production, 537; statistics of (1900-1920), I, 712, 713
 Aiken, W. C., III, 509
 Albright, Staley D., II, 143
 Aldermanic act, I, 316
 Aldermanic School Law (1796), I, 279
 Alderson, Fleming N., II, 628
 Alderson, George, III, 619
 Alderson, J. Cary, II, 572
 Alderson, John M., III, 619
 Alderson, Joseph N., III, 619
 Alderson Family, The, III, 618
 Alderson, I, 90
 Aldhizer, Stuart G., III, 22
 Aler, Frank V., II, 477
 Aleshire, Henry O., II, 303
 Aleshire, R. P., III, 185
 Alexander, Andrew S., II, 188
 Alexander, George M., II, 232
 Alexander, W. Davis, II, 300
 Alexander, William F., III, 341
 Alexander and Eastern Railroad, I, 453
 Alexandria, I, 526
 Allen, Benjamin, I, 259
 Allen, Charles L., III, 568
 Allen, James E., III, 623
 Allen, Robert E. L., II, 104
 Allen, Samuel, letter of (1796), I, 122-125
 Allen, Sylvester P., II, 92
 Alley, J. Friend, III, 53
 Alley, L. S., sketch of, I, 425
 Allied War Relief, World's war, I, 709
 Allison, Arthur G., III, 232
 Allison, Oscar O., III, 244
 Allstadt, John H., II, 396
 Along the Norfolk and Western Railway in Virginia and West Virginia (illustrations), I, 486
 Alpena, Swiss colony at, I, 593
 Alt, Henry A., II, 221
 Altizer, Aaron E., III, 211
 Ambler, Charles H., I, 210
 Ambrose, Paul, II, 443
 American Gazetteer, extracts from (1797), I, 125
 American Sheet & Tube Company, Chester Plant, III, 207
 American Telephone and Telegraph Company, I, 539
 Amick, A. L., III, 421
 Amos, Curtis E., II, 485
 Amos, Frank R., II, 253
 Ancient home of the Burrs, in Jefferson county (illustration), I, 136
 Anderson, Catherine, III, 72
 Anderson, George W., III, 98
 Anderson, James H., II, 513
 Anderson, William B., III, 71
 Annon, George W., III, 458
 Ansted, I, 432
 "Apple Pie Ridge," I, 527
 Apples, varieties of, and producing counties, I, 527
 Aracome, I, 240
 Arbogast, Peter D., II, 192
 Arbuckle, John E., III, 470
 Arbuckle, Mathew, I, 76
 Archer, Robert L., I, 710; II, 118
 Archer, Vacher B., II, 455
 Argabrite, Otho P., III, 621
 Arkle, Edward A., II, 22
 Armstrong, A. P., III, 291
 Armstrong, Henry W., III, 91
 Armstrong, Paul G., II, 128
 Armstrong, Ralph T., III, 289
 Armstrong, Robert A., II, 16
 Arnett, Curtis T., II, 336
 Arnett, Lonna D., II, 95
 Arnett, William E., II, 358
 Arnold, Arthur, III, 211
 Arnold, Daniel H. H., III, 554
 Arnold, George W., II, 82
 Arnold, Gohen C., III, 439
 Arnold, Porter, III, 181
 Arnold, William A., III, 557
 Arnoldsburg, I, 159
 Asbury, Francis (Methodist bishop), I, 102; extracts from journal of, 115-118; first journey of, to Western Virginia (1781), 268
 Ash, Francis G., II, 34
 Ash, Irvin O., III, 15
 Ash, Roy F., II, 287
 Ashcraft, William H., II, 92

- Ashe, Thomas, extracts from his "Travels in America" (1806), I, 128-130
 Ashworth, David D., III, 118
 Aspinall, Richard, III, 410
 Athens, normal school established at (1872), I, 589
 Atkeson, Mary M., I, 679
 Atkeson, Thomas C., II, 618
 Atkinson, Alexander, I, 425
 Atkinson, Charles W., III, 264
 Atkinson, George W., I, 561, 687; III, 2
 Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio Railroad, I, 483
 Aurora, I, 185
 Austin, I. M., II, 178
 Australian ballot bill, State Senate passes, I, 560
 Automobile licenses, increase of, I, 547
 Auvil, James E., III, 302
 Averill, W. W., Union raids under (1863), I, 387
 Averill Coal Company, I 517
 Avery, George D., I, 109
 Avis, I, 429-430
 A. W. Cox Department Store, III, 492
 Ayres, Thomas W., II, 471
- Babb, Ernest P., III, 241
 Babb, Frank H., III, 598
 Babb, Obed, III, 241
 Babcock Lumber and Boom Company, I, 476
 Babson, A. C., III, 589
 Bachman, Wheeler H., II, 183
 Bailey, Ann, sketch of, I 220
 Bailey, Dallas C., II, 457
 Bailey, Edward, first regular Methodist minister in Western Virginia (1778), I, 268
 Bailey, Emmet L., II, 46
 Bailey, John, I, 100
 Bailey, Minter, I, 183
 Bailey, Reese G., III, 77
 Bailiff, Jesse O., III, 565
 Bair, Robert T., III, 646
 Baker, Charles G., II, 60
 Baker, E. Reece, III, 65
 Baker, George C., II, 59
 Baker, John M., II, 628
 Baker, Robert W., II, 210
 Baker, William E., II, 18
 Baldwin, Charles B., III 423
 Baldwin, William D., III, 480
 Ball, Henry H., II, 544
 Ball, Marion T., II, 63
 Ballangee, Isaac, I, 430
 Ballantyne, N. W., III, 360
 Ballardsville, I, 167
 Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, I, 135, 144; built to Wheeling (1852), 171; built to Cumberland (1842), 173; incorporation and organization of, 187; surveys for, 188, 189; opening of, to the Potomac (1832), 189; western extensions, 189-196; engineering obstacles between Cumberland and Wheeling, 192, 193; industrial revival along the line, 194, 195; reaches Wheeling (January 1, 1853), 196; Grafton-Parkersburg branch opened (June 1, 1857), 197-199; military importance of, in Civil war, 389-391; absorbs Ohio River Railroad (1901), 470; its freight discrimination against West Virginia, I, 555
 Baltimore and Ohio R. R. branches, I, 445
 Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, exemption from taxation by, I, 611, 612
 Bambrick, George L., III, 273
 Bambrick, Walter S., III, 562
 Bane, John H., III, 21
 Banfield, William, III, 255
- Bank, Harry, III, 21
 Bank of Philippi (1855), I, 147
 Bank of Summers, I, 430
 Bank of Wadestown, The, III, 605
 Banks; of Charleston, I, 436; of Huntington, 437; of Wheeling, 467; condition of (1919-21), 715
 Baptist church, I, 261-264
 Baptist churches, in 1850 and 1860, I, 274 276
 Barbe, Clyde D., II, 445
 Barbe, Waitman, I, 689, 692; II, 433
 Barbour county, first settlements in, I, 103, 146, 252; divided in Civil war, 372
 Barbour County Jeffersonian, I, 314
 Barhousville, I, 114, 239
 Bare, George E., III, 620
 Barley, George, III, 324
 Barnard, Henry, I, 637
 Barnard, Nathaniel, II, 197
 Barnes, Isaac A., II, 416
 Barnes, J. Walter, I, 705; II, 403
 Barnes, Sarah A., III, 489
 Barnes, Uriah, III, 446
 Barnes, Walter K., II, 28
 Barnett, Leonidas H., III, 133
 Barnhart, Russell E., II, 33
 Barnhart, William G., III, 592
 Barriek, William, III, 23
 Barte, Ernest A., III, 325
 Barter, I, 226
 Bartlett, Columbus T., III, 15
 Bartlett, Fred W., II, 72
 Bartlett, Leonidas W., III, 405
 Bartlett, Thomas, III, 31
 Bassel, Alice B., II, 84
 Bassel, John, II, 83
 Bates, Clarence S., III, 562
 Bath (Berkeley Springs), I, 89
 Batson, Howard M., III, 209
 Battelle, Gordon, I, 294
 Batts, Thomas, I, 54
 Bauseman, George W., III, 509
 Bayer, Harry W., III, 424
 Beane, William P., III, 85
 Beard, Harry L., III, 613
 Beaty, Carl E., II, 380
 Beaumont, Frank P., III, 248
 Beaumont, Percy J., II, 96
 Beavers, William A., III, 388
 Bechtol, Aaron, III, 420
 Beckley, I, 168, 240, 496
 Beckleyville (Beckley), I, 168
 Bedford county, I, 69
 Bee, Isaiah, II, 521
 Bee, Isaiah E., II, 521
 Beef cattle, I, 529
 Beef industry, I, 529
 Beer, Oscar B., III, 435
 Beerbower, Lloyd G., II 551
 Beeson, Wallace P., III, 180
 Bek, Hugh E., II, 195
 Belcher, James B., II, 401
 Belcher, Silas H., II, 423
 Belington, I, 477
 Belington and Beaver Creek Railroad, I, 480
 Bell, Charles W., II, 647
 Bell, Frank R., II, 87
 Bell, Joseph V., III, 597
 Bell, Robert P., III, 444
 "Bell System Employees Benefit Plan" (World War measure), I, 542
 Belleville, founding of (1785-86), I, 106, 160
 Beltz, John W., II, 283
 Bender, John I., III, 267
 Bennett, Arthur F., III, 352
 Bennett, Frank, III, 95
 Bennett, Jesse, I, 160

- Bennett, John B., III, 402.
 Bennett, Lee, III, 97.
 Bennett, Lee E., III, 96.
 Bennett, Lee L., III, 501.
 Bennett, Louis, I, 563.
 Bennett, Orie O., III, 433.
 Bennett, Vernon L., III, 413.
 Bentley, Samuel R., II, 332.
 Bentz, Hermann, II, 255.
 Benwood, I, 240.
 Berkeley, Robert C., I, 648, 663.
 Berkeley County, I, 89, 243, 252, 368.
 Berkeley Springs, I, 239.
 Bernard, Sidney M., II, 105.
 Berry, Andy W., III, 266.
 Bert, William S., III, 397.
 Berthy, James N., Sr., II, 467.
 Beswick, Purla V., III, 168.
 Beswick, Samuel, III, 168.
 Bethany, I, 240.
 Bethany College, I, 157, 295; II, 39.
 Beverly, I, 103, 149, 239, 477.
 Bias, Dan, III, 140.
 Bibb, Thomas E., III, 366.
 Bibbee, Carl R., II, 271.
 Bickerson, Henry, II, 256.
 Big bottom survey (1773), I, 70.
 Big Sandy boundary dispute, I, 621.
 Bigony, John F., II, 607.
 Billings, C. P., III, 460.
 Billingslea, William H., II, 144.
 Bippus, Edward S., II, 21.
 Bird, John H., II, 542.
 Bird, Stephen T., III, 40.
 Bischoff, John W., III, 570.
 Bishop, Alexander, III, 209.
 Bishop, Charles E., II, 123.
 Bishop, George W., II, 581.
 Bishop, John H., II, 444.
 Black, Albert F., III, 570.
 Black, Louis, II, 130.
 Black, William P., II, 143.
 Blackman, David, sketch of, I, 149.
 Blacksburg, I, 240.
 Blackshire, Benjamin F., II, 135.
 Blackshire, Harry F., II, 135.
 Blacksville, I, 102.
 Blackwood, Charles K., III, 451.
 Blair, A. C., III, 10.
 Blair, Charles W., II, 370.
 Blair, Jacob B. (illustration), I, 349; 364.
 Blair, Jackson V., III, 414.
 Blair, J. G., I, 638.
 Blair, Robert S., III, 10.
 Blair, Smith, III, 7.
 Bland, Frances M., I, 693.
 Blaney, Joseph A., II, 436.
 Blennerhasset, Harman, sketch of, I, 108, 158.
 Blennerhasset, Margaret A., I, 682.
 Blennerhasset, Mr. and Mrs. Harman (illustration), I, 108.
 Blizzard, Reese, III, 4.
 Bloch, Jesse A., III, 475.
 Blood-letting, of the early times, I, 251.
 Bloomy Furnaces, I, 135.
 Blue, Frederick O., II, 35.
 Blue, John D., II, 84.
 Blue Creek oil field (illustration), I, 512.
 Bluefield, I, 90; gateway to the Pocahontas coal field, 488, 489; industries of, 489.
 Bluefield Colored Institute, established (1895), I, 590, 630.
 Bluefield Telephone Company, I, 539.
 Blue Ridge Gap, at Harper's Ferry, I, 31.
 Blue Ridge Railroad, I, 424.
 Blumberg, Henry, III, 158.
 Blumenauer, C. H., III, 465.
 Board of Children's Guardians, created (1919), I, 598.
 Board of Health, functions and work of, I, 599, 600.
 Board of Public Works, absorbs immigration office (1871), I, 593, 598, 615, 716.
 "Board of Regents," West Virginia University, I, 647.
 Boatmen and steamboat men, I, 215.
 Bobbitt, Alexander W., II, 468.
 Bobbitt, William C., III, 514.
 Bock, George W., III, 171.
 Bodel, William A., II, 372.
 Boehler, Charles F., II, 439.
 Boggess, Arthur B., III, 202.
 Boggess, Walter T., III, 645.
 Boggs, Gordon, II, 339.
 Boggs, Martin K., II, 331.
 Bolivar, I, 239.
 Bollman, Eric, extracts from letter of (1796), I, 121, 122.
 Bonafield, Guy M., III, 511.
 Bonar, Thomas S., II, 302.
 Bond, John C., II, 67.
 Bond, S. Orestes, III, 201.
 Bonded indebtedness (1920), I, 718.
 Bone, Benjamin F., III, 102.
 Bonnifield, Abe, I, 151.
 Bonnifield, Samuel, sketch of, I, 103.
 Booker, Archy S., II, 161.
 Boone, Daniel, I, 60; report of survey by (1791), 100.
 Boone county, I, 113, 167, 252.
 Boord, Simon C., III, 5.
 Booth, Washington I., III, 606.
 Boothe, Paul A., III, 223.
 Boothsville, I, 240.
 Borden, Chapman L., II, 307.
 Borden, Frank H., II, 400.
 Boreman, Arthur L., I, 336; (illustration), 349, 354, 551, 637; II, 2.
 Boreman, Robert J. A., II, 2.
 Borror, William B., II, 147.
 Boswell, Ballard E., II, 278.
 Bosworth, Squire, sketch of, I, 249.
 Boughner, James V., II, 170.
 Boughner, Martha, II, 171.
 Boughner, William L., II, 203.
 Boundaries, first, of West Virginia, I, 358.
 Bouquet, General, closes Indian campaign, I, 64, 65.
 Bowden, William H., II, 87.
 Bowen, Harry, III, 41.
 Bowers, Elmer A., III, 554.
 Bowers, George M., III, 379.
 Bowers, George W., II, 647.
 Bowers, Joseph, III, 508.
 Bowly, Arthur W., II, 166.
 Bowles, George O., III, 249.
 Bowling, Lowery G., II, 524.
 Bowman, Charles D., II, 642.
 Bowman, Frank L., II, 185.
 Bowman, James H., III, 28.
 Bowman, Tom B., II, 632.
 Boylen, Emmitt O., III, 465.
 Boys' and Girls' club work, I, 533.
 Boys' Industrial School, I, 630.
 Braddock, Edward, defeated (1755), I, 59; died of wounds, 60.
 Braddock, William J., II, 155.
 Bradley, Orin C., III, 532.
 Bradley, Samuel E., III, 548.
 Bradley, Stanley E., III, 367.
 Bradshaw, Charles A., II, 132.
 Bradshaw, John, I, 137.
 Brady, Samuel D., II, 224.
 Braithwaite, William E., III, 511.
 Brand, Clyde, II, 99.

- Brand, Franklin M., II, 177
 Brand, William H., II, 154
 Brandonville, I, 102, 239, 240
 Brandywine, I, 54
 Branhon, Bruce Y., III, 136
 Brannon, Edward A., III, 412
 Brannon, Henry, III, 412
 Brannon, William W., III, 416
 Brast, Edwin A., II, 478
 Braxton county, I, 109, 252; early schools of, 290
 Bray, Charles M., II, 419
 Bray, Lonnie G., II, 109
 Brennan, James T., II, 314
 Brenneman, George G., III, 229
 Brenneman, Herbert M., III, 230
 Bretz, Frank K., II, 200
 Brewster, Clinton D., II, 496
 Brewster, Glen W., II, 516
 Brewster, Henry, III, 172
 Brice, William L., II, 67
 Brickey, Daniel M., II, 138
 Bridgeport, I, 145, 239
 Bridges, Charles S., III, 92
 Bridges across the Ohio, I, 465, 466
 Brightwell, William J., III, 540
 Briscoe, William, I, 51
 Brittingham, Harry F., III, 297
 Britton, John, III, 473
 Broadwater, Charles L., III, 35
 Brock, Luther S., II, 19
 Brock, Robert L., II, 20
 Brockman, Clarence A., III, 144
 Brockus, James R., II, 243
 Bromfield, Boss C., II, 474
 Bronson, Wade H., II, 570
 Brooke, C. F. T., I, 686
 Brooke, William M., II, 266
 Brooke Academy, I, 294
 Brooke county, I, 156, 252
 Brooks, Elisha, I, 165
 Brooks, Fred E., III, 425
 Brooks, Harry L., III, 253
 Brooks, Morgan M., III, 440
 Brookville, I, 159
 Brown, Anthony R., III, 538
 Brown, Austin H., III, 228
 Brown, Benjamin B., II, 210
 Brown, Calvin F., III, 62
 Brown, Cassius C., II, 163
 Brown, Charles M., III, 420
 Brown, Douglas W., III, 143
 Brown, Forrest W., II, 319
 Brown, George H., II, 544
 Brown, Herman M., III, 543
 Brown, James E., II, 446
 Brown, James F., II, 208
 Brown, James H. (illustration), I, 349; II, 207
 Brown, Joseph G., II, 218
 Brown, Martin L., II, 126
 Brown, Morris H., III, 628
 Brown, Robert M., III, 253
 Brown, Samuel B., III, 61
 Brown, T. Fred, II, 553
 Brown, William A., III, 552
 Brown, William G., I, 364; II, 168
 Brown, W. Frost, III, 470
 Brownfield, George H., II, 198
 Brownfield, James H., II, 197
 Browning, James D., II, 218
 Brownsville, I, 240
 Bruceton, I, 73, 143, 240
 Bryan, James A., II, 11
 Bryarly, Henry P., III, 399
 Bryarly, Samuel C., III, 342
 Buchanan, G. L., III, 256
 Buchanan, George T., III, 28
 Buchanan, Joseph K., II, 93
 Buckey, William E., II, 384
 Buckhannon, I, 147, 148, 239; (illustration), 454, 455; first B. & O. train to (1883), 447
 Buckhannon and Northern Railroad, I, 464
 Buckhannon Boom and Lumber Company, I, 455
 Bucklew, Eugene, III, 372
 Bucklew, J. Allen, II, 559
 Bucklew, Leroy S., II, 223
 Budget bill, I, 594
 Buffalo, I, 161, 240
 Buffington, Thomas, I, 114
 Bull Creek oil district (1864), I, 393
 Bullett lands, I, 99
 Bullitt, Thomas, I, 71
 Burd, James I, 66, 67
 Burdett, Frank G., III, 404
 Burdette, Frank C., III, 401
 Burdette, Joseph F., III, 611
 Bureau of Markets, created (1917), I, 603
 Bureau of roads (1913), I, 595; created (1913), I, 602, 603
 Burgess, Robert L., II, 407
 Burk, Luther B., II, 380
 Burk, T. Frank, II, 203
 Burke, Wilbert M., II, 522
 Burke's Garden, I, 90
 Burkhart, Robert C., III, 392
 Burning Spring (1864), I, 393
 Burning Spring run, I, 500
 Burns, Benjamin B., II, 293
 Burns, James J., III, 121
 Burns Family in West Virginia, III, 120
 Burnside, Guy H., III, 533
 Burr, Moses W., II, 424
 Burr, Nannie B., II, 424
 Burr, Peter, I, 136
 Burr home, Jefferson county (illustration), I, 136
 Burt, David A., II, 230
 Burt, Perry E., III, 243
 Bush, Elbert W., II, 381
 Butcher, B. L., I, 636
 Butcher, Gibson J., sketch of, I, 415
 Butler, Frank, I, 648
 Butler, Michael S., III, 512
 Butler, William S., II, 291
 Buxton, Perry B., III, 451
 Buzzard, Simeon S., II, 319
 Bycott, J. Frank, II, 276
 Byrd, Percy, III, 391
 Byrer, Hugh S., III, 352
 Byrne, John, III, 285
 Byrum, Royal J., III, 80
 Cabell, Charles A., III, 559
 Cabell county, I, 114, 252; early schools of, I, 289
 Cacapon Furnace Stack near Wardensville, Hardy County (illustration), I, 231
 Cain, George E., III, 326
 Caldabaugh, Harry E., II, 254
 Caldwell, I. Waymon, III, 327
 Caldwell, James L., II, 160
 Caldwell, Joseph R., II, 276
 Caldwell, Mason B., II, 545
 Cale, C. Floyd, III, 502
 Calhoun, Harrison M., II, 391
 Calhoun county, I, 109; county seat contest in, 159, 252
 Callahan, James M., I, 650; III, 648
 Callanan, James T., Jr., II, 489
 Callanan, James T., Sr., II, 489
 Callihan, Alfred D., III, 137
 Callison, Jacob F., III, 237
 Calvert, John, II, 503
 Camden, G. D., I, 183

- Camden, Harry P., III, 2
 Camden, Johnson N., I, 551, 552, 553, 557, 560; III, 3
 Camden, R. P., I, 183
 Cameron, I, 196, 238
 Camp, William C., III, 467
 Camp meetings, early, I, 270, 271
 Campbell, Alexander, I, 295
 Campbell, Alexander R., II, 257
 Campbell, A. W., I, 314, 349
 Campbell, Charles L., III, 258
 Campbell, Charles W., III, 450
 Campbell, George, III, 247
 Campbell, Harold W., II, 257
 Campbell, James A., II, 621
 Campbell, John H., III, 153
 Campbell, Myron G., III, 321
 Campbell, Thomas D., III, 398
 Camper, Harry G., III, 29
 Canaan Valley, native spruces in field of Blue Grass, (illustration) I, 525
 Cannelton, I, 431
 Caperton, Allen T., I, 553, 554
 Caperton, George H., III, 216
 Caperton, Hugh, I, 99
 Capitation taxes, I, 618
 Capon furnace, I, 231
 "Captive watercourses," I, 34, 35
 Carfer, William H., II, 462
 Carlie, John S., I, 330, 341, 343, 347; (illustration) 348, 356, 362
 Carlin, William, III, 52
 Carmichael, David, II, 461
 Carmichael, Wilbert F., II, 461
 Carpenter, Nicholas I, 105
 Carper, John S., III, 105
 Carr, Hugh H., II, 51
 Carr, Louis A., II, 338
 Carr, Robert S., I, 558, 559
 Carr, Walter A., II, 241
 Carrigan, Charles E., III, 487
 Carroll, Charles, of Carrollton, I, 189
 Carskadon, George T., III, 193
 Carspecken, Henry L., II, 172
 Carter, Absalom L., III, 247
 Carter, David J., II, 582
 Carter, Hugh L., III, 642
 Carter, James G., I, 636
 Carter, John J., I, 511; II, 246
 Carter Oil Company, The, II, 246
 Casey, John N., III, 87
 Caskey, Luther H., II, 456
 Cassville, I, 240, 492
 Catawba war-path I, 37
 Cather, Lawrence A., II, 487
 Catholic Church, I, 272, 273; status in 1850, 274; in 1850 and 1860, 276
 Catholic Church of Weston, III, 611
 Cats vs. Rats, I, 51
 Cattle raising, early, I, 228
 Causey, Henry D., II, 329
 Central District Telephone Co., I, 539
 Central Land Company of West Virginia, I, 430
 Central Telephone Co., I, 545
 Ceredom, I, 168
 Chafin, Don, II, 579
 Chafin, John L., II, 345
 Chafin, Lefe, II, 593
 Chamberlin, Jonas B., III, 18
 Chambers, Arthur L., III, 53
 Chambers, Chester C., II, 356
 Chambers, Elbert B., II, 469
 Chambers, John A., II, 296
 Chaplin, Benjamin M., II, 333
 Chapman, C. Edgar, II, 278
 Chapman, Frank A., II, 290
 Chapman, George, I, 104
 Chapman, Warner W., III, 131
 Charleston, (Wellsburg), I, 71, 99, 100, 104, 110, 161-165; in 1854 (illustration), 164, 239; newspapers of, 307; as State capital, 369; State capital located at, 410, 411; Constitutional convention at (January-April 1872), 414; Chesapeake & Ohio Railway opened to, 425; history of, since incorporation (1861), 432, 433; contest with Wheeling, for State capital, 433; becomes permanent State capital (1885), and its subsequent development, I, 433-436; Central portion (birdseye view of), 484; birdseye view of, 488; business section (birdseye view), 490; early telephone service at, 539
 Charleston, Clendennin and Sutton Railway, I, 478
 Charleston division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, (see Coal and Coke Railway)
 Charleston Hotel, I, 180
 Charleston Lumber Company, III, 238
 Charleston, Ripley and Ravenswood Turnpike Company, I, 180
 Charleston-Sutton Weston telephone line, I, 539
 Charles Town (1740), I, 51
 Charlestown, I, 239
 Charlestown Academy, I, 293
 Charlestown Free Press, I, 314
 Charlestown Spirit of Jefferson, I, 314
 Charlton, Harry, II, 446
 Charlton, James D., II, 486
 Charter, Lathrop R., III, 643
 Charter, Lathrop R., Jr., III, 644
 Chase, James S., II, 642
 Cheat River View, near Squirrel Rock (illustration), I, 23
 Cheat settlements, I, 103
 Chenoweth, Worthington, III, 355
 Chesapeake and Ohio canal, completed (1850), I, 135
 Chesapeake & Ohio Northern Railway, I, 442
 Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, I, 331, 424, 425; opened to Charleston and Huntington (1873), 425; Irish settlers along, 426, 428-442; development of, to 1920, 428, 429; founding and growth of towns and cities along, 429-442; branches into timber and mineral regions, 439; extensions in 1910, 1921, 441, 442; extension since 1890, I, 438-442
 Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, I, 556
 Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company (Bell System), I, 540
 Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, I, 541
 Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of West Virginia, I, 542; operations of (1920-22), 543, 544; location of offices of (map), I, 548
 Chester Plant, American Sheet & Tube Company, III, 297
 Chesterman, A. D., I, 638
 Chew, Roger P., II, 321
 Chief mine inspector, office of, created, I, 600
 Children's Home, expenditure for (1912-1920), I, 619
 Chilton, William E., I, 563, 564; III, 517
 Chinaware Manufacture in West Virginia, III, 584
 Chitwood, O. P., I, 40, 697

- Cherpenning, Walter E., II, 362
 Chrislip, Albert G., III, 353
 Chrisman, C. B., III, 313
 Christian, Charles R., I, 693
 Christian Church, I, 273, 276; in 1850 and 1860, I, 276
 Christie, Frederick R., II, 112
 Christopher, Effie E., II, 428
 Christopher, Irvin, II, 427
 Churches (see also Religion and Denominations); chief, supported in Western Virginia (1850), I, 274; (1860), 275, 569; in 1916, 715
 Cities, population since 1860, I, 568
 Cities and towns, uniform system for government of (1911), I, 595
 Citizens Bank of Follansbee, II, 43
 Citizens Bank of Hinton, I, 430
 City and County Bank of Moundsville, II, 307
 City streets, brick and concrete, I, 550
 Civil war operations; strategic Monongahela region, I, 374; Confederates invade West Virginia, 375; Baltimore & Ohio Railroad falls into control of Federal troops, 376; McClellan's 20,000 Union troops cross the Ohio at Parkersburg and Wheeling, 376; McClellan's headquarters at Grafton (June, 1861), 377; strategic points, 377, 378; Union victory at Rich Mountain, 379; McClellan called to command the Army of the Potomac and Lee sent to recover West Virginia, 380; railroad communication reestablished between Baltimore, Washington and Wheeling (April, 1862), 381; great transportation feat of the Civil war, 381, 382; Confederates lose the Kanawha Valley (382 and permanently pushed over the Alleghenies, 383; Confederate raid down the Kanawha Valley (1863), 385; other Confederate raids, 386-389
 Clark, David C., II, 98
 Clark, Frank W., III, 622
 Clark, Friend E., II, 152
 Clark, George R., I, 77
 Clark, Hyre D., III, 510
 Clark, James M., III, 498
 Clark, John A., II, 384
 Clark, Luther H., II, 634
 Clark, Walter E., III, 329
 Clarke, George R., expedition into Indian country (1779), I, 87
 Clarksburg, I, 5, 71, 102, 144, 145, 239; educational convention in (1841), 281; first newspaper published in, 303; free school convention at (1841), 317; the most important military post in State, 377; industrial development of, 458; educational convention at, 589
 Clarksburg Telegram, I, 314
 Clarks Gap, I, 496
 Clay, Buckner, III, 238
 Clay, C. C., I, 429
 Clay county, I, 252
 Claypool, George R., II, 572
 Claypool, John, II, 571
 Claysville, I, 240
 Clelland, Calvin M., II, 416
 Clements, Bernard S., II, 540
 Clendenin, George, I, 99, 100
 Clifford, James P., II, 579
 Clifton, John B., III, 366
 Clifton Mills, I, 73
 Clifton Sewer Pipe Yard, New Cumberland, (illustration), I, 466
 Cline, Warren D., II, 586
 Clinton, James B., II, 479
 Close, James B., III, 524
 Clouse, Harry T., II, 388
 Clover Bottom, I, 90
 Clovis, Cassius E., II, 575
 Clovis, Elijah E., III, 308
 Clovis, William E., III, 38
 Cloyd Mountain, battle of, I, 388
 Coal and Coke Railway, I, 478-482
 Coal, formation of, I, 29 first in the Kanawha Valley, 517
 Coal development, progress of, I, 500; estimated amount of deposits, I, 515; exploration and experimental development, 517; production in 1863-1920, 517, 518; notable production (1913-1915), 520, 521; employes in 1920, 521; coal lands owned by great corporations, 521, 522
 Coal industries; along the Kanawha (1839-60), I, 167
 Coal lands monopolized, I, 521, 522
 Coal mines, regulation of, I, 501
 Coal mining, I, 17; Virginia Railway in connection with, 496; production (1900-1920), 713
 Coal mining industries, I, 489, 491
 Coal River branch, Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, I, 439
 Coal Valley, I, 431
 Coalsmouth, I, 161
 Coalter, C. C., III, 497
 Cobun, Sanford L., III, 385
 Cochran, Mrs. Joseph G., I, 704
 Cochran, Nathaniel, I, 219
 Cochran, Philip J., II, 90
 Cochran, William T., II, 465
 Coffman, Charles G., III, 364
 Coffman, Eugene, III, 486
 Coffman, Harry F., III, 192
 Coffman, Ira W., III, 626
 Coffman, Tenman J., III, 196
 Cogar, John S., III, 91
 Cohen, Isadore, II, 352
 Coke, first produced in West Virginia (1843), I, 518
 Coke industry, I, 517
 Coke Ovens, Norfolk and Western Railway, (illustration) I, 518
 Cokeley, Harlin Rex, II, 487
 Colecord, Edward C., Jr., III, 521
 Colecord, Edward C., Sr., III, 521
 Cole, Clyde A., II, 599
 Cole, Harry O., III, 128
 Cole, Henry M., II, 615
 Cole, Irving D., II, 311
 Cole, John L., I, 110
 Cole, J. W., III, 60
 Cole, William J., II, 156
 Colebank, H. Freeman, III, 526
 Colebank, John L., III, 375
 Coleman, Herbert M., II, 471
 Colerider, Moses K., III, 503
 College of Agriculture, West Virginia University, I, 531
 Collins, Jairus, III, 64
 Collins, Walter, III, 575
 Collison, Frank J., II, 518
 Colonial Councillors, I, 41
 Colonial judiciary, I, 41-45
 Colonial militia, I, 46
 Colonial sheriffs, I, 46
 Colonnade Bridge, B. & O. R. R. Ruins of, (illustration), I, 192
 Colored Institute (at Farm) established (1891), I, 590

- Colored schools, established (1866-67), I, 589
- Coltrane, Joseph N., III, 515
- Commencement Hall, West Virginia University (illustration), I, 650
- Commercial fertilizers, I, 528
- Commercial orchard, first, planted (1851), I, 526
- Commission of pharmacy, established (1881), I, 600
- Commissioner of immigration, created (1864), I, 593
- Commissionership of statistics and labor, created (1889), I, 600
- Community life, early, I, 219-252
- Compensation Commissions, expenditure for (1912-1920), I, 619
- Compulsory school law passed (1901), I, 589
- Comuntzis, George P., II, 483
- Conaway, Calvin D., II, 253
- Conaway, Orrin B., III, 35
- Conaway, Wickliffe M., II, 338
- Concord Church, I, 407, 408
- Concord College, II, 630
- Concord Normal School, II, 630
- Concord State Normal School, Athens, (illustration), I, 639
- Conestoga wagons, I, 179
- Conley, Ellis C., II, 424
- Conley, Rollo J., III, 42
- Connelley, Martin L., II, 539
- Conner, Frank E., II, 435
- Conner, Laura V., II, 395
- Conner, Theodore M., II, 395
- Connolly, John, I, 75
- Conservative Life Insurance Company, II, 362
- Consolidated Light Heat and Power Company, III, 346
- Consolidated Telephone Company, I, 541
- Constitution; first, I, 317, 318; of 1830, 323; of 1851, 328-330; of 1861, 358-362; of 1872, 413-423; of 1872, amendments to, 420-423; proposed new, 423; good roads amendment to, 547, 550; of 1872, 552; amendments to, 716, 717
- Constitutional convention, first (1861), I, 357
- Constitutional convention, first (January-April, 1872), I, 413-417
- Constitutional convention of 1872, members of, (illustration), I, 412
- Constitutional problems, early: conflict between eastern and western Virginia (up country Democracy), I, 315, 316; inequalities of county representation, 319, 320; convention at Richmond, 320-323; constitution adopted by popular vote (April, 1830), 324; discussion on State division, 324, 325; struggle of western against eastern Virginia continues, 325-328; convention of 1850-51, 328; constitution of 1851 ratified, 330; endeavors to unify eastern and western Virginia, 331; cleavage more fixed (1861), 333, 334
- Convicts, use of, on public works, I, 603
- Cooley, Edward, II, 329
- Cooley, William R., II, 328
- Cook, Elmer W., III, 498
- Cook, H. Ingram, II, 527
- Cook, Ward, III, 138
- Cook, William C., II, 244
- Cook, William E., II, 529
- Cooke, Cosby C., II, 110
- Cooke, Philip P., I, 683
- Coontz, William J., III, 331
- Cooper, Edward, III, 41
- Cooper, Fred V., II, 155
- Cooper, Victor F., III, 60
- Cooper, William G., II, 517
- "Copeley" oil well, I, 506
- Copeman, Fred, III, 383
- Copeman, Frederick P., III, 384
- Coplin, James A., III, 134
- Coppock, Daniel H., II, 281
- Corbin, John E., II, 337
- Corbly, L. J., I, 638
- Cord Tire Corporation (The), III, 219
- Corder, James S., III, 594
- Corder, Waitman D., III, 564
- Corder, William A., III, 593
- Cordray, T. L., II, 381
- Core, Charles E., II, 149
- Core, Charles H., III, 147
- Corliss, Charles, III, 235
- Corn, I, 528
- Cornstalk, Chief, I, 77; murdered, 84
- Cornwell, John J., I, 523, 561, 564, 565, 693; III, 234
- Corwin, A. F., I, 511
- Coston, Isaac J., II, 587
- Cottrill, Alvin L., II, 466
- Coulter, John L., II, 428
- Council of National Defense, World's war (1916), I, 698
- Counties; formation of early (1727-89), I, 278; formation and population of (1776-1830), 318; represented in Wheeling conventions (maps), 360; non-Union during Civil war, 369-373; foreign-born by (1870-1910), 583
- County and Parish of Frederick (1744), I, 258
- County court system, re-established (1872), I, 418; established (1872), 553
- County fair, first in state, I, 228
- County Farm Bureau, I, 533
- County government, I, 595
- County representation, inequalities of, I, 318, 319
- Courtney, David H., III, 164
- Covert, Orra F., II, 539
- Covington & Ohio Railroad, I, 181, 424
- Covington & Ohio Railroad Company, I, 612
- Cowgill, Ira V., III, 591
- Cowl, Ralph M., III, 580
- Cox, Artimus W., III, 492
- Cox, A. W. Department Store, III, 492
- Cox, Frank, II, 16
- Cox, Howard D., III, 305
- Cox, J. Frank, III, 97
- Cox, Joseph B., III, 159
- Cox, Stanley R., II, 17
- Cox, William A., III, 304
- Coyle, George F., III, 494
- Coyle & Richardson, III, 493
- Craddock, Bantz W., III, 70
- Craddock, Joe N., III, 359
- Cragg, Harry E., III, 166
- Crago, F. H., I, 638
- Crago, Lee R., II, 273
- Craig, Arden L., III, 419
- Craig, Charles A., II, 142
- Craig, James S., III, 419
- Craig, Thomas D., II, 129
- Crane, Cloyd M., III, 25
- Crane, Frank W., II, 140
- Cranmer, Gibson L., I, 354
- Crawford, Herbert M., III, 350
- Crawford, J. Pressley, II, 461
- Crawford, J. U., I, 474
- Crawford, William A., Sr., II, 461

- Crawford & Son, II, 461
 Creager, William A., III, 23
 Creel, Alexander H., I, 157
 Cresap, Michael, I, 75, 76, 77
 Cresap's war, I, 75, 76
 Crigger, Martin V. B., III, 17
 Crites, Iverson W., III, 279
 Crockett, George K., II, 103
 Crogan, Hubert G., II, 217
 Crogan, John F., II, 501
 Crogan, Patrick J., III, 614
 Crook, George, defeats Confederate force (1864), I, 385
 Crooks, Edwin W., II, 463
 Crosfield, William, II, 434
 Cross Roads, I, 99
 Crouch, Lee, III, 560
 Crowder, Enoch H., I, 697
 Crowl, Malissa, I, 277
 Crozet, Claudius, I, 185
 Cruise, William B., III, 95
 Crummett, Harlen S., III, 448
 Culbertson, Andrew, I, 55
 Cumberland county, I, 69
 Cumberland (see also National) Road, I, 169, 216
 Cummings, Thomas, II, 348
 Cunningham, Albert B., I, 690, 694
 Cunningham, Arthur, II, 343
 Cunningham, Claude F., III, 528
 Cunningham, Don, III, 266
 Cunningham, Ekana F., III, 528
 Cunningham, Lawrence M., II, 251
 Cunningham, Robert T., II, 146
 Cunningham, Roy H., II, 56
 Cunningham, R. Lindsay, II, 252
 Cunningham, Thaddeus S., II, 332
 Cuppett, David E., III, 523
 Cushing, John W., III, 131
 Cushwa, Harry S., II, 450
 Cutright, Ishmael G., III, 432
 Cutright, Lemuel R., III, 579
 Cutright, Parley E., III, 413
 Cutright, Ralph G., III, 605

 Dailey, Robert W., II, 84
 Dailey, Robert W., Jr., II, 81
 Dailey, William F., II, 560
 Dairy and beef industries, I, 529
 Dairying, I, 529, 530
 Dakan, Robert G., III, 32
 Dalton, A. J., III, 45
 Daly, Adrian D., II, 605
 Damascus, I, 240
 Dana, John, II, 533
 Dana, John S., III, 99
 Dancer, Robert C., III, 233
 Dandridge, Danske, I, 692
 Dangerfield, A. H., III, 163
 Dangerfield, William S., II, 204
 Danks, Walter L., II, 69
 Darkesville, I, 239
 Darnall, Harry A., III, 427
 Darnall, Harry H., III, 240
 Darnall, Robert A., III, 412
 Darst, J. S., I, 627
 Dasher, Manasseh, II, 350
 Daugherty, G. F., II, 44
 Davenport, Henry B., II, 166
 Davidson, Curtis, II, 475
 Davidson, Edwin L., II, 441
 Davidson, F. E., II, 441
 Davidson, George S., II, 98
 Davidson, Harry A., II, 270
 Davidson, Henry A., II, 98
 Davidson, Walter D., III, 637
 Davidson, William J., II, 475
 Davidson Brothers, II, 98

 Davies, Garfield, II, 175
 Davin, Harlow A., II, 169
 Davin, John Wysor, III, 367
 Davis, Emma K., II, 284
 Davis, George G., III, 270
 Davis, George H., III, 257
 Davis, George L., II, 371
 Davis, Henry G., I, 136, 406, 472, 473, 474, 552, 554, 556
 Davis, Ivan, II, 129
 Davis, J. Horner, III, 601
 Davis, John J., I, 336; II, 284
 Davis, John R., III, 159
 Davis, John W., II, 284
 Davis, Luther C., II, 484
 Davis, Moses H., III, 59
 Davis, Raymond M., III, 66
 Davis, Rebecca Harding, I, 684
 Davis, Robert, I, 285
 Davis, Sydney H., III, 141
 Davis, Thomas E., I, 560
 Davis, Thomas J., III, 282
 Davis, William H., III, 57
 Davis, William O., III, 349
 Davis and Elkins College, III, 623
 Davisson, Ed G., III, 490
 Dawson, John W., III, 615
 Dawson, J. Louis, II, 294
 Dawson, J. Ralph, III, 437
 Dawson, William M. O., I, 561
 Dawson, William N., II, 201
 Day and Night Bank of Williamson, II, 589
 Dayton, Alston G., III, 403
 Dayton, Arthur S., III, 404
 Deahl, J. N., I, 650
 Dean, J. S. W., I, 663
 Dean, William, III, 395
 Deardorff, Edgar N., II, 379
 Debar, J. H. Diss, I, 367, 593
 Debendarfer, Uriah H., III, 202
 Deck, James J., III, 512
 Decker Creek Iron Works, I, 142
 De Poe, Abisha G., III, 384
 De Forest, Clayce R., II, 302
 De Forest, William C., II, 301
 De Forest, William E., II, 302
 Deegans, William E., II, 422
 Deem, Fred B., III, 205
 Deepwater, I, 494, 495
 de Gruyter, Julius A., III, 50
 Deitz, Emerson E., II, 298
 Delbridge, Frederick, III, 6
 Delfino, Diego, II, 287
 Dement, William H. F., II, 115
 Democratic control (1870-1896), I, 551-561
 Democratic-Republic, I, 240
 DeMoss, Amos L., II, 170
 Dennis, Robert F., I, 425
 Dennis, Thomas H., III, 622
 Denominations, distribution of membership by (1890, 1906, 1916), I, 585, 588; statistics of (1916), 587
 Department of Agriculture, expenditure for, I, 619
 Department of Archives and History, Charleston, created (1905), I, 593; expenditure for (1912-1920), 619
 Department of Health, expenditure for (1912-1920), I, 619
 Department of Mines, created (1907), I, 601; expenditure for, 619
 Department of Public Safety, expenditure for (1912-1920), I, 619
 Detroit, expedition against, I, 84
 DeVan, R. P., II, 163
 Dickerson, George J., III, 215
 Dickey, (Miss) M. L., I, 638
 Dickey, William O., II, 162

- Dickinson, J. L., I, 625
 Dickinson, Penn E., II, 375
 Diddle, Fred, III, 200
 Dieckmann, John, II, 369
 Diehl, Henry T., III, 165
 Dille, Clarence B., II, 307
 Dille, John A., II, 307
 Dille, Thomas R., II, 201
 Dils, Henry H., II, 478
 Dils, Hugh P., II, 453
 Dils, James W., II, 455
 Dils, Sherman, II, 453
 Dingess, Joe W., II, 292
 Dinsmoor, James D., III, 161
 Dinwiddie, I, 66
 Dinwiddie, Robert, I, 58, 59, 61
 Diphtheria, I, 251
 Disher, Henry W., II, 480
 Disher's Drug Store, II, 450
 Dias DeBar, J. H., I, 367, 593
 District of West Augusta (map), I, 91
 Division of child welfare and public health nursing, I, 600
 Division of vital statistics, I, 600
 Dixon, Earl, II, 226
 Doctor's saddle bag, I, 251
 Doddridge, Joseph, sketch of, I, 259, 680, 681, 682
 Doddridge county, I, 186, 252
 Doddridge, W. C., I, 690
 Dodge, Charles F., II, 563
 Dolbeare, Benjamin, sketch of, I, 249
 Dollar Savings & Trust Company, III, 14
 Donechoo, Robert S., III, 361
 Donley, Edward G., II, 176
 Donovan, Hugh, Jr., II, 485
 Dorsey, Dennis B., I, 354
 Dotson, James J., III, 647
 Douglass, Andrew M., III, 373
 Dow, Lorenzo, I, 271
 Dower, John J., III, 450
 Dower, William H., III, 647
 Down Draft kilns at the Crescent Yard, New Cumberland, Hancock County (illustration), I, 465
 Downey, George F., Jr., II, 350
 Downs, Harry A., II, 472
 Downs, William S., I, 548; II, 95
 Doyle, James E., II, 577
 Doyle, Joseph N., II, 64
 Drane, Robert M., II, 80
 Draper, C. Lyman, I, 4
 Driehorst, W. A., III, 146
 Droop Mountain, battle of, I, 387
 Dudley, George L., II, 461
 Dudley, John W., II, 73
 Duffield, Charles A., III, 312
 Duffield, Emery B., III, 316
 Dugan, Robert L., III, 43
 Dunaway, Perry C., III, 407
 Duncan, E. S., I, 317
 Duncan, George L., II, 583
 Duncan, James W., III, 490
 Duncan, Porter O., III, 172
 Dunham, Frank C., III, 429
 Dunham, Robert J., III, 485
 Dunham, Robert W., III, 537
 Dunkard Bottom, I, 73
 Dunkle, B. F., III, 574
 Dunlap, Robert F., II, 602
 Dunlap, William M., II, 27
 Dunmore's war, I, 75-79
 Dunn, Hugh A., II, 635
 Dunn, Luther A., II, 205
 Dunn, Thomas L., II, 354
 Dunsford, Ensor R., III, 569
 Duthie, George H., II, 388
 Duty, Michael K., III, 57
 Duval, Harding H., II, 311
 Duval, Isaac H., II, 310
 Dyer, Edmond Roger, III, 334
 Dyer, Osceola, II, 508
 Dyer, Vernon L., II, 214
 Dysentery, treatment of, I, 250
 Eades, James B., II, 519
 Eagle, Edward C., II, 607
 Eagle Manufacturing Company, III, 78
 Eakin, John W., III, 171
 Early, Carl B., II, 211
 Early, Robert L., III, 242
 Early market towns, I, 526
 Easley, Frank S., II, 109
 East India School (1621), I, 277
 Eastern panhandle, settlements of, I, 99; settlements in (1800-66), 134-136; Wheeling, chief town of (1813), 154; Confederate operations in (1861), 389; railroads in, 464
 Eastwood, Harry, III, 616
 Eberts, Carl H., II, 364
 Echols, Louis F., III, 127
 Edelen, Charles W., II, 475
 Edelen, Robert, II, 475
 Edgar, Glenn R., III, 351
 Edgell, Ellis E., III, 439
 Edmonds, Harry J., III, 629
 Edmondson, Richard H., II, 431
 Education (see also schools), I, 17; tradition of, 277; interest of English Church in, 278; public schools established by Virginia General Assembly (1796), 279; Western Virginia champion of free education (1817-45), 280, 281; school statistics by counties (Western Virginia) in 1833, 281; school law of 1846, 282; Old Field schools, 282-284; early schools in counties and sections, 285-291; free school systems in only three counties (1863), 291; academies incorporated (1797-1860), 291, 292; academies and seminaries, 291-296; school statistics (1850), 296, 297; Western Virginia champions free schools, 316, 317, 588; development of public (1863-1908), 590, 591; rates of State school levies (1863-1913), 609, 628-644; schools and the World's war, I, 706; statistics of (1918-21), I, 715, 716
 Education Association, first meeting, I, 636
 Edwards, Seymour, I, 563
 Edwards, Walter A., III, 180
 Elizabeth (Moundsville), I, 104, 239 (1864), 393
 Elizabeth, Wirt county (illustration), I, 446
 Elizabethtown, I, 239
 Elk River, I, 34, 35
 Elkhorn tunnel, I, 483
 Elkins, I, 475, 476, 477
 Elkins, Davis, I, 563
 Elkins, Everett J., II, 567
 Elkins, Stephen B., I, 461, 473, 561
 Elkins, Stephen F., III, 155
 Elkins-Beverly county seat contest, I, 477, 478
 Elliott, Charles, S., II, 641
 Elliott, Felix, II, 141
 Elliott, Mahala J., II, 117
 Elliott, William J., III, 46
 Ellison, John L., III, 629
 End of the World Cliff, Elk River (illustration), I, 28
 England, C. McDonald, II, 235
 England, Edward T., II, 407
 Engle, James W., II, 286
 English Church, its interest in education, I, 278

- English money system used (1803), I, 223
 Enslow, Frank, III, 646
 Epidemics, I, 251
 Episcopal church, I, 257-261; status in 1850, I, 274
 Estep, Charles L., III, 482
 Ethel I, 441
 Eureka-Belmont oil field, I, 506
 Eureka pipe line, I, 510
 European steamship lines, I, 331
 Evans, Charlotte M., III, 29
 Evans, Edward H., II, 506
 Evans, Erasmus S., II, 279
 Evans, Frank L., III, 449
 Evans, Hugh, III, 30
 Evans, Jesse S., III, 254
 Evans, Robert C., III, 254
 Evans, Thomas E., II, 36
 Evansville, I, 185, 240
 Everly, Enoch M., II, 176
 Everly, J. A., II, 412
 Everly, John L., III, 608
 Everly, William H., II, 415
 Exline, Frederick M., III, 354
 Fair, Irvin E., III, 219
 Fairfax, John M. G., II, 367
 Fairfax, Thomas (Lord), sketch of, I, 53
 Fairfax grant, surveyed by Washington (1747-48), I, 53
 Fairfield, I, 239
 Fairmont, I, 102, 143, 144, 240; industrial development of, 459, 460, 462; normal school established at (1867), I, 589
 Fairmont Academy, I, 294
 Fairmont Male and Female Seminary, I, 294
 Fairmont State Normal School (illustration), I, 641
 Fairmont State Normal School, II, 249
 Fairview, I, 104, 168
 Fairview oil fields, I, 505
 Falls of Grassy Creek over Lower Guyandot Sandstone (illustration), I, 30
 Falls of Hominy Creek, Nicholas County (illustration), I, 37
 Faloan, George, III, 238
 Faris, Mary, III, 357
 Faris, Samuel S., III, 356
 Farland, Richard A., III, 75
 Farley, Hiram H., III, 603
 Farley, Rush F., II, 545
 Farley, Thomas, I, 55
 Farley, Thomas J., II, 134
 Farley, William F., II, 576
 Farm implements and machinery, I, 531
 Farmers' institutes and other organizations, I, 533
 Farmers State Bank of Wellsburg, II, 285
 Farnsworth, French M., III, 511
 Farnsworth, John W., III, 279
 Farr, George W., III, 263
 Faulkner, Charles J., I, 413, 555, 558, 560; II, 14
 Faulkner, Charles J., Jr., II, 15
 Faulkner, E. Boyd, I, 556
 Faulkner, Elisha B., II, 222
 Fayette county, I, 167, 252; non-Union, 384; development in, 431
 Feaster, Fred L., III, 357
 Feather, Daniel C., III, 285
 Feather, Deborah A., III, 286
 Feather, Jacob W., III, 380
 Federal constitution, convention to act upon (1788), I, 318
 Feeney, Thomas I., III, 312
 Felker, Samuel S., III, 330
 Feller, Richard R., II, 430
 Fellowsville, I, 185, 240
 Felton, James H., III, 443
 Felton, John C., III, 461
 Fenton, Charles H., III, 179
 Fenton, Frank L., III, 179
 Fenton, John W., III, 179
 Fenton Brothers, III, 178
 Ferguson, Charles W., II, 473
 Ferguson, Francis L., II, 336
 Ferguson, Henry C., III, 637
 Ferguson, Judge, I, 413
 Ferguson, Milton J., II, 305
 Ferguson, Richard C., III, 369
 Ferguson, Walter L., III, 249
 Ferguson, Walter M., II, 524
 Ferrell, John F., II, 111
 Ferrell, J. T., II, 644
 Ferrell, William G., II, 318
 Ferrell, William M., II, 546
 Ferries, I, 233
 Fetterman, I, 240
 Feuerherm, Edward G., II, 470
 Field, Herbert E., III, 605
 Fike, Adolphus R., II, 554
 File, Ashton, III, 635
 Files, Robert, I, 56
 Finance, development of (see also taxation), I, 605-620; 1917-20, 718, 719
 Finley, James W., III, 221
 Finley, Joseph N., III, 232
 Finnell, Charles N., III, 192
 First academy west of the Blue Ridge, I, 110
 First agricultural paper west of the Blue Ridge, I, 300
 First boundaries of West Virginia, I, 358
 First Church building (1740), I, 258
 First church house in Wheeling (1819), I, 269
 First constitutional convention of West Virginia, (1861), I, 357
 First county fair in West Virginia, I, 228
 First family settlement in the Kanawha Valley, I, 71
 First general tax law (1863), I, 613
 First iron manufactured west of the Alleghenies, I, 142
 First legislature meets at Wheeling (July 1, 1861), I, 356
 First "long distance" telephone line, (1894), I, 540
 First Methodist preaching (1773), I, 268
 First Methodist sermon preached in Charleston (1804), I, 270
 First National Bank and Trust Company, of Elm Grove, II, 23
 First National Bank of Chester, III, 245
 First National Bank of Hinton, I, 430
 First National Bank of Parkersburg, I, 159
 First National Bank of Williamson, II, 619
 First newspaper in Shenandoah Valley, I, 299
 First post roads, I, 232
 First postoffices established (1794), I, 232
 First railroad to the Ohio (1853), I, 15
 First settlers of the Shenandoah, I, 52
 First State Capitol Building, Wheeling (Linsly Institute) (illustration), I, 368
 First telephone exchange in the State, (1880), I, 538
 First telephone toll-line in West Virginia, I, 538
 First through stage line between Baltimore and the Ohio River, I, 170
 Fish and game, preservation of, I, 602
 Fisher, Harry M., II, 189
 Fisher, J. B., III, 284
 Fitch, Dorsey P., II, 252

- Fitzgerald, James, III, 173
 Fitzhugh, William D., III, 121
 Flanigan, Edward J., III, 140
 Flat Top coal field, I, 500, 517
 Flatboats, I, 234
 Fleger, C. A. II, 636
 Fleming, Aretas B., I, 558, 559; II, 5
 Fleming, A. Brooks, Jr., II, 6
 Fleming, Carter S., III, 604
 Fleming, Dan B., III, 75
 Fleming, O. Jay, II, 409
 Fleming, Thomas W., II, 227
 Fleming, Wallace B., III, 430
 Fleming, Webster P., III, 149
 Fleming-Goff State election, I, 558, 559
 Flesher, Clinton W., III, 289
 Flesher, Harry E., III, 24
 Flesher, Oliver A., III, 61
 Flessersville, (Preston), I, 146
 Fletcher, Alexander J., II, 312
 Flick, W. H. H., I, 406; II, 346
 Flournoy, Patrick W., III, 235
 Flowers, Franklin E., II, 579
 Floyd, Charles D., II, 470
 Flynn, James W., II, 591
 Flynn, Peter, II, 143
 Foland, Clarke V., II, 421
 Follansbee Brothers Company, III, 255
 Fontaine, William E., I, 531
 Food administration, World's war, I, 703
 Foote, Raymond A., II, 204
 Foote, William S., II, 204
 Forbes, John, I, 63
 Forbes' road, I, 67
 Ford, George M., III, 5
 Ford, James H., III, 643
 Foreign immigration (1880), I, 593
 Foreigners (1860-1920), I, 578-584
 Forest, death knell of West Virginia's greatest primeval, I, 476
 Forests, virgin (1880), (map), I, 534
 Forest, virgin (1913), (map), I, 535
 Forest industries, I, 229, 230
 Forinash, James C., II, 611
 Forman, Allen, II, 363
 Forman, Lewis J., II, 363
 Forney, James E., III, 332
 Fort Belleville, I, 99
 Fort Byrd, I, 62
 Fort Chiswell, I, 61
 Fort Clendenin, I, 99
 Fort Cumberland, I, 61
 Fort Duquesne, as Indian military center
 (1756-58), I, 62
 Fort Henry, I, 86, 93; last siege of (1782),
 I, 88
 Fort Henry, September 11, 1782, (illustration), I, 80
 Fort Le Boeuf, built (1753), I, 58
 Fort Lee, I, 97, 100
 Fort Ligonier, I, 61
 Fort Link, I, 93
 Fort Loudoun, I, 62
 Fort Neal (Neal's Station), I, 99
 Fort Ohio, I, 62
 Fort Pitt, Indians raise siege of (1763), I, 64
 Fort Randolph, Shawnee siege of, I, 87; protects Greenbrier settlements, 90
 Fort Spring, I, 70
 Fort Stanwix, treaty of, I, 70
 Fort Union, I, 70
 Fortney, C. P., II, 44
 Fortney, Clark S., II, 576
 Fortney, Frank D., III, 153
 Fortney, John W., III, 277
 Forts, built on the Kanawha (1783-95), I,
 97, 99
 Forts in French-Indian wars, I, 61, 62
 Foster, Oliver L., II, 643
 Foster, Peregrine sketch of, I, 6, 7
 Foster, William L., II, 643
 Foulk, Tom B., II, 277
 Founders of West Virginia (illustration), I, 349
 Four Minute Men, in World's war, I, 707
 Fourth Methodist Church, Wheeling, I, 269
 Fowlkes, Leslie C., III, 21
 Fox, David, III, 263
 Fox, Fred J., II, 256
 Fox, Fred L., III, 270
 Fox, J. Frank, II, 148
 Frame, Eugene C., III, 508
 Frame, Nat T., II, 74
 Frame, Omer P., III, 284
 Frankford, I, 70, 135
 Frankfort, I, 239
 Franklin, Benjamin, I, 79
 Franklin (Frankford), I, 70, 135, 238, 239
 Franklin county, I, 69
 Frantz, Lester N., II, 301
 Frantz, Stephen D., III, 142
 Frazer, Oscar W., II, 132
 Franzheim, Edward B., II, 412
 Freed negroes, I, 245
 Freeman, Charles W., III, 396
 Freight discriminations, I, 557
 Freight wagons, I, 179
 French, James H., sketch of, I, 638
 French, Minnie R., I, 691
 French, Robert M., III, 365
 French-Indian war, close of, I, 65
 Freshwater, Clarinda E., II, 556
 Freshwater, Ebenezer A., II, 555
 Freshwater, Nancy B., II, 556
 Friedman, Harry, III, 96
 Frum, Jedediah D., II, 599
 Frum, William C., II, 600
 Fry, John, I, 101
 Fry, Thomas M., II, 553
 Fucey, Joseph, III, 463
 Fuel administration, World's war, I, 705
 Fultz, John A., II, 323
 Furbee, Frank E., II, 124
 Furbee, Russell L., II, 125
 Gall, Orion H., III, 324
 Gallatin, Albert, naturalization of, I, 6, 95
 Gamble, Mortimer W., II, 247
 "Gaps," formation of, I, 29, 30
 Garden, John B., II, 25
 Gardiner, Joseph G., III, 168
 Gardiner, Mabel H., II, 636
 Gardner, Ezekiel D., III, 109
 Gardner, Henry S., II, 188
 Gardner, William H. H., III, 515
 Garlow, Aaron J., II, 358
 Garlow, Edgar W., II, 413
 Garnett, Robert, I, 378
 Garrett, Benjamin D., II, 490
 Garrett, Edmund F., II, 354
 Garrett, Harold M., II, 354
 Garrett, John R., III, 66
 Garrison, Benjamin, II, 148
 Garrison, Kate, III, 504
 Garrison, Morris J., III, 504
 Garrison, Norman, III, 147
 Garrison Family, II, 148
 Garvin, James W., II, 307
 Gary, I, 491
 Gary, Miners' Homes and Gardens near (illustrations), I, 516

- Gas development, I, 16; early glass plants stimulate, 499; producing counties, 510, 511; gas used as pumping and manufacturing fuel, 512, 513; piped abroad, like oil, 514; value of production (1882-1921), 515; statistics of (1906-1914), 713
- Gassaway, I, 478
- Gaston, William, III, 361
- Gaston, William H., III, 428
- Gates, Charles A., III, 573
- Gates, Charles B., III, 573
- Gates, Charles M., III, 67
- Gates, Darwin R., III, 67
- Gatrell, Jacob W., III, 111
- Gauley Bridge, Wise defeated by Rosecrans at, I, 383
- Gay, David H., III, 520
- Gay, Harry S., Jr., II, 236
- Gaynor, Hubert E., II, 538
- Geary, Whirley E., III, 480
- Gee, Harry W., II, 281
- Geographical conditions, I, 21-26
- Geographic relations of West Virginia (map), I, 20
- Geological and economic survey, created (1897), I, 592
- Geology, I, 26-36
- George, Samuel, II, 287
- George, Samuel, Jr., II, 288
- George-Sherrard Paper Company, II, 287
- Gibson, Bert T., III, 373
- Gibson, David J., II, 141
- Gibson, D. W., I, 357
- Gibson, Edgar B., III, 343
- Gibson, Enoch S., II, 561
- Gibson, Wayne E., III, 561
- Giddings, Nahum J., II, 151
- Gilbert, Arthur M., III, 323
- Gilbert, Ernest H., II, 448
- Gilechrist, George R. E., II, 410
- Gildersleeve, John R., II, 497
- Gilger, Howard G., III, 106
- Gilmer, Charles H., II, 541
- Gilmer, Harry, III, 572
- Gilmer, Henry, III, 572
- Gilmer county, I, 252
- Gilmore, Jenkin J., II, 370
- Gilmour, John C., II, 234
- Girls' Industrial School, I, 630
- Girty, Simon, I, 77
- Gist, Christopher, I, 54, 55, 58
- Githens, Curran E., III, 436
- Given, Waitman C., II, 134
- Glacial action, I, 32-34
- Glady Creek Fall at Duffy, Lewis county (illustration), I, 479
- Glass, Andrew, II, 68
- Glass industry (1920), I, 714
- Glass plants, early, stimulate gas development, I, 499
- Glasscock, Samuel F., II, 13
- Glasscock, William E., I, 562; II, 14
- Glasscock Family, II, 13
- Glenlyn, I, 90
- Glenville, I, 240; normal school established at (1872), I, 589
- Globe Brick Company, II, 593
- Goad, Alexander H., III, 572
- Gochenour, George S., III, 68
- Gocke, Thomas W., II, 80
- Godbey, Martin V., II, 89
- Goff, James, I, 103
- Goff, Nathan, I, 554, 558; II, 10
- Gohen, Charles M., III, 184
- Golden, W. B., III, 267
- Goldsmith, Chester L., II, 563
- Good, David M., II, 589
- Good, Lee S., II, 335
- Good, Sam, II, 335
- Good Intent Stage Company, I, 171
- Good roads, movement for, I, 547-550
- Good roads law of 1917 revised, I, 547, 548, 549
- Goodknight, James L., I, 648, 659
- Goodloe, Spotswood H., II, 581
- Goodnight, Cloyd, II, 39
- Goodwin, Charles A., II, 107
- Goodykoontz, Wells, III, 317
- Gorby, John H., II, 304
- Gordon, George H., II, 402
- Gordon, John C., III, 565
- Gore, Howard M., III, 627
- Gorman, William H., II, 284
- Gould, Arthur M., III, 425
- Governors of Old Virginia, I, 40
- Gradual emancipation clause in State Constitution (1862), I, 363
- Grady, W. F., III, 589
- Grafton, I, 195, 196, 240, 457
- Grafton and Belington Railroad, I, 457
- Grafton-Parkersburg Branch, Baltimore & Ohio Railway, I, 197-199
- Grafton Educators, III, 103
- Graham, Grant, III, 330
- Graham, James A., II, 379
- Graham, Thomas E., II, 534
- Graham, Thomas E., Jr., II, 535
- Graham, William, I, 110
- Graham, William W., II, 613
- Graham's Station, I, 110
- Grainger, James, II, 498
- Grandville, I, 239
- Grant, Edward M., II, 438
- Grant, Frank L., III, 195
- Grant county, I, 252
- Grantsville, I, 159
- Gravel bar, I, 27
- Graves, Jasper L., III, 323
- Gray, James W., II, 378
- Gray, John, II, 376
- Gray Family, II, 376
- Grazing, I, 528
- Great Kanawha, settlements along the (1808-60), I, 161-167; south of the (1807-60), 167, 168
- Great War Path, I, 37
- Great Western Mail, I, 169
- Greathouse, Daniel, I, 76
- Greeley, Horace, indictment against, I, 248
- Green, Robert, I, 54
- Green, William T., III, 556
- Green Bottom, I, 114
- Greenbrier, I, 92
- Greenbrier branch, Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, I, 440
- Greenbrier county, I, 92, 252; first newspaper published in, 307
- Greenbrier Land Company, I, 55, 56
- Greenbrier region, settlements in (1780-1837), I, 137
- Greenbrier settlements (1777-83), I, 90-93
- Greene, J. H., II, 589
- Greene, William H., III, 157
- Greensburg, I, 240
- Greenville, Treaty of, I, 97, 102
- Greenville Furnace Company, I, 143
- Groer, William B., II, 279
- Gregg, John M., II, 174
- Groigsville, I, 193
- Gribble, Oakley S., II, 309
- Grier, John A., III, 33
- Griffey, Bessie D., II, 327
- Griffey, Harvey F., II, 327
- Griffin, Lloyd D., II, 309
- Griffith, Victor N., III, 347
- Griggs, Abraham L., III, 507

- Grimes, Thomas, I, 527
 Grimes, William C., III, 214
 Grimes Golden apple, I, 527
 Grimm, Clayford T., III, 426
 Grisell, Edward C., II, 305
 Grisell, Elmer F., II, 305
 Grodhaus, George H., II, 23
 Grose, S. C., III, 573
 Grose, Walter R., III, 452
 Gross Sales Tax, I, 620
 Grove, Arthur W., III, 576
 Grove, John B., II, 212
 Grove, Roy C., II, 186
 Groves, Alexander, III, 286
 Groves, Harman F., III, 346
 Grow, Adam, II, 150
 Grubb, James K., II, 499
 Gum, Elbert W., II, 523
 Gustafson, Swan A., II, 143
 Gustkey, Carl E., III, 281
 Guthrie, Joseph A., II, 271
 Guthrie, Lewis V., III, 145
 Guyandotte, I, 114, 161, 239
 Guyandotte and Buffalo Creek branch, Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, I, 441

 Hadden, Harry C., III, 42
 Haddox, Ella M., I, 693
 Hagen, Hugh B., III, 187
 Hager, Philip, III, 343
 Hale, J. P., I, 166
 Hale, Roy R., III, 178
 Hale, Wiley M., II, 60
 Hall, B. A., III, 287
 Hall, Belle J., II, 402
 Hall, Charles W., II, 568
 Hall, Ellery R., I, 357
 Hall, Ephraim B., I, 354
 Hall, E. T. W., III, 133
 Hall, George C., III, 478
 Hall, Grant P., II, 193
 Hall, Granville D., I, 247, 690
 Hall, Harvey A., II, 466
 Hall, James, I, 235
 Hall, James H., II, 452
 Hall, James H., III, 648
 Hall, John, I, 357
 Hall, J. Townson, III, 73
 Hall, Nathan L., III, 558
 Hall, Oscar L., III, 516
 Hall, Richard H., III, 510
 Hall, S. Judson, II, 152
 Hall, Septimius, III, 135
 Hall, Van B., III, 319
 Hall, William H., III, 132
 Hallanan, Walter S., III, 543
 Haller, Flavius B., III, 124
 Haller, Herman S., III, 478
 Haller, Morris J., II, 199
 Haller, William P., III, 74
 Hamilton, Augustus A., Jr., II, 154
 Hamilton, Frederic R., III, 441
 Hamilton, J. Y., II, 103
 Hamilton, Millard F., III, 440
 Hamilton, Ralph R., III, 643
 Hamilton, Thomas S., II, 196
 Hamilton, William W., II, 319
 Hamilton Family, II, 318
 Hamlin, I, 240
 Hammer, Walter P., III, 275
 Hammond, William G., III, 394
 Hampshire County, I, 54, 55, 99; ferries and early iron industries in, I, 135, 252
 Hampshire County and Parish, I, 258
 Hampshire Furnace Company, I, 135
 Hamrick, Dolliver H., II, 337
 Hancock, George N., II, 206

 Hancock county, early settlers in, I, 104, 157, 252
 Hancock County Building and Loan Company, III, 246
 Hanford, Jabez B., II, 251
 Hankins, Ida, III, 27
 Hanna, Curtis M., II, 536
 Hannis, Herbert E., III, 19
 Harahan, W. J., I, 428
 Hardin, George D., III, 134
 Hardin, William E., III, 135
 Hardman, N. L., III, 522
 Hardy, Irvin, II, 175
 Hardy, Paul, III, 175
 Hardy county, I, 99, 252
 Harless, Floyd H., III, 235
 Harless, James A., II, 565
 Harless, William F., III, 126
 Harloe, Walter W., II, 546
 Harman, Everett M., II, 505
 Harman, George A., II, 512
 Harman, Raymond G., II, 449
 Harmansville, I, 240
 Harmer, Harvey W., II, 541
 Harmer, William J. S., III, 80
 Harmison, Morgan S., II, 425
 Harper, Jacob M., II, 627
 Harper, Robert, I, 51
 Harpers Ferry, national arsenal erected at, I, 134; Baltimore & Ohio Railway reaches (1833), 189, 240; seizure of the arsenal, 342; arsenal at, fired by United States forces, 389; occupation by Confederates, (September, 1862), 391
 Harrington, F. C., I, 510
 Harris, Mrs. F. M., II, 413
 Harris, Ira, III, 357
 Harris, James T., II, 528
 Harris, John T., II, 36
 Harris, Thomas L., II, 528
 Harrison, Henry S., I, 691
 Harrison, James F., II, 86
 Harrison, Leigh H., III, 497
 Harrison, Nathaniel, sketch of, I, 403, 404, 407
 Harrison, Peyton R., III, 242
 Harrison, Samuel R., Jr., II, 389
 Harrison, Thomas W., III, 333
 Harrison, William A., I, 355
 Harrison county, I, 102, 252; early schools of, 287
 Harrisville, I, 159, 239
 Harrold, Charles C., III, 169
 Hart, Hastings H., I, 699
 Hartford, I, 240
 Hartley, Alva L., II, 151
 Hartley, Harry F., III, 141
 Hartley, Joseph M., II, 458
 Hartman, H. Foster, III, 338
 Hartman, L. Bert, II, 553
 Hartmann, Henry J., II, 66
 Harvey, Charles P., II, 535
 Harvey, William H., I, 691
 Harvey, William T., III, 210
 Harvie, William J., II, 32
 Haslacker, Anthony B., II, 342
 Hastings, Lynn, II, 97
 Hatfield, David D., II, 497
 Hatfield, H. D., I, 564
 Hatfield, Joseph P., III, 92
 Hatfield, Valentine, III, 65
 Hatfield, William J., II, 540
 Hatfield-McCoy feud, I, 621
 Haught, W. B., III, 605
 Hawkins, Alfred L., II, 408
 Hawkins, Edward M., III, 403
 Hawkins, Harris C., III, 255
 Hawkins, H. Ernest, II, 384

- Hawkins, J. Marshall, II, 265
 Hawley, Arthur W., II, 203
 Haworth, Clarence E., II, 619
 Hawthorne Nail Works, I, 142
 Haymaker, Frank B., II, 598
 Haymond, A. F., sketch of, I, 402
 Haymond, Luther, I, 287
 Haymond, William S., II, 146
 Haynes, Andrew F., III, 152
 Hays, Peregrine, III, 203
 Hays, Samuel A., III, 203
 Hays, Samuel L., III, 203
 Hazlett, John, II, 335
 Hazlett, Robert, II, 259
 Heasley, Ernest F., II, 523
 Heath, Frank C., III, 647
 Heatherman, Kenna J., II, 368
 Heavner, Homer M., III, 578
 Heavner, Jacob W., III, 612
 Hechmer, John L., II, 501
 Hedges, Charles T., III, 274
 Hedgesville, I, 240
 Hedley, George R., II, 262
 Hefner, Oscar V., II, 418
 Hefner, William C., III, 315
 Heintzelman, Harry L., II, 441
 Hellfire band, I, 246
 Helmick, Abe L., III, 522
 Helmintholer, Luther W., III, 370
 Helvetia, founded by Swiss immigrants (1869), I, 593
 Henderson, Alexander, III, 179
 Henderson, Campbell H., II, 49
 Henderson, John J., II, 44
 Henderson Family, III, 179
 Hendrickson, Daniel P., III, 74
 Hennen, F. Wilbur, II, 646
 Hennen, Nellie A., II, 646
 Hennen, Robert D., II, 193
 Henritze, William W., II, 495
 Henry, Charles O., II, 228
 Henry, E. Wayne, II, 488
 Henry, James E., III, 294
 Henry Family, II, 488
 Henshaw Family, II, 636
 Hensley, Edmund L., III, 246
 Henson, E. Bennette, II, 206
 Henthorn, Harry A., III, 56
 Hereford, Frank, I, 554
 Hereford, Will D., II, 292
 Herefords, I, 529
 Herold, George A., III, 24
 Herold, John M. Jr., III, 85
 Hersman, Stanley B., III, 433
 Hervey, George B., II, 258
 Hervey, James, I, 265
 Heslop, William A., III, 615
 Heslop, John W. C., III, 619
 Heslop, Robert J., III, 620
 Hess, Aaron T., III, 449
 Hess, James N., II, 366
 Hetherington, George W., II, 421
 Hewit, A. M., II, 120
 Hewitt, Daniel E., II, 121
 Hewitt, John F., III, 338
 Hibbs, James E., III, 129
 Hickey, E. M., III, 100
 Hickman, Charles L., II, 405
 Hicks, Thomas M., III, 91
 Higgins, Harry A., II, 413
 Higgins, William R., II, 217
 High school era, I, 632, 633
 High schools, I, 636; development of (1909-21), 716
 Higher education: West Virginia University, I, 644-673; denominational and private institutions, 678
 Highland, Scotland G., II, 334
 Highland, Virgil L., III, 183
 Highway development (1910-1920), I, 548-550
 Highway inspector, office of created (1907), I, 602
 Highways (historic), I, 169-186
 Hildebrand, Clement C., II, 99
 Hildreth, S. P., I, 517
 Hill, Edwin F., III, 544
 Hill, James O., II, 368
 Hill, J. Logan II, 639
 Hill, Lee C., III, 65
 Hill, Okey J., III, 404
 Hill, Owen D., III, 594
 Hill, Summers R., III, 576
 Hill, William, I, 704
 Hiner, Ben H., II, 322
 Hines, Cary C., III, 269
 Hines, Edward, II, 641
 Hines, William B., II, 642
 Hinkle, James W., II, 450
 Hinton, Evan, I, 409, 410, 429-430
 Hissam, Sam, III, 34
 Hissom, John L., III, 37
 History, uses of local, I, 1-11
 Hite, Bert H., II, 429
 Hite, Joist (Yost), I, 51
 Hite, Ralph M., II, 412
 Hite, Rolfe M., II, 397
 Hite vs. Fairfax, I, 51
 Hites, Bert H., II, 429
 Hiteshew, C. Talbott, II, 3
 Hiteshew, Harry O., II, 538
 Hixenbaugh, Russell B., III, 156
 Hobbaugh, John K., III, 613
 Hobbs, Robert R., III, 250
 Hodges, Charles E., II, 240
 Hodges, Milton S., III, 547
 Hodges, Thomas E., I, 638, 648; II, 238
 Hoehnig, Arthur V., II, 245
 Hoff, Monzell M., III, 297
 Hoffman, Alexander C., II, 274
 Hofmann, Henry J., Jr., II, 385
 Hoge, Joseph H., III, 591
 Hogg, George W., III, 632
 Hogg, James A., II, 570
 Hogs, I, 530
 Hogsett, Everett L., II, 325
 Holbert, Edward F., II, 381
 Holden, I, 441
 Holden, Camden H., II, 460
 Holland, Bruce L., III, 113
 Holland, Claude L., II, 334
 Holliday's Cove, I, 104
 Hollis, Harry, II, 186
 Holloran, Jess W., III, 496
 Holloway, Jacob J., II, 337
 Holman, Philip A., II, 242
 Holroyd, Samuel R., III, 47
 Holswade, William G., III, 368
 Holt, Alfred A., III, 81
 Holt, Howard H., II, 585
 Holt, John H., I, 561; II, 586
 Holt, J. Howard, II, 548
 Homestead (Tomahawk) rights, I, 69
 Hood, Elmer E., II, 522
 Hood, Joseph C., III, 173
 Hoover, Benjamin M., III, 558
 Hoover, Draper C., III, 88
 Hopkins, Elliott B., II, 201
 Hopkins, Joseph M., III, 349
 Horehler, Frederick W., III, 283
 Hornbrook, Thomas, I, 354
 Hornor, James D., III, 278
 Hornor, James H., III, 276
 Hornor, Vance L., III, 278
 Horses, I, 530
 Hospital for the Insane at Weston, I, 146
 Hospital for the Insane, Huntington, I, 597

- Hospitals and charitable institutions, expenditures upon (1870-1912), I, 617
- Hott, David, II, 195
- Houghton, John W., II, 289
- House of Delegates, I, 594
- Howard, Clarence D., III, 344
- Howard, Daniel, II, 435
- Howard, Harriet F., II, 436
- Howard, John, I, 53
- Howell, Lee R., II, 145
- Howell, William H., III, 426
- Hubbard, Chester D., (illustration), I, 349
- Hubbard, William P., I, 605; II, 621
- Huddleston, Abraham E., III, 544
- Huddy Thomas H., II, 569
- Huddins, Okey L., III, 156
- Hudson, Lester J., III, 191
- Huffman, Hiram D., II, 316
- Huffman, Otho C., II, 35
- Hughart, Joseph R., II, 195
- Hughes, A. G., III, 600
- Hughes, Charles E., II, 517
- Hughes, James A., III, 638
- Hughes, William O., Jr., II, 426
- Hughes River oil district (1864), I, 393
- Hugus, Wright, II, 227
- Humane Society, expenditure for (1912-1920), I, 619
- Hume, William W., III, 364
- Humphreys, Albert J., II, 624
- Humphreys, Alfred N., III, 357
- Humphreys, James S., II, 624
- Hundley, William O., III, 275
- Hunt, Bramwell B., II, 544
- Hunt, Everett A., III, 351
- Hunt, James S., III, 107
- Hunter, Carl H., III, 390
- Hunter, David, III, 243
- Hunter, Edmund P., III, 243
- Hunter, Henry F., III, 618
- Hunter, H. W., III, 390
- Hunter, James, II, 426
- Hunter, James G., II, 237
- Hunter, John A., III, 617
- Hunter, John W., II, 444
- Hunter, Robert L., III, 570
- Hunter, R. M. T., I, 335
- Hunter, William L., III, 239
- Huntersville, I, 137-239
- Huntington, Collis P., I, 424, 425, 430, 437
- Huntington: Chesapeake & Ohio Railway opened to, I, 425, 437, 438; early telephone service at, 539; normal school established at (1867), 589
- Huntington Chamber of Commerce, I, 438
- Huntington National Bank, I, 437
- Hurricane Valley tavern, I, 180
- Hurst, Frelove, III, 94
- Hurst, William A., III, 93
- Hurst, William R., III, 93
- Huston, Charles R., III, 106
- Huston, Chauncey W., III, 154
- Hutchison, J. H., III, 299
- Hutson, Hiram, III, 79
- Hygienic laboratory, established (1914), I, 599
- Hylton, Charles D., II, 505
- Hymes, Mathew E., II, 618
- Iafolla, Tony, II, 493
- Ice, William T., III, 339
- Ice, William T. Jr., III, 339
- Ihli, John F., II, 101
- Imboden, John D., I, 386
- Imboden raid (1863), I, 386, 387
- Indian dangers removed, I, 212
- Indian depredations (1783-93), I, 101
- Industrial awakening; along the Kanawha, I, 424-442; south of the Kanawha, 483-498
- Industrial expansion; north of the Kanawha, I, 443-482
- Industries, early, I, 227, 228; along line of new Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, 426, 427; of Charleston, 435; lumber, developed by the B. & O. Railroad, 450-453; in Morgantown, 463; of Bluefield, 489; timber, 534, 535.
- Ingles-Draper settlement destroyed, I, 61
- Ingram, Corley R., III, 453
- Inns: along the National (Cumberland) Road, I, 172; along James River and Kanawha turnpike, I, 179, 180
- Insane, hospitals for, I, 146, 597
- Institutions for dependents, defectives and delinquents, I, 597
- Insurance companies, regulated, I, 602
- Intermittent fever, treatment of, I, 250
- Internal improvements (1844), I, 326; (1858-60), 332
- Interstate controversies, I, 717, 718
- Interstate relations: minor questions, I, 621, 622; boundary dispute with Maryland, 622, 623; the Virginia debt question, 623-627
- Ireland, Ritchie A., II, 265
- Irish immigration, I, 149, 150, 184
- Irish settlement on Roaring Creek, I, 149
- Iron, early smelting of, I, 5
- Iron, first manufactured west of the Alleghenies, I, 142
- Iron and steel industries (1920), I, 715
- Iron furnaces, early, I, 231
- Iron industries, early, in Hampshire county, I, 135, pioneer, Monongalia County, 142; early, of Wheeling, 155; early, (1790-1855), 231, 232
- Irons, Harry S., II, 322
- Irons, Robert S., III, 558
- Irvin, Frank W., III, 220
- Irvine, William B., II, 390
- Isaac Ballangee tract, I, 430
- Itinerant preachers, I, 222, 223
- Jackson, Curtis G., III, 627
- Jackson, D. Alton, III, 105
- Jackson, George W., III, 88
- Jackson, Jacob B., I, 555
- Jackson, John J., I, 336, 337
- Jackson, Naaman, II, 578
- Jackson, Stephen G., III, 455
- Jackson, Stonewall, surrender of Harper's Ferry to, I, 390
- Jackson, T. Moore, III, 203
- Jackson, William L., I, 387
- Jackson county, I, 109, 252
- Jackson Family, II, 465
- "Jackson Hall," I, 180
- Jacob, Carl K., III, 73
- Jacob, John G., III, 73
- Jacob, John J., I, 551, 553
- Jacob, Samuel S., II, 49
- Jacobs, Cephas, II, 173
- Jacobs, Elmer F., III, 174
- Jacobs, John M., II, 24
- Jaeger, Otto, II, 50
- James, Ireland, II, 591
- James River and Kanawha Canal Company, I, 331
- "James River and Kanawha Company," I, 234, 470
- James River and Kanawha Turnpike, I, 174-181 tolls on abandoned, 426
- Jameson, John F., II, 88
- Jane Lew, I, 447, 454
- Janes, William III, 333

- Janney, Aquila, III, 393
 Jansman, Edward B., II, 210
 Jarrell, Boyd, III, 185
 Jarrell, Kyle M., III, 139
 Jarrett, Lawrence A., III, 289
 Jarrett, Mark L., II, 644
 Jarrett, Thompson H., II, 644
 Jarrett, Ulysses S., III, 520
 Jarrett Family II, 643
 Jarvis, Benjamin B., III, 16
 Jarvis, Hugh, III, 366
 Jarvis, Roy H., II, 165
 Jayne, David A., III, 545
 Jeffers, George D., II, 528
 Jefferson, Thomas, I, 279
 Jefferson county, I, 252, 368
 Jefferson Glass Company, III, 464
 Jenkins, Gen. Albert G., raid of I, 386; killed at Cloyd Mountain, 388
 Jenkins, Albert G., III, 503
 Jenkins, Cletus H., II, 443
 Jenkins, Earl, II, 139
 Jenkins, George W., Jr., III, 494
 Jenkins, O. C., II, 374
 Jenkins, Rucker, II, 530
 Jewell, Levi, III, 456
 John, William S., II, 476
 John Brown's Fort, Harper's Ferry (illustration), I, 390
 Johnson, Alba V., III, 573
 Johnson, D. D., I, 553
 Johnson, Fanny K., I, 691
 Johnson, Herman G., III, 553
 Johnson, Joseph, I, 325
 Johnson, Louis A., III, 123
 Johnson, R. Osburn, III, 273
 Johnson, Ransel, II, 584
 Johnson, Raymond W., III, 575
 Johnson, Samuel B., II, 382
 Johnson, Vernon E., II, 425
 Johnson, Walter W., II, 238
 Johnson, William L., II, 437
 Johnson, William R., I, 425
 Johnson, William S., I, 625, 627; III, 52
 Johnston, David E., II, 131
 Johnston, Job W., II, 311
 Johnston, W. D., III, 258
 Johnston, Walter L., III, 56
 Jones, Anderson P., III, 182
 Jones, Andrew J., III, 155
 Jones, Benhring H., I, 415, 686
 Jones, Breckinridge, I, 698
 Jones, Clement R., II, 95
 Jones, Edward C., II, 126
 Jones, H. C., I, 671
 Jones, J. Ralph, III, 503
 Jones, Quince, III, 456
 Jones, Samuel C., III, 458
 Jones, Thomas J., III, 194
 Jones, Thomas K., II, 123
 Jones, William, III, 153
 Jones, William E., I, 386
 Jones, William T., II, 367
 Journals (see Newspapers)
 Judiciary, I, 594
 Judy, Edmund D., II, 329
 Judy, Manassah S., II, 216
 "Jug" of Middle Island Creek, Tyler
 County (illustration) I, 32
 Junkins, J. Frank, III, 262
 Jury trial (Colonial), I, 47
 Juvenile courts, I, 598

 Kanawha, proposed name for new State, I, 358
 Kanawha City (Coalsmouth), I, 161
 Kanawha county, military establishments of, I, 100; 252, early schools of, 290

 Kanawha House, I, 180
 Kanawha, Pocahontas & Coal River Railway, I, 436
 Kanawha River, I, 32, 33; improvements of (1820-70), I, 234, 235
 Kanawha river section, early schools of, I,
 289
 Kanawha Salines, salt works at, I, 165, 166
 Kanawha Valley, first settlement in, I, 71;
 Lewis Summers' trip to (1808), 129-133; newspapers in, 309, 310; Confederate raid down, 385; first coal in, 517
 Kane, John A., III, 564
 Kaplan, Bernhard, III, 401
 Karnes, Harry D., II, 523
 Kastle, John W. Jr., III, 379
 Keadle, Newton J., III, 76
 Keatley, Edwin M., III, 496
 Keel-boat passenger travel (1794-1810), I, 235
 Keenan, Thomas G., II, 152
 Keener, Joseph L., II, 294
 Keim, William H., III, 550
 Keister, Harry S., II, 230
 Keith, Todd W., III, 60
 Keller, George W., II, 162
 Kelley, Benjamin F., I, 375
 Kelley, John W., II, 560
 Kelley, Patrick J., II, 519
 Kelly, Alonzo C., II, 639
 Kelly, Charles T., II, 562
 Kelly, Edmund H., III, 433
 Kelly, Leonidas H., III, 344
 Kelly, Walter, I, 71
 Kendall, Norman F., III, 385
 Kenna, Edward B., I, 693
 Kenna, John E., I, 556, 558
 Kennedy, Cornelius, II, 537
 Kennedy, Duncan C., III, 370
 Kennedy, Isaac S., III, 197
 Kennedy, John R., II, 538
 Kenney, Amos E., II, 620
 Kenny, Tom F., III, 400
 Kenova, I, 492
 Kenton, Simon, I, 77
 Kermit, I, 492
 Kerr, Raymond E., II, 358
 Kersey, William W., II, 418
 Kershner, George A., II, 616
 Kesling, Harley C., III, 550
 Kesselman, William H., II, 516
 Kesterson, George E., II, 249
 Keyser, I, 136
 Keyser, Jesse E., III, 310
 Keystone, I, 491
 Kidd, Barney L., III, 370
 Kidd, Robert E., II, 402
 Knight, Harry B., II, 356
 Kimball, I, 491
 Kimble, John A., III, 415
 King, Austin J., III, 122
 King, Eugene J., II, 161
 King, Herbert V., II, 192
 King, Jehu, III, 582
 King, Kirk, II, 326
 King, Owen J., III, 561
 King, P. F., II, 219
 King, Robert E., III, 561
 King, Thomas W., III, 387
 Kingwood, I, 143, 194, 240
 Kinstrey, Robert, III, 597
 Kirk, Joseph B., II, 88
 Kirkpatrick, Frank C., II, 23
 Kirtley, Thomas E., III, 568
 Kisner, John M., II, 483
 Kittle, Warren B., III, 479
 Kitts, Henry B., II, 423
 Kleneke, George E., II, 609

- Knapp, Ulysses A., III, 37
 Kneisly, Frank H., III, 329
 Knight, Wallace, III, 590
 Koblegard, Bertram A., III, 158
 Koblegard, John, II, 345
 Koblegard, Peter H., II, 285
 Koen, Oliver N., III, 581
 Koepfer, W. E. E., II, 521
 Kokoachak, Geza, III, 280
 Koon, Samuel, I, 196
 Koontown (Mannington), I, 196
 Koontz, Arthur B., I, 565; II, 69
 Krebs, Charles E., III, 530
 Krebs, George R., III, 572
 Kreps, Charles A., II, 534
 Kump, Garnett K., III, 316
 Kump, Herman G., III, 534
 Kunst, Albert H., II, 429
 Kurner, David C., II, 199
 Kuykendall, James S., III, 599
 Kyle, Karl B., II, 350
- Laing, John B., III, 188
 Laird, James R., II, 159
 Lake Kanawha, I, 32
 Lake Monongahela, I, 32
 Lakin, James S., II, 520
 Lamb, Daniel, (illustration), I, 349, 355
 Lambert, Edward C., II, 631
 Lambert, George D., II, 185
 Lambert, Homer T., III, 268
 Lambert, J. Ernest II, 618
 Lambert, Marvin, II, 594
 Lambert, Osear D., III, 587
 Lambert, Walter J., III, 112
 Lambert, Walter W., III, 588
 Lambie, Robert M., II, 65
 Lampblack, product of natural gas, I, 514
 Lancasterian Academy, I, 294
 Land, John F., II, 115
 Land titles, I, 419
 Landstreet, Fairfax S., Jr., II, 349
 Lane, Howard C., III, 259
 Langfitt, Frank V., II, 583
 Langhans, Arthur, II, 45
 Lanham, Ward, II, 232
 Lantz, Lewis E., III, 128
 LaRue, Daniel L., III, 634
 LaRue, George B., III, 363
 LaRue, Rolandus S., III, 198
 Lasky, Julius, II, 514
 Lasky, Sol, II, 514
 Latrobe, B. H. I, 192, 198
 Law, Clyde O., II, 414
 Law, James E., II, 365
 Law & Roberts, II, 414
 Lawnsville (Logan Court House), I, 167, 240
 Lawrence, Alexander C., II, 320
 Lawson, Carl S., II, 387
 Lawson, Jesse G., III, 531
 Lawson, John C., II, 597
 Lawson, Joseph C., III, 56
 Lawson, Lafayette E., II, 594
 Lazear, Orion L., III, 109
 Lazenby, George W., III, 43
 Lazier, William, I, 355
 Lazzell, Cornelius C., III, 345
 Lazzell, Mary P. P., III, 345
 Lazzell, Rufus F., III, 345
 Lazzell, Rufus Jr., III, 346
 Lazzell, Thomas, II, III, 345
 Lazzell, Wenona E. F., III, 346
 Lazzelle, Donald G., III, 1
 Lazzelle, I. Grant, III, 1
 Leach, Walter E., III, 25
 Leahy, William J., III, 540
 Leap, Theodore G., II, 511
- Leary, William F., II, 434
 Leavitt, Carr T., II, 515
 Leavitt, George E., II, 514
 Leckie William, II, 62
 Lee, George H., I, 281
 Lee, John W., III, 474
 Lee, Robert E., sent to recover West Virginia, I, 380
 Lee, Thomas E., II, 639
 Lee, William H., III, 291
 Lee Wilson, forms Methodist society at Wheeling (1785), I, 269
 Lees, Thomas J., I, 324, 682
 Leftwich, Fleming C., III, 117
 Legal profession (Colonial), I, 47
 Leggett, Clarence W., III, 410
 Legislature, composition and meetings of, I, 594
 Leib, Charles, I, 685
 Leighton, William, Jr., I, 686
 Leive, Gustav W., II, 334
 LeMasters, Claude G., II, 37
 LeMasters, Thomas G., II, 334
 Lemley, Cassius M., II, 531
 Lenhard, James A., II, 225
 Leonard, Everett A., Jr., II, 114
 Letcher, John, I, 351, 352
 Leu, Raymond H., II, 530
 Levelton Male and Female College, I, 295
 Levinstein, Simon M., III, 633
 Lewellyn, Anthony G., III, 630
 Lewis, Andrew, I, 55, 56, 61
 Lewis, Charles, march to Fort Cumberland (1755), I, 60, 61
 Lewis, Fred, III, 46
 Lewis, George E., III, 218
 Lewis, John, I, 52, 56
 Lewis, John F., III, 445
 Lewis, Virgil A., I, 636
 Lewis, William D., III, 223
 Lewis, I, 76
 Lewis and Upshur counties, first mill in, I, 103
 Lewis county, I, 146, 252; first newspaper published in, 304; oil fields, 455
 Lewis County Academy, I, 294
 Lewis county oil "gushers," I, 506, 508
 Lewisburg, I, 70, 100, 137, 180, 239; battle of, I, 384
 Lewisburg Academy, I, 295
 Lewisburg Female Institute, I, 295
 Lewisport, I, 239
 Liberty loan drives, World's war, I, 702, 703
 Libraries (other than private), 1850, I, 297
 License tax imposed (1909), I, 602
 Licenses, State taxes on, I, 617
 Licklider, Harry T., II, 398
 Lilly, A. A., I, 564
 Lilly, Henry A., II, 447
 Lilly, Johnson H., III, 47
 Lilly, T. H., II, 617
 Lilly, Wilbur J., II, 420
 Limestone, I, 27
 Lincoln, Abraham, approves statehood bill, (December 31, 1862), I, 364, 365; newspapers solidly support for second term, 373; Amnesty proclamation, 402
 Lincoln county, I, 113, 252
 Linger, Aaron N., III, 507
 Linger, Wade, III, 80
 Link, Mary E., III, 226
 Link, Walter S., III, 226
 Linsly Institute, first State Capitol Building (illustration) I, 368; first State House of West Virginia (erected 1858), 369
 Linthicum, John C., II, 369
 Linton, Harry C., III, 430

- Lister, William M., II, 264
 Literary Fund created (1810), I, 279, 280, 282, 285, 316
 Literature and literary writers: early prose writers, I, 680, 681; poetry and poets, 682-684; prose and verse of Civil war and Reconstruction periods, 684-687; literature of 1885-1921 period, 687-694; conclusion, 694-696
 Little, John R., II, 61
 Little Kanawha, early settlers along, I, 104-110
 Little Levels, I, 70
 Little Levels Academy, I, 295
 Littlepage, Adam B., II, 9
 Littlepage, Burrell K., III, 90
 Littlepage, Samuel D., III, 89
 Littlepage, Stephen C., II, 10
 Live Oak Paper Mills, I, 142
 Lively, Joseph W., III, 162
 Livestock, I, 528, 529, 530, 536
 Lloyd, Charles W., II, 298
 Lloyd, John W., II, 433
 Loan associations, provided for (1907), I, 601
 Loar, David H., II, 406
 Local history, suggestive outline for study of, I, 720
 Loewenstein, Isaac, II, 260
 Log schoolhouse, I, 630, 631
 Logan, I, 441
 Logan, chief of the Mingos, murder of family, I, 75, 76
 Logan county, I, 167, 252
 Logan Court House, I, 167
 Logsdon, John T., II, 506
 Logue, James J., III, 132
 Lohm, Albert L., III, 104
 Long, Charles H., II, 229
 Long, Joseph H., III, 546
 Long Simeon L., III, 125
 Long, William E., III, 151
 Lorentz, Jacob, I, 148
 Lory, Ed., III, 529
 Lory, F. & Sons, III, 529
 Louchery, Charles W., III, 11
 Louchery, Daniel C., III, 10
 Louisa, I, 168
 Love, J. H., III, 161
 Love, Robert W., II, 341
 Loving, James F., II, 437
 Lovins, William T., II, 375
 Lowe, Scott C., III, 622
 Lowndes, Lloyd, II, 386
 Lowther, William, I, 71
 Loy, Edgar J., II, 295
 Lucas, Charles F., III, 340
 Lucas, Daniel B., I, 650, 685
 Lucas, Henry A., II, 372
 Lucas, Orlo A., III, 28
 Lucas, William A., II, 196
 Ludlow, Lewis M., II, 464
 Luke, Allan L., II, 136
 Lumber industries (1920), I, 715
 Lumberport, I, 240
 Lung-fever, treatment of, I, 250
 Lunsford, Commodore F., III, 177
 Lutes, David C., II, 305
 Luther, John W., III, 369
 Lutheran church, I, 267, 268; status in 1850, I, 274
 Luttrell, Ernest L., III, 19
 Lutz, George W., II, 262
 Luzader, Everett A., II, 116
 Lynchburg and New River Railroad, I, 187
 Lyon, Albert N., III, 375
 Lyon, Frank R., II, 48
 Mack Manufacturing Company, III, 249
 Macklin, Ernest W., II, 515
 MacCorkle, William A., I, 240, 560; 561; III, 4
 MacDonald, William, II, 181
 MacFarland, Robert L., III, 124
 MacPhail, Raymond F., II, 135
 MacQueen, George A., III, 506
 MacTaggart, Guy C., III, 108
 MacTaggart, William N., III, 365
 "Mad Anne Bailey," I, 99, 100
 Madden, Joseph W., I, 671
 Madison, I, 167
 Madison, James B., III, 458
 Magee, Maxie C., III, 231
 Magee, William H., II, 65
 Magill, Mary T., I, 685
 Mahan, Alexander E., III, 230
 Mahan, Edward K., II, 63
 Mahan, Herman B., II, 43
 Mahan, John L., III, 509
 Mahan, Lorenzo F., III, 231
 Mahan, Thomas J., II, 42
 Mahon, Plyant, extradition case of, I, 621, 622
 Mahood, Charles F., III, 555
 Mail boats, early, I, 14
 Malden, I, 166
 Male and Female Academy at Buckhannon, I, 294
 Malone, Benjamin F., III, 434
 Malone, Frank J., III, 163
 Mammoth Mound at Moundsville, Marshall County (illustration), I, 35
 Mann, Adam, I, 70
 Mann, Frank N., III, 170
 Mann, Isaac T., I, 563
 Mann, Jacob, I, 70
 Mannings, James, I, 196
 Mannington, I, 196, 240
 Mannington oil field, I, 505
 Manufacturing, development of, (1909-1920), I, 714, 715
 Marchand, Donald K., II, 198
 Marcum, James O., II, 268
 Marietta, Ohio, founded, I, 105
 Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad (chartered 1847), I, 198
 Marietta Manufacturing Company, III, 638
 Marion county, I, 102, 139, 141, 144, 252; early schools of, 286, 287; first newspaper published in, 304; Philippi court house, 343
 Marion county oil field, I, 506
 Marion House, I, 144
 Markell, Harold R., II, 367
 Marks, Perry F., III, 541
 Marlin, Jacob, I, 55
 Marlinton, I, 440
 Marple, Audry I., II, 277
 Marple, Jesse D., II, 528
 Marriage regulations, I, 225, 226
 Marschner, John E., II, 51
 Marsh, J. F., I, 628, 634
 Marshall, I, 240
 Marshall, Henry B., III, 315
 Marshall, John, II, 100
 Marshall, Oliver S., III, 362
 Marshall College, III, 441
 Marshall County, I, 93; early settlements in, I, 104, 252
 Marshall County Agricultural Association, I, 229
 Martin, Alexander, I, 294, 648, 654, 662
 Martin, Charles A., II, 238
 Martin, E. W., III, 428
 Martin, Francis E., II, 512
 Martin, Frank S., II, 547

- Martin, Howard M., II, 128
 Martin, Isaac P., II, 102
 Martin, John A. F., II, 102
 Martin, John R., II, 102
 Martin, Paul H., III, 371
 Martin, T. B., I, 90
 Martin, Thomas B., I, 54
 Martin, William J., II, 603
 Martinsburg, I, 90, 135, 239; first newspaper at, 299; contestant for State Capital, 433
 Martinsville, I, 240
 Maryland, boundary dispute with, I, 622, 623
 Mason, David K., III, 632
 Mason, James M., I, 335, 350
 Mason, Judge John W., I, 40
 Mason, John W., II, 9
 Mason, W. S., III, 591
 Mason and Dixon line surveyed (1781-84), I, 92
 Mason City, I, 160, 240
 Mason county, I, 100, 160, 252
 Massey, Linville C., II, 247
 Masterson, John T., II, 31
 Mastin, Guy E., III, 29
 Maston, Edward E., II, 610
 Matewan I, 492
 Matheny, Charles N., II, 457
 Mathews, Charles G., II, 9
 Mathews, H. M., I, 554
 Mathews, Harold S., III, 491
 Mathews, Mason, II, 8
 Mathews, William B., II, 344
 Mathews Family of Greenbrier, II, 7
 Matoaka, I, 495
 Matson, Frank L., III, 85
 Matticks, Ray E., II, 237
 Maxwell, Cyrus H., II, 178
 Maxwell, Edwin, I, 556; III, 7
 Maxwell, Frank P., III, 612
 Maxwell, Marshall A., III, 208
 Maxwell, Robert, sketch of, I, 249
 Maxwell, Wilson B., III, 559
 May, John F., II, 370
 Mayhew, David E., III, 222
 Mayhew, James L., III, 226
 Mays, Edward, II, 261
 Mays, William M., II, 519
 Mays, W. J., III, 409
 McAlkin, I, 496
 McBee, T. Judson, II, 533
 McBee Family, III, 532
 McBride, Joseph H., III, 360
 McCabe, James D., I, 260
 McCallister, John A., III, 260
 McCally, C. K., III, 634
 McCarty, Edward, I, 135
 McCauley, George W., III, 54
 McClaugherty, Bernard II, 106
 McClellan, George B., his campaign in West Virginia, I, 375-380
 McClellan, William T., II, 139
 McClintic, Lockhart M., III, 614
 McClintock, Charles A., III, 96
 McClintock, Herbert D., III, 217
 McCluer, James S., II, 453
 McCluer, John G., II, 452
 McClung, Joseph L., II, 368
 McClung, William D., III, 429
 McClung, Worth D., II, 451
 McClure, John, II, 510
 McClure, Rebecca S., II, 510
 McConaughy, William C., II, 439
 McConihay, John M., II, 191
 McConaughy, Earl, III, 264
 McConnell, Joseph C., II, 567
 McCoy, Harry A., II, 517
 McCoy, Samuel A., II, 340
 McCoy, William, II, 390
 McCray, French, II, 122
 McCray, Richard E., II, 251
 McCrum, A. Bliss, II, 54
 McCrum, Page R., II, 361
 McCue, William P., III, 102
 McCulloch, Benjamin H., II, 316
 McCulloch, Edward M., II, 493
 McCullough, F. Witcher, II, 57
 McCullough traders' trail, I, 38
 McCulloh's path, I, 67
 McCulty, Roy L., III, 447
 McCune, George W., III, 518
 McCune, John D., II, 627
 McCune, Mary V., II, 627
 McCuskey, Alexander E., III, 133
 McCutcheon, Arnold B., II, 38
 McCutcheon, Clarence W., II, 125
 McDannold, Ralph H., III, 462
 McDermott, Bernard J., II, 194
 McDermott, Edward J., II, 258
 McDermott, Joseph H., III, 20
 McDermott, Patrick H., II, 312
 McDonald, Bruce, II, 550
 McDonald, Edward, I, 113
 McDonald, George, II, 73
 McDonald, Millard, II, 551
 McDonald, Orville L., II, 351
 McDonald Family, II, 550
 McDougle, Walter E., II, 463
 McDowell, James, I, 282
 McDowell, Luke, III, 190
 McDowell county, I, 252, 490, 491
 McElhenney, John II, 639
 McElhenny, Rev. Dr., I, 295
 McElhiney, William J., III, 79
 McFadden, Richard J., II, 308
 McFall, Robert R., II, 200
 McFerran, Garrett G., III, 610
 McGarry, J. D., I, 136
 McGinnis, Benjamin F., III, 58
 McGinnis, Howard J., III, 120
 McGinnis, William H., III, 116
 McGraw, John T., I, 440, 561
 McGrew, James C., I, 193, 340; (illustration), I, 349
 McGrew, James H., II, 173
 McGuire, Burruss B., III, 204
 McGuire, John P., II, 313
 McKahan, Roger B., II, 559
 McKain, George L., II, 511
 McKain, Lina M., II, 512
 McKeever, Arthur N., II, 79
 McKenzie, John, III, 359
 McKinney, O. S., II, 371
 McKown, Ephraim W., III, 298
 McLane, Samuel H., III, 518
 McLaughlin, James D., II, 241
 McLean, Arthur W., II, 564
 McLean, Jacob, III, 327
 McManaway, James C., II, 582
 McMillan, Roscoe D., II, 605
 McMillen, Alcimus F., II, 118
 McMurran, Joseph, I, 638
 McNeely, John G., II, 134
 McNeer, Horace A., II, 494
 McNeil, Nathan C., III, 616
 McNeilan, Milton, II, 526
 McNeill, Moore, III, 437
 McNemar, Harry H., II, 215
 McNemar, William V., II, 573
 McQuilkin, Abraham Rush, III, 322
 McRa, Tom H., III, 237
 McSherry, James W., II, 189
 McVicker, Walter T., III, 585
 McWhorter, Henry, sketch of, I, 102
 McWhorter, J. C., III, 440
 McWhorter, L. V., I, 690

- Meade Collegiate Institute, I, 294, 295
 Meadowville, I, 240
 Mecklenburg, (1762), I, 50
 Medicine, early practice of (1862-1877), I, 243-251
 Menefee, James A., II, 419
 Mephisto Operation, War Eagle Coal Company, Mingo County (illustration) I, 522
 Mercer, J. S. D., III, 250
 Mercer Academy, I, 295
 Mercer county, I, 252; non-Union, 370; struggle for county seat, 407, 408
 Merchants and Miners Bank of Welch, III, 250
 Meredith, Charles S., III, 549
 Meredith, Gilbert B., III, 51
 Meredith, William A., III, 16
 Meredith, Winfield S., III, 39
 Merendino, Biagio, II, 351
 Merrick, Charles D., II, 442
 Merrill, Ernest M., II, 602
 Merrill, William H., III, 473
 Methodist church, I, 268-272; status in 1850, 274; in 1850 and 1860, 276
 Methodist Episcopal Church of America, organized (1784), I, 268
 Methodist Episcopal Church South, formed (1845), I, 272
 Methodist Protestant Church, formed (1828), I, 271, 272
 Meyer, Edward J., II, 490
 Meyers, John A., I, 532
 Michael, John A., II, 105
 Michael, Nelson B., III, 308
 Middle New River, settlements in (1783-1856), I, 136, 137
 Middle Wheeling, I, 240
 Middlebourne, I, 109, 239
 Middletown (Fairmont), I, 99, 143, 239
 Midflin county, I, 69
 Miles End, I, 239
 Milford, I, 239
 Military roads, I, 66, 67
 Mill at Grassy Creek, Nicholas county (illustration), I, 229
 Millard, Everett F., III, 611
 Miller, Albert K., II, 78
 Miller, Anderson E., II, 609
 Miller, Boyce, III, 160
 Miller, Charles A., II, 632
 Miller, Charles E., II, 438
 Miller, George D., III, 466
 Miller, George E., III, 145
 Miller, George R., II, 120
 Miller, Henry O., III, 220
 Miller, James, II, 414
 Miller, James E., II, 534
 Miller, James H., I, 401; his sketch of legal and political matters in Reconstruction times, I, 403-405; II, 608
 Miller, Jeremiah A., III, 435
 Miller, Joseph D., II, 78
 Miller, Joseph L., III, 485
 Miller, J. Craig, III, 636
 Miller, J. Hugh, III, 118
 Miller, Lewis H., II, 629
 Miller, Lewis J., III, 278
 Miller, Manderville T., III, 348
 Miller, Mrs. Alexander M., I, 691
 Miller, Sebastian M., III, 556
 Miller, Thomas C., I, 282, 636, 650
 Miller, Wilbert S., II, 20
 Miller, William A., II, 543
 Miller, William H., II, 420
 Miller, William M., I, 553
 Mills, early, I, 229, 230
 Minear, John, I, 73, 93, 230
 Minear, Joseph P., III, 413
 Mineral county, I, 252
 Miners' Homes and gardens near Gary, West Virginia (illustrations) I, 516
 Mingo county, I, 101, 252, 491
 Mingo County Court House (illustration) I, 492
 Mining disorders, I, 519, 523; legislation regarding, 603, 604; cost of, 714
 Mining, statistics of, (1889-1920), I, 713
 Miser, Mathew, III, 166
 Mitchell, Alexander, III, 607
 Mitchell, Charles R., III, 354
 Mitchell, William L., II, 120
 Mixville, I, 239
 Moffat, Archie Q., II, 47
 Moffett, James A., II, 647
 Mohler, Daniel N., III, 471
 Mohler, George A., III, 117
 Mohler, William E., III, 644
 Moler, Benjamin F., II, 396
 Monongahela Navigation Company, I, 173, 195
 Monongahela River Railway Company, I, 458
 Monongahela River region, early schools of, I, 285
 Monongahela Valley, settlements in (1776-1860), I, 139-152
 Monongalia Academy, I, 141, 293, 644, 645
 Monongalia county, I, 73, 92, 194, 252; roads and ferries in, 140; means of communication improved, 141, 142; early schools of, 285; first paper published in (1803), 301
 Monongalia County Infirmary, II, 435
 Monongalia County Juvenile Home, II, 413
 Monroe county, I, 112, 252; first local newspaper of, 308
 Montague, Margaret P., I, 689, 694
 Montgomery, Oliver I., II, 586
 Montgomery, Samuel B., I, 565, 710; III, 8
 Montgomery county, I, 167
 Montreal (Glenlyn), I, 90
 Nooman, Glenn J., II, 330
 Moore, Conrad, I, 99
 Moore, Edward S., II, 456
 Moore, Jacob, II, 207
 Moore, James C., II, 255
 Moore, James R., sketch of, I, 644
 Moore, John A., II, 24
 Moore, K. C., III, 272
 Moore, Phoebe G., II, 229
 Moore, Solomon G., III, 582
 Moorefield, I, 99, 239
 Moorfield settlement, I, 53
 Moran, Daniel J., III, 484
 Moran, Drury D., III, 22
 Moreland, James R., III, 32
 Moreland, Joseph, III, 31
 Morgan, Arch C., II, 296
 Morgan, B. S., I, 636
 Morgan, Ephraim F., I, 565; II, 4
 Morgan, French, III, 610
 Morgan, Grady V., II, 123
 Morgan, John H., II, 90
 Morgan, John T., II, 244
 Morgan, Morgan, Sr., I, 50, 258
 Morgan, Morgan, Jr., I, 258
 Morgan, Dr. Morgan, III, 372
 Morgan, Thomas L., III, 51
 Morgan, Zachwell, first settler at Morgantown, 1767 (illustration) I, 72, 73
 Morgan county, I, 252
 Morgantown, I, 5, 73, 92, 102 (1791-1865), 139-143, 239, 460; developments at, 462, 463
 Morgantown and Kingwood Railroad, I, 461; absorbed by B. & O. Railroad, 462
 "Morgantown Female Academy," I, 645

- Morgantown Female Seminary, I, 294
 Morgantown in 1868 (illustration), I, 444
 Morgantown postoffice (illustration), I, 703
 Morison, Garnett P., III, 391
 Morison, W. Pierre, II, 347
 Morris, Anthony T., II, 580
 Morris, Charles B., II, 435
 Morris, Eli C., II, 71
 Morris, Harvey H., III, 271
 Morris, James G., II, 71
 Morris, Pressley D., II, 580
 Morris, Robert, I, 111
 Morris, Russell L., II, 98
 Morris, Samuel J., II, 75
 Morris, Tabitha E., II, 580
 Morris, Will E., II, 385
 Morrison, Charles P., II, 525
 Morrison, Oren F., III, 198
 Morrison, O. J., III, 473
 Morrison, Wellington F., III, 300
 Morton, George R., II, 469
 Morton, Quin, III, 497
 Morton, R. Kemp, III, 558
 Morton, Seth A., III, 320
 Moss, Daniel R., III, 565
 Moss, James, I, 70
 Moss, Joel E., II, 21
 Moss, John W. (illustration) I, 346
 Mosser, Daniel, III, 130
 Motor Car Supply Company, II, 221
 Moundsville, I, 104, 153, 240
 Moundsville Public Library, III, 27
 Mount Carmel, I, 240
 Mount Carmel School, I, 293
 Mount Hope, I, 431
 Mount Pleasant, I, 239
 Mountain home in southeastern Clay county, (illustration) I, 224
 "Mountaineers," I, 25
 Mullins, I, 495
 Mullins, Andrew J., III, 495
 Mullins, Elbert R., II, 110
 Murphy, Benjamin F., III, 477
 Murphy, John, II, 486
 Murphy, Joseph M., II, 486
 Murray, Elmo A., II, 70
 "Murray settlement," I, 184
 Musgrove, Nathan C., II, 555
 Musselman (C. H.) Canning Factory, I, 532
 Musser, Clifford S., III, 213
 Myers, Ingram, III, 50
 Myers, J. W., III, 488

 Nadenbousch, John Q. A., II, 633
 Nadenbousch, J. Roy, III, 396
 Naret, William F., III, 114
 Nash, Charles P., III, 596
 Nathan, Ben, II, 477
 Nathan, Lewis, II, 477
 National Bank of Commerce of Williamson, III, 317
 National Bank of Wheeling, I, 155
 National Road, (Cumberland), I, 169, 171, 216
 National Union Convention, Baltimore (June, 1864), I, 373
 Native Spruces in Field of Blue Grass, Canaan Valley (illustration), I, 525 Natural conditions, I, 21-39
 Natural gas, I, 227
 Naylor, John S. Company, III, 146
 Naylor, Joseph R., III, 146
 Naylor, Roy B., II, 68
 Neal, Benjamin T., Jr., III, 459
 Neal, James, sketch of, I, 104, 105
 Neal, John B., II, 542
 Neal, Olin V., II, 100
 Neal, Philip D., II, 463

 Neely, Matthew M., II, 231
 Neely, Richard C., II, 606
 Neely, Robert S., III, 574
 Neely, William C., II, 606
 Neff, Carl W., II, 339
 Negroes, freed, I, 245
 Nelson, Charles H., III, 639
 Nelson, Clark, II, 464
 Nelson, C. Paul, II, 569
 Nelson, George W., II, 565
 Nelson, Harvey H., II, 464
 Nelson, Mary C., II, 569
 Nelson Brothers, II, 464
 Nemacolin's path, I, 66
 Neptune, Thomas S., II, 31
 Newberger, Samuel, II, 477
 Newcomb, Ralph O., III, 576
 New California, I, 109
 New Cumberland, I, 104, 157, 465
 New Cumberland Public Schools, III, 272
 Newell, John B., III, 225
 Newell, John E., III, 245
 Newell, Robert C., III, 225
 New Haven, I, 240
 Newlon, Creed O., III, 100
 Newlon, Dellet, III, 127
 Newlon, John, III, 287
 Newlon, Melvin, III, 108
 Newman, Lee D., III, 144
 Newport, I, 109, 158, 239, 240
 Newspapers, early, I, 14; of Charleston, 165, early (1681-1820), 298; two, in Western Virginia (1810), 299; first in Martinsburg, 299; first in Monongalia county (1803), 301; pioneers in different counties and localities, 304-310; make-up of, 312; statistics for 1850 and 1860, 313
 Nicholas, Wilson C., I, 111
 Nicholas county, I, 99, 252
 Niswander, George W., II, 411
 Noble, Olbert C., II, 619
 Noonan, Thomas J., II, 607
 Norfolk and Western Railway, coke ovens (illustration) I, 518
 Normal schools, established (1867), I, 589, 636-644
 Normal Training high schools (1915), I, 637
 Norris, William O., III, 424
 Notaries public, I, 46
 North Branch trail, I, 38
 Northeott Science Hall, Marshall College (illustration), I, 643
 Northwestern Bank of Wheeling, I, 154
 Northwestern turnpike, I, 145, 184-186
 Northwestern Virginia Academy, I, 287, 294
 Northwestern Virginia Agricultural Society, I, 229
 Northwestern Virginia Railroad, I, 195, 197
 Nuhfer, Stephen R., II, 411
 Null, David W., III, 87
 Nutter, Roscoe J., II, 315

 Oak Hill, I, 167
 O'Brien, Adam, sketch of, I, 221
 O'Brien, William S., III, 406
 Oceana, I, 240
 Oceana Looking Northwest (illustration) I, 497
 O'Connor, Robert E., III, 556
 O'Dell, Richard O., III, 378
 Offner, John E., II, 54
 Ogden, Chester R., III, 207
 Ogden, Herschel C., II, 551
 Ogden, Marshall W., II, 247
 Oglebay, Earl W., I, 703

- Oglebay Hall, West Virginia University, (illustration), I, 646
- Ohio and Mississippi Railroad (chartered 1848), I, 198
- Ohio Company, I, 55, 56, 58
- Ohio county, I, 92, 93, 252; early schools of, 288
- Ohio River; influences of, I, 210-215; navigation of, 215-218; completion of Baltimore and Ohio Railway to, (1852), 216; resumption of steamboat communication with New Orleans (1867), 217, 218; navigation of, 234-237; steamboat travel on (1838), 237; railroads along, 464, 472
- Ohio river homes, I, 215, 216
- Ohio River Railroad, I, 469, 472
- Ohio River Salt Company, I, 166
- Ohio Valley, settlements in (1793-1862), I, 161-168
- Ohio Valley Electric Railway Company, III, 346
- Ohio valley outlaws, I, 214
- Ohlinger, Fred A., II, 139
- Oil development; general progress of, I, 499; record, (1826-1860), 500; first, caused by drilling of salt wells, 500; in Parkersburg district, 501; production throughout the state (1876-1888), 503; production in 1889-1921, 509-510; statistics of (1889-1920), 713
- Oil fields, opening of, I, 505-509
- Oil, gas and coal development, I, 499-523
- Oil operators in West Virginia, I, 394
- Oil pipe lines, laid from fields to seaboard, I, 510
- Oil region (in 1864) a traveller's narrative of a visit to, I, 392-398
- Oil wells at Rosedale (illustration) I, 502
- Old Field Schools, I, 279, 282-284, 288
- Old Morgan Homestead, Front Street, Morgantown (illustration) I, 74
- "Old Pack-horse Ford", I, 50
- O'Neal, S. Lee, III, 499
- O'Neil, Humphrey G., II, 317
- Orange county, I, 53
- Ordinance of Secession; vote of western members against, I, 339; signed by Richmond convention, 352, 353
- Orlando (illustration) I, 481
- Orr, James C., I, 357
- Orr, Malcolm J., II, 504
- Orr, Miles H., II, 117
- Osborne, A. D., III, 227
- Osborne, William, III, 580
- Osburn, Reuben, II, 491
- Osmond, Charles B., II, 494
- Ott, Charles B., III, 78
- Ott, Lee, II, 41
- Overstreet, James W., II, 423
- Owens, Harry K., III, 552
- Oxley, Chilton K., III, 234
- Oyster, Lamar C., III, 277
- Pack Horse settlement, I, 50
- Padbury, Fred D., III, 48
- Page, Asa D., III, 413
- Page, Lowry W., III, 434
- Palmer, Benjamin H., II, 482
- Palmer, John C., III, 601
- Palmer, Samuel A., II, 618
- Pancoast, S. A., I, 135
- Panhandle Railway Company, I, 464
- Parish (Episcopal) of Frederick, I, 258
- Park, Joseph R., II, 578
- Park, Thomas R., II, 577
- Parker, Granville, I, 413
- Parkersburg, I, 104, 109, 158; branch of Baltimore & Ohio completed to, 198; 242; first newspaper at, 306; in 1864, 392; industrial development of, 471; spectacular founding of, 501; first telephone at (1882), 538
- Parks, Alexander, II, 633
- Parks, John N., II, 634
- Parks, Noah S., III, 296
- Parriott, James D., II, 302
- Parrish, Clair N., II, 387
- Parrish, Clerc A., III, 447
- Parrish, Ray M., III, 82
- Parrish, Roy E., III, 251
- Parrish, Richard B., II, 121
- Parrish, Thomas J., III, 252
- Parsons, Cornelius R., III, 590
- Parsons, Don H., II, 427
- Parsons, Earl V., III, 430
- Parsons, James, I, 72
- Parsons, J. K., III, 199
- Parsons, I, 476
- Partridge, B. Waring, Jr., II, 137
- Patsey, John, III, 300
- Patterson, Carl J., II, 45
- Patterson, Guy B., III, 104
- Patterson, Samuel W., II, 62
- Patterson, William E., III, 583
- Patton, Floyd J., II, 485
- Paulding, John T., II, 454
- Pauley, Garfield L., II, 566
- Paul, Alfred II, 614
- Paul, Alfred S., II, 615
- Paul, Harry W., III, 78
- Paul, Judge James II, 614
- Paul, James, III, 78
- Paul, Lee C., II, 25
- Paul, Samuel O., III, 78
- Paxton, Alexander B., III, 563
- Paxton, James, I, 355
- Payne, Edwin J., II, 399
- Payne, Jennie B., III, 471
- Payne, John B., III, 362
- Payne, Oscar F., II, 144
- Payne, William B., III, 471
- "Peace Conference" at Washington (1861), I, 335
- Pearcy, Elizabeth T., II, 500
- Pearis Family, II, 131
- Pearman, Elbert W., III, 399
- Peck, Joel E., II, 168
- Peck, W. Shad, III, 597
- Peery, Thomas E., II, 108
- Peeryville, I, 490
- Peirce, George L., III, 551
- Pemberton, Robert L., III, 464
- Pence, George L., II, 612
- Pendleton, Daniel, III, 457
- Pendleton, I, 54
- Pendleton county, I, 54, 241, 252; first school house erected in, 285, non-Union, 371
- Penitentiary, contest over superintendence of, (1873), I, 553, 597
- Pennsboro, I, 159
- Pennsylvania, boundary question, I, 621
- Pennsylvania road, I, 67
- Pentony, William H., III, 26
- People's United Telephone System, I, 545
- Perkins, Clarence L., III, 276
- Perry, Arthur K., III, 453
- Perry, Cecil H., III, 264
- Perry, Lewis H., III, 534
- Perry, Samuel W., II, 480
- Perry, Thomas N., III, 423
- Peterkin, George W., II, 440
- Peterkin, William G., II, 440
- Peters, Christian, I, 70
- Peters, Clem E., II, 361
- Peters, Elbert F., II, 157
- Peters, Isaac T., III, 40

- Peters, James W., II, 591
 Peters, Will H., II, 473
 Peterson, B. Walker, III, 14
 Peterson, David M., III, 272
 Peterstown, I, 90, 113, 239
 Petroleum development, I, 16
 Pettigrew, Bernard J., II, 94
 Peyton, Thomas W., II, 289
 Petonia, I, 167
 Peytonia Cannel Coal Company, I, 167, 517
 Phelps J. Howd, III, 455
 Phelps, S. H., III, 496
 Phelps, W. S., II, 121
 Phelps & Holloran, III, 495
 Phelps Can Company, III, 455
 Philippi, I, 146; bloodless engagement at, I, 240; 376, illustration, 456; industrial development of, I, 457
 Philippi court house, storm center of western secessionism, I, 343
 "Philippi Races," I, 377
 Phillips, David R., III, 125
 Phillips, Francis M., II, 444
 Phillips, George W., III, 505
 Phillips, Samuel A., II, 91
 Physicians, early, of Wheeling, I, 154
 Pickens, Louis N., II, 460
 Piedmont, I, 136, 206, 240
 Piedmont and Cumberland Railway, I, 474
 Pierce, Carleton C., III, 631
 Pierpoint, Francis H., I, 293, 348 (illustration), I, 349; 354, 355, 356, 383
 Pierson, E. G., III, 639
 Pierson, W. R., Jr., III, 268
 Pifer, Clarence B., III, 534
 Pifer, William C., III, 408
 Pileher, Hiram E., II, 267
 Pine Bottom, I, 159
 Piney branch, Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, I, 439
 Pinsou, Alonzo C., II, 587
 Pioneer domestic life, I, 221-226
 Pippen, C. Warden, III, 110
 Pitt, William, I, 62
 Pittsburgh, her rivalry with Wheeling, I, 200-209
 Pittsburgh and Stenbenville Railway, I, 197
 Plattenburg, John R., III, 274
 Pleasant county, I, 252; early schools of, 289
 Pleasantville, I, 239
 Plummer, Gideon T., III, 213
 Pocahontas coal, I, 483
 Pocahontas coal field, I, 489
 Pocahontas county, I, 137, 252; non-Union, 369
 Pocahontas Development Company, I, 440
 Poffenbarger, Lydia S., I, 702
 Poindexter, William B., II, 623
 Point, Walter W., III, 475
 Point Pleasant, I, 100, 160, 239
 Point Pleasant, battle of (1774), I, 77-79
 Point Pleasant Battle Monument (illustration), I, 78
 Point Pleasant National Bank, III, 417
 Point Pleasant Register, I, 314
 Point Pleasant-Ravenswood-Belleville toll line, I, 539
 Poland, John R., III, 340
 Poling, Aldine S., III, 580
 Poling, Herman J., III, 350
 Poling, Jay L., III, 181
 Political problems, recent, I, 595
 Politics, history of State, I, 551
 Folk Creek oil wells, Lewis county, I, 506
 Polesley, Daniel, I, 355
 Pomeroy, Samuel G., III, 221
 Pontiac, I, 64; sues for peace (1765), 65
 Poole, Albinus II, 616
 Poor, care of the, I, 598
 Poor Fund, I, 290
 Population; Marion county (1865), I, 139; Monongalia county, (1790-1830), 140-141
 Western Virginia (1790-1860), 252, 253; census of 1850, 253; by color and condition (1860), 255; by towns, 256
 Charleston (1778-1920), 436; Huntington, 438; Wheeling, 467; Density of, by counties (1920), (map), 566; from 1860 to 1910, 567-568; by race, sex, nativity, age, education and social and domestic status, (1900-1920), 569-573; percent of increase or decrease, by counties, (1910-1920), (map), 571; by counties, by towns and cities (since 1860), 574; by color and condition (1860), 575; negroes, by counties (1870-1920), 576; by sex, (1890-1920), 577; nativity and foreign parentage (1860, 1870), 578; origin of native and foreign-born (1870), 579; foreign-born by counties (1860-1910), 580; foreign-born by country of birth (1870-1910), 581; nationality of foreign-born (1870-1910) 582; nationality of foreign-born by counties (1870-1910), 583; country of birth of foreign-born white, for counties and cities of 10,000 or more (1920), 584; distribution of church members by principal denominations, (1890, 1906, 1916), 585; statistics of religious bodies (1916), 587; moral and religious life, 588; West Virginia, 1870-1912, 609; (1910-1920), 711
 Porter, Fred G., II, 593
 Porter, Henry L., III, 119
 Porter, James B., III, 233
 Porter, John, II, 593
 Porter, J. Nessly, III, 233
 Post, Arthur T., III, 98
 Post, Cecil O., II, 583
 Post, Howard, II, 299
 Post, Melville D., I, 687, 688, 689, 694
 Post, Wade H., II, 116
 Post, William III, 453
 Posten, Roscoe P., II, 76
 Postoffice, Morgantown (illustration), I, 703
 Postoffices, early, I, 14, first (1794), 232; (1797, 1841); 238, 239
 Potet, Lucian E., III, 163
 Potomac Academy, I, 293
 Potomac Company, I, 134; Washington, President of, 95
 Potomac River, I, 33, 34
 Potomac River below Harper's Ferry (illustration), I, 24
 Potomac and Piedmont Coal and Railway Company, I, 474
 Potomac Seminary (Potomac Academy), I, 293
 Powell, Grace M., III, 231
 Powell, Harvey C., II, 81
 Powell, Jonathan C., III, 79
 Powell, Samuel A., III, 184
 Powers, August N., III, 74
 Powers, Benjamin H., II, 288
 Pownall, Thomas E., III, 400
 Pratt, James I., III, 224
 Pratt, Newell K., III, 68
 Pratt, Samuel A., II, 556
 Presbyterian church, I, 264-267; status in 1850, 274; in 1850 and 1860, 276
 Presbyterian colony (1798), I, 110
 Presidential election of 1864, I, 373
 Press (See Newspapers)
 Preston, James M., III, 617

- Preston, John A., III, 616
 Preston, Samuel P., III, 617
 Preston, I., 146, 239
 Preston Academy, I, 294
 Preston county, I, 73, 102, 140, 143, 252; unusual beginning of local journalism (1839), 303, 461
 Preston Railroad, Lumber and Mining Company, I, 143
 Price, Allen R., II, 164
 Price, George E., I, 557, II, 250
 Price, James W., III, 514
 Price, John C., II, 169
 Price, Samuel, sketch of, I, 415, 416; II, 626
 Price, Samuel L., II, 626
 Price, William H., II, 242
 Prickett, John M., II, 631
 Princeton, I, 240, 407, 495
 Prindle, Reuben S., II, 36
 "Prison bounds," I, 244
 Pritchard, Belvard J., III, 260
 Pritchard, J. Guy, III, 582
 Pritchard, Alpheus W., III, 420
 Pritchard, D. T., II, 29
 Pritchard, Robert C., III, 48
 Pritchard, Robert H., III, 175
 Pritchard, William J., III, 48
 Pritt, Thaddens, III, 539
 Pritt, Wayne K., III, 527
 Prohibition amendment carried (1912), I, 422; ratified (1912), 595; legislation regarding, 600
 Prolific early families, I, 220
 Property, assessed value of (1919, 1920), I, 719
 Prosecuting attorneys (Colonial), I, 47
 Proudfoot, Milton II., II, 557
 Prunty, Curtis E., II, 589
 Prunty, Sylvester O., III, 62
 Pruntytown, I, 195, 239
 Public Health Council, I, 600
 Public officers, salaries for, I, 421, 422
 Public service commission, created (1913), I, 598, 717
 Public Service, expenditure for (1912-1920), I, 619
 Public school system, development of (see also Education); work of first superintendent, William R. White, I, 628, 629; first normal schools established, 629; old-time academies, 629, 630; State institutes and schools, 630; high school era, 632; school statistics, 1918-21, 633; changes in State boards of education, 634; general development 1870-1920, 634-636; normal schools, 636-644; historical sketch of West Virginia University, 644-678
 Public schools (see Education)
 Public whippings, I, 245
 Pugh, Clyde C., II, 274
 Pugh, Hugh, I, 104
 Purdy, James A., III, 256
 Pure fool law (1907), I, 595
 Purinton, A. L., I, 638
 Purinton, Daniel B., I, 648, 655, 661; II, 5
 Putnam county, I, 110, 161, 252
 Pyle, Joseph L., III, 219
 Pyles, Bernard A., II, 549
 Quakers, I, 63
 Quarry Run powder mill, I, 142
 Queen, Emery C., II, 426
 Quimby, Will A., III, 535
 Quinn, William J., III, 321
 Raese, John, III, 481
 Rafting, I, 230
 Raiguel, Edward B., II, 30
 Railroads; campaign against passes (1885-87), I, 6; close out stage lines (1852-54), 173; first line in West Virginia (Baltimore & Ohio), 187-199; Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, 425, 426, 428-442; Baltimore & Ohio branches, 445-464; lumber, 450-453; along the Ohio, 464-472; vs. steamboats, 471, 472; Western Maryland Railway, 472-478; Coal and Coke Railway, 478-482; projected, that failed, 443-445; vs. steamboats, 471, 472; Norfolk & Western Railway, 483-494; Virginia Railway, 494-498; exemption from taxation of, 557; value of properties (1919), 719
 Rake, John D., II, 297
 Raleigh county, I, 168, 252
 Ralston, James, III, 132
 Ramsay, Robert L., II, 313
 Randal, Boyd, III, 209
 Randolph Academy, I, 293
 Randolph county, I, 103, 148, 149, 150, 151; Irish settlement on Roaring Creek, 149, 243, 252; remarkable industrial changes in, 472, 475
 Ranson, Briscoe B., II, 396
 Ratcliff, John F., III, 170
 Rathbone, Monroe J., II, 465
 Rauschenberg, Emil C., III, 279
 Ravenswood, I, 240
 Rawn, Andrew B., III, 641
 Ray, Charles A., III, 214
 Raymond, Jerome H., I, 648, 650, 659, 660
 Read, Benjamin J., II, 595
 Real estate, re-assessments of, I, 615
 Reardon, Norris H., III, 138
 Rease, Frank P., III, 530
 Reass, Joseph H., Jr., II, 48
 Reay, David C., II, 194
 Reay, Thomas P., I, 645
 Reconstruction; first period of, I, 16; problems and policies of, 399; conditions at close of war, 399-402; test-oath act, 402; registration law, 403; judges, lawyers and office holders, 403-405; suffrage reforms (1869-71), 406; State capital located at Charleston (1870), 410, 411
 Rector College, I, 195, 294
 Red Cross Work, World's war, I, 708
 Red Sulphur and Kauawha turnpike, I, 409
 Red Sulphur Seminary, I, 295
 Red Sulphur Springs, I, 240
 Reed, Hannon, III, 416
 Reed, Kelley E., III, 399
 Reed, Lorelle V., III, 68
 Reed, Miller W., II, 153
 Reed, Oliver E., III, 516
 Reed, Robert S., III, 13
 Reed, William D., II, 566
 Reeside, James, leading mail contractor, I, 170
 Reger, Carl, II, 191
 Reger, Earle, III, 180
 Reger, William F., III, 301
 Registration law (1866), I, 403, 406, 407
 Rehobeth Church, first Methodist meeting house west of the Alleghenies, I, 269
 Religion (see also churches and denominations), I, 257, 569
 Religious freedom, act of, I, 257
 Renick, Felix, description of a trip by, I, 125, 126
 Renshaw, W. C. Wickham, II, 79
 Repair, John F., III, 586
 Repairing damage on South Side Hill, near Charleston, winter of 1918 (illustration), I, 541

- Repository, Wheeling's first newspaper, I, 154
- Repetto, Harvey B., II, 339
- Reppert, William, III, 411
- Reps, Paulus, II, 283
- Republican control, early, I, 551
- Revised school code (1909), I, 716
- Revolution; rear guard of, I, 81-93; forts at beginning of, 81, 82; forts erected during, 82, 83; military preparations and operations in Western Virginia, 83, 89; invasions during, 86-89; settlements and county creations during, 89-93
- Reyman Memorial Farms, I, 532
- Reynolds, Daniel W., II, 525
- Reynolds, Francis M., III, 189
- Reynolds, P. B., I, 648, 650, 657, 659, 661, 670
- Reynolds & Reynolds, II, 525
- Rhea, John L. Jr., III, 288
- Rheumatism, treatment of, I, 251
- Rice, Charles L., II, 212
- Rice, Harold A., II, 451
- Rice, Martin M., III, 487
- Richards, Dell R., II, 360
- Richards, Thomas M., II, 306
- Richardson, J. Lynn, III, 494
- Richardson, Thomas S., III, 493
- Richmond, Simon P., III, 454
- Richmond, Educational Convention at (1845), I, 282
- Richmond Enquirer, I, 299
- Rich Mountain, Union victory at, I, 379
- Richwood, eastern portion (illustration), I, 451
- Richwood branch of Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, I, 450
- Rickey, John W., II, 548
- Rife, Jay W., II, 481
- Rife, Oscar J., II, 492
- Rigg, John M., II, 57
- Riley, Daniel P., III, 640
- Riley, Isaac L., III, 579
- Riley, Jesse E., III, 76
- Rinehart, Claude W., III, 280
- Riner, John H., II, 637
- Ringer, Jeremiah, II, 574
- Ripley, I, 240
- Ripple, Josiah M., Jr., III, 66
- Rissler, Robert C., II, 321
- Ritchie, Thomas, father of Virginia journalism, I, 299
- Ritchie county, I, 106, 146, 159, 186, 252; early schools of, 289; first local paper in, 307
- Rittenhouse, William T., II, 442
- Ritter, Charles A., III, 96
- Ritter, Charles D., II, 327
- Ritter, C. L., III, 96
- River transportation (1793-1872), I, 233, 234
- Rivesville, I, 143
- Rizer, O. Mortimer, II, 85
- Roads, early, I, 14; (1786-1840), 232, 233
- Roane county, I, 109, 252
- Robbins, Isaac H., II, 297
- Roberts, B. S., I, 387
- Robertson, John E., III, 187
- Robertson, Richard, II, 47
- Robey, Howard L., III, 545
- Robinett, John H., III, 467
- Robins, Joseph E., III, 69
- Robinson, Benjamin O., II, 532
- Robinson, Henry C., II, 389
- Robinson, Ira E., I, 564
- Robinson, J. A., I, 664
- Robinson, Jedediah W., III, 83
- Robinson, John L., III, 183
- Robinson, Paul M., III, 195
- Robinson, W. W., III, 206
- Robison, Charles C., III, 212
- Robosson, Reginald P., III, 17
- Robson, Houghton A., II, 568
- Roby, Clarence, II, 101
- Rodgers, William J., II, 29
- Rodney, James S., II, 286
- Roessing, Charles, III, 437
- Rogers, George J., II, 20
- Rogers, H. H., I, 494
- Rogers, J. G., III, 599
- Rogers, Paul M., II, 119
- Rogers, William M., II, 119
- Rogers, William W., II, 273
- Rogers Pharmacy, II, 119
- Rohrbough, Clark L., III, 327
- Roller, Robert D., III, 217
- Romig, Emerson V., III, 142
- Romine, John W., II, 453
- Romney, I, 239
- Romney County Court House (illustration), I, 464
- Romney Literary Society, I, 293
- Ronceverte, I, 429
- Roome, Harry H., III, 136
- Rose, E. W., III, 506
- Rosecrans, William, his campaign in West Virginia, I, 383, 384
- Rosedale, oil wells at (illustration), I, 502
- Rosier, Joseph, I, 628; II, 249
- Ross, Donald J., II, 450
- Ross, Howard J., II, 249
- Ross, J. Shirley, II, 344
- Round, Frederick L., III, 456
- Roush, Charles, III, 395
- Roush, Margaret V., III, 396
- Rouss, Alexander H. S., II, 400
- Royal, Kent T., III, 417
- Row, Golden F., III, 307
- Rowan, John M., I, 557
- Rowlesburg, I, 240
- Royall, Anne (Newport), I, 681
- Ruby, William II., III, 549
- Rudasill, Daniel J., II, 557
- Ruddle, Isaac N., II, 324
- Ruffner, David, I, 165, 166
- Ruffner, Henry, I, 166
- Ruffner, Joseph, sketch of, I, 110, 165
- Ruffner family, pioneers of Kanawha salt industries, I, 165, 166
- Ruffner Hotel, I, 180
- Rumsey, James, I, 134
- Rumseyan Monument, Shepherdstown (illustration), I, 96
- Runner, Dayton P., III, 105
- Rural schools, better day for, I, 631, 632
- Rusmisell, Charles C., III, 284
- Rusmisell, James A., III, 436
- Russel, William, I, 51
- Russell, Andrew S., III, 620
- Russell, Bennie W., II, 488
- Russell, H. W., II, 432
- Rutherford, Albert G., III, 431
- Ruttencutter, Charles F., III, 72
- Rymer, John L., III, 54
- Salaries of officials, expenditure for (1912-1920), I, 619
- Salem, I, 102, 145
- Salt industry, I, 227
- Salt Spring, I, 111
- Salt wells (1864), I, 394
- Salton, Russell A., II, 590
- Samples, W. P., III, 259
- Sanders, Harry, III, 62
- Sanders, James C., III, 190
- Sand Fort colony, of Irish settlers, I, 184
- Sandridge, Clifton W., III, 306

- Sands, Harry S., II, 180
 Sandusky-Richmond trail, I, 38
 Sandy Valley, early settlements in, I, 168
 Santerville, I, 240
 Sapp, Hayes, II, 505
 Sappington, Kenneth N., II, 326
 Satterfield, Herschel L., II, 126
 Savage, W. L., III, 238
 "Savage Grant," I, 114
 Savanna fort (Fort Union), I, 70
 Saville, J. Burr, II, 82
 Saw mills (1835), I, 230
 Sawyers, William H., III, 602
 Sayre, Greek, I, 257
 Sayre, T. J., III, 505
 Seaggs, E. Floyd, II, 553
 Seanlon, Timothy S., III, 149
 Schaeffer, John R., III, 208
 Schaeffer, William M., II, 225
 Schaffer, Orman D., II, 153
 Scherr, Arnold C., I, 562
 Scherr, Harry, II, 243
 Scherr, William B., II, 164
 Schmeichel, Fred C., II, 436
 Schmeichel, Frederick, II, 386
 Schmidiger, August J., II, 197
 Schmidlapp, John F., II, 266
 Scholl, Lester E., II, 145
 Scholz, Carl, III, 161
 School code commission, appointed (1918), I, 590
 School Law of 1846, I, 282
 School statistics, 1850 (see also Education), I, 296, 297
 Schools (see Education)
 Schools and the World's war, I, 706
 Schools for the deaf and blind, I, 630
 Schrader, Louis E., II, 206
 Schwenck, Lawrence S., II, 561
 Science Hall, West Virginia University (illustration), I, 655
 Scioto-Monongahela trail, I, 37
 Scotch-Irish, I, 13, 36, 52, 57, 63, 68, 69; their interest in education, 290
 Scott, Charles M., II, 155
 Scott, James P., III, 527
 Scott, John S., II, 484
 Scott, John W., I, 648, 662
 Scott, Nathan B., I, 561
 Scott, Thomas, II, 300
 Scott, Thomas H., II, 520
 Scott, William W., III, 538
 Seroggins, Frank R., II, 158
 Seabright, Charles H., II, 254
 Seal, Gordon S., II, 115
 Seamonds, George R., III, 196
 Sears, Roy O., III, 216
 Secession, advocated by eastern Virginia (1850), I, 330
 Second State Capitol, Charleston in Kanawha (1870-71) (illustration), I, 405
 See, LeRoy, III, 551
 See, Ralph W., III, 510
 Sehon, Edmund, III, 317
 Seibert, Cleveland M., III, 371
 Senate passes Australian ballot bill, I, 560
 Seneca trail, I, 38, 68
 Settle, Alfred L., III, 504
 Settlements, first advance of, in eastern panhandle, I, 50; pioneer (1760-1776), 70-74; New River region (1775-83), 90; in eastern panhandle (1787-91), 99; along the Kanawha (1791-1804), 100; in West Augusta district, 101, 102; delayed along the Big Sandy, 101; in West Fort Valley, 102; upper Ohio, 104; south of the Great Kanawha, III; in the eastern panhandle, 134-136; Middle New River and Greenbrier, 136-138; the Monongahela valley, 139-152; along the Ohio, 152-161; along the Great Kanawha, 161-167; south of the Great Kanawha, 167-168; early, in Calhoun county, 159; early, in Big Sandy Valley, 168
 Sewell, Stephen, I, 55
 Sewell Valley Railroad, I, 439
 Shackelford, John N., III, 562
 Shackelford, Leon, II, 288
 Shackelford, Samuel A., III, 627
 Shadle, H. Eugene, II, 213
 Shaffer, E. Augusta, III, 439
 Shaffer, Gustavus J., III, 438
 Shaffer, Harry G., III, 479
 Shanklin, William C., III, 492
 Shannon, Frank E., III, 492
 Shannon, William A., III, 261
 Sharp, Summers H., III, 539
 Sharpnack, Joseph N., III, 62
 Sharps, John A., III, 411
 Shaw, A. Staley, II, 552
 Shaw, Harry, II, 22
 Shaw, Robert M., II, 536
 Shaw, Stephen C., II, 536
 Shaw, Thomas J., III, 311
 Shaw, William R., II, 620
 Shawkey, M. P., I, 628, 636
 Shawnee (Seneca) trail, I, 38, 68
 Sheep, I, 530
 Sheets, Harry W., II, 601
 Sheet Metal Specialty Co., III, 256
 Shelby, Reece, II, 246
 Shell, Bernard, II, 571
 Shenandoah Valley, first newspaper in, I, 299
 Shepherd, Adam R., III, 494
 Shepherd, David, I, 74, 86
 Shepherd, Edward C., II, 187
 Shepherd, Guy W., II, 140
 Shepherd, Hiram F., II, 221
 Shepherd, Thomas, I, 50
 Shepherdstown, I, 89, 134, 239; Episcopal churches at, 258; normal school established at (1872), 589
 Shepherdstown Academy, I, 292
 Shepherdstown Register, I, 314
 Shepherdsville, I, 239
 Sherrard, Robert, I, 135
 Sherwood, Reuel E., II, 637
 Shewey, Thomas A., II, 596
 Shields, Dudley L., II, 73
 Shields, Grace M., II, 72
 Shields, Thomas L., II, 72
 Shildts, D. E., II, 564
 Shinn, Chester C., III, 121
 Shinn, Fred L., II, 353
 Shinn, Hugh B., III, 603
 Shinn, James O., III, 442
 Shinn, Reuben P., III, 422
 Shinn Family, III, 121
 Shinnston, I, 145, 240
 Shires organized (1634), I, 46
 Showacre, William R., III, 275
 Showalter, Howard W., II, 494
 Showalter, Ulysses W., II, 314
 Shomo, Benjamin F., III, 306
 Shomo, Charles W., III, 309
 Shomo, George W., III, 310
 Short, John M., II, 342
 Shorthorn cattle, I, 529
 Shreve, John C., II, 303
 Shriver, Frank C., II, 42
 Shriver, John, II, 77
 Shull, James W., II, 83
 Shurtleff, Oliver, III, 292
 Shuttleworth, Benjamin F., III, 389
 Shuttleworth, Guy A., II, 41

- Shutts, Herman A., II, 226
 Silver, Gray, II, 12
 Simeral, Glenning D., II, 235
 Simms, John T., II, 54
 Simms, Meredith J., II, 62
 Simon, Winfield S., III, 340
 Simpson, John N., II, 75
 Sine, Rezin W., III, 606
 Sinnett, Charles W., III, 54
 Sinsel, Charles A., III, 305
 Sisler, E. B., II, 401
 Sistersville, I, 109, 240
 Sistersville oil field, I, 506, 510
 Skeen, Herbert, III, 468
 Skinner, John J., II, 399
 Slack, Frank P., II, 268
 Slack, Robert E., III, 518
 Slaughter, Gibbon M., II, 250
 Slavery, I, 247, 248, 315
 Sloan, Herbert E., II, 389
 Small, Alexander R., III, 17
 Smiley, Charles S., III, 122
 Smith, Albin H., III, 36
 Smith, Alton L., II, 374
 Smith, Benjamin H., I, 413, 551
 Smith, Carl C., II, 479
 Smith, C. Harrison, III, 169
 Smith, Charles A., III, 205
 Smith, Charles B., III, 445
 Smith, Charles D., III, 536
 Smith, Charles G., III, 20
 Smith, Claude L., III, 160
 Smith, Dudley I., II, 157
 Smith, Edward, II, 39
 Smith, Edward G., III, 645
 Smith, Edward M., II, 40
 Smith, Ellis L., III, 464
 Smith, Etley P., II, 482
 Smith, Erwyn A., III, 635
 Smith, Harrison B., II, 261
 Smith, Harry F., II, 180
 Smith, Henry, narrative of (1794), I, 118, 119, 222
 Smith, Henry S., III, 76
 Smith, Howard C., III, 596
 Smith, Hugh G., II, 584
 Smith, Isaac D., II, 394
 Smith, Jackson, III, 139
 Smith, Jacob D., II, 564
 Smith, James M., III, 70
 Smith, Joe L., II, 602
 Smith, John M. L., III, 295
 Smith, John W., III, 291
 Smith, Joseph F., III, 26
 Smith, Joseph H., II, 187
 Smith, J. F., III, 148
 Smith, J. R. Williamson, III, 282
 Smith, Levin, II, 455
 Smith, Oceola M., II, 393
 Smith, Parks J., III, 640
 Smith, Rosece C., III, 462
 Smith, Roy C., II, 93
 Smith, Samuel G., III, 579
 Smith, Waitman T., II, 457
 Smith, William D., II, 526
 Smith, William F., III, 322
 Smith, William H., II, 467
 Smith, William J., III, 182
 Smith, William L., Jr., III, 219
 Smith, William L., Sr., III, 218
 Smith, William W., III, 321
 Smith, Winfield S., III, 283
 Smithfield, I, 54, 239
 Smithville, I, 159, 240
 Smoot, Charles S., II, 459
 Smoot, Edgar W., III, 119
 Smoot, James R., II, 410
 Smoot, J. Ray, II, 411
 Smootsville, I, 240
 Snedegar, Clyde II., III, 320
 Snee, William J., II, 127
 Sneed, Noble K., II, 269
 Snider, Millard F., II, 357
 Snodgrass, Wilford B., III, 608
 Snow, Walter A., II, 389
 Snow Hill furnace, I, 166
 Snyder, Berlin E., III, 356
 Snyder, George, III, 158
 Snyder, Harry L., II, 374
 Snyder, J. P., III, 463
 Snyder, William S., III, 114
 Social history (see population)
 Somers, William H., II, 496
 Sommerville, James B., II, 394
 South, Walter H., II, 167
 South Branch country, I, 53
 South Wheeling, I, 240
 Southern, John C., III, 196
 Southern Bell Company, I, 540
 Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, I, 539, 541
 Southern West Virginia (Colton's map of), I, 400
 Spaur, W. Kirk, III, 177
 Speer, Noah Q., III, 210
 Spelman, Harold J., II, 295
 Spence, Horatio M., II, 527
 Spencer, Arthur B., III, 303
 Spencer, I, 240, 303
 Sperow, Wilson P., III, 115
 Sperry, Clarence B., II, 365
 Spiker, Calvin F., III, 382
 Spiker, Jacob, II, 103
 Spiker, William H., III, 507
 Spindler, Bruce, II, 220
 Spindler, Charles, III, 265
 Spindler, William, II, 614
 Splash Dam in the Kanawha River (illustration), I, 448
 Sponseller, George J. E., II, 185
 Spotswood, Alexander, sketch of, I, 49, 50
 Sprigg, Melvin B., III, 174
 Springer, A. Glenn, II, 456
 Springfield, I, 99, 238, 239
 Squires, John H., III, 588
 Squires, Milton E., II, 468
 St. Albans, I, 436
 St. Albans High School, III, 640
 St. Clair, Alexander, II, 160
 St. Clair, Frank B., III, 376
 St. Clair, Wade H., II, 159
 St. George, I, 93, 476
 St. Lawrence Boom and Manufacturing Company, I, 429
 St. Marys, I, 157, 240
 St. Mathew's (Episcopal) Church of Wheeling, formed (1819), I, 260
 Staats, Coleman A., III, 186
 Staats, Edgar R., II, 536
 Staats, Enoch, III, 542
 Stafford, John L., II, 588
 Stages, on National Road, I, 170; first between Baltimore and the Ohio river, 170; fares, 177
 Stalnaker, C. Burton, III, 460
 Stalnaker, Garrison J., III, 328
 Stalnaker, Randolph, III, 604
 Stalnaker, Thomas E., III, 462
 Stanard, Oscar L., II, 373
 Standard Oil Company, purchases holdings, I, 511
 Stansbury, Harry A., II, 167
 Stapp, Harry R., II, 216
 Starkey, John, III, 641
 Starksville, I, 240
 Starling, Edmund A., III, 77

- State Agricultural Experiment Station, organized (1888), I, 532
- State and State School levies (rates) (1863-1913), I, 609
- State Board of Agriculture, organized (1891-1912), I, 532; created (1891), 602
- State Board of Children's Guardians, established (1919), I, 717
- State Board of Education, created (1908), I, 590; created (1919), 647
- State boards of education, I, 634
- State Board of Embalmers, created (1899), I, 600
- State Board of Health, created (1881), I, 555
- State budget, I, 716
- State Bureau of Roads, created (1913), I, 717
- State capital; contest between Wheeling and Charleston, I, 433; vote by counties for Charleston, Clarksburg and Martinsburg, 434; returned to Wheeling (1875), 553; permanent removal to Charleston (1885), 556
- State Capitol Building, first (illustration), I, 368; Charleston (destroyed by fire, January, 1921) (illustration) I, 591; burning of, 719
- State Department of Agriculture, created in 1913, I, 717
- State Department of Mines, II, 64
- State depository law, I, 604
- State election, time of, changed, I, 556
- State Executive Council of Defense, World's war (1917), I, 698
- State expenditures, huge expansion of since 1912, I, 618-620
- State government, development of, I, 590-604
- State highway inspector, abolished, I, 602
- State highways, bonded indebtedness authorized for (1920), I, 422
- Statehood, achievement of; Secession convention, I, 335-337; anti-Union sentiment and action, 338; ordinance of secession adopted, 339-341; United States properties seized, 342; Union meetings in western Virginia, 342, 343; first Union convention at Wheeling, 345-353; second convention and promulgation of new State, 353-356; recognized by Congress of the United States, 356; first constitutional convention of West Virginia (November, 1861), 357; name and boundaries adopted, 358; constitution (1861), 358-362; ratified, 362; admitted into the Union, December 31, 1862, 363; begins legal existence, June 20, 1863, 366; State seals adopted, 367, 368; United States senators elected, 368; choice of permanent capital, 369; Non-Union counties during Civil war, 369-373; presidential election, 1864, 373
- State indebtedness, 1876-93, I, 613
- State institutions, I, 594
- State militia, organization of, I, 603
- State Normal school, first, I, 636
- State Normal School, West Liberty, Administration Building (illustration), I, 637
- State officers, salaries of, I, 594, 595, 717
- State police created (1919), I, 603; established (1919), 717
- State politics (see Politics)
- State prison (see penitentiary)
- State Road Bureau, created (1913), I, 547, 549
- State Road Commission, I, 547, 549; expenditure for, 619
- State roads and highways, system of (1920), I, 603
- State roads, system of (1920), I, 717
- State Tax Commission, report of the first, I, 614
- State tax commissioner created (1904), I, 562, 602
- State taxes (1920, 1921), I, 719
- State treasury; receipts and expenditures of (1863-1912), I, 606, 607; receipts and expenditures (1913-1920), 608
- Stathers, Madison, II, 150
- Stathers, Walter E., III, 569
- Stathers, William G., II, 387
- Statne of Ethan Allen, Public Library, Wheeling, III, 14
- Statntes of the State, revised by acts of 1881 and 1882, I, 555
- Stannton, I, 54
- Staunton and Parkersburg Pike, I, 137, 181-184
- Stayman, Joseph W., II, 111
- Stealey, Robert T., II, 462
- Steam-propelled machinery; introduction to saw mills, I, 230
- Steamboat; influences of, I, 215, 216
- Steamboat freight rates, I, 236
- Steamboats (1811-60), I, 235-237
- Steamer and railroad cooperation, I, 216
- Stebbensville, I, 239
- Steel, Charles W., III, 83
- Steele, Byron W., III, 397
- Steele, Hugh H., III, 34
- Steele, Lonzo E., II, 234
- Steele, S. Charles, II, 612
- Steele, William, I, 270
- Steinmetz, Christian, II, 177
- Stemple, David C., II, 408
- Stemple, Lloyd M., II, 53
- Stenger, William S., II, 66
- Stephenson, Buren, III, 564
- Stephenson, James M., I, 336; II, 254
- Stephenson, Samuel, III, 236
- Stepp, Ervin P., II, 596
- Stenhenville and Pittsburgh Railway, I, 207
- Stevens, E. W., I, 155
- Stevens, George W., I, 428
- Stevens, Luther C., III, 297
- Stevens, Wilkin B., III, 23
- Stevenson, John E., II, 328
- Stevenson, William E. (illustration), I, 349, 406, 551, 590; II, 432
- Stewart, Austin B., III, 206
- Stewart, Charles O., III, 206
- Stewart, E. C., III, 206
- Stewart, James H., I, 659; III, 288
- Stewart, James S., II, 77
- Stewart, Nick L., III, 206
- Stewart, Samuel A., III, 206
- Stewart, William B., III, 204
- Stewart Brothers, III, 206
- Stifel, William F., III, 11
- Stiles, Samuel B., II, 516
- Stiles, William C., I, 503; II, 515
- Stinson, J. Taylor, II, 297
- Stockert, M. F., III, 426
- Stoke & Stockton (National) road line, I, 171
- Stokeyville, I, 158
- Stollings, Floyd D., II, 110
- Storek, Louis, II, 514
- Storer, John, I, 630
- Storer College, I, 630
- Stone, Elijah J., II, 65
- Stone, Frank, II, 472
- Stone, James G., II, 418
- Stonestreet, Washington W., II, 179

- Stoops, Lowry M., III, 272
 Stotts, Elmer C., III, 162
 Stout, Okey J., II, 73
 Stout, Ross F., II, 537
 Stout, W. Frank, II, 353
 Stout, Walter E., II, 453
 Stove foundry, first, I, 143
 Stover, Kreider H., II, 94
 Strader, George S., II, 106
 Straight, Jacob F., III, 12
 Straley, George E., III, 425
 Straley, Henry J., III, 57
 Straton, Joseph B., II, 587
 Streams, pollution of, I, 599
 Strickland, Charles W., III, 174
 Strickler, Alexander G., III, 364
 Strieby, Cyrus O., III, 488
 Stroehmann, Fred G., II, 543
 Strosnider, Homer, II, 352
 Strother, David H., I, 241, 681
 Strother, Walton L., III, 197
 Stuart, Alexander H. H., I, 337
 Stuart, John, II, 625
 Stuck, James W., III, 39
 Stuck, William B., III, 84
 Stuck, W. Frank, II, 500
 Stump, Waynefield L., II, 449
 Sturgiss, George C., II, 6
 Sturm, Harold T., III, 411
 Stutler, Boyd B., III, 472
 Sublette, Samuel J., II, 382
 Suddarth, F. S., III, 81
 Sudduth, Walton, II, 448
 Suffrage question (1869-71), I, 406
 Sugden, Walter S., III, 111
 Summers, C. B., III, 58
 Summers, Fred E., III, 501
 Summers, George, I, 129; sketch of, 162, 163
 Summers, Lewis, journal or diary of (1808), I, 129-133; sketch of, 162, 163
 Summers, Thomas, I, 163
 Summers county, I, 252; non-Union, 370, 408; formed, 409, 429
 Summerville, I, 239
 Sunday School associations, I, 588
 Suspension bridge, Morgantown (erected 1852) (illustration), I, 138
 Suspension bridge at Wheeling opened (July, 1856), I, 208
 Sutherland, George E., III, 344
 Sutherland, Howard, I, 564
 Sutton, John D., I, 129
 Sutton, William L., II, 376
 Sutton High School, III, 292
 Sutton, first B. & O. train to (May, 1891), I, 449
 Suttonville, I, 239
 Swaney, Alice, III, 224
 Swearingen, Thomas, I, 50
 Sweeney, Andrew J., II, 26
 Sweet, Clarence B., II, 401
 Sweet Springs, I, 112
 Swiger, Basil E., III, 155
 Swint, Benjamin H., III, 347
 Swint, Charles P., III, 178
 Swint, J. J., III, 611
 Swisher, Charles W., I, 562
 Swisher, Howard L., III, 176
 Swiss immigrants, found Helvetia (1869), I, 593
 Switzer, Charles K., III, 293
 Switzer, Philip A., III, 335
 Swope, Bernard O., III, 250
 Sybert, Merton A., III, 82
 Sydenstricker, Edward W., II, 640
 Sydenstricker, John M., II, 640
 Sydnor, Frank M., III, 615
 Sydnor, John T., III, 188
 System of state roads (1920), I, 717
 Tabler, Carlton L., III, 394
 Tabler, Daniel C., II, 124
 Tabor, McHenry, III, 22
 Tabor, Robert A., II, 316
 Talbott, Elam D., III, 585
 Talbott, Ezbai W., III, 33
 Talbott, Richard E., III, 468
 Talbott, Robert, III, 59
 Talbott, Waitman T., III, 90
 Talbott, William E., III, 186
 Talbott, W. Bruce, III, 337
 Talkington, Sanford J., II, 577
 Tamburini, Moses, III, 441
 Tanneries, early, in Hampshire county, I, 135
 Tanner's Cross Roads (New California), I, 109
 Tarnay, Charles II, 626
 Tarnay Collieries Company, II, 626
 Tavenner, Lewis N., II, 604
 Taverns, I, 243, 244
 Tax assessment, reform in, I, 561, 562
 Tax commission, second (1901), I, 616
 Tax commissionership, created (1904), I, 595
 Tax law, first general (1863), I, 613
 Taxable property, inadequate assessment of, I, 556
 Taxable wealth (1870-1910), I, 609
 Taxation; reform in (1901), I, 595; development of, receipts by State treasury (1863-1912), 606; expenditures from State treasury (1863-1912), 607; receipts and expenditures in 1913-1920, 608; State school levies, taxable wealth and all taxes (1863-1920), 609; average rate of levy and classified taxes, 610; period from 1861-70, 611-613; State indebtedness, 1876-93, 613; period from 1870 to 1880, 613-614; period from 1880 to 1890, 614-616; period from 1900-1910, 616, 617; conditions, tendencies and needs in 1912, 618; period since 1912, 618-620
 Taxes, in thousands and per capita (1904-1912), I, 609; classified, 610
 Taylor, Charles T., II, 70
 Taylor, Charles W., III, 607
 Taylor, Everett R., II, 198
 Taylor, Jesse H., II, 372
 Taylor, Marcellus N., II, 562
 Taylor, Marvin L., III, 201
 Taylor, Milton H., II, 611
 Taylor, Walter L., III, 292
 Taylor, W. B., II, 285
 Taylor, Zachary, I, 172
 Taylor county, I, 194, 252; first paper published in, 304
 Tazewell, Littleton W., I, 315
 Teachers, higher standards for, I, 631
 Teays, Stephen, I, 100
 Teays clays, I, 32, 33
 Telephone and telegraph companies, valuation of their properties in West Virginia (1921), I, 545
 Telephone department, I, 598
 Telephone service; first, in State (1880) and extensions, I, 538; chief operating companies, 539-545; valuation of telephone and telegraphic properties, 545, 546
 Telephone toll line, first, in West Virginia, I, 538
 Temporary taxes (1871-74), I, 614
 Tennant, Odell S., III, 581
 Terminal bridge at Wheeling, I, 465

- Terraces, I, 33
 Terrell, Joseph Z., II, 300
 Test oath, I, 404
 Teter, Floyd, III, 325
 Teter, Granville, III, 507
 Teter, James M., II, 213
 Teter, Jesse H., III, 279
 Teter, Philander K., III, 157
 Tetrick, Willis G., III, 577
 Thacker Coal & Coke Company, Tipple No. 11 Operation (illustration), I, 520
 Tharp, Phineas R., III, 257
 Tharp, Sarah C., III, 258
 Thatcher, William R., III, 481
 Thayer, Garland T., III, 542
 Thayer, John R., III, 94
 Third State Capitol, erected by City of Wheeling (illustration) 1875-76, I, 554
 Thoenen, David E., III, 418
 Thomas, Charles H., III, 374
 Thomas, Evan, II, 595
 Thomas, Jeremiah, III, 377
 Thomas, John E., II, 263
 Thomas, Saul, II, 299
 Thomas, Vestus, III, 375
 Thomas, William H., II, 190
 Thomas, William J., II, 109
 Thomas, William L., III, 48
 Thomasson, Reuben M., III, 448
 Thompson, Edwin B., II, 578
 Thompson, Frederick E., III, 566
 Thompson, George B., III, 483
 Thompson, George W., II, 499
 Thompson, George W., II, II, 500
 Thompson, George W., III, II, 500
 Thompson, Judge George W., II, 499
 Thompson, Herbert H., II, 530
 Thompson, John R., I, 648, 655, 662
 Thompson, J. Frank, II, 638
 Thompson, Lewis H., III, 113
 Thompson, Philip, I, 161
 Thompson, Stephen B., III, 446
 Thompson, Robert, I, 104
 Thorn, Charles P., II, 56
 Thornburg, Thomas C., III, 99
 Thornbury, Joseph W., II, 154
 Thorne, Metta V., III, 420
 Thornhill, James W., III, 492
 Thornton, Clark M., III, 44
 Thornton, David H., II, 158
 Thornton, Frank R., III, 44
 Thornton, John T., II, 53
 Thornton, R. Edward, III, 43
 Thrift and war saving stamps, I, 710
 Thrush, Henry C., II, 136
 Thrush, Richard W., II, 348
 Thurmond, I, 432
 Thurmond, Walter R., III, 64
 Thurston, David W., III, 535
 Tickle, Thomas G., III, 63
 Tidler, James O. T., III, 525
 Tierney, James A., III, 176
 Tilton, William, I, 106
 Timber industry and lands, I, 534, 535
 Timothy, T. R., III, 207
 Tipples at Mico, Logan county (illustration), I, 507
 Titlow, C. R., I, 704
 Titus, G. L., II, 645
 Toler, Buren H., III, 567
 Toler, J. Albert, III, 239
 Toll bridges, I, 233
 Toll lines (telephone) established and consolidated (1894-1920), I, 540-545
 Tolls, regulation of (1809), I, 175; freedom from (1825), 176; increase of (1831), 178
 Tomahawk (homestead) rights, I, 69, 74
 "Tomahawk rights" men, I, 4
 Tompkins, Grant E., II, 602
 Tompkins, Harold P., III, 498
 Tonkin, H. Glenville, II, 623
 Toompas, Edward K., II, 615
 Tothman, James G., III, 575
 Topography, I, 25, 26
 Topping, C. L., II, 38
 Torregrosa, Manuel F., III, 49
 Tory conspiracies, I, 84-86
 Towers, George, I, 293
 Towns, incorporation of (1762-1858), I, 230, 240; statistics in 1850, 253; in 1860, 255; population of (1860), 256; population since 1860, 568
 Towns and cities, uniform system for government of (1911), I, 595
 Township system, abandoned (1872), I, 418
 Trade, early, I, 226, 228
 Trails, I, 14, 36-39, 67, 68; in upper Tygart's Valley, 146
 Trainer, George H., II, 613
 Trans-Allegheny, struggle for control of, I, 57-65; advance guard of, I, 66-80; routes to, 66-68; early migrations to, 68-74; rear guard of the Revolution, I, 81-93
 Trans-Allegheny region; Washington's faith in, I, 94
 Trans-Allegheny settlements, encouraged by Virginia (1752), I, 56
 Trans-Appalachian region; pioneer settlement of, I, 13-15
 Transportation (see highways, railroads, roads and trails)
 Transportation (1864), I, 397, 398; (1912-1919), 715
 Travelers' records, glimpses from, I, 115-133
 Trembley, Charles E., III, 314
 Trent, William, I, 58; surrenders, 59
 Triadelphia, I, 93, 240
 Trimble, Stanton, III, 314
 Trippett, Karl H., II, 502
 Tropp, Fred, III, 277
 Trotter, Frank B., III, 6
 Trotter, J. R., I, 636, 705
 Troxell, Leander, III, 13
 Trump, Charles S., III, 115
 Tuberculosis sanatoria, expenditure for (1912-1920), I, 619
 Tuberculosis sanitarium, I, 597
 Tucker county, I, 73, 151, 252, 475; remarkable industrial changes in, I, 472
 Tunnelton, I, 193
 Turner, E. M., I, 648, 657, 658, 666
 Turner, Francis W., III, 519
 Turner, James D., II, 234
 Turner, James J., III, 600
 Turner, Thomas M., II, 475
 Turnpikes, early (1836-56), I, 137; early (1840-56), 142, 147, 153; minor (1827-50), 180; ravaged by Civil War, 181, 233
 Tuscarora Presbyterian church, built in 1730 (illustration), I, 265
 Tutwiler, Herman L., II, 272
 Tygart, David, I, 55, 56
 Tygart's Valley, Randolph County, I, 31, 71
 Tygart's Valley settlements, I, 93
 Tyler, Emory L., II, 182
 Tyler county, I, 109, 252; early schools of, I, 288
 Tyler County High School, III, 35
 Tynes, Buford C., II, 274
 Tyree, Edward T., II, 133
 Tyree Stone Tavern near Cliftop (illustration), I, 172

- Ulfert, William G., III, 27
 Union, I, 112, 237, 239
 "Union Society" of Methodist Episcopal church, I, 271
 United Mine Workers, I, 519, 523, 714
 United War Work Council, World's war, I, 709
 University enrollment of candidates for degrees (1909-21), I, 716
 University library, I, 631, 652
 University of Henrico (1619), I, 277
 Upshur County, I, 148, 183, 252; early schools of, I, 285, 286

 Valentine, A. Jay, III, 529
 Valleyton, I, 240
 Vance, Charles E., III, 421
 Vance, Fred W., III, 229
 Vanceuse, I, 157
 Vancouver, Charles, I, 101
 Vancouver tract, I, 101
 Vandalia, proposed colony of (1771), I, 79
 Van Deventer, Charles E., II, 491
 Vandervoort, James W., II, 441
 Van Hoose, Harvey G., III, 16
 Van Horn, Moses H., III, 201
 Van Meter, Isaac, extracts from diary of (1801), I, 126, 127
 Van Meter, John, I, 52
 Van Scoy, Howard W., II, 403
 Van Tromp, Homer O., III, 414
 Van Voorhis, Morton, III, 586
 Van Winkle, Peter G. (illustration), I, 349, 355, 368
 Van Winkle, Walling W., II, 3
 Varner, Harry V., III, 202
 Varney, Riley, II, 205
 Varney, William P. T., II, 588
 Vass, Thurman E., II, 156
 Vaughan, Robert R., II, 502
 Venable, Harry M., III, 187
 Vest, Alton H., II, 543
 Via, George O., II, 58
 Vick, Clyde W., II, 506
 Vickers, Carroll L., III, 290
 Vickers, E. H., I, 605, 618, 650
 Vienna, I, 239
 Vieweg, George B., II, 166
 Vines, Oscar P., II, 645
 Viquesney, Jules A., III, 490
 Virgin forests (1880) (map), I, 534
 Virgin forest (1913) (map), I, 535
 Virginia, institutional heritage from, I, 40-48; first constitution of, 317; public debt of (1861), 626
 Virginia Central Railroad, I, 424
 Virginia debt, West Virginia's portion of, I, 554, 561; West Virginia's liability for, 617; question of, 623-627, 719; settlement of (illustration), 624
 Virginia Debt Case, final adjudication of, I, 619-620
 "Virginia Debt Commission," I, 626
 Virginia Free Press, I, 314
 Virginia land office grants, I, 111, 112
 Virginia laws; applied to West Virginia (before 1863), I, 244-246
 Virginia-Pennsylvania boundary dispute, I, 74, 75, 92
 Virginia road, I, 67
 Virginia sectionalism, I, 315-317
 Virginia Warriors Path, I, 36
 Virginian Railway, I, 494-498
 Virginians, proposed reunion of the, I, 403
 Virginius, I, 239

 Waddell, Alexander G., III, 625
 Waddell, Edward L., II, 275
 Waddell, George, III, 624
 Waddell, Lynne, II, 378
 Wade, B. F., I, 363
 Wade, Forney, II, 245
 Wade, Spencer S., II, 359
 Waggener Family, II, 510
 Waggoner, Chancey W., II, 89
 Wagner, Arch C., III, 91
 Waldie, William J., III, 443
 Waldschmidt, Edward, II, 518
 Walker, Joseph M., II, 317
 Walker, Lanty H., III, 213
 Walker, Robert L., III, 373
 Wallace, George S., I, 697
 Wallace, Samuel B., III, 539
 Walleut, Thomas, extract from journal of (1790), I, 119-121
 Walls, George A., III, 129
 Walpole, Thomas, I, 79
 Walton, French D., II, 174
 Walworth, R. H., I, 203
 Wampler, Avis L., II, 610
 Ward, Charles E., II, 623
 Ward, Columbus M., III, 137
 Warden, Alfred R., II, 469
 Warden, Henry F., II, 240
 Wardensville, I, 240
 Warde, Hugh, III, 294
 Ware, J. Blackburn, III, 336
 Warfield, I, 168
 Warm Springs and Huntersville Turnpike, I, 137
 Warren, Walter H., III, 171
 Warth, Henry C., II, 263
 Warwick, Jacob, III, 599
 Washington, George, I, 4, 6; surveys Fairfax grant (1747-48), 53; 58, 59; as guardian of the West, 61, 63; prophet of the West, 94-97, 101, 106; his lands for sale (1802), 312, 526
 Washington, I, 526
 Washington Hall, Birthplace of West Virginia (illustration), I, 344
 Washington's headquarters in 1747 as boy surveyor for Lord Fairfax (illustration), I, 52
 Waters, Jesse W., II, 529
 Watkins, Charles H., Jr., II, 282
 Watkins, W. Merle, III, 583
 Watson, Charles E., II, 202
 Watson, Charles W., III, 457
 Watson, Clarence W., I, 563
 Watson, Edgar H., III, 354
 Watson, Elmer E., III, 630
 Watson, Gilbert L., II, 12
 Watson, John A., III, 227
 Watson, John B., III, 39
 Watson, Roger E., III, 110
 Watson, William E., III, 455
 Watson, I, 239
 Watstown, I, 99
 Watts, Cornelius C., I, 561
 Watts House, Morgantown (Built about 1800 (illustration), I, 141
 Waugh, Charles S., III, 70
 Waugh, Harry M., II, 205
 Waugh, H. Roy, III, 607
 Waugh, Webster W., III, 469
 Way, Fred E., III, 199
 Wayne, Anthony, I, 97
 Wayne, I, 492
 Wayne county, I, 168, 252; early schools of, 289
 Wayne County Coal Company, I, 517
 Weaver, Roy L., III, 363
 Webb, Harry E., III, 407
 Webb, Jonathan W., III, 198
 Webster county, I, 109, 252

- Webster Springs (illustration), I, 452
 Weddings and marriage regulations, I, 225, 226
 Wedgwood, John W., II, 495
 Weed, Henry, sketch of, I, 265
 Weidler, Wellington E., II, 38
 Weights and measures, legislation, I, 600, 601
 Weimer, Lewis H., II, 360
 Weimer, Wilford E., III, 483
 Weir, D. M., III, 477
 Weir, E. T., III, 476
 Weir, James W., III, 537
 Weirton Steel Company, III, 476
 Welch, I, 490
 Welch, Richard A., II, 182
 Welch, Ulysses S., II, 552
 Wells, Henry C., II, 39
 Wells, W. E., III, 585
 Wellsburg, I, 104, 156, 157, 239
 Wellsburg Bank and Trust Company, II, 233
 Wellsburg Herald, I, 314
 Wellsburg National Bank, The, III, 601
 Wemple, Charles E., II, 417
 Wertz, William W., I, 690
 West (post-Revolution), awakening of the, I, 94-114
 West Columbia, I, 240
 Western Central Telephone Company, I, 545
 Westernford, I, 151
 Western (up country) democracy, I, 316
 Western Maryland Railway, I, 472-478
 Western Virginia; population of (1790-1860), I, 252; counties and dates of formation (1754-1895), 252; composition and condition of population and town statistics (1850), 253; agricultural statistics (1850), 254; destiny of, 317; community life in (1864), 395-397
 Western Virginia Educational Society, I, 294
 Westfall, Ira B., III, 412
 Westfall's Fort, Tygarts Valley, Beverly, built 1774 (illustration), I, 71
 Westfield, I, 239
 West, George M., III, 108
 West, John T., II, 74
 West, Olandus, III, 633
 West, William H., III, 376
 West Fork valley, I, 102
 West Hamlin, I, 441
 West Liberty, I, 104, 239; normal school established at (1867), I, 589
 West Milford, I, 71, 145
 West Union, I, 185, 239
 West Union Academy, I, 295
 West Virginia; destined for separate Statehood, I, 12-19, 36; erection of, as a State (1861-62), 15; pioneer settlers of, 55; mother counties of 1790 (map), 98
 West Virginia's greatest primeval forest, death knell of, I, 476
 West Virginia and Pittsburgh Railroad, absorbed by Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, I, 449
 West Virginia Brick Company, II, 158
 West Virginia Central and Pittsburgh Railway Company, I, 474
 West Virginia Children's Home, I, 598
 West Virginia Colored Institute, I, 630, 637
 West Virginia Compensation Law, I, 598, 599
 West Virginia Dairy Association, I, 534
 West Virginia Demonstration Packing School, I, 532
 West Virginia Good Roads Federation, organized (1919), I, 603
 West Virginia Horticultural Society, I, 534
 West Virginia Humane Society, I, 597
 West Virginia Industrial School for Boys, I, 597
 West Virginia Industrial Home for Girls, I, 597
 West Virginia Livestock Association, I, 534
 West Virginia Immigration and Development Association, I, 594
 West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, I, 441, 476
 West Virginia Sheep Breeders' and Wool Growers' Association, I, 534
 West Virginia Telegraph and Telephone Company, I, 539
 West Virginia Traction and Electric Company, I, 468
 West Virginia State Poultry Association, I, 534
 West Virginia University, department of history, I, 8; College of Agriculture, 531; sketch of, 590; foundation laid, 614-617; evolution of college departments, 650-651; buildings, equipment and library, 651, 652; policies and politics; 652-661; co-education, 661-669; chapel exercises, 669-670; recent conditions and extensions, 670-673; student registration (1912-1920), 673; enrollment (1867-1921), 674, 675; enrollment College of Arts and Sciences (1906-21), 676; attendance of women (1906-22), 677; enrollment in College of Agriculture, 678; appropriations (1920-21), 678
 West Virginia University, Commencement Hall (illustration), I, 650
 West Virginia University, Oglebay Hall (illustration), I, 646
 West Virginia University, Science Hall (illustration), I, 655
 West Virginia University, Women's Hall (illustration), I, 660
 West Virginia Wesleyan College, III, 430
 Weston, I, 102, 183; first B. & O. train to reach (September, 1879), I, 447, 453
 Weston, showing hospital at left (illustration), I, 596
 Weston and Elk River Railroad Company, I, 449
 Weston College, I, 294
 Westrater, Amos A., II, 184
 Wetherell, James A., II, 458
 Wetzel county, I, 104, 252; early schools of, 288
 Wharton, William E., III, 156
 Wheat, James S., I, 355
 Wheat, Joseph S., III, 419
 Wheeler, Benjamin B., II, 597
 Wheeling, earliest known settlement of, I, 73; 104, 152-156; first newspaper, 154; first trains into (1853), 193; in 1820, 214, 238, 239; first regular preaching in (1812), 265; Methodist churches of, 269; newspapers of, 305, 306; a center of Unionism, 344; meeting of second Union convention at 353; in 1870 (illustration), 371; as State Capital, 369; contest with Charleston for State Capital, 433; government, population and banks of, 467; institution of, 468, 469; first telephone exchange at (1880), 538
 Wheeling and Belmont Bridge Company, I, 201
 Wheeling and Kanawha packet line, I, 206
 Wheeling Bridge and Terminal Company, I, 465
 Wheeling Bridge case, I, 200-209

- Wheeling bridge, old (blown down May, 1854), I, 208
 Wheeling Daily Register, seized by United States government (1864), I, 373
 Wheeling Electric Company, II, 25
 Wheeling Female Institute, I, 294
 Wheeling Fire Insurance Co., III, 12
 Wheeling Improvement Association, I, 468
 Wheeling Intelligencer, I, 314
 Wheeling, Parkersburg and Cincinnati (Ohio River) Railroad, I, 470
 Wheeling-Pittsburgh rivalry, I, 200-209, 217
 Wheeling Register, I, 314
 Wheeling Sanitary Manufacturing Co., III, 465
 Wheeling Traction Company, III, 460
 Whelan, A. F., III, 158
 Whelan, F. V., I, 184
 Whelan, Michael E., III, 536
 Whitaker, George P., II, 641
 Whitaker, Nelson E., II, 641
 Whitaker, N. Price, III, 420
 White, Albert B., I, 561; II, 17
 White, Alexander, III, 606
 White, Edward E., II, 133
 White, Everett E., III, 348
 White, George E., III, 182
 White, Israel C., I, 32; his scientific oil investigations, I, 503-505, 713; II, 1
 White, James G., II, 547
 White, James W., III, 88
 White, John B., III, 238
 White, Luke, III, 478
 White, Oliver P., III, 177
 White, Robert, II, 635
 White, William L., Jr., II, 406
 White, William R., I, 637, 638; sketch of, I, 628
 "White man's party," I, 406
 White Sulphur Springs, I, 180, 181, 240, 241, 271, 429
 Whitehair, Edmond, III, 339
 Whitehair, F. Arch, III, 104
 Whitehair, Joshua, III, 103
 Whitehead, Richard S., III, 63
 Whitehill, Alexander R., I, 657; II, 508
 Whitehill, Mary S., II, 508
 Whiteside, Samuel M., II, 92
 Whiting, Charles T., II, 466
 Whiting, Richard F., III, 393
 Whitlow, Millard G., II, 637
 Whitmore, George A., II, 445
 Whitmore, Samuel P., II, 184
 Whittaker, Daniel R., III, 343
 Whittaker, John W., III, 335
 Whitten, Charles O., II, 219
 Whyte, William W., II, 540
 Wickham, William C., I, 424
 Wieneke, Charles F., II, 304
 Wikel, Chester M., III, 236
 Wilbourn, Russell A., II, 153
 Wilcox, Clay A., II, 137
 Wilezek, Andrew, III, 254
 Wilen, John A., III, 395
 Wilkin, William S., II, 315
 Wilkinson, C. E., III, 382
 Wilkinson, Jasper N., III, 331
 Wilkinson, Robert J., II, 58
 Willey, Waitman T., I, 342; (illustration), I, 349, 356, 368
 Willey, William P., I, 332, 333, 656
 "Willey Amendment" to State Constitution (1862), I, 363
 Willfong, Frank J., II, 122
 Williams, Charles B., III, 337
 Williams, Edgar H., III, 538
 Williams, Glenn F., II, 351
 Williams, Harry G., II, 61
 Williams, Isaac, I, 74; sketch of, 105
 Williams, Jesse F., II, 310
 Williams, Joe., III, 36
 Williams, John C., III, 477
 Williams Odie C., III, 303
 Williams, Perry C., II, 598
 Williams, Raymond H., II, 33
 Williams, Richard, III, 341
 Williams, William A., III, 390
 Williams, Willie J., III, 309
 Williamson, I, 491, 492
 Williamson, Carl E., III, 472
 Williamson, Samuel G., III, 90
 Williamson, W. J., II, 619
 Williamson, William T., III, 578
 Williamsport (Pruntytown), I, 195
 Williamston, I, 105
 Williamsville, I, 239
 Willis, Carson A., II, 326
 Willis, Dennis M., III, 381
 Willis, Floyd T., III, 278
 Willis, Jane Charlotte W., III, 137
 Willis, Marsh H., II, 513
 Willis, Nathaniel H., III, 137
 Wilmoth, Bernard E., III, 329
 Wilson, Benjamin B., III, 472
 Wilson, Chape, II, 459
 Wilson, Charles L., II, 45
 Wilson, Edwin A., III, 560
 Wilson, E. Willis, I, 555, 556, 558
 Wilson, Gay E., II, 220
 Wilson, George W., III, 391
 Wilson, Gustavus H., II, 222
 Wilson, James B., III, 58
 Wilson, James E., II, 601
 Wilson, James W., III, 173
 Wilson, Jesse D., II, 484
 Wilson, Merritt, III, 644
 Wilson, Newton V., III, 276
 Wilson, Robert A., II, 343
 Wilson, Scott H., II, 220
 Wilson, Stanley B., III, 634
 Wilson, Thomas O'J., II, 106
 Wilson, Willard A., II, 242
 Wilson, William A., II, 52
 Wilson, W. A. & Sons, II, 52
 Wilson, William H., III, 528
 Wilson, William L., I, 648, 655
 Wilson, William P., II, 52
 Wilson, William R., II, 490
 Wilson, Willis, I, 6
 Wilson, W. G., III, 368
 Wilson, Winfield S., III, 358
 Wilt, James B., III, 487
 Wiltshire, Gustav B., II, 345
 Winans, Ross, I, 192
 Winchester, I, 54
 Windon, James W., III, 418
 Windsor, Charles R., II, 233
 Windsor, Walter A., III, 638
 Winfield, I, 161
 Wingerter, C. A., I, 249
 Wingrove, Thaddens K., III, 414
 Wirt county, I, 109, 252
 Wise, Henry A., I, 316, 328, 338, 341, 382; defeated by Rosecrans at Gauley Bridge, 383
 Wiseman, Homer, II, 157
 Wiseman, Roy E., III, 193
 Withers, Emma, I, 693
 Withers, Herbert H., III, 513
 Withers, John S., III, 301
 Wolf, William M., III, 356
 Wolfe, Fred D., III, 469
 Wolfe, James W., III, 381
 Wolverton, John M., III, 567
 Women's Hall, West Virginia University (illustration), I, 660

- Wood, Amos de R., II, 131
 Wood, D. Robertson, III, 625
 Wood, Edward J., II, 404
 Wood, Jean H., II, 549
 Wood, Walter S., III, 215
 Wood, William W., III, 49
 Wood county, I, 108, 158, 252
 Wood Family, II, 130
 Woodburn Female Seminary, I, 645
 Wooddell, Bantz S., III, 86
 Wooddell, James W., II, 598
 Wooddell, Will L., III, 86
 Woodroe, James D., III, 144
 Woods, Frank, III, 319
 Woods, Homer B., III, 259
 Woods, J. Hop, III, 319
 Woods, Katherine P., I, 691
 Woods, Samuel, III, 318
 Woods, Samuel V., III, 317
 Woodson, Thomas L., III, 602
 Woodyard, Harry C., III, 571
 Woodyard, William, III, 571
 Woofter, Emery J., III, 200
 Wool growing, early, I, 228
 Woolf, William B., II, 449
 Woore, Arthur J., III, 295
 Woore, Fredda M., III, 295
 Workman, Siegel, III, 499
 Workmen's Compensation Fund, I, 598, 618
 Workmen's Compensation Law (1913), I, 595
 World's war: elective draft registration, I, 697, 698; State Councils of Defense, 697-700; war legislation, 701, 702; Liberty Loan drives, 702, 703; production and conservation of food, 703-705; fuel administration, 705; school and the war, 706; the Four Minute Men, 707; Red Cross work, 708; Allied War relief, 709; other war activities, 710
 World's war industries, I, 715
 World's war legislation, I, 701, 702
 World's war taxes (1917), I, 619
 Worrell, Grover C., II, 599
 Wotring, Daniel L., III, 151
 Wotring, Thomas J. J., III, 18
 Wright, C. Frank, II, 498
 Wright, John E., III, 465
 Wright, John H., II, 132
 Wright, Roy T., II, 94
 Wright, Russell, II, 71
 Wright, William E., III, 474
 Wriston, Robert, III, 355
 Writers, early, prose, I, 680
 Wyatt, John B., III, 342
 Wyckoff, Ole E., III, 84
 Wylie, Charles B., II, 357
 Wyoming county, I, 168, 252; early schools of, 289
 Wysong, Thomas J., II, 564
 Wysong, William S., II, 88
 Yantis, Solomon V., II, 395
 Yoke, Frank R., III, 176
 Yoke, French A., III, 529
 York, William, II, 648
 York county, first county west of the Susquehanna, I, 68
 Yost, Ervin H., II, 507
 Yost, Henry S., II, 248
 Yost, Herschel R., II, 248
 Yost, Jorier, II, 249
 Yost, Lucian N., II, 383
 Yost, Paul, II, 249
 Yost, William M., II, 76
 Youghiogheny county, I, 92
 Young, Charles B., III, 250
 Young, Egbert E., II, 35
 Young, Guy B., III, 93
 Young, Houston G., I, 627
 Young, John Russell; his narrative of a visit to West Virginia oil region (1864), I, 392-398
 Young, Laco L., II, 364
 Young, Philip S., III, 517
 Young, Ulysses G., III, 407
 Young, W. Branch, III, 499
 Zane, Ebenezer, I, 53, 73, 152, 153
 Zane, Elizabeth, I, 88
 Zane, Noah, I, 269
 Zane, Silas, I, 73
 "Zane's Trace," I, 53; opening of (1796) 152
 Zearley, David S., III, 377
 Zeller, Charles, II, 574
 Ziekefoose, Blaine, III, 409
 Ziekefoose, H. A., III, 428
 Zihlman, Edward L., III, 148
 Zimmerman, Charles F., III, 349
 Zimmerman, Joshua S., III, 524
 Zirkle, Jehn H., III, 112

